DEPARTMENT NEWS.

Dept. of Texas.—Brig. Gen. D. S. Stanley.

The Fort Davis News says: "Why keep up a post at Hancock is a question of some interest in military circles. Located within about fifty miles of El Paso, and at present away from the railroad, and in an undesirable location, there would seem to be no good reason why it should not be abandoned and the troops sent elsewhere."

Dept. of the Platte—Brig. Gen. George Crook.

In a comprehensive "Roster of Troops," dated March 25, we find the following information concerning Fort Du Chesne: Permanent buildings completed—Quartermaster's, subsistence and ordnance storehouses, adjutant's office (since destroyed by fire), guard house, bake ovens and bake house, mechanics workshops, coal shed, one double set of officers quarters and two sets non-commissioned staff officers quarters. Three double sets officers quarters are nearly completed and three other sets are in course of erection. One set cavalry barracks and a portion of permanent hospital (one ward and the dining room and kitchen, to be used as a provisional hospital) are nearly completed, other buildings are in course of erection.

The parade ground has been prepared for sowing grass seed and planting trees. The post garden is laid out and preparations made for planting. Water is brought through the garden and post grounds by means of an irrigating ditch which has been constructed from the river about two miles above the post. A wagon-road bridge across the DuChesne River, on the road to Price Station, at a point about twelve miles from the post, was completed March 5.

A correspondent writes that "the 2d Infantry will go to the Bellevue Rifle Range by wings, and each five companies have six weeks' practice at fixed distance shooting, and again in October, two weeks including the skirmish firing. The regiment hopes to do in two months the work of three months, and thus show the value of continuous uninterrupted practice."

WEST POINT, N. Y.

APRIL 13, 1887.

ON Monday afternoon drill was suspended and the Corps of Cadets proceeded to the chapel at 4.30 to listen to an address by the Rev. Dr. Taylor, after which a presentation of books to the First Class took place. The Rev. Dr. spoke about an hour, and delivered a fine address. The cadets were allowed to select one of two books—a Bible and Life of Gen. Upton. 62 took a bible each and the remaining two of the class took the Life of Upton.

The annual journalistic effort of the cadets—known as "The Howitzer"—has just made its appearance, in a neat pamphlet of 28 pages. One of the advertisements headed "Wanted" calls for about 40 vacancies. Another offers a reward of $.07 and an uncut atlas to the heirs of some engineer officer who will commit suicide before June 7.

Last Saturday the post was visited by Colonel Flagler, Captain Birnie and Lieut. Bruff, all of the Ordnance.

On Monday Professor Kendrick was here, also Lieuts. Rees and Potter, of the Engineers, and Lieut. Fowler, 4th Cav. The three latter had attended the funeral of their classmate, Lieut. Seward Mott, and were returning to their stations. The cadet hop next Saturday evening is to be given in room No. 1, and will be limited to half-past nine.

The first work for the new gymnasium was done last Friday in clearing the ground. The site selected is between Lieut. Simpson's quarters and the cadet commissary building. The short side (75 feet) is parallel to the barracks and the entrance will be directly in front of the new sallyport.

The regular semi-annual meeting of the mess took place last evening. The report of the treasurer showed that the mess is richer by over $100 than it was when the last report was rendered. Lieut. David Price was re-elected Treasurer, and Professor Bass and Captain Price were elected members of the Senior Council.

Frank Spear Armstrong, Jeffersonville, Ind.; William Drew Collins, Charenton, La., and William Lawson Erwin (Alt.), Plaquemine, La., have been designated for examination for admission to the U. S. Military Academy in June next.

MADISON BARRACKS.

APRIL 4, 1887.

LIEUT ROBERT K. EVANS has been installed as regimental adjutant and Lieut. Frederick Von Schrader as R. Q. M. Lieut. C. W. Abbot, Jr., has taken charge of signal matters. The retiring regimental staff officers, Lieuts. Wotherspoon and Smith, were tendered a serenade by the 12th Infantry band on Thursday evening.

At the weekly concert and hop last week, there was a concerted piece not down on the programme. It was rendered by the N. C. staff and band just after the overture, when Lieut. Fred. A. Smith was invited to the front and centre by Sergt.-Major A. B. Van Buren and presented with an elegant and valuable panelled French marble clock, as a souvenir of their esteem. The gallant Lieutenant made a fitting acknowledgment, expressing with marked emotion his gratification at the unlooked-for occurrence. MACTOUGH.

FORT LEWIS, COLORADO.

OUR weekly concerts have been stopped. The entertainment given by the officers on March 19 was quite a success. The "Big Four" Minstrels was greatly appreciated. Our post was alarmed the other night by the cry of fire. It proved to be the quarters of Principal Musician Morrison. Everything was removed and after a little excitement the fire was quenched. The officers raised a subscription for him, and, to use a soldier's parlance, they came down handsomely. ENIGMA.

I see the JOURNAL is giving much attention to medical lectures at posts. We are not behindhand here, as our Post Surgeon T. A. Cuningham is giving a course to the gratification and instruction of all. Dr. Cuningham is somewhat of a pioneer in this matter. At this post in the winter of 1884-85 he delivered a series of these lectures to the officers, who all attended, including Col. P. T. Swaine, Col. Robt. H. Hall, Major S. M. Whitside, Lieuts. Casey and Webster, the Regimental Staff, and all the company officers. The interest and attendance was always good and the improvement decided. In the present course the Doctor very wisely gives a succinct resumé of the anatomy and physiology of the subject to be treated and afterwards goes into the subjects of hemorrhages, fractures, etc. OBSERVER.

CANTEEN AT FORT ELLIOTT, TEXAS.

A CANTEEN has been established at this post (on the plan of Gen. Morrow), that supplies the soldiers with luncheons of hot coffee and sandwiches, and the indoor amusements of dominoes, checkers, chess, and billiards, and the outdoor amusements of football, base ball, lawn tennis, and for the cavalry polo.

A riding hall has been enclosed by a fence of posts and poles, and as there is no tan bark available the ground in the enclosure has been ploughed, posts with heads and rings supplied, and a polo ground laid out. The men of one troop play a series of games of polo one day, and exercise in the riding hall the next. Each soldier is allowed the privilege of taking his horse every afternoon for exercise on the polo ground or in the riding hall, under the superintendence of a non-commissioned officer.

If any one familiar with the games played by the cavalry soldiers of foreign armies would publish a description of the games and the rules by which they are played, it would be appreciated by our mounted men.

We saw some time ago in the New York Graphic an illustration showing horses and soldiers lying down (at Fort Bayard). If the commanding officer (Col. A. K. Arnold) would publish in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL a description of his method of teaching his horses, he would confer a favor on the cavalry stationed at FORT ELLIOTT.

FORT MEADE, D. T.

APRIL 8, 1887.

OUR garrison was very unpleasantly aroused from its usual calm by the terrible fire which destroyed the elegant quarters occupied by Col. Tilford's family. The flames made quick head-way, though the "Fire Brigade" were on the spot at the first signal of danger. The entire force of the post turned out en masse and worked with almost superhuman efforts to remove from the burning building the many articles of value which had helped to make Mrs. Tilford's attractive home, one of the most beautifully furnished on the frontier. The ladies and officers worked side by side with the soldiers in carrying out delicate articles in silver and china. The piano, harp and most of the heavy furniture were removed with safety. The principal loss was in the carpets and mirrors. Immediate rebuilding of the quarters has been ordered, the family in the meantime sharing Maj. Whitside's hospitable home.

Gen. Forsyth is still absent at Cœur d'Alene.

Lieut. Bullock returned after a successful chase of several deserters, bringing them and their horses in triumph.

A hop is to be given to Lieut. Robinson and his bride, whose arrival was quite a surprise, no rumors of any such happy event being heralded as our Regimental Q. M.'s matrimonial intentions.

The post is conspicuous by the absence of a majority of the officers whose troops are stationed here, there being about an average of one officer on duty with each troop and also by the departure which have taken place among the ladies, having a very small minority of the fair sex.

A slight "boom" in real estate is already starting in the town of Sturgis, in anticipation of the railroad which is on the onward march from "Rapid."

Snow still covers the ground and it is difficult to realize we are in the midst of spring.

HISTORY OF WASHINGTON BARRACKS, D. C.

THIS post is situated at the southern extremity of 4½ street, Washington, on what is known as "Greenleaf's Point," at the junction of the Eastern branch or Anacosta, with the Potomac River.

There are no documents on file to indicate the precise time at which this post became an arsenal. As early as 1803 it was a military station, and in August, 1807, it is known that Smiths' and Carpenters' shops were here. Powder was stored here in 1812. In January, 1813, it is first mentioned as an establishment. The first expenditure made by the Ordnance Dept. for buildings at this arsenal was in 1816, when the sum of $15,583.33 was applied to this object, and up to about 1868, the expenditures at this post for lands and buildings amounted to about $500,000.

In purstance of an act of March 3, 1857, the site of the arsenal was enlarged by the purchase of the land lying between the Potomac River and James Creek and south P street. The whole tract now consists of 69 acres.

The transfer of ordnance stores to other depots was completed by the month of April, 1881, when the Ordnance Department finally surrendered their authority over what was formerly known as the Washington Arsenal and afterwards designated U. S. Barracks.

At the time of the capture of Washington by the British several men were killed here by the careless throwing of a fire brand into a well, in which a quantity of powder had previously been thrown. On June 17, 1864, during the Rebellion, twenty-one girls were killed by an explosion in one of the Laboratories. The cause of the accident was never satisfactorily ascertained An explosion occurred at the Laboratory July 22, 1871, about fifty yards east of No. 1 storehouse which did much damage. No lives were lost. The origin of the fire could not be ascertained.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.

APRIL 1, 1887.

Gen. A. H. Terry and party have come again and gone again; arrived on Friday, staid a short time, took up Mrs. and Miss Lee and then off for Chicago. I think they must have enjoyed themselves while here, for certainly everyone did their best to that end. Lieut. Slocum passed through here last week, en route to Ringgold from leave, looking well and hearty. We hope to have our new officers' quarters and barracks ready in a couple of months.

It is very dry here, a couple of small showers recently but not enough to lay the dust. There are dire rumors of changes among the staff here; Paymr. Muhlenberg, I believe, is to be the first to go, and, perhaps, more will follow. Thus it is, we never get nicely settled and establish a fine line of credit before we are hustled off somewhere else and have to hoe the same row again.

FORT CŒUR D'ALENE, IDAHO.

THE Court of Inquiry here, presided over by Col. Black, has had a busy time of it, but nothing is known as to the results. The range of inquiry was as to the collusion with the post trader in giving them the use of Government teams and the Government steamer; in denuding the public lands of timber and carrying on a large lumber traffic; appropriating stores from the Commissary Department to sell to the citizens; staking miners and prospectors with stores from the commissary, tools from the Government shops and explosives from the ordnance stores, for which share was to be had in the mines discovered and located by the miners and prospectors to whom they were given; ordering out a detachment of soldiers, all armed and equipped, under charge of a commissioned officer, to frighten and drive off miners from their claims, so that possession might be got of the same: making fraudulent contracts in erecting and building the Government buildings, performing the labor with enlisted men and pocketing the appropriation; permitting the post traders to sell intoxicating liquors on the military reservation, in violation of an Executive order and other minor irregularities.

Captain Cusack has sold one of his fine racers.

Gen. and Mrs. Kautz have returned from their eastern trip.

A very enjoyable evening dress ball was given by the officers March 29.

FORT D. A. RUSSELL, WYO.

A CORRESPONDENT writes April 1:

Miss Abbie Green, daughter of Capt. C. H. Greene, who has been attending school at Salt Lake City, is home on a visit. 1st Lieut. R. W. Dowdy has gone East on leave.

Lieut. D. H. Brush, who has been regimental quartermaster for nearly eight years, has been relieved, and Lieut. Edward Chenoweth appointed in his stead. In relieving Lieut. Brush, Col. Offley expresses his thanks for the very efficient manner in which he has performed his duties for nearly eight years.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, KAS.

THE Kansas City Times says:

The post chapel has been thoroughly remodelled and looks well. Gen. McCook takes a great deal of interest in the improvements. Quite a large congregation attended the Good Friday services. Chaplain Barry was assisted by the Rev. Frank O Osborne of Madison, Wis. The chapel was elaborately decorated with flowers for Easter. The choir rendered a fine programme of music under the direction of Mrs. McCook.

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Evening Post writes: There are now remaining at the military headquarters on the reserve at the Presidio, four of the adobe buildings that were used as barracks and storehouses at one time by the Spaniards. They have since been re-roofed and put to other uses. All these buildings, now considerably over 100 yrs. old, were long unoccupied and neglected, and seemed at one time to be verging upon ruin, when they were timely rescued by the skilful hand of the late Gen. McDowell.

THE ARMY OF THE CUMBERLAND.

THE Executive Committee of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland have practically completed the programme for the annual meeting of the society which will be held in Washington on May 11 and 12, upon which occasion the Garfield statue to be erected at the west approach of the Capitol will be unveiled. The meeting of the society will be held on the morning of May 11, at which General Sheridan will preside. The oration will be delivered on the evening of that day at the Congregational Church. The statue will be unveiled on May 12 with appropriate ceremonies, at which the President and members of the Cabinet will be present. The society will be escorted to the Capitol by the United States troops and marines stationed at Washington, the militia of the District, and the Grand Army posts. The pedestal for the statue has been erected on the circle at the intersection of 1st street and Maryland avenue, Congress having appropriated $20,000 for this purpose. The statue was paid for by the Society of the Army of the Cumberland.

THE NAVY.

NAVAL VESSELS IN COMMISSION.

WHEN AND WHERE LAST HEARD FROM.

N. Atlantic Station—Rear Admiral S. B. Luce.

GALENA, 3d rate, 8 guns, Comdr. Colby M. Chester. Arrived at Aspinwall March 7. Will await the arrival of the Mohican at Panama.

All mail must be addressed to the Galena, care of Navy Pay Office, 29 State St., N. Y.

RICHMOND, 2d rate, 14 guns (f. s. n. a. s.), Capt. Robt. Boyd. Left Bermuda, April 7, for St. Thomas, W. I. During her run from New York to Bermuda the Richmond had some very heavy weather, and encountered gales from the northwest and southeast. While in the Gulf Stream and in a northwest gale some thick snow squalls were met.

Port.	Arrive.	Leave.
New York, N. Y.	.....	March 28.
St. Thomas, W. I.	April 5.	April 9.
Martinique, W. I.	April 13	April 17.
Curacoa, W. I.	April 20.	April 25.
Matanzas, Cuba	May 5.	May 9.
Key West, Fla.	May 10.	May 13.
Hampton Roads, Va	May 20.

Ship will travel about 4,864 miles in making this cruise.

YANTIC, 3d rate, 4 guns, Comdr. Francis M. Green. Arrived at Key West April 11.

Capt. F. M. Green, commanding the Yantic, in a letter dated Cienfuegos, Cuba, April 5, reports that he would leave there for Key West April 7. He says several of the ship's company are suffering from fever contracted at Aspinwall, but the cases are not serious, and the health of the officers and men is otherwise good.

S. Atlantic Station—A. R. Adml. D. L. Braine.

Mails should be addressed to care of U. S. Consul, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, unless otherwise noted, or care of B. F. Stevens, 4 Trafalgar Square, London.

LANCASTER, 2d rate, 10 guns, (f. s. a. s.) Capt. S. L. Breese. Reported by cable to have arrived at Montevideo, Uruguay, March 16. All well. Expects to reach Rio about June 1, 1887.

European Station—R.-Adml. Sam. R. Franklin.

Mails should be addressed to care B. F. Stevens, 4 Trafalgar Square, London, England, unless otherwise noted.

PENSACOLA, 2d rate, 16 guns (f. s. e. s.), Captain George Dewey. Sailed from Athens, Greece, for Leghorn, Italy, April 4. Intends to go to Villefranche after receiving her stores.

QUINNEBAUG, 3d rate, 8 guns, Comdr. Geo. W. Coffin. Comdr. W. M. Folger was ordered to command. Was at Leghorn, Italy, April 2—to leave there about middle of May. Health of officers and men good.

The Times of Morocco, Tangier, March 24 says: "The U. S. frigate Quinnebaug, which visited Tangier last week, made an unusually short stay, and disappointed many who had hoped to meet its genial officers ashore. There was none of the hunting and feasting which has characterized the previous visits of this vessel."

Pacific Station—Captain H. L. Howison (in temporary command).

Commander J. D. Graham, of the Alert, in a letter dated San Jose, Guatemala, March 29, reports arrival at that port, having left Acapulco March 27.

ADAMS, 3d rate, 6 guns, Comdr. Louis Kempff. Arrived at Mazatlan April 6, and after taking on stores will return to Acapulco.

JUNIATA, 3d rate, 8 guns, Comdr. G. T. Davis. Arrived at Coquimbo, Chile, March 18. To leave April 10 for the North.

IROQUOIS, 3d rate, 7 guns, Comdr. J. Crittenden Watson. At Talcahuano, Chili, March 31. Commander Richard P. Leary was ordered to command this vessel per steamer of April 1.

PINTA, 4th rate, screw, 2 guns, Lieut. Comdr. John S. Newell. At Sitka, where she will winter. Mail matter will reach this vessel quickest by sending it direct to Sitka, Alaska.

VANDALIA, 2d rate, 8 guns, (f. s. p. s.), Capt. Henry L. Howison. Arrived at Taboquilla, in Panama Bay, March 28. After a short stay intends to sail northward.

The Vandalia left Coquimbo in obedience to orders received from the Navy Department, March 8, and arrived at Taboga Island, Panama Roads, U. S. of Colombia, March 27. The port of Panama was closed to all vessels from Chili. The authorites allowed the Vandalia to anchor until the Admiral comes. Capt. Howison says the mails for this vessel are scattered along the southern coast somewhere. I have telegraphed to Callao, and hope to receive them shortly.

Asiatic Station—Rear-Adml. Ralph Chandler.

MARION,† 3d rate, 8 guns, f. s. a. s., Commander Merrill Miller. At Nagasaki, Japan, March 5. Intended to sail from Yokohama March 18.

MONOCACY,† 3d rate, 6 guns, Comdr. Henry Glass. At Canton March 12.

PORTSMOUTH, 3d rate, sails, 12 guns, Comdr. Edwin White. Was to sail from St. Thomas, April 3, for Newport, R. I.

SARATOGA, 3d rate, 12 guns, Comdr. Charles H. Davis. Was to sail from St. Thomas, April 3, for Newport, R. I.

On Special Service.

DOLPHIN, despatch boat, 7 guns. Comd. George F. F. Wilde. At New York, undergoing slight repairs. The delay in properly arranging her steering gear has practically exhausted the season for contemplated surveying work in South America, and it is no longer probable that the ship will go in that direction this year.

Another pattern of steam steering gear is to be placed on the Dolphin, the original type having proved a failure.

FORTUNE, tug, Lieutenant O. E. Lasher. Put in commission March 30, 1887, for purpose of conveying freight between the different Navy-yards on the Atlantic Coast. Left Norfolk, April 2, arrived at Washington Navy-yard, April 3, 1887, and sailed for Norfolk April 9.

OSSIPEE, 3d rate, 8 guns, Comdr. W. B. Hoff. At Norfolk, Va. Will be refitted for service. The work will be commenced at once. It is estimated that the cost of repairs will be $25,000.

RANGER, 3d rate, 4 guns, Comdr. F. A. Cook. Surveying on Coast of Lower California. At San Diego, Cal., Feb. 10. Mail address, San Diego, Cal.

ST. MARY'S, sails, 8 guns, Comdr. A S. Crowninshield. N. Y. School ship. Alongside of dock, foot of East 31st Street, New York City. She is being fitted for her annual Summer cruise. Will leave New York May 10, arrive at Glen Cove May 16, reach New London May 26, leave for Fayal, Azores, a few days later, arrive at that port June 10, reach Cadiz June 21, leave Gibraltar July 6, and reach Madeira July 13. From the latter port she will leave for New London about July 20, and arrive there about August 14.

ATLANTA, 2d rate, 8 rifled cannon and 12 machine guns, Captain Francis M. Bunce. At New York Navy-yard. Left yard, April 3, 1887, for trial trip. Returned April 14.

Swatara—At Portsmouth, N. H. Is to have new boilers. It is not known at present when she will be ready for sea. The construction work will be completed about the middle of June. When ready she will be assigned to duty on the North Atlantic Station.

Enterprise and Nipsic—Undergoing repairs at New York. Will be ready in a few months, and in all probability be assigned to the North Atlantic Squadron.

Trenton—Undergoing repairs at Norfolk, Va. Expects to be ready for commission about May 1. It is not known at present where she will be ordered.

Chicago—Will be finished at New York. The engines are practically completed, and but little construction work remains to be done. (Report of March 19.)

Boston—At New York. Is being fitted with ice machines, electric lights and steam separators. She will be ready for a trial trip in about 60 days. (Report of March 19.)

Kearsarge—Ordered to repair revoked, and will be condemned and sold.

VARIOUS NAVAL ITEMS.

A WOOD cruiser has just been launched at Rochefort which is likely to be the last of her race.

THE first steel cruiser ever built in China, it is claimed, was recently launched from a shipyard at Whampoa, to be used by the Portuguese Government in the defence of Manilla.

THE chiefs of the bureaus of construction and steam engineering have heard nothing of the order to suspend work on the Kearsarge. The construction bureau is still engaged on the repairs to her hull.

THE English Admiralty have ordered that for the future naval officers are to be detailed to act as ciceroni instead of draughtsmen, or other dockyard officials who may have a knowledge of foreign languages.

THE second edition of the Navy Register has not yet been sent to the Public Printer. The report of the committee on revision is before the Secretary, but he has not yet approved it nor given the order to go ahead with its publication. It is probable that the Register will be withheld until the July number is issued, in which the new features desired by the Secretary will be embodied.

THE ship Archimede was put up for sale at Yokohama on Feb. 26, and was purchased by Japanese for $6,800, the two 7-inch rifled guns realizing $50 each, four 5 inch guns $20 each, and one 4-pounder bronze howitzer, $40.

COMMODORE D. B. HARMONY has returned from Pensacola, Fla. He reports that the present location of the navy-yard there does not warrant the expenditure of any more money on her as a navy-yard. It is probable that the site will be changed.

THE Nordenfeldt, a submarine torpedo boat, launched at Barrow-in-Furness, March 26, is the largest boat of the kind yet constructed, being 110 feet in length. The engines develop 1,200 indicated horse power, and the vessel will have a speed of 19 knots on the surface.

BESIDES the six engineer officers at present attached to the U. S. S. Atlanta, the following were ordered for temporary duty on board during the trial trip: Passed Asst. Engrs. Webster, Kearny, Cleaver, and Howell.

FORTY-FIVE speculators attended the auction sale of several condemned Government vessels at Port Washington, L. I., April 14. The Congress was sold for $7,800. The Ohio brought $7,400; the steamer Shawmut, $2,050; the Roanoke, $9,350; the Susquehanna, $4,900, and the Savannah, $5,650.

A WASHINGTON despatch states that the chiefs of the Bureaus of Construction and Engineering of the Navy Department have gone to Norfolk to inspect the steam steering gear of the U. S. S. Trenton. It appears that the same system of steering as is used on the Dolphin was placed on the Trenton.

MR. WARD, of Messrs. Denny and Co., at Dumbarton, informed the Institution of Naval Architects last year that of 48,000 tons of mild steel wrought upon their premises, consisting of about 350,000 pieces, only 12 pieces had failed, and that his firm had often lost more than four times that amount in a single iron vessel.

THE Fish Commission steamer Albatross sailed from Washington April 6th for Norfolk to place a lot of stores on board the Thetis to be taken around to San Francisco. The stores required for the proposed long cruise of the Albatross in the Pacific will be so great in quantity that the vessel would be overcrowded, and the Thetis has more stowage capacity.

THE officers of the British war vessels Bellerophon and Pylades, at Vera Cruz, are visiting the City of Mexico. Vice-Admiral Lyons, commanding the North Atlantic and West Indian squadron; Capt. Clarke, of the Bellerophon, and Capt. Primrose, of the Pylades, being the chief officers in the party. The visitors have been tendered a ball by the British Minister and other attentions on the part of the leading Government officials.

THE French Government has given notice that on April 1, 1887, an experimental buoy, fitted with an automatic whistle, will be placed south-westward of the angle of the Southwest Mole, in course of construction at Boulogne. The buoy, painted red, will be moored about one quarter of a cable westward of the bell buoy with mirror, lying with the angle of the South-west Mole, bearing N. E. by E. ½ E., distant about one cable.

LIEUTENANT B. A. FISKE, U. S. N., the eminent electrician, at present on the Atlanta, is becoming thoroughly convinced that the uses of electricity are but in their infancy. He looks upon it as an assured fact that the electric light will be the gradual supplanter of gas as an illuminant for a certain class of places, but he also looks for a greater expansion in the employment of illuminating gas, due in a great measure to the very excellence of the incandescent electric lamp. So far, it would seem that such has been the effect. For ship illumination, of course, electricity has no rival, and it is a cause of congratulation that the Navy is at last starting off so well with this system.

SECRETARY WHITNEY issued instructions to the Torpedo Board on Friday. No torpedo will be tested without a majority of the Board vote to do so. The Board will report upon the following features of all torpedoes tested: Accuracy, certainty of operation, launching, starting on course and explosive action on contact with target, velocity, range, ability to beat through or avoid hostile defensive obstructions, destructiveness, safety in handling, ability to keep in readiness for immediate action, facility of manipulation, simplicity, ability to be operated with safety from enemy's fire, simplicity and efficiency of launching apparatus and noiselessness.

THE English National Life Boat Institution has resolved to offer prizes of a gold and a silver medal for drawings or models of a mechanically propeller life boat best adapted to meet the conditions under which life boats are called upon to perform their work, also a gold and silver medal for models or drawings of a propelling suitable for the self-righting life-boats of the Institution. 601 lives and 33 vessels were rescued last year by the boats of the Institution and 160 lives by shore boats and other means. 13 silver medals, 32 vinocular glasses, 35 votes of thanks on vellum and $33,150 were granted as rewards. Since the foundation of the institution 32,671 lives have been saved from shipwreck.

IN furtherance of the policy of consolidating the purchases of supplies under one head, the Secretary of the Navy has issued a circular to the chiefs of bureaus requiring them to submit, by the 30th inst., schedules of such materials and supplies as they estimate will be required in their respective departments during the coming fiscal year, the Inventory Board to decide what articles now on hand are serviceable, and the rest will be advertised for. The Board have arranged in convenient form large tables showing at a glance the amount and condition of stores now on hand at the various navy yards, so that when a requisition comes in from a bureau for a certain article it will be an easy matter to ascertain whether there is a surplus of that particular article on hand at any of the yards, and if so, whether it will be practicable to transfer it to the yard at which it is to be used. It is the Secretary's purpose to dispose of old stores as far as possible, and he will have them shipped from one yard to another when occasion requires.

NAVY GAZETTE.

Ordered.

APRIL 8.—Lieutenant Charles H. Amsden to appear before the retiring board.

Dismissed.

Naval Cadet Charles W. Potter for hazing.

Leave Extended.

CASUALTIES.

Deaths reported to the Surgeon-General of the Navy during the week ending April 13, 1887:

Joseph Roberts. Beneficiary, died April 5, 1887, at Government hospital for the insane, Washington, D. C.

MARINE CORPS.

APRIL 8.—Second Lieutenant C. H. Lauchheimer's present leave of absence extended one month, upon the expiration of which he is ordered to report for duty at the Marine Barracks, Washington, D. C.

APRIL 11.—H. K. White, ordered to hold himself in readiness for sea service.

APRIL 12.—1st Lieutenant James A. Turner, detached from the Marine Barracks, Mare Island, Cal., and ordered to proceed by rail to Washington, D. C., and report in person to the Commandant, U. S. M.C., for sea service.

APRIL 14.—Captain R. W. Huntington, detached, upon the reporting of his relief, 20th inst, from the command of the Marine Barracks at Annapolis, Md., and ordered to hold himself ready for orders to the U. S. S. Trenton at an early date.

Captain H. A. Bartlett, detached from the Marine Barracks, Norfolk, Va., and ordered to proceed to Annapolis, Md., and report on the 20th inst., to the Superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy as the officer detailed to relieve Captain R. W. Huntington.

FROM THE ASIATIC STATION.

REAR ADMIRAL CHANDLER, under date of Nagasaki, Japan, March 12, reports: The Palos at Tientsin; the Monocacy at Canton; the Marion (temporary flagship), and the Omaha at Nagasaki, to sail March 13 for Yokohama. The Brooklyn was to have sailed Feb. 22 from Batavia for Yokohama. The health of the officers and men of the squadron was good. In a letter of the same date Rear Admiral Chandler stated that he left Yokohama in the flagship Marion on the afternoon of Feb. 22 last and arrived at Kobe on the morning of the 24th. From Kobe, accompanied by his secretary, Lieut. West, and two other officers of the ship, he went to Kioto, the ancient capital of Japan. On arrival there was met by Mr. Kobayaski, the Governor's aide, with the Governor's carriage, which was put at the Admiral's disposal. On the following day the Admiral and his staff called upon Governor Kitaguki, which call he returned the next day. The considerate hospitality of the Governor during the visit was of the most friendly character. Permits to visit all the temples, manufactories of art works, and all interesting places in the city were given the Admiral, and the National Exposition of Japan, which had been closed for several days, was opened to him and his staff, and the Governor escorted them in person to the different departments. Left Kobe on the morning of the 3d and arrived at Nagasaki on the evening of the 5th.

FROM THE PACIFIC STATION.

CAPTAIN HOWISON reports the movements of vessels on the Pacific Station for the month of March: The Vandalia remained at Coquimbo till March 10, then left for Panama, arriving there the 27th instant where she awaits the arrival of the Commander-in-Chief.

The Iroquois when last heard from was at Valparaiso, having visited Talcahuana and Hota and Juan Fernandez during the past month; she was ordered to Coquimbo, and thence to the northward. The Adams was to the northward of Panama cruising.

The Juniata arrived at Talcahuana, Feb. 25, she is now at Coquimbo and will leave there for Caldera and the northern ports on April 10.

The Monongahela still remains at Coquimbo.

NAVAL ACADEMY.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., April 13, 1887.

THE last week of Lent passed away very much as have the others, with nothing to break through the routine of study and drill as preserved at the Academy. The Easter services held at the chapel, were well attended. The usual service with a sermon by Chaplain Hawson was held in the morning, the church being tastefully decorated with flowers. In the afternoon a children's service was held. At 3 o'clock, numerous friends attended the christening of Ralph Sampson, youngest son of Comdr. Sampson.

Now that Lent is over preparations are being rapidly carried on for coming entertainments. The gymnasium has been fitted with a stage, and daily rehearsals for the coming comedy are now held. The pieces to be presented on Saturday night are a comedy entitled "Always Intended" and a farce. In the near future such entertainments will be held in the Naval Institute Building, formerly occupied by the Department of Ordnance. An addition is in process of construction; it will overhang the road in the rear of the building. This addition will be fitted with a stage, and all conveniences for lectures before the Institute. No pains are spared in remodelling the interior, and when the work is completed it will be a valuable addition to the conveniences of the yard.

The lawn tennis grounds in the lower part of the yard are undergoing all repairs necessary to put them in good condition. Most of the officers interested in tennis have kept in constant practice, using the courts in the armory, and it is expected that some very exciting games will be played during the season. Certainly more attention will be paid to lawn tennis than has previously been done.

The cadets are practising daily for coming base ball games, and play very well together. Several of the best players of last year's team left with the graduating class and others were dropped as unsatisfactory. Their places must be filled by new players. The cadets expect to change the grounds this season to a slight extent, moving down nearer the line of sea wall from the gymnasium to the mortar. The old grounds were uneven, and the new location is said to be an improvement. Great interest in the base ball team is shown by all the officers in the yard, and it is hoped that they will do well in the coming games.

The same drills will be continued throughout this month, the different divisions changing drills weekly. Another gunnery cruise on the Wyoming was the drill on Saturday morning. The shooting was very good indeed, Cadet Edmonds, of the first class distinguishing himself by hitting the target twice. The last of the "stag" hops was given on Saturday night; hops and theatricals will be given every Saturday evening until after graduation.

The Constellation left on Monday morning for Norfolk, to undergo repairs before going on the summer cruise. A draft of 40 seamen were on board. The vessel was towed down by the steamer Phlox. Lieut. J. W. Danenhower was in command, and Ensign Gibbons was ordered to accompany her as watch officer.

The detail of officers to remain in the Yard during the summer has been announced. The last of the receptions was given Comdr. Sampson on Tuesday evening.

Paymaster Arms will only be relieved from the Academy on the 15th of May, and will then settle his accounts.

A game of ball between the officers and cadets of the First Class drew a large crowd to the parade ground. The cadets won by a score of 23 to 13, after a very heavy batting game. Until the last inning, it was believed the officers would win, and great excitement prevailed. Ensign Haeseler distinguished himself by good catching, and by making a home run.

A RECENT CORRESPONDENCE.

THE following correspondence has been made public:

NAVY DEPT., WASHINGTON, March 14, 1887.

SIR: Please request the resignation of John Teer, Clerk in the Navigation Department of the New York Navy-yard, to take effect April 1. Notify him at the same time that I have decided to make a change in that position, and if his resignation is not submitted he will be dropped from the rolls at that time. Very respectfully,

W. C. WHITNEY, Secretary of the Navy.

SIR: Referring to the Bureau's letter No. 862, of the 5th inst., asking for my resignation as clerk of this Department, I have the honor to inform you that I have accepted the conditions of the letter, and hereby tender my resignation, to take effect April 1 next.

In this connection I would most respectfully say that I have been employed in this office nearly 17 years, being first taken upon the books of the Department by Capt. J. W. A. Nicholson, and after his detachment, serving under the following mentioned officers: Capts. Edward Barrett, Milton Haxtun, Henry Erben, C. M. Schoonmaker, R. W. Meade, F. M. Ramsay, R. S. McCook, A. T. Mahan and H. B. Robeson.

In 1875 I was advanced to the rate of clerk, at the request of the navigation officer, Capt. R. W. Meade, and approved by Vice Admiral S. C. Rowan, commanding this station.

I have never entered politics, nor have I ever belonged to any political organization, coming out of the Marine Corps after a service of five years and three months, into the office which I am now employed.

The Quartermaster of the corps, Maj. H. B. Lowry, will, I am sure, remember me favorably.

All of the naval officers having charge of the Navigation Department, now alive, would, I am sure, vouch for my ability, honesty, etc.

I would state, for the information of the Bureau, that I am a veteran and a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. I would most respectfully ask of the Chief of the Bureau to intercede with the Honorable Secretary of the Navy in my behalf. My work has always met the approval of the Bureau and of my immediate commanding officers.

I am a married man, with seven children, all young and not able to earn a living, and as I have served the country nearly a quarter of a century, I will no doubt experience great trouble in obtaining a position to enable me to keep my children from want. I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant, JOHN TEER, Navigation Clerk.

Capt. J. G. Walker, U. S. N., Chief of Bureau of Navigation, Navy Department, Washington, D. C.

The following summary of the winter cruising of the Revenue steamer U. S. Grant, Capt. A. B. Davis commanding, will show that she was actively engaged in looking after distressed vessels and it was not the fault of the commanding officer that she did not make a better record. She landed during the winter nine surf-boats for the Life Saving Service on the coast of New Jersey and Long Island, covering, in so doing, 1,087.3 miles. The only "two" cases where assistance was required she was on hand, namely, the steamer Wisconsin—she heard of the disaster and immediately put to sea for her and came up with her about the time one of her own steamers, the Nevada, and lay by her; and the steamer Scotia—she heard of the disaster coming in from a cruise off shore and immediately went to her assistance and succeeded with the L. S. S. crews, in rescuing 243 persons, who were in a most helpless condition, and brought them safe to N. Y. Our correspondent who sends this adds: "During the winter she cruised 6,784.5 miles, boarded and spoke off shore 21 foreign and 224 American vessels and reported two for violation of law. The duties of the officers of the Revenue Service is no sinecure, to say the least, and your able advocacy of the usefulness of this service is a word fitly spoken in a good cause."

The following assignments of revenue marine officers were ordered this week: 1st Lieut. Robert M. Clark, to the Fessenden, at Detroit; Capt. S. S. Warner, from the Fessenden and ordered to the Woodbury at Eastport; Capt. E. L. Deane, from the Woodbury and ordered to the Fessenden on expiration of leave; 1st Lieut. F. J. Simmons, from the Woodbury to the Dix at Galveston; 2d Lieut. Samuel Howard, from the Boutwell to the Forward at Mobile; 3d Lieut. J. C. Cantwell, from the Corwine and ordered to the Chase at New Bedford.

TO ARMY OFFICERS.

The undersigned having represented the Penn Mutual Life Ins. Co., of Philadelphia, as its General Agent for Northern Ohio, during the past year, with the experience thus gained feels himself to be competent to give Army Officers advice on many matters pertaining to Life Insurance, which may be to their advantage. To this end, therefore, he gratuitously offers his services to the Army, and respectfully invites correspondence from such as desire information on this subject.

While the Company he represents has no superior in the country for security or for liberality in its policies to officers in the Military Service, yet he will be pleased to advise and assist officers who may prefer to place their insurance in other reputable companies. Information as to the standing of the various companies and their relative profitableness for investment he will gladly communicate to those who desire it; also advice as to kind of policy best suited and most profitable to those of different ages.

By this announcement the undersigned hopes that he may serve the interests of his brother officers, enabling them to place their insurance in the most substantial and profitable companies, in a form of policy most advantageous to themselves.

CONGRESS having neglected to make an appropriation for a new building at Carlisle, the boys of the Indian school have contributed out of their savings $1,700. Captain Pratt in an appeal to the friends of the Carlisle school says: "I shall need about $8,030, in addition to their donation to complete the building. Last year I burned 200,000 brick with reference to the two buildings, and have accumulated a quantity of lumber and other material necessary, which, together with our own work, will enable us to do for about $10,000 what would otherwise cost $25,000. The building will be 250 feet long, 36 feet wide, 3 stories high, divided by a hall on each floor and into rooms 13x14 ft., so that we may have no more than three students in a room, thus accommodating 216 and giving a large assembly room, clothes, store, and bath rooms." Captain Pratt publishes a letter from General Sherman, who says: "I assure you that I wish you and all who are striving to save the remnants of the Indian race all honor and all success, but it seems like trying to stop the tides of the ocean with brooms. The sooner these Indians are absorbed into the prevailing race the sooner will be solved the Indian question which has bothered the brains and commanded the sympathies of the humane for ages long before we were born."

TO SETTLE NATIONAL DISPUTES.

IN a lecture before the Royal United Service Institution on "belligerent rights," Captain Ross of the Coldstream Guards said it was chimerical to suppose that international disputes could be avoided. The idea of referring disputes to the decision of neutrals was inconsistent with the liberty and dignity of independent nations. This view of the case, which is undoubtedly sound, shows the impossibility of carrying out Captain GREEN'S idea that the United States should act as a universal umpire, and the wisdom of our still adhering to our traditional policy of avoiding entangling alliances. Captain Ross referred to the fact that some have tried to mitigate the evils of war by alleviating unnecessary suffering—suffering which it was possible to avoid. Others have attempted to introduce an international code, framed to regulate war with one system. None of these plans are popular. If then, said the lecturer, war is a terrible event which often happens, an evil to mankind which can neither be done away with by any system of international arbitration, nor practically be rendered innocuous to society by a change in the laws of war, does anything yet remain by which to avert this fearful scourge upon a peaceable community? Nothing that he could see, unless an attempt was made to exact on every occasion that it should not be undertaken without a cogent cause. To ensure that wars undertaken by a people were at least just and necessary, entails a searching inquiry into their causes; and to help the judgment of a nation who proposes to carry this out, the verdict of an independent National Council, before whom the case would have to be distinctly placed and tried, would certainly not be immaterial.

But how is such a Council to enforce its decrees? How can it control the passions and the ambitions which result in war? The large majority of the people in this country were opposed to our war with Mexico, and our officers on the frontier resisted every effort from the politicians at Washington to induce them to provoke it; and yet the war with Mexico came. The purpose of war between the two sections of our country in 1861 was confined to few, so far was it from the interests of the vast majority, in a country supposed to be ruled by majorities, that it was impossible to convince any considerable number that there was any danger of it. How would the National Council proposed by Capt. Ross have prevented it? While the causes leading to war are of long maturing its immediate outbreak is seldom the result of deliberation, and never of the sort of deliberation which admits of discussion in the open forum of a National Council. In a world which has been so obviously organized thus far on the principle of struggle and contest, of the destruction of the weak and the survival of the "fittest," the prevalence of universal peace is one of those sweet dreams which are pleasing in inverse ratio to their possibility of realization. It would do no harm to indulge them did not this indulgence beget a false theory of optimism which prevents that wise preparation for war which, so far from provoking war, is the best, and indeed the only known safeguard against it. No nation in the world has been so utterly neglectful of preparation for war as the United States, and yet statistics will show that in the last hundred years we have lost our full proportion upon the battlefield, while our wars as a whole present a most humiliating history of inadequate preparation and ignorant and costly administration. If we take into account the enormous payments for pensions which directly result from war, what have we to boast ourselves over those foreign states whose oppressive military burdens have been the theme of every Independence orator since the beginning? Even the old world troubles of anarchy and communism seem to be arising to plague us as we begin to realize the old world conditions. No system of government will eliminate human nature. The evil of war cannot be questioned, but we cannot escape evils by ignoring them, and, as PLATO said more than two thousand years ago, "there is no evil so great for a man as to hold false opinions upon the questions with which our argument has to do." In this matter of preparation for war we are, as we always have been, governed by rhetoric rather than by reason, and, as the same ancient authority says;

"I maintain that were a rhetorician and a physician to go together into any city you choose, and there discuss the question which of the two should be elected physician, the physician would show for nothing; for there is no subject upon which the rhetorician could not speak more persuasively before the multitude than could any expert whatsoever."

TRIAL OF THE ATLANTA.

THE Navy is to be congratulated on the successful performance of the Atlanta during her late trial trip. She left her berth at the Brooklyn Navy-yard on the morning of April 13, and steaming safely through Hell Gate, at 10 o'clock A. M., the vessel was head due East and the trial of the Atlanta began. During six consecutive hours the powerful engines of this fine vessel drove her through the water at a speed considerably in excess of any previous achievement, one hour's record being 3,366 horse-power, with a speed of sixteen knots. At the conclusion of the six hours the ship continued on her way towards New York, but at 6 P. M. anchored off Whitestone and came up to the Navy-yard at an early hour on Thursday morning. The average speed maintained for the entire time during which the trial lasted, six hours, was 15.5 knots with an average indicated horse-power of 3,255, a better exhibit than this vessel has ever made, and, in so far as speed is concerned, considerably in excess of the expectation at the Navy Department, it is believed. The vessel behaved admirably and the machinery functioned throughout the trial in a highly satisfactory manner. The much talkad of "separator" operated efficiently and no accident occurred to mar the success of what will probably be the last experimental trial trip of this much tried craft. The battery was not tested on this occasion, but will be certainly during the coming summer. The Atlanta is now in her former berth at the Navy-yard, and awaits the orders of the Secretary.

After an enforced idleness of something like nine months, the Atlanta was recently docked for the purpose of cleaning her bottom of the accumulations of barnacles and other marine growths, animal and vegetable, which had increased to such an extent as to interfere seriously with her speed and handiness. And this brings to notice a fact which seems to have escaped the comment of all critics of the new steel cruisers, i. e., the constant fouling to which steel or iron bottoms are liable in all parts of the world, but particularly in tropical waters. A ship of the class of which the Atlanta is a type should be taken from the water at least twice a year for the purpose of cleaning and painting. Without this such a vessel soon loses speed; and as the marine growths increase all the faster as attention is delayed, so the ship, if not docked at frequent intervals, very speedily degenerates into a slow hulk, scarcely able to get out of her own way.

But a semi-annual docking means a semi annual expense of no small moment in the case of a ship of, say, 6,000 tons, and indeed there is more than one station included in our naval cruising grounds where a vessel of that tonnage cannot be docked at all. So that the United States may find itself, in the near future, possessed of, not one, but several, white elephants, in the shape of steel cruisers which must be docked if they are to be kept in a condition to deserve their name, and which cannot be docked for want of the proper facilities, our Government not having the docks required and those in foreign ports being either too small or otherwise occupied. A vessel of 6,000 tons on the South Pacific Station cannot be taken out of the water at any point nearer than San Francisco, which requires a voyage of such length that its cost precludes its being undertaken with the frequency called for by a steel or iron vessel whose bottom is unprotected by a sheathing of wood and copper.

Attention is called to this, not in a spirit of captious criticism, but as a matter of the utmost importance to the Navy at this time, when it appears that the tide of favor towards it is setting strongly in the direction of liberal appropriations for ships and armor. Certainly the question of sheathed cruisers, composite built ships, and otherwise protected bottoms is one worthy of the most careful inquiry and examination by the able corps of designers and constructors upon which the country will rely with full confidence for the evolution of a navy worthy of the renown attained in the days of HULL, STEWART, FARRAGUT and PORTER. Let not, then, a few theorists commit us to a single line of policy in construction, but let us learn from the costly experience of others and avoid the mistake of "putting all of our eggs in one basket."

AN officer who is not in the line and who is not a colonel, and never will be a colonel, in a communication which appears elsewhere presents very strongly the argument on behalf of selecting for the vacant Brigadier-Generalship the "oldest Colonel who was a General in the field." "Keeping the one vacancy among the brigadier-generals," he says: "will suffice to give all these men a merited, tardy, but better-late-than-never reward." He calls attention to the principle of recognizing war service as a factor in promotion in the retirement of ORD as a Major-General, in the appointment of Colonels POTTER and WILLCOX as Brigadier-Generals, in the selection of Colonels DAVIS and BAIRD for the head of the corps of Inspector-Generals, and in the appointment of Colonel RUCKER as Quartermaster-General and his retirement with that rank on the day of his appointment. It would certainly be very pleasant if any means could be found of transferring in process of time to the retired list with the rank of General Officer, any considerable number —or, better, all—of the colonels now in active service whose names are indelibly associated with our great war as corps and division commanders. No other country would have dismissed such men from her active service with so slight a reward, and it is always an occasion for regret to us upon each recurring vacancy that the responsibility should be forced upon the President of choosing between men every one of whom should have the rank he is able to confer upon only one.

A TWIN-SCREW torpedo boat, one of two built for the Italian Government by Messrs. YARROW AND CO., of Poplar, has beaten the record in her trial trip which took place March 29. This trial trip took place in the Lower Hope, below Gravesend. The weather was very rough, the number of people on board thirty-three, equipment complete, and load carried 12 tons.

This is practically a speed of 25 knots or 28 miles per hour. This, says the Engineer, "is the greatest speed ever attained through the water by any ship or boat, and is a wonderful performance. We shall have more to say concerning this Italian torpedo boat; meanwhile we may point out that our own Government would use only a necessary precaution if they took care to provide this country with an adequate number of similar boats." This last admonition we repeat for the benefit of our enterprising Secretary of the Navy, his professional advisers and the congressional solons on whose good will they wait in humble attendance.

AS SOON as the Denver and Chicago military sites have been formally accepted by the Government it is the intention of the Lieutenant-General to order two companies of infantry, under the command of majors, to each of the posts to carry on the work incident to the establishment of the posts. Major BRADY, of the 18th Infantry, it is understood, will be assigned to the command of the two companies at Denver. The selection of names for the new sites is now being considered by the Lieutenant-General. Fort McClellan for the Denver post and Fort Logan for the Chicago post are the names most favorably spoken of thus far.

A BOARD will be ordered early next week by the Secretary of War to frame a set of rules, etc., for the organization and management of the new Army Hospital Corps. The Board will consist of medical officers on duty in Washington, with Surgeon-General MOORE, probably, as president. A number of replies received from medical officers in answer to the circular sent out by General MOORE inviting suggestions as to the best method of enlistment, transfers, training of men, etc., for the new corps will be considered by the Board.

THE Secretary of the Navy will probably take up for consideration in the near future a scheme for the organization of a Naval reserve force. All men following the water for business or pleasure purposes will be permitted to enlist in the volunteer forces. They will be provided with ships and arms for modern practice, and Naval officers will be detailed to instruct them. All this, of course, requires legislative action.

THE Lieutenant-General is giving attention to the selection of light batteries for the first tour at the Fort Riley School. The battery at Fort Leavenworth and the one at Vancouver Barracks have been decided upon but no conclusion has been reached as to the other three. The purpose is to have five batteries stationed there and to alternate with the other five every two or three years.

ACTING SECOND COMPTROLLER MCMAHAN, for the information of Army and Navy purchasing officers, has rendered an opinion that an exigency cannot be created by the simple certificate of a public officer that it exists, providing it appears upon the face of the papers that the certificate is false. An exigency is something more than a condition of things which renders a particular line of action expedient. It involves a state of pressing necessity so great that the public interest would be prejudiced if the contemplated purchase was not made.

THE contract for supplying the Navy with armor plates and gun steel for the armament of the monitors and new cruisers was formally awarded to the Bethlehem Iron Company on Thursday. The Secretary of the Navy makes the following statement in explanation of the award:

The Bethlehem Iron Company is the only bidder for the whole contract. The theory of the advertisement was that the Government wanted the lowest price for the whole work (paying more or less for one or the other being immaterial, so long as the entire job is obtained at the lowest total price). The total sum for the whole job being the material thing. With this view the advertisement was framed so as to obtain the largest range of bidding, allowing a person to bid for either or for both; but the total sum which the whole should cost the Government being the matter alone to be considered. The two lowest separate bids for the two classes being that of the Cambria Iron Company for the gun steel and the Cleveland Rolling Mill Company for the armor plate amounts to $4,273,073.90. That of the Bethlehem Iron Company for the same classes amounts to $4,512,933.29. They are the lowest bidders for the work by the sum of $360,135.61. Since the bidding has taken place the Bethlehem company has offered to reduce their prices on the gun steel, so as to make that company the lowest bidder for each of the separate classes. This may be done under the circumstances, although I should not permit it if I did not consider them, on other ground, entitled to the award.

IT is announced in the Avenir Militaire that Krupp is making the largest gun in the world; it weighs 143,000 kilos, (315,000 lbs.), is 16 metres (52½ ft.), long, and 40 c. (15¾ in.) bore. The shortest and lightest of its projectiles will be 1 metre 20c. long, and weigh 740 kilos (1632 lbs.) The charge will be 485 kilos of prismatic brown powder, the initial velocity of the light projectile will be 735 metres (2411 ft.), of the heavy 640 metres (2100 ft.)

IN the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL of May 12, 1883, we published a list of Army retirements, which included all the general officers, nearly all the officers of the staff departments, all the field officers of cavalry, artillery and infantry, and the captains and lieutenants of the line down to the year 1902. In the JOURNAL of April 9, 1887, we completed this list by the publication of the dates for the retirement of the other officers of the staff departments, all the captains of Cavalry, Artillery, and Infantry and thirty-two additional lieutenants of the Line, including all who retire before 1911. This makes our list complete for all the Army excepting the lieutenants, and of these we give the names of sixty-three who retire within the next quarter of a century. The two lists have been published together in a pamphlet, which will be sent on receipt of ten cents to cover postage and mailing. It is to be noted that the influence upon promotion of retirements for age is relatively small. During the four years between the publication of our first list and our second list the junior Captain of Cavalry actually gained thirty-five files, only two of which were due to retirements under the 64 year act. The junior Captain of Artillery gained twelve files, none of which were due to this cause. The junior Captain of Infantry was himself retired and the officer next above him gained sixty-seven files, nine of which he owed to compulsory retirement. This would show an average of about ten per cent. of all the promotions during the past four years to be credited to compulsory retirement.

Commodore Harmony, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, has returned to Washington from the Pensacola Navy-yard, whither he went to ascertain from personal observation the exact condition of the drydock, which the citizens of that place have been urging the Secretary of the Navy to complete. The conclusion he reached, which will be embodied in his next annual report, will not be very satisfactory to either the Pensacola delegation or to those who were instrumental in having the dock established at that yard. He not only reports against the completion of the dock, but will recommend that the yard be removed to some more favorably located site in Pensacola Bay. The dock referred to was authorized by ex-Secretary Robeson and cost the Government nearly a half million dollars. It has never been used since erected. Commodore Harmony on his return trip from Pensacola stopped over at Port Royal, where he inspected the new buildings recently erected under the direction of Lieutenant Lyman. He expressed himself as more than pleased with the work that has been done.

A London despatch to the N. Y. Tribune says: "The French fuss over the Duke of Edinburgh's failure to return the French Admiral's salute is excessive, but the Duke's explanation is regarded here as a humiliation. He had no saluting cannon. Not very long since the British Admiralty had to confess that it had sent ironclads to sea with orders not to fire their big guns lest they should burst, but nobody hitherto supposed the Navy unable to supply cannon for ceremonial uses. The Duke says he left in a hurry and forgot or had no time to get them on board. Everybody has blundered once more. Even the newspapers are wrong about the etiquette which the Duke violated. But their anger against him is deep, and the incident will add something to his previous unpopularity."

Though the Canadian horses recently purchased for the English cavalry service meet with a good deal of severe criticism, they have secured the favor of the Duke of Cambridge and Lord Wolseley. They consider that the samples brought over are such as to fully justify the hope that, in course of time, Canada can be made to supply a reserve of horses to any extent in case of war. The purpose, therefore, is to provide such a reserve market for an emergency, and in order to establish it to make a number of annual purchases. Toronto is agitated owing to two Frenchmen having recently been there making inquiries as to the ability of Canada to supply horses suitable for military purposes. The belief is that they were representatives of the French Government.

On Nov. 4, 1886, a photograph was taken of a group of Indian boys and girls just after arriving at the Carlisle School, at Hampton, Va., from Fort Marion, Fla. They belonged to the Chiricahua Apaches, and their faces bore the marks of savage and ungoverned characters. Four months later the same group was again photographed, and the companion pictures show a striking change, which is not altogether due to the substitution of short hair and civilized garb for their matted locks and savage blankets and well filled skins for shrunken paunches.

The San Francisco Report says: "The Apaches at San Carlos are threatening mischief. A commonsense plan, in that case, would be to concentrate troops upon the reservation, disarm the redskins and hunt up their caches of cartridges. The bureau way is to permit the warriors to leave the reservation at their earliest convenience, no movement of troops being ordered until news of burning and killing has been received through regular channels, duly verified and transmitted in triplicate to headquarters."

The New York correspondent of Engineering furnishes that paper with a description of the Continental Iron Works at Greenpoint, which appears in its number for April 1. Their present proprietor, Mr. Thomas Rowland, became connected with the works in 1859, and one of his earliest contracts was one in 1860 to construct a wrought-iron tube 7½ ft. in diameter and over a quarter of a mile (1,400 ft.) in length, and place the same on the top of the high bridge over the Harlem River, 120 ft. above its level, for the purpose of uniting the Croton Aqueduct and making a continuous water-way of equal transverse section from Croton Falls to the new reservoir at Central Park. In these works was laid the keel of the original monitor, and also those of the Passaic, Montauk, Catskill, the Onondaga (the first double-turreted ironclad, since sold), the Puritan, the Cohoes, broken up in 1874, and the Muscoota, sold in 1869. In addition to completing the hulks of these vessels, turrets for the ironclads Sangamon, Lehigh, and Patapsco were furnished by these works. The manufacture of gun-carriages and mortar beds for the Navy Department was also carried on on a large scale during the Rebellion, all of the latter for Porter's "Mortar Fleet" being made at these works, which likewise fitted out some of the converted merchant steamers for the Port Royal expedition. In 1874 the frame of the monitor Monadnock was set up and finished, and then taken apart and shipped to San Francisco, where she was re-erected and launched.

We publish elsewhere the account we find in a Japanese paper of the sad accident which has led to the order suspending Captain Selfridge from the command of the Omaha. A Court of Inquiry will now be ordered to investigate the matter, and meantime it is well to reserve judgment. An official report of the occurrence has been received at the Navy Department. In a private letter Captain Selfridge says that he placed his target in front of cliffs marked on the chart 369 feet nigh. No human being was in sight at the time, and he saw every shell, 42 in all, fall, through his glass, for he was giving the elevation. The officer sent to watch the fall of shot returned and reported that all the shells had exploded. Captain Selfridge concludes: "Of course I felt dreadfully over this sad accident, but I do not consider that any blame can be attached to me any more than to the Ordnance Department, who furnished the shells with defective fuses. I started a subscription, and the men came forward nobly, and $636 was raised and given into the custody of the Governor."

The Omaha Herald is anxious that the sum appropriated to "enlarge, repair and build posts" should be judiciously and properly expended and objects to quartermasters acting themselves as architects and superintendents of construction. In consequence of this practice, says the Herald, "the forts of the country present an architectural monotony disgusting to the æsthetic eye and older in type than the sawdust ring of a circus. They are all the same, and the houses or 'quarters,' in all are alike." We may state for the information of the Herald that it is very seldom nowadays that constructions or repairs at military posts, of any magnitude, are not supervised by a practical and competent architect. The old systems die hard, it is true, but in the light of current realities, it is a positive fact that they do die.

The programme for the unveiling of the Garfield Statue at Washington, May 12, will include a national salute at sunrise at the Washington Barracks; the address on the part of the Monument Committee by Hon. J. Warren Keifer delivering the statue to General P. H. Sheridan, U. S. A.; the address of acceptance by Gen. Sheridan, and the delivery of the statue to the President; the acceptance by the President on behalf of the U. S.

The War Department circular calling upon the several bureaus for a detailed statement, for the use of the Cockrell Committee, of the amount of work performed by each bureau, has been modified so as to call for a statement showing simply the method of transacting business.

"The Pneumatic Dynamite Torpedo Gun" was the title of a paper read by 1st Lieutenant Edmund L. Zalinski, 5th U. S. Artillery, before the Military Service Institution, at Governor's Island, N. Y. H., on Thursday, April 14, at 1.45 P. M.

The first annual ball of the U. S. Regular Army and Navy Veterans took place on the evening of April 11 at the Germania Assembly Rooms, New York City. It was a highly successful occasion.

The Grand Army of the Republic will, generally, observe with due form and ceremony the anniversary of the birthday of General Grant, April 27 next.

The Acting Second Comptroller allowed the following Mexican War Claims this week: Miner Knowlton, Captain, 1st Artillery, $60; Harvey Brown, Brevet Colonel, 4th Artillery, $225: Edward W. Parker, Private, 1st U. S. Voltigeurs, $21.

The Army decision circular for the month of March is held up awaiting the decision of the Secretary of War on a question relating to extra duty pay to a certain class of enlisted men performing work under the Quartermaster's Department. It will not be out before some time next week.

A decision of the Court of Claims in the case of King, which will affect a large number of observers of the Signal Corps, is expected on Monday next. The case was argued and submitted about a month ago.

It is denied at Army Headquarters that it has been decided to change the stations of the 6th, 8th and 24th Regiments of Infantry on July 1, as reported. It is considered very possible, however, that if funds are found available the change will take place early in the fall.

It is understood that the Retiring Board at Washington has recommended that Major Warren Webster, Surgeon, U. S. A., be "wholly retired."

WHO SHALL FILL IMPENDING VACANCY

There remain in the Army to-day fifteen colonels who held the commission of general officer during the war and who held general's commands in battle. Two years ago there were 38 such colonels. There are, then, 23 less than two years ago, or but little more than one-third the number. Of this 23, Gibbon, Ruger, Potter and Willcox have met with the reward any other country would have given them twenty-three years ago, and they wear and have worn their deserved but tardy honors well. Thanks to the present President's policy, Potter was promoted in order to properly reward him, and held the position but a few months before retirement, and now Willcox, his successor, appointed for the same reason, goes upon the retired list an infinitely happier man than if he had passed from active service with his conduct and commands in the war unrewarded and unrecognized. In addition to the 15 colonels, there are but six others in the whole Army who rose to that rank and commanded their troops in the field and in battle. Of these 15 colonels, McCook, Parke and Gillmore held the commission of major generals. Parke commanded the 9th Corps after the battle in front of Petersburg. The distinguished services of Gillmore are known, also of McCook. Saxton held large and important commands. Ayres commanded the Regular Division the two last years of the war, and always in every battle gave a good account of himself and his men. Merritt, the boy commander of a division of cavalry, one of the best cavalry officers in the world to-day, needs no eulogy here. Kautz distinguished himself at the head of a cavalry division. Carr and Stanley were equally prominent, and prominently urged when Gen. Crook was made brigadier general. Stanley has been promoted. Let not, therefore, Carr be forgotten. Hatch gave Gen. Mackenzie a hard pull for his star in '82. His hair is now silver white with exposure and frontier work. Let the silver star descend in due time upon those shoulders below the silver hair.

The precedent of acknowledging and considering war services as a factor in promotion has been much acted upon and strengthened of late. It was recognized in retiring Brig.-Gen. Ord as major-general. It was recognized in appointing Col. Rucker Q. M. General and retiring him with that rank the day of his appointment. It has been recognized in the appointment of Cols. Potter and Willcox brigadier-generals when each of them had but a few months to serve. It was recognized in the case of Col. Davis when appointed insp.-general, and again in the appointment of Col. Baird insp.-general, over his senior, on account of his field service as a general officer. Now the one vacancy about to be made by the retirement of Gen. Willcox will suffice to carry on the principle. If each colonel, who held the rank of general officer, commanded troops with gallantry in the field and has a good record since, be promoted the oldest first, every one of these men will receive at the last moment, the just rank from which in any other army in the world they would never have been deprived. The petty difference in their retired pay certainly cannot be considered by a country so great and wealthy as ours—there is no need of legislation. The Executive can do it all. Let us hope that he will. It will hurt no one. Do justice to the few who remain of that class so fast passing away. Let us hope then that the oldest colonel who was a general in the field, may have the vacancy. Keeping the one vacancy among the brig.-generals will suffice to give all these men a merited, tardy, but better late than never, reward. The writer is not a colonel and never will be. He is not in the Line, and, therefore, no self-seeking perverts his vision. * * *

LATE ARMY ORDERS.

1st Lieut. Frank E. Hobbs, Ord. Dept., has been ordered from Philadelphia to Johnstown, Penn. (S. O., April 13, H. Q. A.)

Capt. Frank Baker, Ord. Dept., has been ordered from Philadelphia to Dupont Mills, near Wilmington, Del., to inspect powder. (S. O., April 13, H.Q. A.)

Capt. John G. Butler, Ord. Dept., has been ordered to inspect Gatling guns at Colt's firearms manufactory, Connecticut. (S. O., April 14, H.Q.A.)

The leave of absence of Maj. Frederick Van Vliet, 10th Cav., has been extended two months on account of disability. (S. O., April 13, H. Q. A.)

Captain S. W. Groesbeck, U. S. A., Judge Advocate on the staff of Gen. Ruger, was married at Norwalk, Conn., to Miss Alice Willson, Thomas, daughter of Mr. W. G. Thomas, of that city. After a short tour the married couple will go to St. Paul.

Captain Otho E. Michaelis, Corps of Engineers, U. S A., is to deliver a "Talk on Field Artillery Construction" before the Military Service Institution at Governor's Island on Thursday April 21, at 1.45 P. M. To those who had the pleasure of listening in Philadelphia to Capt. Michaelis's description of the Army of Kukuanaland and its field artillery, this return to the subject will prove additionally interesting.

SHOEING HORSES IN THE ARMY.

I AM glad a movement is afoot to rectify the idiotic rules for shoeing horses in the Army. About 1857 Captain Gerrard, 5th Cav., published a book with Miles' system of horseshoeing. I used it during ten years' active life in the cavalry, though after some experience, omitting reducing the sole (he allows that), Wm. H. Herbert (Frank Forrester) conducted a series of experiments as to the number of nails required. The final result was five to six in the fore shoes and seven in the hind shoes. Miles, Herbert and Wm. H. Murray's "Perfect Horse" contain all the information that any cavalry officer require, and if they give attention, and not leave ignorant smiths to do as they choose, there need be no ruined feet. I remember in '61, after explaining to the blacksmiths my wishes, one remarked that he thought the boss who learned him his trade knew better than I how to shoe a horse. "I am responsible, and you will obey orders. Each animal will be inspected, and any variation from the rule will make it unpleasant for you." At the end of a few months he allowed that he had learned a little.

In 1868, the Q. M. Dept. sent to the cavalry stations a man authorized to instruct the officers relative to the proper method. He was accompanied by a lieutenant to introduce him, and possibly to insure his receiving attention. Cost to Government said to be $25,000 and expenses. They came to the station of Troop G, 6th Cavalry. After a lecture on the structure of the foot, etc., one of the troop horses was led out for practical illustration of his theory. After cutting everything the foot could stand, frog and all, he then, with a fine saw, cut a V-shaped piece out between the crust and frog so deep that the blood ran freely; to keep the foot from contracting, winding up with a heavy shoe nailed back to the heel. Then, with a triumphant air of satisfaction, said "What do you think of that?" "Do you wish my honest opinion?" "Yes!' "You are the most ignorant jackass I have ever known." The captain then asked how long (if the troop were shod in that manner) it would take by proper shoeing, to have them fit for hard service. Six months at least. I also think it would be better to use steel instead of iron for shoes, as a lighter weight shoe could be used and give as good service as the heavier iron shoe. I have used steel for 30 years on my own horses, and think it less costly. M.

ADDITIONS TO THE FRENCH NAVY.

THE Chamber of Deputies having voted the supplementary credit of £1,040.000 demanded by the Minister of Marine, the following new vessels will at once be built: At Cherbourg, a first-class cruiser, to be named the Alger, which will be 360 feet long by 42 feet in beam, with a 20-feet draught of water, a displacement of 4.162 tons. and a speed of 19 knots. The Alger, which is to have an ironclad deck, will carry four 7-inch guns, six 6-inch guns six revolving cannon, four other guns, and four torpedo tubes. At Brest, a first class cruiser of the same type, to be called the Isly. At Toulon, two second-class cruisers, the Davoust and the Sachet, each with a displacement of about 3,000 tons. At Havre. two cruisers, to be named the Cosmao and the Coetlogon, about 310 feet long by 31 feet in beam, with a 15-foot draught of water and a displacement of 1,848 tons. In addition to the above vessels the Société des Chantiers de la Loire is about to lay down a second-class cruiser, the Chanzy, of the same type as the two about to be built at Toulon, while the Société de la Gironde is to build at Bordeaux a cruiser of the same type and dimensions as the two about to be constructed at Havre. The Société des Forges et Chantiers de la Méditerranée is about to build a first-class cruiser, to be named the Mogador, which will be 351 feet long, by 44 feet in beam, with a 20-foot draught of water and a displacement of 4,325 tons. The Mogador will be armed with four 7-inch guns in turrets, six 6-inch guns, and several revolving cannon and torpedo tubes. Her engines will be of 8,200 horse-power, and her calculated speed is to be 19 knots an hour. Thus, three first, three second, and three third class cruisers will at once be built, one first, one second, and all the third-class vessels being undertaken by private firms. About 30 torpedo-boats will also be ordered from private firms, but the Minister is waiting before giving the order until some trials of other torpedo-boats just built are completed.

A DRILL WITH THE MAGAZINE RIFLE.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Pall Mall Gazette. describing the drill of a German detachment near Gravelotte with the repeating rifle says: "The company I saw had had but little practice, and were getting reprimands from half-a-dozen officers standing beside the drill sergeant for the slowness of their movements; but to a non-military eye nothing could have been more machine-like. The repeating rifle differs from the ordinary rifle in the fact that the stock, instead of stopping short where it is grasped by the left hand, is prolonged to within an inch of the end of the barrel. This constitutes the reservoir of cartridges. The firing consists of three movements—the 'ready' during which each man gives a sharp turn to the right to a little lever above the lock of his gun, and the familiar 'present' and 'fire!' The company stood four deep, the two front ranks firing, while the two rear ranks recharged their magazines. So rapid were the movements, that the magazine holding either 10 or 12 cartridges—I forget which—was emptied, with a perceptible allowance each time for rapid aim, in 10 seconds. The thought of what would happen to any body of men exposed to half-a-minute of firing like this, made the spectacle almost appalling. A stolid-looking German by my side, who, as I afterwards learned, had been one of the Landwehr in the war, expressed his feelings in one word—the most vigorous in his native tongue, 'Schauderhaft!' [shudderful] he exclaimed under his breath. It is all very well for a Russian Governor to issue orders to his troops calling upon them to remember that battles are won by courage and not by repeating rifles, but the moral effect of the new weapon both upon those using it and those opposed to it must be enormous."

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

We have the third and concluding volume of the Greville Memoirs, published by D. Appleton and Co. It is a Journal of the Reign of Queen Victoria from 1852 to 1860, by the late Chas. C. F. Greville, Esq., Clerk of the Council: edited by Henry Reeve, Registrar of the Privy Council. Mr. Reeve thinks that we have not sufficiently appreciated the remarkable gifts of the statesmen, orators, historians, poets, and wits who shed an incomparable lustre on the politics, literature, and social intercourse in the years covered by this diary; hence he introduces us into familiar intercourse with them and enables us to see them as they were viewed by their contemporaries, who met them face to face in daily association. The present volume opens with the death of the Duke of Wellington and closes with the Garibaldi expedition against King Bomba of Naples in 1860, which was one of the initial steps in the establishment of the present Kingdom of Naples. It covers the period of the Crimean War and the alliance between France and England during the reign of Napoleon III., and is full of entertaining anecdotes of characters now historical. Such volumes as this furnish a more correct idea of the period they cover than the more formal histories, and bear much the same relation to them that a theatrical performance does to an exhibition of wax works. Another volume of the same sort is the "Reminiscences and Opinions of Sir Francis Hastings Doyle, 1813-1885," also published by the Appletons. In it a garrulous octogenarian who saw much of public men and had a more intimate knowledge than his fellows of public measures, lives over his life again for the benefit of posterity, who he has made sure will do at least this much for him—read his book. He was a fellow pupil at Eaton with Gladstone, Lord Elgin, Lord Canning, Selwyn, Arthur Hallam, and was at Oxford with Cardinal Manning, Lord Houghton, Henry Wilberforce, and Lord Sherbrooke. His later recollections cover intercourse with many well known here, as well as in England, and his volume is full of pleasant cackle about them, which brings us into such personal relations with them that we end by feeling that they are among our personal acquaintances also. Among the anecdotes told by Sir Francis we find the following: "I recollect meeting at Cuddesden, in Bishop Wilberforce's house, some American guests. One of them, then in orders, had served through the War as an artillery officer in the Northern Army. He was a very intelligent gentleman, as clergymen who have begun as soldiers or sailors often are, and he seemed certain of what he told me. According to him, the failure of Lee in his attack upon Pennsylvania, was mainly owing to a piece of carelessness on the part of one of his subordinate Generals. This officer, a hot-tempered and impetuous man, received a document from Lee containing all the details of the proposed invasion, and pointing out to him what steps he personally had to take. Something or other made him angry; he was too good a soldier to disobey or to criticize his orders, but he vented his spite upon the paper, by tearing it up, and throwing it on the ground. The moment his troops moved on, these fragments were picked up and pieced together by a hostile partisan, who sent them over at once to McClellan. Lee accordingly found all his schemes foreshown and guarded against, so that he was eventually foiled and driven back, and, as it happened, the check he then received proved to be the real turning point of the War."

Before his death, General Logan devoted the larger portion of his leisure time to literary labors, and it has been a matter of surprise that nothing from his pen appeared among the war articles which have recently made the Century so popular. It is a fact that he had prepared a series of articles for publication in that magazine, embracing his personal reminiscences of the Civil War from Bull Run to Vicksburg; but he decided to publish them only in permanent book form, and Mrs. Logan has finally concluded to make them public in connection with his second work, "The Volunteer Soldier of America," which will soon be issued. It will be published by R. S. Peale and Co., of Chicago, and sold by subscription, two-thirds of the gross profits going to Mrs. Logan. The publishers announce that no expense will be spared in presenting this work, especial attention being given to the illustrations, but that the price will be lower than other books of similar character. The volume will also contain a Biographical Memoir by the author's literary executor, Dr. C. A. Logan. General Logan's volume contains a vigorous attack upon West Point and what he terms the "military lobby." Commencing with the Revolution, he endeavors to show that in that, as in all succeeding wars, the volunteers showed their superiority to the Regulars. It is reported that the volume will also contain a series of letters from General Sherman testifying to his warm personal attachment to Gen. Logan and his high appreciation of his military services during the war, and his admiration for his military genius.

Professor John Philip Sousa, bandmaster of the U. S. Marine Corps, has rendered a public service by preparing, with zeal and carefulness "A Book of Instruction for Field, Trumpet and Drum," with the music of the trumpet and drum signals now in use in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. The lack of precision in these matters at the present time makes the work especially valuable. The author has also written a drum part to those signals which are essentially "garrison calls," as he holds that in branches of the Service where the trumpet and drum comprise the field music there are obvious advantages in the combination of the two in preference to the employment of the trumpet alone. The work is published by Carl Fischer, No. 6 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

A most attractive picture of Royalty is that contained in the volumes just being issued by Messrs. Scribner and Welford, entitled "Two Royal Lives: Gleanings at Berlin and from the lives of the Crown Prince and Princess of Germany," by Dorothea Roberts. The Germans are very proud of "Unser Fritz," and delighted with his charming wife, and justly so if their lives are in such gratifying contrast to the social and intellectual weakness of Royalty generally. Interesting details are given of the effective German method of bringing up children, and on this topic this volume almost forms a manual for young parents.

The "American Magazine," hitherto conducted as the "Brooklyn Magazine," and now reorganized on a national basis, will be published on April 15, its first issue being dated for May. It is proposed that its contents shall be specially representative of American life and character. R. T. Bush and Son, 130-32 Pearl street, New York, are the publishers.

Mr. C. H. C. Howard, Assistant Librarian, Astor Library, New York, is soon to issue, through Messrs. F. Housh and Co., of Brattleboro, Vt., a sketch of the life of the late General John Walcott Phelps. It will be published by subscription, in a limited edition, at 25 cents per copy.

The publishers of Webster have recently added to the Unabridged a "Pronouncing Gazetteer of the World, containing over 25,000 Titles, briefly describing the countries, cities, towns, and natural features of every part of the Globe." It covers a hundred pages.

The complete novel in the May number of "Lippincott's Magazine" is entitled "The Deserter," and will be furnished by Capt. Chas. King, U. S. A., the popular author of "The Colonel's Daughter," "Marion's Faith" and other tales of Army life.

The Annual Report of the Secretary of the Navy for 1886, has been issued in book form from the Government Printing Office and makes a volume, including index, of 438 pages. It contains a mint of valuable information on Naval matters.

Gens. Rosecrans and Fullerton will contribute to the May "Century" articles on military operations about Chattanooga, and Col. John Hay will have a poem entitled "Israel," with three illustrations.

The War Department has issued a new Register, giving list of employees, with classes, salaries, etc. The last edition was issued January 1, 1885,

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Light Artillerist.—It has not yet been decided what light batteries will be sent to Fort Riley.

Pique.—We are not aware of any regulations or order which sanctions the practice you mention.

T. K. B.—For an "Official Memoranda on Decisions on Points of Tactics" write to the War Dept.

Candidate.—Your questions as to vacancies for Second Lieutenants this year is fully answered in the JOURNAL of April 2, page 720.

A. B. J.—If duly authorized to enter the hospital at Hot Springs, you will be treated free of charge. Consult, if practicable, circular from A. G. O., dated Dec. 20, 1886.

J. W. G.—Par. 27 of the Regulations of 1881 is plain and explicit. Colored soldiers have the same privilege under that paragraph as white soldiers. It makes no exceptions.

P. L. A.—The regulations as to transfers to and enlistments in the Hospital Corps have not yet been decided upon. When they are you will find early information concerning them in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

J. B. asks: Would a soldier in the U. S. Army, going to England on furlough be arrested there and punished for desertion, having deserted from the British Army, he being a citizen of the United States? ANS.—Yes.

Rifleman.—In the German Army the instructions on musketry prescribe that for each regiment there shall be two ranges, one 600 metres (660 yards), one 400 metres (440 yards), and six of 300 metres (330 yards); longer ranges are also obtained when possible.

Recruit asks: Which way is the edge of the sabre at the command tierce point? Decisions from the A. G. O. for 1886 fail to explain it. A claims that the edge of the blade is up and B claims that it is to the right. ANS.—It is not necessary to look up any decision in the matter, because par. 98, Cavalry Tactics, and par. 91, Artillery Tactics, both direct that the edge shall be upwards.

Militia asks: 1. In coming from parade rest to order arms are there two motions or one? ANS.—One. See par. 78, second paragraph Upton's Tactics.

2. Is it proper to give the company the command mark time when it is marching backward guide right? ANS.—No. Gen. Sheridan has decided that mark time from "backward march" is not authorized or practical.

3. Does a soldier with a musket, standing in line with the company, come to arms port when holding conversation with an officer? ANS.—No. A soldier does not hold "conversation" with an officer, he makes a "communication."

H. S. asks: 1. In what order should a Commissary Sergeant, Ordnance Sergeant and Hospital Steward, ranking (per warrants) in the order named, "fall in" at battalion formations (e. g., muster)? ANS.—They fall in according to rank from right to left, the senior on the right, the junior on the left and the others between according to rank.

2. Where does a corporal detailed as sergeant-major, go in "Field and staff to the front?" ANS.—The Lieut.-General, Oct. 2, 1885, decided that at the command Field and staff to the front, "an acting sergeant major takes his place according to his rank, with the other members of the non com. staff, i. e., on the left of the line." This is additional proof of the correctness of answer No. 1, even if tactics were not so explicit on the point as they are.

A. W.—Yes, you can be arrested as a deserter. The best plan is to surrender at some military post and take your chances of clemency. No terms are made with deserters at large.

D. F. S. asks: 1. Company marching in column of fours, double rank distances; at the command right (or left) by files should the rear rank close to facing distance? ANS.—Yes; if you did not you would find your men out of distance.

2. In the loading and firings would it be proper, when firing direct, to fire right or left oblique, without first bringing the company to a carry arms? ANS.—Yes.

3. Should the command company precede the command aim in the direct fire, and the command company precede the command right (or left) oblique, in the oblique firings. ANS. —For the commands for the firings we refer you to par. 105, et seq., of the Tactics. You only need to substitute the command company for squad wherever the latter is laid down.

4. Has there been general order or circular issued in regard to the closing of the cartridge boxes in the loading and firing? ANS.—It has been decided at the A. G. O. that "cartridge boxes are closed at the command cease firing. They are closed with the right hand after the pieces are loaded. If any of the pieces are loaded after the command cease firing is given, as might be the case when the firing terminated has been by file and rank, then the files whose pieces are loaded close the box with the right hand, the left hand holding the piece at the third position of load before resuming the carry. The box is closed at the command draw cartridge as soon as the cartridge is returned to the cartridge box." This refers to the Springfield rifle and McKeever cartridge box.

A STRAW.

THE best commentary upon the remarks of those who are opposed to target practice, as interfering with discipline, was made by a Judge-Advocate's clerk, who said that he looked forward to the target season as lessening his work, as but few causes for trials occurred during the target practice season, as the men were too much occupied.

SOUTH LONDONDERRY, VERMONT.

AS ARMY and Navy officers and their families seek just such cool and invigorating regions during the heated term of summer, I suggest that they should by all means visit this little village, bring their horses with them and ride over these glorious mountain roads. 36 miles northwest from Brattleboro, the gate city of Vermont, we are; and upon an elevation which enables one to see the famous "Monadnock" in the dim distances with all the sublime and enchanting scenery which lies between. If a cavalcade of military and Naval men and their ladies should ride horseback over these mountain roads once, this would soon become the most famous summer resort in America. I will say further, that the columns of the West River News are at the service of all Army and Navy gentlemen who desire to make use of them pertaining to this matter and free of all charge.

THE STATE TROOPS.

ARMORY OF THE TWELFTH N. Y.

AS THE best means of showing the character of the new armory for the 12th Regiment, N. G., S. N. Y., which was this week transferred to the custody of the regiment, we give an illustration of its exterior. It cost $300,000 and is a conspicuous structure, occupying the entire western front of Ninth avenue, between Sixty-first and Sixty-second streets, with a long L on Sixty-second street, making the facade on that side 300 ft. long. The avenue front is taken up by the drill-room proper, giving a floor 175x200 feet, while the company rooms and other administrative apartments fill up three floors in the wing. The armory of the 7th Regiment is on the other side of the town, between Lexington and Fourth Avenues and Sixty-sixth and Sixty-seventh streets. The architect of the armory for the 12th is Mr. James E. Ware. The style is Norman castellated with modern modifications. A great number of musketry slits and machicolations are provided in the corbelled galleries extending from the heavy brick fire towers. The interior has many commendable features, the chief defect being in the inferior size of the company rooms. The ventilation and plumbing is in accordance with the best modern precedents. The furnishings are in harmony with the general character of the interior, which is much more cheerful than might be supposed from the massive character of the exterior. The whole design emphasizes the idea of strength, and compared with what the militia have had up to the present time in the way of armories the structure is a credit to the city.

The members of the 12th on Monday assembled at the old armory corner Broadway and 45th street, and marched to their new quarters. Col. Jones was in command and the veterans who served with the regiment in the campaigns of 1861-2-3, as well as the veterans of the present command, participated in the parade. All the old officers, including colonels, who were still living, were of the number and joined in the line of march. The regiment was formed May 6, 1847, by the consolidation of ten existing companies under Col. Henry G. Stebbins. Col. French followed after eight years, and Col. John S. Cocks commanded until he was placed under arrest. There was an effort to tack the 12th Regt. upon the 10th, and the entire regiment went to Albany on a sort of lobbying expedition. It was disbanded for this performance, but kept up its organization for a year, when it was numbered as the 22d Regt. In December, 1860, Col. Daniel Butterfield took command and recovered the old number. When the regiment went to the front in 1861, Col. Butterfield took a brigade command and Lieut.-Col. W. G. Ward commanded the regiment. At the battle of Bolivar Heights the regiment was captured by the Confederates and paroled as prisoners of war. It came home, was exchanged, and in 1863 was again on the way frontward with Col. Ward in command. Col. John Ward succeeded his brother as colonel in January, 1867, and after ten years' service he was succeeded by Col. S. V. R. Cruger, who was followed by the present colonel, James H. Jones, who was graduated from the Military Academy in 1868.

THE NEW YORK CAMP.

THE order for the Camp of Instruction this season will not be issued earlier than next week, but we learn that organizations will be ordered to camp as follows: 7th Regiment, from June 18 to June 25; 12th Regiment, June 25 to July 2; 9th Regiment, and battalion consisting of the 28th, 35th, 38th and 41st Separate Cos., from July 2 to July 9; 47th Regiment, and the battalion consisting of the 5th, 19th and 20th Separate Cos., and the 6th Battery, as infantry, from July 9 to July 16; 23d Regiment, from July 16 to July 23; 71st Regiment, and 10th Battalion, from July 23 to July 30; 22d Regiment, from July 30 to August 6.

PRIZES AT CREEDMOOR.

THE programme for the Fall meeting of the National Rifle Association at Creedmoor was arranged at a special meeting of the association on Thursday last. Gen. John B. Woodward presided, and there were present Gens. Geo. W. Wingate and Chas. F. Robbins, Col. Joseph J. Story Majs. L. B. Bell and Geo. L. Fox, James Duane, and John S. Shepherd, Secretary of the association. The week beginning Sept. 12 was set aside for the matches.

Sixteen matches comprise the regular programme, but other matches will be arranged hereafter, including a revolver match. Several matches that lost money during the last meeting have been discontinued. Ammunition for military rifles must be brought on the ground ready for use. In all of the matches which have heretofore allowed State model rifles, any rifle will be allowed which has been issued by any State to its National Guard. The division matches for New York militia become under the new order brigade matches. Otherwise, there are no important changes from last year's programme.

The Directors' match remains precisely as it was. In the Judd match entrance fees have been reduced to $1, and the prizes from $285 to $200, ranging from $25 to $5. No change is made in the Wimbledon match, nor in the President's match, except that any rifle approved and adopted by a State may be used. The Shorkeley match prizes will aggregate $75 this year instead of $110. More changes have been made in the Continuous match, classed as No. 6, than in any other. This match will be open to all comers, 7 shots, distance 200 yards. Any rifle within the rules may be used. Entrance fee is $1, or three for $2. Instead of $50 heretofore paid as first prize, Tiffany and Co. will give a silver cup valued at $75. There will be $264 in match prizes, in sums from $30 to $5. In addition $5, $3 and $2 will be paid each day to the marksmen making the best score. Thus $10 a day will be added to the prizes, bringing the total up to $324 and a cup, against $360 last year. Entries in the Governor's match will cost $1, or three for $2. The All-Comers' and Marksmen's badge match remains unchanged, except that the prizes are reduced from $275 to $240. There is no change whatever in the Hilton Trophy match, No. 9. In the short range match the four prizes will be $40, $30, $20 and $10 instead of $10 each higher. The inter-State military match suffers no change except in the liberal provision already indicated in regard to the rifles that may be used. With the same exception the inter-State long range and the New York State National Guard matches remain unchanged. The same exception applies to the brigade matches, Nos. 14 and 15. No change is made in General Sheridan's skirmishers' match.

The cash prizes amount to $1,374, against $1,605 last year; the trophies to $725, being increased $75 over last year's by the Tiffany cup as the first prize in the Continuous match. The prizes to be held for future competition amount, as heretofore, to $3,850. There will be the usual distribution of medals and badges. It is probable that the extra marches will be arranged at the next meeting of the association, May 3.

MILITARY ATHLETICS.

THE eleventh series of athletic games of the 7th Regiment, took place at their armory, on the evening of April 9. The building was filled with spectators. The games commenced promptly on time, as usual. The following were the winners in the different events: Ninety-three-yard run—G. L. Schuyler, time 10 4-5 sec., R. J. Kenworthy second. One thousand-yard run—W. Van Kleeck 2 min, 39 1-5 sec., R. D. Neeson second. One-mile bicycle race—A. B. Rich, 3 min. 18 sec., D. Valentine second. Seventy-five yard run—C. F. Bostwick 8 3-5 sec., J. T. Smith second. Potato race, 20 yards—C. Monrose, 1 min. 8 3-5 sec., A. F. Stone second. The first pull in the Inter-collegiate tug-of-war was won by Columbia against Princeton, and the second and final tug was also won by Columbia, their opponents being New York College team. One mile walk—H. P. Fairchild, 7 min. 50 sec., A. H. Walton second. Half-mile walk—T. McLelland, 3 min. 58 2 5 sec., C. R. Richards second. Three mile bicycle race—A. B. Rich, 10 min. 11 sec., E. Valentine second. Wheelbarrow race, 1-5 of a mile—J. S. Woodhouse, 53 sec., T. H. Craney second. One mile run—F. A. Ware, 4 min. 57⅛ sec. Putting the 16lb. shot—A. J. Queckberner, 41 ft. 11½ in., E. J. Laidlow second. Half-mile run—E. J. Laidlow, C. E. Mitchel second. Half-mile roller skating race—H. J. Dietz, 2 min. 3⅛ sec., G. W. Romaine second. Four hundred and forty yard run—C. Coster. Sack race—R. A. Stacpoole. Two hundred and twenty yard run—G. L. Schuyler. Two hundred and twenty yard hurdle—C. F. Bostwick. Three-legged race—A. F. Stone and L. E. Vannier. Running high jump—H. O. Talmage. Obstacle race, 2 laps — C. Montrose. An exhibition bicycle drill was given by members of the King's County wheelmen. Sergt. Waldo Sprague was manager, and Lieut. Col. Geo. M. Smith was referee.

THE battalion drill season was brought to a close in this regiment last Monday evening by a dress parade, review, presentation of badges to marksmen, promenade concert and hop. These affairs excusably maintain their popularity in National Guard circles, and afford excellent and eagerly sought opportunities for social and friendly intercourse between the relatives, guests and mutual acquaintances of the members of the organization. That occasions of the kind in the 22d are appreciated, was apparent from the unusually large gathering of ladies and gentlemen which crowded the galleries, rooms and corridors during the military ceremonies, awaiting with commendable patience the dismissal of the command to find breathing and moving space on the drill floor. The regiment was equalized into ten commands of sixteen files (the surplus being utilized for guard duty, or else dismissed), and after formation, which was creditably effected by the recently-appointed adjutant, Lieut. Smith, immediately prepared for review, the reviewing personage being Brig.-Gen. Chas. F. Robbins, general inspector of rifle practice, S. N. Y.

The review was conducted in the usual fashion made necessary in an armory, and there is nothing to be said about it except that it passed off smoothly and well. The marksmen of 1886, 110 in number, were then called to the front and commended in a brief but appropriate address by General Robbins, during the delivery of which the regiment should, we think, have been standing at attention instead of at rest. Following this the badges were presented to the individual marksmen by Gen. Robbins, assisted by the Lieut.-Colonel and the Acting Inspector of Rifle Practice, after which the companies were dismissed to their parades and the regimental line again formed for the dress parade. During this the excellent manual and the steadiness of the men deserved notice, although this ceremony, as a whole, was not as attractive on this occasion as Bandmaster Gilmore—now absent in the West with his band—is able to make it with good military music.

The promenade concert and the dancing which followed and lasted till after midnight, was participated in by 3,500 persons, among whom were many well-known citizens and military men. The whole affair was well managed and proved an enjoyable and sociable gathering.

A PROPOSED REGIMENTAL SOCIAL CLUB.

THE proposition to organize a social club to be composed of the active veteran and exempt members of the 7th Regiment, was considered at the monthly meeting of the Board of Officers held at the Armory, April 2. Capt. Daniel Appleton, chairman of a special committee appointed to consider the subject, presented a report in favor of the project. It is proposed to hire two floors in the apartment-house now in process of construction at 66th street and Park avenue, adjacent to the armory, for the purposes of the club, whose members can meet there and seek the consolation which its larder affords when fatigued by drills or whenever they feel like coming together for social purposes. There military visitors can be entertained and the restrictions of the military law in regard to the kind of refreshments that may be served in armories will not apply. There was a difference of opinion in the Board of Officers in regard to the propriety of giving their sanction to the measure, although 254 members of the regiment have already signed the roll of the proposed club, which its projectors design to have started with at least 300 members.

MILITIA ITEMS.

Major-Gen. J. W. Plume and staff, N. G. S. N. J., have extended invitations to some of the Philadelphia officers, N. G. P., to partake of the third annual staff banquet at the Hoffman House, New York, on April 14.

An interesting question will soon be determined in the Boston courts, respecting the rights of individuals to attach the money due a military company for debts contracted by it.

Co. D, "Molineux Rifles," 32d N. Y., Capt. Edward M. Verdeckberg, have entered for the competitive drill at Washington. They have tendered Col. Finkelmeier a marching salute on April 13 on their way to Grand Army Hall, where they give an exhibition drill before Mansfield Post.

At the annual rifle competition in Co. D, 23d N. Y. for the "Satterlee Badge," the winner was Lieut. J. S. Shepherd, on a score of 47 out of a possible 50.

It is now settled that the 22d N. Y. will go to Peekskill from July 30 to Aug. 6. It has been decided to march to camp.

Private Brooke, Co. D, 7th N. Y., has been elected 2d lieutenant in Co. C, 71st N. Y. Lieut. Brooke is a son of Col. Brooke, of the 3d U. S. Infantry. He enlisted in the 16th Pennsylvania militia when only thirteen years old; afterwards was educated at the University of Georgia, a first-class military institution, where he rose to the rank of major of cadets. He afterwards served in the 6th Pennsylvania and the 4th New Jersey.

The 71st N. Y. will probably move into the old 12th Regiment Armory during the next two weeks. The occasion will be celebrated by a parade. The Board of Officers are considering the advisability of having a new regimental band.

It is probable that the Veterans of the 12th N. Y. will form themselves into an organization.

The several companies of the 13th N. Y., Col. Fackner, are ordered to assemble at the armory for drill and instruction in the manual of arms and aiming and sighting, as follows: Co. A, Mondays, April 11, 18 and 25; B, Mondays, April 11 and 18 and May 2; C, Thursday, April 14, 21 and 28; D, Tuesdays, April 12, 19 and 26; E, Fridays, April 15, 22 and 29; F, Tuesdays, April 12 and 19 and May 3; G, Thursdays, April 14, 21, and May 5; H, Wednesdays, April 20 and 27 and May 11; I, Fridays, April 15 and 22 and May 6; K, Wednesday, April 20 and 27 and May 4. Assembly at 8 P. M. The companies will also assemble for gallery practice as follows: Co. A, Monday, May 2; B, Monday, April 25; C, Thursday, May 5; D, Tuesday, May 3; E, Friday, May 6; F, Tuesday, April 26; G, Thursday, April 28; H, Wednesday, May 4; I, Friday, April 29; K, Wednesday, May 11. Assembly at 8 P. M.

Col. Seward orders battalion drills in the 9th N. Y. as follows: Cos. E, F, B, G and A, Tuesdays, April 12 and 19; Cos. H, I, C, D and K, Friday, April 15, and Friday, April 22. Assembly at 8 P. M. This regiment will assemble Tuesday, April 26, for battalion drill and to receive the marksmen's badges of the State. Assembly at 8 P. M. Field and staff will report so the colonel and non-commissioned staff to the adjutant at the same hour.

Permission to enter and pass through the State of New York, armed and equipped, is granted all military organizations in the United States desiring to attend the National Drill and Encampment to be held at the City of Washington, D. C., from May 23 to May 30, 1887, by G. O., No. 9.

The proposition to reorganize the District of Columbia militia, appoint a brigadier-general, etc., is again before the President for consideration. Gen. Ordway is said to be the choice of General Sheridan for the position and his appointment is expected.

The following discharges in the N. G. S. N. Y. are reported in G. O. No. 9, for March: Col. Thos. S. Wand, 65th Regt., upon the recommendation of and for failure to appear before the State Examining Board. (S. O., No. 17, c. s.); 1st Lieut. Roland DeV. Parker, 11th Regt., upon the recommendation of the State Examining Board. (S. O. No. 17, c. s.); 2d Lieut. Wm. N. Toshach, 3d Bat., upon the recommendation of the State Examining Board. (S. O. No. 17, c. s.) Died.—Captain Henry Ward Beecher, Chaplain, 13th Regt., March 8, 1887; Captain David Moffat, Jr., 23d Regt., March 31, 1887. The following companies have been organized: In the 3d Brigade—24th Separate Co., at Middletown. Mustered into service March 28, 1887. In the 4th Brigade—43d Separate Co., at Olean. Mustered into service March 29, 1887.

General Rendon Whidden, a leading citizen of Calais, who died recently at Windsor, N. S., aged 97 years, was formerly a major general in the Maine militia.

The 4th Separate Company of Yonkers formally dedicate their new armory on Friday evening of this week, an occasion which was both pleasant and interesting.

The 71st N. Y. Regiment expects to move to the old 12th Regiment Armory between April 15 and 25. The 8th will then move in the building vacated by the 71st shortly afterward.

Jos. F. Hillenbrand, formerly lieutenant colonel of the 5th Regiment, National Guard, died at his residence, 433 East 86th street, April 5.

The armory of the 2d Battery, N. Y., has been leased for another year. The battery will attend service at the Church of the Holy Spirit some time this month. Harps, cymbals, lyres, cornets and an extra triple quartette will be in attendance.

Company drills in the 11th N. Y. will be continued until May 1. The repairs to the armory are still being continued. The inside painting is completed. Iron beams are to be placed in the rear end of the building to strengthen it.

Col. Charles L. Fincke, 23d N. Y., has issued a circular to the members of the regiment, stating that the Council of Officers have arranged with Lieut. C. A. L. Totten, 4th U. S. Artillery, to deliver at Historical Hall, Clinton and Pierrepont Streets, on Wednesday evening, April 27, a lecture entitled "The Romance of History," a discussion of the "Eastern Question;" in brief, "The Coming Crusade."

The 2d Regiment, N. J., gymnasium association are receiving instructions in bayonet and sword drilling.

The members of Co. E, 4th Regiment, N. J., on invitation from Co. E, 14th Regiment, of Brooklyn, attended the reception of the latter at their armory in that city.

The 10th Sep. Co., 3d Brigade, N. G., S. N. Y., of Newburgh, will give a musical and dramatic entertainment at their armory on Monday evening next, to be followed by dancing. We trust the occasion may be a pleasant and successful one.

At the last meeting of the veterans of the 9th Regt., N. G. S. N. Y., held April 9, the following were duly elected officers: Colonel, Chas. R. Braine; Lieut.-Colonel, Geo. A. Hue; Major, E. L. Smith; Q. M., James Slater; Adjutant, C. V. G. Forbes; Surg., Howard Pinkney; Chaplain, Ralph Shonnick; Board of Management—Capts. Joseph A. Bluxome, Geo. O. Hirst, Hiram L. Hunt, Joseph T. Hallock, A. W. Meade, E. Krollpfeiffer, Archibald Stewart, John T. Pryer and Benj. F. Bowne.

The 2d Battery, Capt. Ferdinand P. Earle, has been organized as a 6 gun battery, two 12-pounder Napoleons having been issued to them. Capt. Earle has detailed Lieut. Wilson to command the acquisition. The battery now aggregates 101 men. A drill was held in the old 12th Regiment Armory on Tuesday evening, April 12, and it is expected that another one will be held on the 19th. An elaborate programme has been arranged for a celebration after drill, in view of the increase of the strength of the battery to 100.

The Brooklyn Park Commissioners have granted the request of Capt. William H. Eddy, of Co. I, 47th Regiment, for the use of Tompkins Park on Tuesday evenings between April 12 and June 1. The park will be closed on those evenings to the general public, the gates locked to prevent the ingress of visitors and sentinels will be placed on the various walks. The company will practice guard duty preparatory to going to the State Camp of Instruction, between the hours of 8 and 10 P. M.

The 4th Regiment, N. G., N. J., will assemble for battalion drill at the Oakland Rink April 26, at 8.30 P. M. Every enlisted man absent will be tried by Regimental C. M.

The State Fencibles Battalion, of Philadelphia, will give a dress drill on Wednesday evening, April 20.

The Ninth Co. Dramatic Co., of the 7th N. Y., assisted by the Regimental Glee Club, gave an entertainment in behalf of the Hahnemann Hospital at the Academy of Music on Thursday evening.

Geo. L. Davenport has been elected Captain of Co. D, 47th N. Y., from which he resigned some time since.

OHIO NATIONAL GUARD.

THE report which follows will interest and instruct others than those connected with the organizations immediately concerned.

WOOSTER, OHIO, March 12, 1887.

The Adjutant-General, State of Ohio:

I have the honor to submit the following report upon the inspection of Co. D, 8th Regt., O. N. G., which was made by me on the 3d inst., in compliance with your request by letter of the 25th ultimo:

Through a slight breach of military etiquette, the inspecting officer was not furnished with an authenticated copy of the order for this inspection. I am, therefore, unable to inform you officially whether any such order was issued. While this is a matter of small moment in this particular case, it is none the less a point of official courtesy; and, under ordinary circumstances, of imperative obligation, which commanders should not neglect.

The company had but one trumpeter present, and he was apparently detached, as he did not appear as a trumpeter at inspection. This trumpeter, when ordered to sound "first call," proceeded immediately to sound "the assembly." The "first call," as it is known in the United States Service, is the "Assembly of Trumpeters." It is the first signal for all ceremonies. Inspection is a ceremony. After a proper interval, the trumpeter again sounded "the assembly," when the company was formed.

The company fell in promptly, without confusion, in good order, well sized and attentive. The first sergeant has good command, and is well instructed and familiar with his duties. The 2d lieutenant failed to take his place in rear of the first platoon, according to the principle of evolution of command (vide, par. 19, A. Reg. 1881). The general appearance of the company was excellent. Every man was standing at attention, a position not invariably maintained except among very soldierly troops. So far as I observed, every member of the company preserved this attitude—so trying to the recruit—till the close of the inspection. This alone stamps the company with a military quality far above the average. I have seen many organizations in and from various parts of the United States, and am prepared to say there is probably not a more soldierly company than this West of the Allegheny Mountains. Discipline, that gradual and sometimes tedious and painful development of habit, this ability to stand still, to keep the eyes to front, to move and act on the instant, and to receive admonition and public and repeated correction, all of which make up the soldier, have been attained in this company in a high degree.

The company was paraded in fatigue uniform. With a few exceptions the clothing was neat fitting and clean. The buttons were not polished, however, as they might have been (and always are in the United States Service), on such an occasion. A few caps were without proper insignia of company. Some appeared without crossed rifles. The same remarks apply to these brass badges as to the buttons, they should be detachable and for inspection, at least, polished bright.

The arms in the hands of these troops are in good serviceable condition, and are safely and well cared for. It is doubtless impracticable in the National Guard to require the men to care each for his own gun. It is nevertheless a most important part of the soldiers' education, and one that should not be wholly neglected. The modern rifle is a delicate instrument, and the precision and mechanism of which becomes speedily impaired by neglect or rough usage. The soldier should be made familiar with its construction, and be made to realize the importance of keeping it free from rust, sand and rude shocks. This he can learn best by being required to clean it himself. He might be able to do this without inconvenience once a month. He should be required to do it for every inspection.

It is not uncommon to see men in camp or armories inserting the iron rod in the gun, engaging in a rough and very unscientific bayonet contest; all this is positively painful to one who truly appreciates this admirable weapon, and should be absolutely prohibited. The accoutrements of the company are in serviceable condition. It would be agreeable to note that they were also bright. The brass parts should be polished and the leather blackened. It requires but little additional labor, and adds considerably to the real appearance of the command. This should certainly be a requirement for inspection. I find this company composed of excellent material. Great care is exercised by the officers in making up the personnel. The men are generally young, active, vigorous and apparently fond of exercise of arms. They maintain a high degree of military esprit, and all seem anxious to excel; above all their discipline as I have said, is very superior, and reflects great credit upon the officers and men alike. In this connection I may venture a suggestion with reference to the instruction of companies such as this one when in camp. They certainly do not need the experience of camp life to perfect them in the school of a soldier or of the company so far as the mere drill book of Tactics is concerned. This they practice for more than 11 months in the armory at home. What they need in camp is to learn guard duty, the care of arms, accoutrements, clothing, bedding, etc.; rifle practice, to pitch and strike tents, to make short marches, say of 10 or 12 miles; the art of reconnoissance of castramentation, and of orderly formations at night to repel attack or to undertake a sudden enterprise. This is fatiguing, but the men have nothing else to do. This is what the State has assembled them for, and I believe the whole tone of the State troops would be perceptibly improved by their giving them a broader view of the profession of arms, and the real business of war than they could possibly get by confining them to the monotonous repetition of the drill book, which they have already had perhaps ad nauseam in the armory. The street parades, now so popular, especially in Western encampments, and the ridiculous sham battles annually indulged in serve no good military purpose, and are deplorable waste of most precious time. Finally I am convinced from several years of observation and study of the National Guard of Ohio, that unless more ample grounds can be obtained than has been the case hitherto, and a large staff is available to the Adjutant General (or commander of the camp) troops should not be assembled in larger bodies than brigades, and preferably in regiments. All the minor operations of war can be taught (and in the brief space of six days better taught) to a regiment, accompanied by a single battery. If I was called upon for a plan of routine instruction, I should suggest with modifications, to suit circumstances, the following:

1. The regiment should rendezvous by rail at a point at least five miles distant from the camping ground. Their baggage should be delivered at the same place, men should be required to carry a blanket roll and not a knapsack. Upon arriving at railroad terminus, companies should march to the camp, and pitch their own tents, and prepare their own meals.

2. A system of outposts should be established at once, lying at least two miles distant on the main road diverging from the position.

3. The whole camp should strike tents, i. e., (officers and men) roll them up ready for transportation, police camp, unroll and pitch them again. This in rain as well as sunshine every morning before 8 o'clock.

4. Two or three companies should depart tents every morning, march to some prearranged ground, pitch tents, prepare dinner, strike tents, and march back and again pitch tents. They might be permitted in a large command to remain out all night as the Gros of the German Army, the Glavi Karan of the Russians, the Hauptposten of Austria, the Riserva d'avanposti of the Italians, or the Grande Garde of the French. A piece or two from the battery should of course accompany each outpost.

5. An armed reconnoissance should be made every day by a proper detachment. In small commands, officers should be required to go out and make an itinerary and report. Every marching column should have an acting engineer officer to make an itinerary of the routes traversed.

6. Troops remaining in camp should drill seldom in the school of the company, much in the school of the battalion. Target practice should be kept up until the last cartridge is exhausted. Officers should be lectured to in the evenings by some competent person on the construction and use of the rifle, or they might read to them from Col. Blunt's Manual of Carbine and Rifle Practice, also on outposts, marches, etc.

I am aware of the objection to this laborious and continuous duty. The camp would undoubtedly become less attractive as a picnic ground, but I am satisfied that every officer and man would return home feeling that he was more of a soldier and more than ever entitled to the respect and confidence of the people. And the people, on the other hand, would soon come to realize that the appropriations for the support of the National Guard, like England's pounds, shillings, and pence, are the best national defence, when expended according to the Napoleonic trilogy, in "Infantry, Cavalry, Artillery."

I have the honor to be, etc.,

A. C. SHARP,

The "Regulation Board" completed its labors last week, the matter for the book has been turned over to Gen. Axline for the printer and if pushed right on officers may find some time for study before going to camp. The officers all over the State have but one view in the matter of encampment, they expect to make the most of the general camp if ordered, but they live in the hope that it will not be ordered. All believe in the advantages in favor of the small camp as a plan to secure real work at drill and instruction for our regiments as compared with the provisional brigade or division. So far as can be learned, nothing has been decided upon at general headquarters in the matter of transfers and assignments to complete the battalions of all of the regiments waiting this action, and as time goes on and we approach the season of camps and think of drills with three company battalions, and occasionally one of five, we become more anxious for the order.

The Regimental Boards of Examiners are securing good results. Some failures occur now, and some officers in the Service are convinced that they are of advantage to their regiments, and they go out. Let the work go right on.

PENNSYLVANIA NATIONAL GUARD.

COLONEL D. S. HASSINGER, Assistant Adjutant-General, who died, April 5, in Philadelphia, served with distinction during the war, participating in all the battles in which the Army of the Potomac fought. He was seriously wounded in the charge near Spottsylvania, May 10, 1864. Governor Hartranft appointed him Assistant Adjutant-General in 1873, which position he has continuously held since that time.

The encampment of the Pennsylvania State military will be held between Aug. 6 and 13, and all brigades will unite in a divisional encampment.

MASSACHUSETTS MILITIA.

THE 1st Brigade, M. V. M., will encamp at South Framingham, June 7 to 11.

The Auburn Light Infantry of Auburn, Me., are making extensive preparations to receive the Haverhill (Mass.) City Guards on April 20.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

THE President notified the Secretary of War, April 11, that the proposition to reorganize the militia of the District of Columbia, and regularly commission its officers and enlist its men has received his approval, and that preliminary action will be promptly taken. The War Department and leading Army officers were understood to favor the choice of Gen. Ordway as the new brigadier and general commander-in-chief. A regular organization should be perfected before the time for the National Drill.

DAKOTA.

GOV. CHURCH, who is now in New York City, has determined upon his return to Dakota to organize two companies of mounted militia among the settlers in the Turtle Mountain region and says: "Events of the present year have opened the eyes of the people of Rolette and surrounding counties to the necessity of more adequate protection from the half-breeds and from Indian invasion from the North. The Indians are quiet now, but may break out at any time, and the people ought to be prepared for them. There are no mounted militia at the present time, and two or three troops would prove very effective in settling Indian troubles, especially in case of invasion."

CALIFORNIA NATIONAL GUARD.

THE Board to determine upon the new uniform are: Brig.-Gen. W. H. Dimond, Brig.-Gen. John T. Carey, Col. John T. Cutting, 2d Artillery; Col. Eugene Lehe, 6th Infantry Battalion, and Major Thomas F. Barry, 3d Infantry. The question of a regimental camp or a brigade camp is still a vexed one, and causes the Alta to satirically remark: "In view of recent acts of indecision on the part of some of our more prominent officers, it has been suggested that the formation of a Board to meet with their knitting once each month, drink weak tea and discuss military affairs, would be the proper thing."

Adjutant-General Cosby has disapproved the application to admit the Santa Rosa Cadets to full membership as a company of the 5th Infantry, because the new law does not make suitable provisions for their maintenance as such.

The attempt to revive interest in the proposed drill between the regiments of the 2d Brigade, and the regular troops at the Presidio, which was postponed from Washington's Birthday, is a failure, says the Alta. In the first place members of the former organizations were opposed to going upon the drill grounds of the Presidio after a long march over cobble-stones as escort to the Grand Army of the Republic on "Memorial Day," and the Grand Army thought a drill on the occasion would be a desecration of the day. For these reasons, and upon the suggestion of Major-General Howard, it has been decided to abandon the whole matter.

The members of Co. E, 2d Artillery, provided three crews, April 3, for a barge race rowed over a distance of one mile. A short distance from the stake on the return the boats of the first and second crew collided and came near upsetting. The referee decided that the race should be repeated April 10.

HORSES AVAILABLE FOR WAR.

The Russian Novosti gives the following statistics of the number of horses at the disposal of the several countries:

	Total.	In Army in Times of Peace.	In Army in Times of War.
Germany.....	3,200,000	81,598	306,608
Austria.....	3,800,000	49,470	174,026
France.....	3,000,000	125,750	429,600
Russia (in 1882)...	19,674,723	....	....

The following figures show different departments in the German Army in which horses are employed in time of war: Cavalry, 111,744; artillery, field, 129,556; fortress, 6,880; infantry, 42,706; engineers, 11,184; pioneers, 75,820. In the Austrian Army, 65,075 horses are in the cavalry during a war and 108,947 in other departments.

DUTCH AND ARGENTINE NAVIES.

The Kölnische Zeitung (Cologne) gives the following particulars of the Dutch Navy: On January 1 last it consisted of 123 vessels, including transports. Of these 59 were intended for coast defence, 16 for general service, 28 for the auxiliary services, and 26 for the East Indies. The personnel consisted of one Commander-in-Chief (the King), two vice admirals, four rear admirals, 26 captains, 35 commanders, 120 1st class lieutenants, 195 2d class lieutenants, and 64 cadets.

The Deutsche Heeres-Zeitung (Berlin) gives the following particulars of the Argentine Navy: The staff consists of a rear admiral, a chief of the staff, an adjutant-general, two sergeant majors, and four adjutants. The fleet is formed into two divisions, each of which is commanded by a commodore. The vessels are as follows: The armor-clads Almirante Brown, with 246 men; El Plato, with 117 men; and Los Andes, with 117 men; the torpedo-cruiser Maipu, with 99 men; the gun boats Parana, with 98 men; Uruguay, with 98 men; Constitucion, with 62 men; Republica, with 65 men; Pilcomayo, with 61 men; and Bermejo, with 61 men; the transports Vallarino, with 64 men; and Rosetti, with 48 men; the corvettes Cabo de Hornos and Chacabuco; the despatch vessels Vigilante, Resguardo, Argentino, Cornejo, Avellaneda, Talita, Rio Negro, Rio Neuquen, and Triumfo. There are besides a dozen smaller vessels. A naval training school supported by the State, accommodates 100.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

The Spahis of Senegal are to be reorganized so as to reduce the proportion of European horsemen.

An ukase has been issued increasing the pay of Russian officers. 36 battalions are to be added to the Russian Army by increasing the rifle brigades to divisions and 18 new battalions are to be created.

The Revue du Cercle Militaire (Paris) states that a military deputation has been sent from Berlin to Vienna, in accordance with a wish expressed by the Emperor of Austria to see the new equipment of the German infantry.

It is stated that Col. Stracey, Scots Guards, who is to command the marching column of English volunteers to Dover on Easter Monday, has asked his commanding officers to send him the names of competent cyclists who would be willing to act with his column.

The firm of Baring Brothers, London, presented to all members of their staff of clerks, as a Christmas box, one year's salary. This was done in consequence of the firm's great success in floating Guinness's Company. The firm is currently reported to have cleared £1,000,000 over the operation.

The Progrès Militaire states that a group of Russian patriots have sent a sword of honor to General Boulanger. One side of the blade bears the inscription, "Qui vive! France et Boulanger!" the other an inscription in Russian, "Dare! God protects the bold!" Finally, on the hilt is written the dedication, "Au plus digne. Février 1887. La Russie."

The annual meeting of the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association will be held May 4.

The Russian Admiral-in-Chief has directed that all the 87 torpedo vessels of the Baltic fleet shall always be kept in readiness for service, and that the crews of 45 of them be provided forthwith.

Two officers of the German Balloon Detachment recently made an ascent at Templehof, landing after a voyage of six and a half hours at a distance of 335 kilometres (208 miles), traversed at an average speed of 16 metres per second. The greatest height reached was 2,580 metres, over a mile and a half.

At the meeting of the United Service Institution last week it was stated that the library numbered 21,000 volumes. The same week the Japanese Minister of Marine visited Cronstadt, and the Vestnik claimed credit for the library of the Naval Club there, which exceeds 50,000 volumes. The library of the St. Petersburg Admiralty is larger than that of the Naval Club at Cronstadt.

A new Armstrong gun for the Royal Navy was tried at the range of the Armstrong Company in Stloth, Cumberland. It is a 30 pounder, specially designed for repelling torpedo attacks, and it is stated that it can be worked quicker than the guns of the present size, its weight with carriage being 92 cwt., initial velocity was 1,900 feet, the charge being nine lbs. of pebble powder. The carriage is fitted with Vavasseur's patent automatic machinery, and the gun can be instantly elevated or depressed or swung round to any given point. The gun was fired by electricity.

Failure in their repeated attempts to assassinate the Czar has not discouraged the nihilists, says a St. Petersburg despatch, and circulars are being secretly distributed throughout Russia, threatening fresh attempts, and promising that "ere the year is three months older Russia will have got rid of its tyrant." The Times' correspondent at St. Petersburg says it is reported that the Czar, before returning to Gatschina on Wednesday, found letters on his writing table in the Winter Palace threatening him with death.

In 1876 77, England paid for her army £15,281,600, for 132,844 men; or about £114 per man. In 1885-86, she paid £17,750,000 for 142,194 men; or at the rate of £124 per man.

THE March number of the Revista General de Marina, published by the Hydrographic Department of the Spanish Admiralty, contains an article on "The Great Naval War of 1887."

THE Allgemeine Schweizerische Militär-Zeitung (Basel) states that the Roumanian Government is very active in pushing on the reorganization of the Army. Over 165,000 projectiles and a number of new batteries have been ordered of Krupp, and the Bucharest Arsenal is at work day and night. The repeating rifle question is not as yet decided, but trials are being made with the Rubin 7½-millimetre rifle.

A FRENCH man-of-war has been sent to Port au Prince to protect the Europeans there, in view of reports of a threatened massacre by the Haytians in the event of their government complying with the demands of Great Britain on account of some old claims. Advices from Port au Prince say the Haytians are much excited over Great Britain's demand, but deny that they have threatened to massacre foreigners.

THE Progres Militaire of March 30 says the new fusil de Chalons is of exceptional value under three heads; (1), the initial velocity of the Lebel is so great (620 metres—2,033 ft.—instead of 480 metres) that it is nearly point-blank at 400 metres—if the barrel is laid for the head the bullet will certainly strike the body; (2), the cartridges are so light, the soldier can carry one-third more on his belt; (3), there is no smoke from the powder!

THE 43-ton guns of H. M. S. Conqueror have been replaced by 45-ton guns of new pattern.

THE new law, promulgated by the Emperor William on March 11, fixes the peace strength of the German Army, from April 1, 1887, to March 31, 1894, at 468,409 men, not counting the volunteers. The infantry are to be formed in 534 battalions, the cavalry in 465 squadrons, the field artillery in 364 batteries, the foot artillery in 31, the pioneers in 19, and the artillery train in 18 battalions.

THE Popolo Romano of the 18th inst. states that experiments are being tried at Rome by the 80th Regiment of Infantry with a new model of bayonet-poniard, considered to be lighter to carry and less likely to break than the sword-bayonet now used. There are also some modifications introduced in the tunic of the foot soldiers, to adapt it to the cartouche case. These modifications are necessitated by the adoption of the magazine rifle.

THE Army and Navy Gazette divides the Burmah Campaign into four phases, of which England has now entered upon the fourth. The first consisted of the rapid advance of the troops under General Prendergast and ended with the downfall of King Theebaw. The second developed difficulties, witnessed the despatch of a large army of occupation, and culminated in the death of Sir Herbert Macpherson. The third opened with the despatch of Sir Frederick Roberts and ended with his return to India, the neck of the rebellion in the meantime having been broken. The fourth starts with the assumption of command by Sir Charles Arbuthnot.

THE disastrous explosion of a charged shell at Belfort, said to have been occasioned by chemical action being set up inside the shell, owing to the interior of the shell not having thoroughly dried, has resulted in the issue of an order for the destruction of all shells charged with melinite.

THE final experiments in England with the Lee-Burton and the improved Lee gun are to be pushed on with all possible speed, as the reserve stock of Martini-Henry rifles is now lower than is considered desirable. The following is an extract from Mr. Stanhope's Memorandum dealing with the subject: "After a series of exhaustive experiments with every description of magazine rifle, the Committee specially charged with this question have found themselves able to recommend two forms of rifles (the Lee-Burton and the improved Lee) for final trial. If this should prove to be, in either case, satisfactory, as there is every reason to hope, the construction of the new magazine rifle will be proceeded with as quickly as possible."

A FEW OPINIONS OF THE OFFICERS' AND COMPANY MESS CHESTS.

THE SHURLY MFG. CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

GENTLEMEN,—I have examined your Company Mess Chest, and consider it one of the very best things of the kind I have ever used. It is strong, compact, easily handled, and the ware it contains of excellent material, particularly adapted for service in the field. Yours truly,
CHAS. G. BARTLETT, Lt. Col. First Infantry

THE SHURLY MFG. CO., CHICAGO, ILL. SIRS,—Having examined carefully your patent Mess Chest and field furniture, I take great pleasure in testifying to its excellence. The plates and dishes present the clean, wholesome appearance of delf ware, while at the same time it has all the durability of granite. Its arrangement in the chest is neat, and taken as a whole, it is the most desirable company outfit that I ever saw. Very respectfully your obedient servant,
WILLIAM QUINTON, Capt. 7th U. S. Infantry

DEAR SIRS: Your Army Mess Chests are very complete. Bachelor officers and companions can save money by using them in garrison as well as in the field. They are also well adapted for the militia in camp.
LIEUT. HUGH T. REED, U. S. A.

THE SHURLY MFG., CO. CHICAGO,, ILL.

GENTLEMEN,—I have examined the cut of your Company Mess Chest, and I believe it will prove to be very popular indeed. It promises to be the best thing of its kind I have ever seen, and I believe it will at once find its way into general use in the army, where something of its kind has been so long needed.
Yours respectfully, F. K. UPHAM, Capt. 1st Calvary.

THE SHURLY MFG. CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

GENTLEMEN,—Having carefully examined your Officers' Mess Chest, as also your Company Mess Chest, designed especially for field use, I take pleasure in recommending them to the officers of the National Guard as particularly adapted to their use, as stated by officers in the U. S. Army who have used them. The chests are light, compact, durable, and complete, The quality of ware and the arrangement of the chest is such that when laid aside from last encampment and brought out again will be found ready for the next, thus especially fitting them for use of the National Guards.
Very respectfully, C. S. BENTLEY, Brig. Gen, Com'dg 2d Brigade Iowa N. G.
I have examined the Chest referred to and cheerfully concur in the above opinions of its merits.

THE GATLING GUN.

The above illustrations show the latest improvements made in the feed of the Gatling gun.
The Aceles' feed magazine allows the gun to be fired at all angles of elevation or depression, at the rate of over 1,200 shots per minute.
The Bruce feeder receives the cartridges directly from the paper boxes in which they are originally packed, thus giving an uninterrupted fire.

GENERAL SHERMAN has been honored, and the country has done honor to itself, in naming after him the military post in Idaho, lately called Fort Cœur d'Alene, the site for which the distinguished soldier selected in 1878, while at the head of the Army.

THE "Roster of Troops," Department of Dakota, for April contains the following information showing the "date of arrival of regiments in the Department:" 1st Cav., June, 1884; 7th Cav., April, 1873; 3d Inf., October, 1877; 5th Inf., July, 1876; 11th Inf., August, 1876; 15th Inf., November, 1882; 20th Inf., May, 1885; 25th Inf., June, 1880; 4th Art. (Light Bat. F), September, 1882. The other Departments might follow suit and thus keep prominently in view the claims of each regiment to a change of station when the necessary transportation funds are "on hand and available for the purpose."

THE War Department, it is expected, will adopt, without waiting for the action of the Army Regulation Board, the recommendation of the Paymaster General in regard to a change in the system of payments to officers of the Army for the purpose of preventing duplication of pay accounts. A General Order is now in course of preparation amending the Regulations as suggested by General ROCHESTER, and will go to the Secretary of War for final approval within a few days. The proposed new regulation, as previously stated, will require each officer of the Service to be assigned for payment to one particular paymaster, suitable provision being made for the transfer of accounts from one paymaster to another upon change of station. This is the plan that has worked so successfully in the Navy for many years.

THE conclusion of the investigation as to the causes of the explosion of the melinite shell at Belfort has been reached after an exhaustive chemical analysis in addition to the military inquest. The verdict delivered by the most eminent chemist in France is that the compound had absorbed more than its proper proportion of water, which resulted in chemical action between melinite and the iron of the shell. On March 26, as we have already stated, all the shells at the Belfort arsenal were, at much risk to the workers, being buried in the ground, exploded by electricity. Whether this is the end of melinite as a practicable explosive our French contemporaries do not state. It is certainly obvious that the dangerous factor must be to a large degree eliminated before the material can be safely stored or transported. Moreover, judging from the effects of the recent explosion at Belfort, its destructive power is much less than had been previously claimed for it. Lieutenant ZALINSKI'S dynamite plainly holds the field up to date.

LAST week we referred to a curious feature of military discipline in that a soldier visiting a guard-house in a drunken condition and being repeatedly ordered by the Sergeant of the Guard to go away refused to do so, and was afterwards tried, not for being drunk, but for not going away when ordered. We then asked the question "Why was not the soldier confined when he made his inebriated visit?" This prompts a correspondent, anxious that the JOURNAL should be right in all things, to invite our attention to par. 868, A. R., 1881, (G. O. 85, Nov. 18, 1886,) which directs that "no soldier shall be confined except on the order of an officer who shall previously inquire into offence." Assuming that the case discussed does come under the restriction quoted, concerning which we have some doubt, we still fail to see the reason why the Sergeant did not hold the drunken soldier, send for the officer of the day, or guard, and have the hilarious visitor confined in due form. We incline to the opinion, however, that in this case it was the Sergeant's bounden duty, under the 24th Article of War, which relates to the suppression of "quarrels, frays and disorders," to have ordered the man into confinement at once, afterwards, of course, reporting his action to his proper superior. The case is not one of moment and we are only led to descant upon it from a desire to make our opinion clear.

THE Board of Visitors to West Point, including the Presidential appointments made on Monday last, consists of: General John W. Palmer, Springfield, Ill.; General Robert H. Anderson, Savannah, Ga.; George W. Childs, Esq., Philadelphia, Pa.; Hon. W. A. Courtenay, Charleston, S. C.; Rev. John M. Brown, Buffalo, N. Y.; Hon. J. M. Gwinn, Baltimore, Md.; Dr. Wm. Everett, Quincy, Ill. Senate: Hons. Joseph N. Dolph, Portland, Oreg., and Francis M. Cockrell, Warrensburg, Mo. House: Hons. Joseph Wheeler, of Wheeler, Ala., Charles M. Anderson, Greenville, Ohio., and Benj. Butterworth, Cincinnati, Ohio. The examination of the several classes commence this year on June 1 and continue until the 11th. The members of the board are expected at the Academy several days before the exercises commence in order to familiarize themselves with the system pursued and to organize into subcommittees to report upon the various branches. As there seems to be a lack of information regarding the conditions upon which the members go to West Point, we would state that the law prohibits the payment of any compensation to members of the Board except for actual expenses, and they are paid in the following manner: Each member receives not exceeding eight cents per mile for each mile travelled by the most direct route from his residence to West Point and return, and, in addition, receives $5 per day for expenses during each day of his service at the Academy.

THE list of Army officers found incapacitated by the retiring boards and now awaiting retirement is smaller than at any time during the past four or five years. The last list we published contained twenty names. Captains John Hamilton, 1st Inf., and Wm. H. Vinal, 16th Inf., have since been retired, leaving only eighteen at present on the list; three of these are captains of the line, four captains of the Medical Department, one captain of Engineers, one chaplain and nine 1st lieutenants. Two of the captains of the line—Martin, 4th Cav., and Stivers, 25th Inf.—have recovered sufficiently to be able to perform duty again and as Captain Gordon, the other one of the three, has been granted a "stay of proceedings" until Sept. 1, it is not likely that any of these officers will be disturbed for the present; nor is their any possibility of the disabled staff captains being retired, as the principal object now is to make vacancies for the 64 West Point cadets who graduate in June. The disabled lieutenants are, therefore, the only material from which selections can be made to fill vacancies on the disability list, unless some of the officers of higher rank who are now on extended sick leave should be brought before retiring boards. Captain Wm. B. Pease, 9th Inf., was ordered before a board to be convened at San Francisco this week and if found incapacitated it is thought probable that he will be immediately retired to one of the two vacancies at present existing. It is also considered possible that the President may see fit to set aside the recommendation for "wholly retirement" in the case of Maj. Warren Webster of the Medical Department, and place him on the regular retired list to fill the other vacancy.

A GOVERNMENT small arms factory has been in existence some years at Terni, forty-nine miles N. N. E. from Rome, five miles below the falls of the Valino, which furnish an admirable water power. Here has now been established a company for the manufacture of steel armor plates, heavy ordnance and rails, in which the Italian Government and Messrs. Schneider and Co., of Creusot, are interested. The Company is known as the "Societa Anonima degli Alti Farni Acciaiera e Fonderia de Terni." The Terni Works, the Engineer tells us, consist of puddling furnaces and rolling mills, Bessemer converters, Siemens Martin furnaces, accessories and hammer and cranes, which are described in detail. The establishment has the command of a very large water power, and some moderately good lignite beds, and up to the present has been in the habit of working up pig iron, partly imported from England and partly from Bilbao, as well as ingots from Creusot, before the Bessemer and Martin steel works were put into operation. But, in order to be as independent as possible of foreign sources, preparations are being made at Civita Vechia for building blast furnaces, which will be supplied with ores from Elba and cokes from England. The hammer and cranes (one of 100 tons and the other of 150 tons lifting power) are worked by compressed air. There is a 100 ton hammer with a stroke of 5 m. (two per minute), an air cylinder of 1·92 m., and a piston rod of 360mm. diameter. The anvil block weighs 1,000 tons, is cast in one piece, is 4·42m. in height, area of base 42 square metres, and area of top 9·3 square metres. The hammer and all its parts are very massively constructed, but especially so the standards, and it weighs 287 tons. The 100 ton hammer stands in the middle of an iron building of nearly circular form, 50 m. in diameter, so that besides this, there is room for four Siemens gas welding furnaces, two on either side, and the two cranes for the service of them. By this arrangement the hammer is perfectly free, and can be easily worked from both sides of the anvil. The Engineer says: "The arrangements of this forge, and of the works in general, with the unimportant exception of those for lifting up the heavy forge furnace-doors, and in manipulating the blocks of steel backwards and forwards from furnace to hammer, are considered to be as perfect as any in Europe, and taking into account that the technical management is excellent and the crude iron tools employed are of the best, there is no reason why it should not be able to hold its own in the manufacture of big guns and armor plates against all foreign countries. Messrs. Creusot and Co. appear to be carrying out in Italy the same policy as in this country, naturalizing themselves and their product through connection with a local manufacturing organization, and thus escaping condemnation as a foreign interloper.

FIRST FLOOR.

DESIGNS FOR OFFICERS' QUARTERS.

By the courtesy of the Co-operative Building Plan Association, No. 191 Broadway, we give here another design, No. 391, from their publication, "Shoppell's Modern Houses. No 5." It represents a house 26½ ft. front, with an extreme width of 50 ft.; side, 39½ ft. The size of the rooms is shown by the floor plans. The cellar is 6 ft. 8 in. high; the first story 9 ft. 6 in.; the second and third stories each 8 ft. The foundation is of stone; the first story is clapboarded; the second story, the gables and the roof are shingled. The cost is estimated at $3,900, except mantels, ranges and heaters. Special Features—The staircase hall affords access to the front door from the kitchen, without passing through a room. The entrance hall is large enough to make a good reception room. Sliding doors connect the hall and parlor, and the parlor and dining room. Open fireplaces in the parlor and the dining room. Large pantry and butler's pantry. Heater pipes and registers are provided. Ash pits in the

IT is stated that a syndicate composed of Chicago capitalists and U. S. Army officers has purchased a tract of 5,000,000 acres lying in the States of Coahulia, Durango, and Chihuahua, in Northern Mexico, traversed by the Mexican Central and also by the International Road, from Eagle Pass to Laredo, and containing 1,000,000 acres of the finest cotton land in the country.

GENERAL ALEXANDER R. LAWTON, our new Minister to Austria, was graduated from West Point in 1839, appointed 2d Lieutenant, 1st Artillery, and resigned Dec. 31, 1840. When the War broke out he joined the Confederacy, and, in 1863, was appointed Quartermaster-General of its army. He has held many high public positions in Georgia since he left the Army in 1840.

CHARLEY PORTER was sergeant of police at Fort Delaware, and for his sly ways in catching up with the boys was called "Old Fox." When the news of Lee's surrender reached the fort great was the rejoicing among the Federals. Old Fox came in to tell the news and sell the newspapers containing the account. "Now," he said, "poys," (Fox was a Dutchman), "you vill all soon go home an ve'll all pe frents. You'll pe goot as we is. Ve'll pe goot as you is, an py tam, de nigger will pe as good as bote of us."

THE Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says: "Merchants arriving in Suakin from Kordofan, Khartum, and Berber agree in their reports that the authority of the Mahdi's successor is gradually disappearing, since he lacks the energy and force with which the Mahdi held in check his Emirs and Sheikhs. On account of this, anarchy is growing. The Khalif Abdullah would have long ago taken steps to reconcile Egypt, and done homage to the Khedive, but for fear of being poisoned by his Emirs and Generals, or being cut to pieces by them. If Englishmen were now to enter upon a fresh campaign in the Soudan, they would no longer encounter any resistance, for the populace there is craving for rest, and wishes for nothing better than the suppression of the despotism of the Emirs."

CAPTAIN W. B. PEASE, 9th Infantry, goes from Whipple Barracks to San Francisco to be examined by a Retiring Board.

COLONEL EDWARD HATCH, 9th Cavalry, after a short sojourn at Omaha, has rejoined his headquarters at Fort McKinney, Wyo.

CAPTAIN H. G. BURTON, Assistant Surgeon, U. S. Army, is expected at Plattsburg Barracks, N. Y., in in a few days from the West.

LIEUTENANT R. T. EMMET, 9th U. S. Cavalry, will leave Fort Niobrara towards the end of May to spend the summer in the East.

CAPTAIN J. E. WILSON, 2d U. S. Artillery, who left Fort Barrancas, Florida, last month, will spend the summer in search of health, returning to his post in October next.

CAPTAIN R. H. PRATT, U. S. A., was expected at St. Augustine, Fla., this week to select some of the young Indians there for instruction at the Indian School at Carlisle, Pa.

MAJOR GENERAL J. M. SCHOFIELD, U. S. A., is to be present at the annual reception of the cadets of the Columbia Institute, New York City, on Friday evening of this week, and review the battalion.

GENERAL O. B. WILLCOX, U. S. A., who was retired April 16th, left Fort Leavenworth the same evening for Ann Arbor, Mich., to join his family. An early visit to Europe is contemplated, to remain abroad for over a year.

IT is Lieutenant W. L. Pitcher, 8th U. S. Infantry, who has taken charge of the recruiting rendezvous at Harrisburg, Pa., and not Lieutenant John Pitcher, 1st Cavalry, A. D. C. to Major General Schofield, as erroneously reported in some papers.

COLONEL A. V. KAUTZ, 8th Infantry, presided over a Court of Inquiry sitting at Fort Robinson, Neb., this week, to investigate concerning the recent theft of public funds from Major D. N. Bash, Paymaster, U. S. A. Major Bash attended the sessions of the Court.

LIEUTENANT C. H. GRIERSON, 10th U. S. Cavalry, who breaks up the recruiting rendezvous at Lexington, Ky., has had his orders changed, and will establish a rendezvous forthwith at Atlanta, Ga., instead of at Richmond, Va. Atlanta should, we infer, furnish some first class aspirants for military glory.

LIEUTENANT S. F. MASSEY, 5th U. S. Artillery, who has recently returned to Fort Douglas, Utah, from a trip to California, was a guest at the Del Monte Hotel, Monterey, when it was burned down a few weeks ago, and came near being a victim. He lost most of his baggage, saving only a valise, and especially regrets the loss of his photographic outfit, containing negatives taken at the resorts visited by him on his trip.

SIGOURNEY BUTLER, of Boston, Mass., who was on Tuesday last appointed Second Comptroller of the Treasury to succeed Judge Maynard, promoted to Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, is a young man 29 years of age, a native of Quincy, Mass., and a son of the Peter Butler, who was a prominent applicant for the position of Collector of the Port of Boston when Mr. Salstonstall was appointed. He is a graduate of Harvard College and is associated in the practice of law with Richard Olney, an eminent attorney of Boston. He has never held public office before, although an applicant for one of the Pacific Railroad Commissionerships.

DURING the ceremony attending the unveiling of the statue of Albert Sidney Johnston April 6, Jefferson Davis took occasion in a manner indirect but thoroughly understood to reflect severely upon Gen. Beauregard for his handling of the troops at the battle of Shiloh. This aroused the ire of the sturdy Creole and he comes out in a four-column article in the New Orleans Picayune of April 16 defending his course, showing that what he did had the approval of Johnston, and that he did all that could be done with men who were absolutely outdone by the need of food and by fatigue. The article is quite severe and the author makes out a good case against Davis, even producing the identical military despatch which Davis declared had been lost. The correspondence is another evidence of the differences which have long existed between the two most conspicuous survivors of the late Confederacy.

THE Troy Telegram, refering to the marriage last week, at Watervliet Arsenal, of Lieutenant E. V. Smith, U. S. A., to Miss Cora Lincoln Young, says: The bride was escorted to the spacious parlors by her father, Captain D. J. Young, U. S. A., who gave her away. The groom was attended by his groomsman, Lieutenant Charles S. Riche of the U. S. engineer corps. Miss Pilsbury of New York City acted as maid of honor. The ushers were Lieut. Avery D. Andrews, 5th U. S. Art., and John Alfred Kimberly of Neenah, Wis. On the entrance of the bridal party, Maschke's orchestra discoursed the beautiful wedding march by Mendelssohn. The bride is a favorite in civic and army society, and her large acquaintance extended to her a cordial greeting on the occasion. The presents to her were large in number and unique and costly in design. Numerous congratulations were received—among them a cablegram from D. W. Barry of Vienna, a surgeon in the Servian army. The married couple go to Boston and eastern points and return by way of New York. After a short sojourn at Captain Young's home they leave for Fort Missoula, the groom's station.

LIEUTENANT H. C. DAVIS, U. S. A., on duty at the Agricultural College of Mississippi, is a recent visitor to friends at Meridian.

CAPTAIN M. C. WILKINSON, 3d U. S. Infantry, now undergoing treatment at Hot Springs, Ark., has received a three months' extension of his sick leave.

THE address of Richard B. Irvine, formerly Lieut.-Colonel and A. A. G., Department of the Gulf, who invites correspondence with reference to the history of the 19th Army Corps, is 2215 Trinity Place, Philadelphia, Pa.

QUEEN KAPIOLANI, of the Hawaiian Kingdom, accompanied by a number of high officials of the Hawaiian Government, arrived in San Francisco on Wednesday, en route via New York, to London, to be present at Queen Victoria's jubilee celebration.

MR WILLIAM E. ROGERS, renominated this week by Governor Hill of New York, as Railroad Commissioner, was graduated from West Point in 1867 promoted to the Corps of Engineers and resigned in 1869. He is a son-in-law of the Hon. Hamilton Fish.

A "DONKEY" party was given by Lieut. and Mrs. Blake, Fort Leavenworth, April 15, at which Lieut. Ripley, 3d Cavalry, carried off 1st prize. This being something new in the social line a description of the "donkey" will be given at another time.—Kansas City Times.

GENERAL AGRAMONTO and Col. T. H. Stanton, U.S. Army, says the Salt Lake City Tribune, have, after much study, invented and perfected a camera attachment for taking instantaneous views which makes the transition one three-hundredth part of a second. The invention is to be patented.

LIEUTENANT GEORGE PALMER, 9th U. S. Infantry, was married April 21, at Waukesha, Wis., to Miss Bertha E., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Wardrobe, of that city, in the presence of numerous relatives and friends. After a short wedding tour the married couple will go to San Diego Barracks, Cal., where they will be "At Home" May 12.

THE promotion to Brigadier-General of General Wesley Merritt causes the following promotions in the Cavalry arm: Lieut.-Col. James F. Wade, 10th, to be Colonel, 5th; Major George G. Huntt, 1st, to be Lieut.-Colonel, 10th; Capt. J.M. Hamilton, 5th, to be Major, 1st; 1st Lieut. P. S. Bomus, 1st, to be Captain, and 2d Lieut. F. S. Foltz, 1st, to be 1st lieutenant.

CAPTAIN J. G. BALLANCE and Lieut. O. M. Smith, of San Antonio, gave a lunch party April 12 in honor of Miss Anna H. Stanley, daughter of General D. S. Stanley, previous to her departure for New York and Europe. The following young ladies, chaperoned by Mrs. Miller, were present: Miss Anna H. Stanley, Miss Mary Otis, Miss Emma Mason, Miss Fannie Simpson, and Miss Josephine H. Stanley.

PROFESSOR S. E. TILLMAN, U. S. A., of the Military Academy, was married at Grace Church, New York, April 20, to Miss Clara Williams, youngest daughter of the late David S. Williams, of Flushing, Long Island. The ceremony was performed by the Right Rev. F. D Huntington, Bishop of Central New York, assisted by the Rev. J. Chalmers. After a short tour the married couple will settle at West Point.

THE Fort Davis News of April 15 says: Mrs. Stanley left Monday for St. Louis. A well attended hop was given Saturday evening in her honor.... Lieut. R. B. Watkin, Signal Corps, arrived on the 8th and left on the 9th, from Prescott, A. T., en route to Washington.....The surgeons are to deliver a series of practical medical lectures for the benefit of the officers and enlisted men, on Tuesday and Thursday evening of each week.

THE Vancouver Independent of April 13 says: The wife and daughters of Lieut. W. P. Goodwin, 14th Inf., have returned to Fort Townsend from Ohio.... Lieut. J. E. Runcie, 1st Art. and Lieut. E. St. John Greble of Gen. Howard's staff, sailed for San Francisco Saturday.....Lieut. J. N. Allison, 2d Cavalry, Inspector of Rifle Practice, Vancouver Barracks, will soon return to Fort Walla Walla, Major C. H. Wikoff, 14th Inf., having been appointed Inspector of Rifle Practice in his place.....The wife of Lieut. G. T. T. Patterson, 14th Inf., Fort Townsend, has entirely recovered her health.

COLONELS H. M. BLACK, J.W. Forsyth, J.M. Moore, and T. F. Barr arrived in St. Paul a few days ago en route to their respective stations, having completed their duties on the Court of Inquiry at Fort Cœur d'Alene called to investigate certain charges preferred by citizens living near Ft. Cœur d'Alene against Col. Frank Wheaton and R. Q. M. S. E. Clark, 2d Inf., and involving the alleged wrongful use of Government property and collusion with the post trader in the matter of the purchase and sale of supplies. The many friends of the accused officers are serene in their confidence that the result will be a complete vindication and we desire to be considered on the list in this matter.

THE Madison Square Theatre Company of New York visited Washington this week, and gave a performance of "Jim the Penman." During the day preceding the company visited the Departments, where, a correspondent writes, Commo. Harmony proved a most entertaining cicerone and devoted himself to Mrs. Agnes Booth. The gallant Secretary of the Interior admired Miss May Robson's "deep brown eyes and auburn locks." Secretary Whitney was on deck at the Navy Department and explained the mysteries of its workings. In the evening, we are told, "a stoutly built man came in early and followed the performance closely. There was none of that 'martial bearing' about him which stage heroes love to affect, and his general appearance was that of a well fed, substantial merchant or banker, but every Washingtonian present recognized him as Philip H. Sheridan, the Commander-in-chief of the Army. Lieutenant Colonels Sheridan and Kellogg, of his staff, sat beside him. A little coterie of naval officers, consisting of Admiral Russell, Commodore Harmony, Captain Tanner, Captain Green, Comdr. Schley, Comdr. Kellogg and Dr. Van Reyter, together with the ladies of their families, sat within speaking distance of one another.

REAR ADMIRAL S. R. FRANKLIN, U. S. N., was a visitor to Bologna, Italy, early in the week.

LIEUTENANT F. H. TYLER, U. S. N., of Norfolk, Va., paid a short visit to Washington this week.

REAR-ADMIRAL W. E. LEROY, U. S. N., visited New York City early in the week, registering at the Victoria Hotel.

COLONEL THOS. Y. FIELD, U. S. Marine Corps, has settled to duty at Norfolk, Va., and finds himself pleasantly situated.

LIEUTENANT C. H. LAUCHHEIMER, U. S. Marine Corps, now visiting in Baltimore, will join at the Marine Barracks, Washington, D. C., about May 8th.

CAPTAIN H. A. BARTLETT, U. S. Marine Corps, bade farewell to friends at Norfolk, Va., this week, and went to Annapolis for duty at the Naval Academy.

LIEUTENANT FRANCIS WINSLOW, U. S. N., in a recent letter to the Baltimore Sun, gives some interesting data as to the possibilities of oyster culture in North Carolina.

MR. F. H. SPARLING, a member of the class of 1883 at the Naval Academy, was married at West Washington, April 14, to Miss Helen W. Ironside, daughter of Mr. R. B. Ironside, of Cincinnati.

MEDICAL DIRECTOR ALBERT L. GIHON, of the Mare Island Navy-yard, Cal., reports that the condition of Medical Inspector Somerset Robinson is decidedly favorable and he will soon be able to leave the hospital.

THE Norfolk Landmark says Chief Engineer S. D. Hibbert is confined to his house with chills and fever. Chief Clerk R. J. Dodd, of the Navigation, is absent from his desk on account of sickness. Capt. H. A. Bartlett, U. S. M. C., is confined to his home by sickness. Mrs. Dr. G. A. Bright is recovering from a severe attack of typhoid fever. Comdr. P. H. Cooper's son, Philip, who has been suffering from chills and fever, is much better.

PAYMASTER H. T. STANCLIFF at the recent election of officers for the Navy Mutual Aid Association, declined a renomination as secretary and treasurer. His duties in connection with the Navy Reorganization Board consumes all his time. Paymaster L. A. Frailey was then nominated and elected secretary and treasurer for the present association year.

LIEUTENANT P. J. WERLICH, U. S. N., and Mrs. Werlich (born McCeney), of Washington, D. C., are mourning under the affliction of the death of their only child, a bright and promising boy of 8 months. The sad event occurred on Monday last, April 18, at the residence of his parents, 929 Farragut Square. Lieut. Werlich is on duty in the Navy Department Library. The blow is a heavy one and much sympathy is felt for the young mother in both Naval and social circles, where she has many warm friends.

PASSED ASSISTANT SURGEON E. H. MARSTELLER, U. S. N., whose return from the South Pacific Station was chronicled at the time of its occurrence, has been, by recent orders from the Navy Department, assigned to the care of the ironclads on the James River, relieving Passed Assistant Surgeon C. F. Hibbett. Dr. Hibbett is placed on waiting orders, and will probably pay a visit to his family, and later accompany his wife on a lengthened visit to her people. The doctor was married to Miss Florence Wilson on April 27, 1886.

THE following officers registered at the Navy Department this week: Lieut. W. E. Whitfield, Paymaster F. H. Arms, P. A. Surgeon M. H. Simons, Lieut. Geo. W. Tyler, Lieut. F. H. Tyler, Medical Inspector A. C. Rhoades, Lieut. Commander J. E. Craig, Lieut. L. C. Logan, Capt. H. A. Bartlett, U. S. M. C., John V. B. Bleecker, Paymaster Edwin Putnam, Chief Engineer John Johnson, Lieut. R. M. G. Brown, Asst. Constructor R. Gatewood, Pay Director A. W. Russell, Lieut. H. F. Reich, Commander C. J. Train, Commander C. H. Davis.

MRS. WHITNEY, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, in sending the check for $5,000, signed by her husband, to Dr. Leonard, the rector of St. John's, for the benefit of the church orphanage, as she did the day the baby was christened—Easter Monday—wrote: "If Dorothy could speak I am sure she would say how happy she is to send the enclosed to you for the aid of the little orphans under your care." The choir boys who sang in the church before and after the baptismal service were invited to the reception at the Whitney residence in the name of the Secretary's young son, who was deputed to entertain them as his own guests.

PASSED ASSISTANT ENGINEER G. H. KEARNY, U. S. Navy, recently on the trial trip of the Atlanta, is living in one of the pleasant portions of Brooklyn at 370 Adelphi street, with his family, consisting of a wife and child. Mr. Kearny's last service at sea having been on the Coast Survey steamer Blake, he is naturally anxious that the duty on that vessel shall be considered as "sea service" in the full acceptation of the term. It is probable, however, that the Department will adhere to its uniform custom, and assume that Coast Survey duty does not entitle to shore duty, so that Mr. Kearny will most likely go to sea during the coming spring or summer, having received preparatory orders.

COMDR. F. E. CHADWICK, U. S. N., will contribute to the May number of "Scribner's Magazine" an important article, entitled "The Development of the Steamship," in which he describes the first experiments in steam navigation, the early lack of faith in its possibilities, the obstacles that were overcome, the rapid improvements in steamships, the growth of ocean transportation, and the establishment of the great Transatlantic lines. An especially interesting feature of the article is the description of the most famous of modern steamships, apropos to the International Shipping Exhibition, held at Liverpool in 1886, at which there was gathered an unequalled collection of models and other material illustrating the history of navigation. The article will be profusely illustrated by cuts and diagrams, several of the former being from instantaneous photographs of the great modern steamships in motion.

RECENT DEATHS.

THE melancholy suicide of Lieut. John W. Danenhower is one of those unaccountable events which it is profitless to speculate about. He was found dead in his room at Annapolis at half-past nine o'clock on the morning of April 20. He was lying upon the rug in his room, and the bullet in his temple, from the 32-calibre revolver, which lay at his side, explained the cause of his death. He had laid a rubber coat on the floor so as to keep the blood from damaging the carpet. A tag tied to his coat contained the address of his brother, as follows: "Washington Danenhower, No. 1,115 F street, Northwest Washington, D. C. Send to my brother." From the position of the wound death must have been instantaneous. The ball had entered the right temple, continued through the skull and came out in the back of the head. It was afterwards picked up in the corner of the room opposite to where the body lay. The appearance of the suicide was that of a person peacefully sleeping. There is nothing present in the countenance to indicate suffering.

Lieut. Danenhower left the Academy about two weeks ago in charge of the Constellation. The grounding of the vessel at Craney Island while in tow of the steamtugs Phlox and Fortuna seemed to trouble him to such an extent that he turned over the command to Ensign Gibbons and returned to Annapolis. He reported the matter to Superintendent Sampson, who paid no great attention to the accident, but, noticing that he looked unwell, urged him to call in a physician. Danenhower conversed with a number of friends about his trouble, and seemed to think he would be subjected to an investigation that would injure his professional standing. He could not sleep, and Dr. Percy, of the Navy, gave him a narcotic; still he could not sleep. Lieut. Miles remained with him nearly all night. Lieut Danenhower rose and ate breakfast at 9 o'clock. A half hour later Dr. Percy called and was told his patient was in his room, on opening which he found the lieutenant warm, but dead.

His trouble concerning the grounding of the Constellation is given as the explanation of his act, but it is evident that it was a symptom of mental trouble and not its cause. A few days ago he was at Norfolk looking after the equipment of the practice ship Constellation, and it is now recalled by officers who met him at the navy-yard that he was very morose and distraught, and the opinion was freely expressed that he was suffering from an attack of his old malady. He was attached to the U. S. S. Vandalia during her cruise in the Mediterranean in 1876-77, when General Grant, with his family, was on board, and visited the Holy Land. It was before this cruise that he began to show signs of an unbalanced mind, which is ascribed to a sunstroke received while on a surveying expedition in 1871-4. His malady soon assumed a form so violent that in the year 1875, after he had been found wandering in a North Carolina wilderness, he went voluntarily to the St. Elizabeth Insane Asylum, and remained there some months. His Arctic exposure undermined his health, and, doubtless, this was the result. His domestic relations were exceptionally pleasant, and aside from his position and the income from his profession he received the rental of a number of houses he owned in Washington. Moreover his wife had an independent income, so that his pecuniary circumstances were unusually comfortable. He was an officer of fine abilities and devoted to his profession. His temperament was a somewhat melancholy one—at least, that is the impression we have derived from the intercourse had with him.

Lieutenant Danenhower was married in 1884 to the daughter of Senator George B. Sloan, of Oswego, N. Y., by whom he has two children. Mrs. Danenhower and children were at the time in Oswego on a visit to her father. He was born in Chicago Sept. 30, 1849, and his naval service covered the period from his graduation June 7, 1870. He was promoted Ensign, July 13, 1871; Master, Sept. 27, 1873; and Lieutenant, August 2, 1879, while absent with the Jeannette. After the Jeannette Expedition he was sent to Annapolis September 1, 1884, and was on executive duty and assistant in command of the cadets. He took great interest in the Naval Institute and was secretary and treasurer. Lieut. Danenhower was a tall and powerfully built man physically. He wore heavy brown whiskers, and generally had on heavy dark glasses, his eyes having been injured in the Arctic expedition, and an oculist informed him some time ago that there was danger of his losing his sight altogether. He was gentle of speech, courteous in manners, unostentatious and friendly with all with whom he came in contact. He was at the same time so extremely sensitive in disposition that slight things caused him great mental worry. The remains were taken to Washington and buried from the residence of the parents, 1321 H Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. An escort of officers and other attaches of the Academy accompanied the remains to the depot.

THE War Department was officially informed on Thursday afternoon of the death of Major John E. Blaine, paymaster, U. S. A., which occurred at Hot Springs, Ark., on the same day from softening of the brain.

A CORRESPONDENT says: "The Navy of the United States has suffered a great loss by the death of Chief Engineer George Purdy Hunt, which was announced in the last issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL. Although his health had been impaired by attacks of malarial and yellow fever, contracted on foreign stations, he endured the discomfort and suffering with unvarying patience and courage, firmly striving to carry out the wishes of the Department even in those last hours made sad by the conviction that he could no longer remain at his post. Possessed of uncommonly fine faculties, he was a typical engineer, uniting extensive and practical experience with machinery of all kinds, to complete knowledge of the physics and mathematics of the same. He belonged to that school of engineers which combines in the best sense scientific acquirement with practical experience, a combination essential to form the perfect engineer. His science was practical and his practice scientific. As an experimentalist he was invaluable, and he had frequently been chosen by the Department for duty of that kind. With incorruptible honesty and unblemished moral qualifications, he was dominated by a high sense of duty, which extended to the smallest professional details, and it is well known that his whole time and best efforts were given to all work entrusted to him by the Department. His social qualities compared well with his intellectual ones and endeared him to friends outside the Service, as well as to brother officers, who will ever remember him with love and respect."

MR. JOHN R. ACKERMAN, who died at his residence in Brooklyn on Saturday, April 16th, was a gentleman well known to many officers of the Army and Navy, through his connection with the house of J. R. Ackerman and Son. This house was founded over a century ago, and the firm preceding Mr. Ackerman was "Mapes and Waldron." Mapes was a Major General of the New York Militia, and Waldron was an Army Paymaster. It was through this connection that they established relations with the Army and Navy, which have continued until the present time. Mr. Ackerman succeeded Mapes and Waldron over 60 years ago, and retired from the business in 1870, transferring it to his son, Orville Ackerman, who has been in turn succeeded by a grandson, Howard Ackerman, who, like the original founder of the house, is an officer in the New York Militia, Major in the Ordnance Dept. The grandfather of the deceased Mr. Ackerman was Abram Rychman, an A. D. C. to General Washington, and among Mr. Ackerman's cherished memories was the recollection of his participation in the labor of throwing up earth works at Fort Greene during the war of 1812, and his service as 1st Lieutenant in a battery of New York City Artillery. We doubt whether there was any man out of the Army who had a larger acquaintance with it during the period of his active life, and he was held in high respect by all who knew him for his sterling qualities.

MR. ROBERT GATEWOOD, son of the Rev. Robert Gatewood, of Norfolk, Va., committed suicide, April 15, on board a Baltimore steamer, during a fit of temporary insanity. The deceased gentleman was formerly a naval cadet, and was honorably discharged June 30, 1884, under the act of August 2, 1882. He afterwards resigned and attended Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore in 1886, where he studied physics and mathematics. Later he passed the civil service examination, and was appointed to a place in the patent office in Washington. He has two brothers in the Navy, P. A. Surgeon J. D. Gatewood and Asst. Naval Constructor R. Gatewood.

AT the funeral of the late Lieut. C. V. Morris U. S. N., retired, at Sackett's Harbor, April 13, Co. G, 12th Inf., and the band acted as escort, pursuant to orders of Col. Townsend, commanding at Madison Barracks. Four sergeants of the 12th acted as bearers, the regulation volleys were fired and "taps" sounded at the grave about which the entire garrison had gathered to offer its tribute to the memory of this gallant officer, a noble scion of a noble house.

CAPTAIN W. W. BUSH, a gallant soldier during the war, and said to have been the first volunteer, died at Lockport, N. Y., April 19. He was twice President of the 12th Corps Society of the Army of the Potomac. His son, W. W. Bush, Jr., was until recently a Naval Cadet, and served last on board the Yantic.

MRS. MARIA KEY ALLISON, wife of Richard T. Allison, late deputy postmaster at Baltimore, died in that city April 15. She was a daughter of Chief Justice Roger B. Taney, and leaves two surviving sisters, one of whom is Mrs. Sophia B. Taylor, widow of Col. Francis Taylor, U. S. A.

MRS. STANTON, mother of Major W. S. Stanton, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., died at Old Point Comfort, Va., April 20, in her 73d year. The remains were taken to Newport, R. I., for interment.

JAMES LAIRD, for many years a clerk in the New York Navy Yard, and a veteran of the Mexican War, died at Flatbush April 18, aged 65.

MRS. CATHERINE HALE, a granddaughter of General Philip Schuyler, of revolutionary fame, died in Mobile, Ala., a few days ago, aged 88.

MRS. ANNA H. NONES, who died at Wilmington, Del., April 15, was the mother of Chief Engr. H. B. Nones, U. S. Navy.

CHERIF PASHA, at one time Prime Minister of Egypt, and an able soldier, died at Cairo a few days ago.

PROFESSOR MICHIE AND THE ARTILLERY.

WE have seen nothing from any young artilleryman in the nature of a reply to the article of Prof. Michie on the "Personnel of Sea-coast Defence."

Nothing, we believe, can be said in reply, that will assume to contradict the essential features of his criticism, whether it apply to the condition of the artillery as set forth by him, the argument that lays the cause of the condition at the door of the vicious regimental organization, or the corps remedy he proposes. All is too well-known to be stern fact by those who live within this organization.

Speaking only as an individual, yet with an experience based on an honest endeavor of 12 years and with sufficient knowledge of the attainments, in a professional way, of the officers of artillery in general, to warrant the statement, I feel that I can say that it is true that we know little or nothing about the duties, properly so-called, of the artillerist.

Those of us who entered the artillery from choice and who were entitled to enter it from the merit of our record at the Military Academy, as well as all true spirits of the artillery, blush, necessarily, in acknowledging the truth of the charge of inefficiency, but the blush is the tinge that comes surging up with the feeling that a great wrong has been done us.

On the threshold of a vigorous manhood we entered upon our profession with all the honorable ambition, willingness to work, physically and mentally, and ability to do, which the professor so pathetically expresses. From sheer professional starvation we are reduced to what we are. So weary and worn with waiting and watching for relief; so filled with doubt, depression and cynicism from many disappointments, that it is hard to realize that a relief ship seems now to heave in sight, and we tremble lest, after all, it may be only an illusion—one of the concomitants of our emaciated, tottering, professional existence. However, it can do no harm to call out, with all our power, across the ocean of lack of means and opportunity that bems us in, that we are still here, alive. By hook or by crook we have managed to pick up such professional food pickings that there is some spirit in the body—it is not all and only red facings; our condition is still such that with proper treatment we may be restored to the full stature of our professional being—the heart still throbs.

But even if now "rescued" it will not obliterate the wrong that has already been done us; it cannot turn back the pages of these best years of our lives; it was more than wrong to have led us as boys to what appeared a field full of honorable opportunity, and to have left us as men to wander over a perfect professional desert. Is a Moses at hand?

What has been the experience of those "three hundred thoroughly trained students that Professor Michie has seen enter the artillery service full of honorable ambition, devoted to their profession eager for active service in any capacity"? The young graduate, sent to some post remote from the influence of relatives and former friends, among strangers who look upon him as a man, whereas he is really only a boy, finds himself launched suddenly upon a life of perfect freedom of action; he may now for the first time in life follow the bent of his own sweet will. If, happily, he is so constituted that he naturally leans to study and self-improvement he may do something; if, unfortunately, the close life and obligatory habits of study and discipline that he has had for four years at the Academy make him a despiser of books for the time being, and eager to find amusement in the license he now enjoys, there is no duty in the way of mental occupation which imposes any check upon such inclinations; absence of all wholesome restraint is apt to engender an abandonment of mental occupation beyond the light reading of the day. Even under the most favorable circumstances a deal of precious time and valuable energy are wasted for want of a little professional guidance. Who is to tell him the correct path of theory in the world of professional thought before him? Whence is he to know the best authorities along any one line, or the many points which must be settled in preparation for any extended special line of study?

At best the individual effort is only an individual effort—tentative and disconnected, and almost always swallowed up by the opposing promiscuous efforts of others, by a simple process of interference. Nothing to encourage study, much to discourage it, is it a wonder that often it is abandoned; that if he do not resign and enter civil life, the young man will touch something having more promise in it; and that as a consequence our contribution to the science of artillery is most meagre. Thus it is, new material entering the artillery developes into a sort of a condition of dry rot and, in turn, acts to contaminate and hasten a repetition of the same process in subsequent new material.

The military life of the zealous young artillery officer thus reduces itself to the limits of standing gun drill and company drill in infantry tactics—"Load, 2, 3, 4." "fours right" and "fours left" is the extent of the demand made upon his brain by his profession; this is flavored, of course, with Board of Survey duty, to condemn, perhaps, a pair of old shoes, and Garrison Court-martial duty, to try, possibly, some petty case. All the drudgery of the profession, none of its glories, pleasures or rewards. Called artillery we are as much, if not more, infantry; being really neither, we are below the standard in each.

The flow of excellent material continues from the Military Academy to the artillery. The disease also continues to work its course; the ambitious young artillerist from year to year passes on from stage to stage until, all interest gone, he remains in the Service only to live, and because he has lost so many years in the race of life that he cannot enter unhandicapped into competition in civil pursuits.

What we need then, is occupation, professional occupation in the form of duty, mental more than physical. This to be guided from one source, so that all efforts shall be exerted toward a common end. The knowledge of the special talents of the officers of artillery being in the possession of a chief, will enable him to assign such investigations, as a duty, to officers as shall be suited to their talents, and he will have the power to grant means to carry on such investigations and experiments, as shall be of service to our country and a credit to the artillery.

At all hazards do not coop up our professional thought between the red leather covers of a single book. Give us some reasonable measure of opportunity and means, and then we alone will be responsible for the efficiency of the artillery.

A YOUNG OFFICER.

OLD ENGLISH MILITARY DISCIPLINE.

MR. DAVID FITZGERALD, Librarian of the War Department, has in his keeping a curio in the way of military literature, which had just been presented to the Library by Col. G. N. Lieber, acting judge advocate general of the Army. The work is a 16 mo. volume, entitled: "An Abridgement of the English Military Discipline," printed by especial command for the use of his Majesty's forces, London, 1686. This comprises 271 pages, and to it is added a supplementary volume of 35 pages entitled "Rules and Articles for the Better Government of His Majesty's Land Forces in Pay," published by His Majesty's command. London, 1688. While looking over its quaint old black letter words of command, etc., etc., one is forcibly reminded, as Mr Fitzgerald remarked, that the English Revolution of 1688 is not far off after all. This book was gotten up expressly for the use of the troops that James the Second raised to overcome the Parliament and people of England—troops, however, that failed him at the proper moment. It starts out with instructions as to how to form a battalion:

And in the "exercise of the Grenadiers on foot," how odd it now sounds to read:

"Draw your dagger, screw it into the muzzle of your firelock, withdraw your cartridge, open it with your teeth, etc."

Again we read how arms are stacked and untacked:

"Poise your fireloc'k, order your arms, lay down your arms, quit your arms, face to the right about, march," the following unique instructions being added:

"When clear of their arms they are to disperse, and upon the beat of drum they are to run their arms with an Huzza, their daggers drawn and their points upwards."

Space forbids further extracts, but it should be said that Col. Winthrop publishes the second part, "Rules and Articles for the Better Government of His Majesty's Land Forces in Pay," in his military law, volume 2. Mr. Fitzgerald, the Librarian, states that two officers of rank had the curiosity to compare the Regulations of King James the Second with our own of 1881, and they expressed great surprise at finding so little difference after the occurrence of an interval of just 200 years; showing, as Mr. Fitzgerald said, while affectionately regarding the little volume, "that there really is nothing very new under the sun."

A PLEASANT musical and dramatic entertainment interested a large number of invited guests, many of them naval officers, in the parlors of Constructor Pook's residence, on Flushing avenue, Brooklyn, Tuesday evening of last week. The comedy of "Drifted Apart" was presented by a competent cast, the leading parts being well sustained by Mrs. Kane and Mr. George Frothingham. Several lady violinists played to good advantage and several ballads were rendered in good taste.

THE ARMY.

G. O. 32, H. Q. A., April 19, 1887.

By direction of the Secretary of War, the following is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

All field-guns, with their carriages, caissons, etc., should be kept properly housed in closed sheds or other inclosed structures which will properly protect them from the weather.

The paulin is intended only for shelter in the field and on marches.

At all posts where suitable structures have not been provided for the purpose, requisition will immediately be made on the Quartermaster General of the Army for the required shelter.

By command of Lieutenant General Sheridan:
R. C. DRUM, Adjt.-Gen.

G. O. 11, DEPT. OF ARIZONA, April 11, 1887.

The Lieutenant General having approved his selection, 1st Lieut. Thomas J. Clay, 10th Inf., is announced as Inspector of Rifle Practice of the Department.

By command of Brig. Gen. Miles:
M. BARBER, Asst. Adjt.-Gen

G. O. 4, DEPT. OF THE MISSOURI, April 12, 1887.

The following is announced as the season for pistol practice, mounted and dismounted, for 1887:

Forts Elliot March and April, Leavenworth July and Aug., Lewis May and Aug., Reno March, June 20 to July 19, Riley July 1 to Aug. 14, and Oct. 15 to 31, Sill March and April, and Supply July and August.

G. O. 4, DEPT. OF DAKOTA, April 12, 1887.

The months of August and November are designated for practice in pistol firing.

In August practice will be had four times per week, for all men of troops; and during November not less than three times per week.

The practice during November will be entirely mounted, except as to recruits not sufficiently advanced therefor.

In G. C.-M. O. No. 31, of April 7, the President disapproves and sets aside the findings and sentence of the Court-martial in the case of 2d Lieut. Benjamin S. Wever, 1st Inf. Lieut. Wever was charged with: I. Conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman in uttering fraudulent checks, neglecting to repay borrowed money, making false statements, using a fictitious name. II. Absence without leave. III. Disobedience of orders, and conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline in transferring a pay account before it became due. To the last specification the Lieutenant pleaded guilty, and the court, which met at the Presidio, San Francisco, found him guilty of the charges of neglecting to pay debts, of falsely stating that he was absent on leave, of absenting himself without leave, disobedience of orders, and of transferring a pay account. Sentence, "To be dismissed the Service." The proceedings having been submitted to the President, the following are his orders indorsed thereon:

"EXECUTIVE MANSION, April 7, 1887.

"In the matter of the Court-martial of 2d Lieut. Benjamin S. Wever the proceedings, finding, and sentence of said court are disapproved and set aside.

"It is conceded by all who have reviewed these proceedings that the discharge of two members of said Court martial during the trial was improper and not permitted by military law. I am not able to treat such an unauthorized proceeding as a mere irregularity, and to excuse it upon the entirely gratuitous assumption that the rights of the accused have not suffered thereby. I regard this change, made in the personnel of the court, a substantial error, and think its decision and sentence should not stand. Undoubtedly members of a Court-martial may, upon proper occasion, be excused without invalidating its proceedings, and it is only intended in this decision to hold that in this particular case two members of the court were excused in such manner and under such circumstances that a due regard for the rights of the accused and care for the orderly administration of military law demand the disapproval and reversal of the proceedings and sentence submitted to me for review. And I am inclined to the opinion that if the findings of the Court-martial in this case were sustained there is testimony before me tending to show such absence of wilful intent to offend against military law and Army Regulations that a sentence less severe than dismissal from the Service would abundantly subserve the ends of military discipline and sufficiently vindicate the wholesome strictness of Army Regulations.

"GROVER CLEVELAND."

By command of Lieutenant-General Sheridan:
R. C. DRUM, Adjutant-General.

2nd Infantry, Colonel Frank Wheaton.

Hdqrs., A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, and K, Ft. Omaha, Neb.

In relieving 1st Lieut. H. K. Bailey from duty as Regimental Adjutant, Col. George Gibson says: "In severing the connection of this officer with the position held by him in the past four years with so much credit to himself, the Colonel of the regiment desires to place on record his earnest appreciation of the valuable service rendered by him, for which ripe experience, sound judgment, admirable knowledge of Army Regulations, official papers (various kinds), and existing orders had peculiarly fitted. His administration of the band and of the regimental and post treasurership has been felicitous; whilst the records of his office evidenced to a marked degree the care of a truly painstaking officer, one thoroughly imbued with intense pride in the profession of his adoption. His Colonel certainly parts with him with sincere heartfelt regret." Lieut. O. F. Long has been appointed to succeed him.

Army Boards.

A Board of Survey, to consist of Capt. Leon A. Matile and 1st Lieut. Francis W. Mansfield, 11th Inf., and 2d Lieut. Richard C. Croxton, 5th Inf., will assemble at Fort Abraham Lincoln, D. T., April 18, to fix the responsibility for the unserviceable condition of one Springfield rifle, for which Capt. T. F. Forbes, 5th Inf., is accountable (S. O. 33, April 8, D. Dak.)

A Board of Survey, to consist of Lieut.-Col. Charles Page, Med. Dept.; Capt. J. E. Greer, Ord. Dept., and 1st Lieut. E. F. Willcox, 6th Cav., A. D. C., will meet at Fort Leavenworth, April 11, to fix the responsibility for the death of three and sickness of other public horses recently received from Major C. W. Foster, Q. M., St. Louis (S. O. 46, April 11, Dept. M.)

A Board of Survey will meet at Omaha, April 11, to investigate a delay in delivery of Government property. Detail: Major John P. Hawkins, C. S.; Major Charles I. Wilson, Pay Dept., and 2d Lieut. Lyman W. V. Kennon, 6th Inf., A. D. C. (S. O. 35, April 8, D. Platte.)

A Board of Officers will convene at Fort Davis, Tex., April 18, to inspect buildings completed under contract. Detail: Lieut.-Col. D. R. Clendenin, 3d Cav.; Capt. W. H. Clapp, 16th Inf., and 1st Lieut. James Allen, 3d Cav. (S. O. 46, April 13, D. Tex.)

The place of meeting of the Army Retiring Board appointed by War Dept. order of July 20, 1886, is changed from the Presidio of San Francisco to San Francisco (S. O., April 18, H. Q. A.)

The Board of Engineer Officers to consider and report upon the erection of a lock and movable dam at the junction of Three Forks of Kentucky River, consisting of Col. William P. Craighill, Lieut.-Col. William E. Merrill, and Major James C. Post, will reconvene at Cincinnati to consider and report upon modifications of the project, proposed by Major Post (S. O. 53, April 7, C. E.)

Court of Inquiry.

Upon the demand of Major D. N. Bash, Paymaster, a Court of Inquiry will meet at Fort Robinson, Neb., April 21, to report upon the circumstances connected with the reported robbery of Major Bash, at Antelope Springs, Wyo., March 18, 1887, of public funds. Detail: Col. August V. Kautz, 8th Inf.; Lieut.-Col. James S. Brisbin, 9th Cav.; Major Andrew S. Burt, 8th Inf., and 1st Lieut. P. Henry Ray, 8th Inf., Recorder (S. O. 38, April 14, D. Platte.)

---o---

Reloading Implements, etc.—Cartridges, reloading tools and reloading material will be issued for trial by the troops stationed at

Fort Keogh,	16,000	1	80,000
Ft. Assiniboine,	14,000	1	70,000
Fort Missoula,	8,000	1	40,000

In making the trials company commanders will "pay particular attention to the reloading qualities of the cartridge case; to the number of times it can be reloaded and fired without deterioration of any kind, and to the facility with which it is extracted from the chamber of the piece after firing—comparisons being instituted between it and the present service cartridge." As the cartridges are experimental, they will not be counted as part of the annual supply to companies, but will be separately expended on the quarterly returns. All scores that may be made with them when at regular practice will be considered according to the rules in Blunt's Rifle and Carbine Firing, now governing such practice. (S. O. 34, D. Dakota, April 12.)

---o---

Battle Monuments.—The C. O. of certain forts will turn over to the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Association (or its duly authorized agent) of Hyde Park, Mass., 24-pounder flank defence iron howitzers—not mounted—149 in all.—(S. O. 79, Div. Atl., Apl. 16.)

DEPARTMENT NEWS.

Dept. of Dakota.—Brig. Gen. T. H. Ruger.

Capt. A. L. Myers, Co. E, 11th Infantry, left Fort Sully April 17 for the Winnebago and Crow Creek reservations to drive off intruders. Lieut. Gurovitz accompanied Capt. Myer. Some trouble is anticipated when the troops reach Big Bend where the senters are gathered, but Capt. Myer is a firm and discreet officer, and can be relied upon to meet the emergency.

THE WEIGHT CARRIED BY THE SOLDIER.

IT is estimated that the total weight of the outfit carried by the American soldier is 54 lbs. 1.85 oz., made up as follows:

Three days' cooked rations, 6 lbs. 1.08 oz.; outfit of clothing, 20 lbs. 11 oz.; weight of equipment, 6 lbs. 5 oz.; 100 rounds rifle ball cartridges, 10 lbs.; weight of arms, etc., 11 lbs. 0.77 oz. This is with the Springfield rifle. The weight equipped with rod bayonet rifle, and the cartridge belt, three days' cooked rations, and 100 rounds of ball cartridges and complete "kit" of clothing, is 53 lbs. 2.58 oz.

The weight with Springfield rifle, bayonet, scabbard, and the cartridge belt, as well as the above clothing, ammunition, etc., 53 lbs. 15.96 oz.

WEST POINT, N. Y.

APRIL 21, 1887.

OUR Superintendent was kept very busy all Monday afternoon receiving congratulations, personal, by telegraph and mail, over his promotion to the vacant brigadiership. It is not yet known when he will be ordered away to his new field of duty, but Dame Rumor says that it will be after the close of the academic year.

Last Saturday evening a large and brilliant gathering took place in room number one to attend the cadet hop, which was short, but very lively. There were enough present to uncomfortably crowd the room.

On Sunday evening Professor Tillman entertained the bachelor officers at dinner in honor of his coming wedding. On Tuesday he entertained those of his classmates that could be gathered together. There were Captains Bergland, Price, Augur, Mr. Hun of Albany, and Lieut. Braden. The others present were Ensign Tillman of the Navy, a brother of the Professor; Lieuts. Wisser and Brown, O. J. Capt. Rockwell was sick and unable to attend. A pleasant hour was spent, and then came to an end the thirty years of continuous occupancy of the head of the officers' mess by the bachelor chiefs of the chemical department, for Professor Kendrick was in possession over twenty-three years before he gave way to Professor Tillman in 1880.

For some time the cadets have been engaged in throwing up light field works in the Cavalry Meadows. The miniature battle-field was ready yesterday and to-day about seventy-five dummies, to represent men, were placed in the various positions assumed by soldiers in actual warfare. Then over 2,000 rounds of small arm and Gatling and Hotchkiss ammunition were fired at the supposed enemy. Of course everybody expected the dummies to be reduced to rags and kindling wood, but only six were hit at all.

Cadet Vestal has been appointed sergeant in the Battalion of Cadets, vice Palmer, reduced.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, KAS.

LIEUT. HILL, 20th Inf., secretary Army Mutual Fire Association, reports 56 members, with several more applications to be acted on. Letters are being received daily from Army officers announcing their intention of becoming members as soon as their policies in the old line companies have expired.

The reception tendered on the evening of April 13, to Gen. O. B. Willcox, on the eve of his retirement, was worthy the occasion, and a just tribute to a gallant and veteran soldier. The affair took place in the "officers' mess," which was elegantly draped in the stars and stripes and other ornaments. Every officer and their ladies of the entire post was present, besides a number of gentlemen and ladies from Leavenworth and Kansas City. Mrs. McCook, Page and Rucker received the invited guests in the club parlor, where those who had not already met the honored guest of the evening were presented by Mrs. McCook, Gen. Willcox standing on the ladies' right. The 6th Infantry band discoursed music from 9 to 10 o'clock, when dancing commenced in the dining hall and continued until 1.30. Then came an excellent supper. The affair was in every respect a success.

FORT DAVIS, TEX.

A RECENT visitor to Fort Davis writes: I attended Sunday school at the post chapel yesterday and church services last night. This was the first instance in my life where I heard music furnished by a band for church. There were three violins, and the usual number of fifes, clarionets, horns, etc., and they rendered good sacred music. The post chaplain, Rev. B. C. Hammond, lectured on the "Success of Prohibition." His lecture was an able and eloquent one, and, from my standpoint, convincing.

FORT BLISS, TEX.

THE El Paso Times says:

If the boys in blue do not become good marksmen it will not be for the want of practice. Since April 1, the range northeast of Fort Bliss has presented a busy scene from sunrise till noon. Capt. G. H. Palmer, 16th Inf., is enthusiastic over the progress the men are making.

FORT NIOBRARA, NEB.

"MCMICHAEL," in the Valentine Blade of April 15, says:

The agent of the New York Mutual Insurance Company tarried here last week, issuing policies to some of the officers....J. M. Thacher, post trader, had returned from his eastern trip....A social hop was given last night by the 8th Infantry boys, at the Post hall.....The condemned horse sale came off this morning. One three legged horse was sold for thirty-six dollars....There is a rumor in camp that one of the 8th Infantry soldiers won $15,000 in the Louisiana State Lottery....The target range is near completion, and soon the monotony of the Post will be broken by the continued report of the sharp-shooters rifle.

COURT-MARTIAL CASES.

IN a recent case at Fort Leavenworth, the reviewing authority, Gen. Willcox, disapproves the action of the court in allowing the prisoner, when sworn as a witness in his own behalf, to read his testimony from a paper prepared in advance. "An accused testifying in his own behalf is subject to the same rules governing the mode of testifying as are other witnesses, and his evidence should be oral. He can only be allowed the use of notes to refresh his memory as to particulars."

In the case of 1st Sergt. G. Bigalsky, Troop A, 3d Cav., recently tried at Fort Concho for drunkenness on duty, etc., and having made a plea in bar, sustained, the reviewing authority, General D. S. Stanley, says: "The first reason given to sustain the plea to the specification under charge 2, is not valid. The 62d Article of War was enacted in order that Courts-martial should have cognizance of offences not specifically "mentioned in the foregoing Articles of War," and, under it, a General Court-martial can take cognizance of any offence not capital, committed by officers and soldiers, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline. The fact that the proper person may not have complied with the 66th Article of War is not a bar to trial. Under A. R. 173, non-commissioned officers are not ordinarily to be sent to the guard-room, but should be placed in arrest. When a non-commissioned officer is placed in arrest, he must confine himself to his quarters, unless larger limits be given him. The second and third reasons given to sustain the plea in bar of trial, are not tenable; but, if the facts alleged are true, they might be taken into consideration when coming to a finding, awarding a sentence, or as a reason for a recommendation to clemency.

After the pleas, the Judge Advocate objected to a member, on the ground that he believed that the member had assisted the accused in the preparation of the case, and interested himself in the prisoner's behalf. It was the right of the Judge Advocate to challenge the member and the Court-martial should have proceeded, in the proper manner, to consider the challenge. It appears from the record, that when the Court-martial deliberated on the challenge, it permitted the challenged member to retain his seat, but excluded the Judge Advocate from the room. The Judge Advocate of a Court-martial cannot properly be excluded from the room during its deliberations.

The proceedings are disapproved. First Sergeant Gottlob Bigalsky will be returned to duty.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W. W. W.—Write to the Adjt.-General of the Army for a copy. The report is not for sale.

J. E. A.—Write to the Adjutant-General, U. S. Army, Washington, D. C., for a copy of the report you mention.

Ailettes.—Aigulettes are still a part of the uniform of certain Army officers. See pars. 2640 and 2654, Army Regulations, 1881.

T. F. B.—Read General Orders 66, A. G. O., Sept. 21, 1886, for full information as to allowances to Military convicts on release from confinement.

Constant Reader.—You should read carefully the Articles of War and the general regulations for the Army and make up your own mind as to what are your rights in the matters you mention.

Ponton.—No casualty intervening, Lieut.-Colonel Alex. Piper, 1st Artillery, will become Colonel of the 5th Artillery August 10 next. If the 5th has not moved by then, which does not now seem likely, his station will be Fort Hamilton, N. Y. H.

Ibex.—The newspaper statement that Gen. John Gibbon, U. S. A., is a "brother of Cardinal Gibbons," and that he "dropped the s from his name when a young man," is entirely incorrect. General Gibbon is not a relative of the prelate, and never had an s to his name.

Post Baker.—Post bakers have no legal claim to a per diem of 50 cents. The Post Council regulates their per diem according to the conditions of the post fund, and it may go as high as 50 cents, but no higher. You are wrong in your statement that every other head baker in the Army is getting 50 cents per day. Many get but 35 cents, as we happen to know.

A Subscriber.—There would be no difficulty in enlisting for whichever arm of the Service—Cavalry, Artillery or Infantry—you prefer, that is if you are found to be physically qualified. If a man enlisted for the Cavalry and joined that arm, he could, of course, be transferred without his consent to the Artillery or Infantry, but it is not often done. A man enlists "as a soldier in the Army of the U. S. of America." Consequently under that contract he may be assigned wherever the military authorities think proper.

Corporal asks: Par. 238, Upton Infantry Tactics. If the company is marching in column of files and the command is given, "form fours, left oblique, march," does the leading file advance three yards and halt, or do they halt at the command march and the other files oblique to the left. The book is not explicit as to whether the command can be executed on the march or only from a halt, or that it can be done either from a halt or on the march. ANS.—The Tactics plainly say that the leading file of the first four move forward three yards and halts at the command march. We cannot explain any further. The heading of par. 237 provides for forming "column of fours from column of twos or files." According to this it would seem reasonable to infer that the requirement that the column of twos is to be in march in order to execute the command, also applies to column of files.

L. C. G. asks: 1. In open boxes (with the new drop box) does the hand remain at the box or is it dropped to the side? ANS.—If you mean the McKeever cartridge box the manual is as follows: To open the box steady the piece with the left hand, opening the box with the right. Drop the right hand to the side (without regrasping the piece, but still steadying it with the left hand). To close the box, close it with the right hand, regrasp the piece with the right hand, dropping the left hand by the side. The position of the box is behind the hip.

2. In fire lying down, after the command "commence firing," does the fire and load continue, without command, until cease firing or rise is given? ANS.—Yes. The firings are executed on the same principles as those laid down for standing up. What further commands would you propose to give after the command commence firing?

3. In line, command is given (when at carry arm) "right turn," does the leading guide come to a right shoulder, and when the men have obliqued in line, do they remain at the right shoulder or come to the carry? ANS.—The term "leading guide" hardly applies to this case unquestionably. You mean the guide on whom the turn is made. Of course he remains at the carry in the first place because the Tactics do not require him to take up the double time, and in the second, because he remains the guide who is responsible for the new direction of the line.

Attorney asks: 1. What decision has there been by some U. S. Court against the validity of section 1202, U. S. Revised Statutes, as far as that might otherwise be held to apply to civiliar witnesses not in any way under the orders of the military or naval commander? ANS.—There is no such decision of a U. S. Court. Sec. 1202, Rev. Stats., is in full force as regards civilian witnesses summoned by Courts-martial.

2. In your answer to "Bill of Rights," March 12, you state that a citizen witness is not compelled to answer even pertinent questions before a Court, should he choose to appear. This is, of course, recognized; but give the authority for the statement. ANS.—You misquote the JOURNAL. We have never stated that a "citizen witness is not compelled to answer even pertinent questions before a Court, should he choose to appear."

3. Does not Section 8, Article 1, of the U. S. Constitution, limit the power of Congress to place civilians under military law; or, what is subservient to law, the military order of a commander (of which latter a Court-martial is merely one of such orders); does it not limit it to time of actual war, in surrection, etc.? ANS.—What clause of Section 8, Article 1, of the Constitution is referred to? In the 8th section there are upwards of twenty-five distinct clauses, none of which appear precisely pertinent to the question propounded.

4. A Court-martial is an executive agent. It is a board of officers convened by a military or naval commander. Has it not been judicially ascertained that no civilian is subject to the orders of the convening authority through his agent, this board, as witness or otherwise? ANS.—No such decision is recalled by us. Witnesses are summoned to appear before military courts, not by the convening authority nor by the presiding officer, but by the President of the United States. In 1885 it was held by the Acting Judge-Advocate General of the Army, in an opinion upon a question coming up from the Department of Texas, that a civilian witness could not be punished in any manner by a military court for refusing to give evidence. This opinion was concurred in by the present Attorney-General of the U. S., in an opinion dated Oct. 23, 1885, and accepted by the Secretary of War, and is now a rule of Court martial practice. A civilian may still, however, be summoned, and in case of neglect or refusal to attend the Court be arrested and conveyed before the Court by force, under Section 1202, Revised Statutes. When there, he may stand mute if he sees fit, and fear no evil; and on being discharged from further attendance, may proceed to draw his witness fees. It is believed that no judicial decision has been made by either a Federal or other Court upon the points involved in the foregoing statement.

MISS KATHERINE HENSHAW JACKSON, daughter of Medical Director Samuel Jackson, U. S. N., was married at Boston, April 13, to Mr. Chas. S. Andrews, in the presence of a large and fashionable assemblage. A reception followed the wedding at the residence of the bride's father, and on Thursday of this week the happy couple sailed for Europe.

Swatara—At Portsmouth, N. H. Is to have new boilers. It is not known at present when she will be ready for sea. The construction work will be completed about the middle of June. When ready she will be assigned to duty on the North Atlantic Station.

Enterprise and Nipsic—Undergoing repairs at New York. Will be ready in a few months, and in all probability be assigned to the North Atlantic Squadron.

Trenton—Undergoing repairs at Norfolk, Va. Expects to be ready for commission about May 15, and to sail May 28 with new crew for the Lancaster.

Chicago—Will be finished at New York. The engines are practically completed, and but little construction work remains to be done. (Report of March 19.)

Boston—At New York. Is being fitted with ice machines, electric lights and steam separators. She will be ready for a trial trip in about 60 days. (Report of March 19.)

Ossipee—At Norfolk. Ready for commission about May 15.

Constellation—Cadet Practice Ship. Ready for sea in about a week.

VARIOUS NAVAL ITEMS.

THE New York Navy Pay Office has removed to rooms 109 and 111 Stewart Building, corner Broadway and Chambers street. Elevators will be found at the entrances, No. 280 Broadway and No. 53 Chambers street. Letters should be addressed P. O. Box, No. 3783.

THE Rising Sun of Japan, March 29, says: "The U. S. corvette Omaha arrived from Kobe on Friday, March 25, and was followed by the temporary flagship Marion on Sunday. Both vessels will shortly proceed to Yokohama, where they will meet the new flagship Brooklyn. The newly appointed U. S. Minister to Corea, Mr. U. A. Dinsmore, has arrived in Yokohama, and will be conveyed to his destination by the Omaha. Admiral and Mrs. Chandler will be the guests of Mr. J. M. Birch, U. S. Consul, during their short stay here.

THE board of officers on life-saving boats for the Navy will hand in a report to Secretary Whitney next week. They have examined carefully the models submitted by inventors, but fail to find in them any qualities superior to those embraced by the whale boats now used by the Service. The board has not received a model which has sufficient accommodation for passengers, all the space seemingly being taken up by air tanks. Some of the inventors asked the board to wait before making its report until they had an opportunity to submit other models which would more nearly comply with Service requirements, but owing to the fact that Capt. F. M. Ramsay, its president, is to be given the command of the Boston, it has been deemed best to close the work of the board without further delay.

THE civil establishment of the various Navy-yards and stations of the U. S., according to statements just compiled at the Navy Department for the use of the Cockrell Committee, comprises a force of 3,454 employees, distributed as follows: Portsmouth, 326; Boston, 176; New York, 1,100; League Island, 148; Washington, 411; Norfolk, 625; Pensacola, 38; Mare Island, 383; New London, 11; Newport, 30; Annapolis, 190; Key West, 8, and Yokohama, 8. As distributed among the bureaus, the Bureau of Construction and Repair employs the greatest number, being credited with a force of 979; the Bureau of Steam Engineering comes next with a force of 783; the Bureau of Yards and Docks has 434; Equipment and Recruiting, 350; Ordnance, 488; Provision and Clothing 139; Medicine and Surgery, 104; Navigation, 22, and Naval Academy, 155.

J. W. PUGSLEY, of Baltimore, has been selected to superintend the repairs of buildings at the Washington Navy-yard, looking to its conversion into an ordnance factory. The plans for the alterations will be prepared at once and work on the buildings will begin some time this spring.

THE Bureau of Steam Engineering has received no orders as yet to proceed with the preparation of the designs for the machinery of the 6000-ton vessels. The Roach cruisers are now in a fair way to become accepted by the Government and assigned to duty within the next six months. The Atlanta will be accepted in a few days. The Boston will be tried during the first week of May. She will not be provided with a "separator," as the engineers think she will reach the requirements of the contract without the additions which were found necessary in the case of the Atlanta. The Chicago has one of the "separators." She will be ready to leave Chester within a month.

CASUALTIES.

Deaths reported to the Surgeon-General of the Navy during the week ending April 20, 1887:

Moritz Schweitzer, private marine, attached to Norfolk Navy-yard, found dead April 14, in Norfolk, Va.

THE death from diphtheria of the interesting daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. W. H. Emory will be noted with much sorrow by a wide circle of friends both in and out of the service. Lieut. Emory has about completed arrangements for beginning his long cruise to the Pacific on the Thetis. The remains were taken to Greenwood, Brooklyn, and Mrs. Emory, accompanied by her husband, returned to Washington from New York by the "Congressional Express" train of Monday last. Lieut. Emory will take his final leave of Washington at once, and proceed upon his voyage.

NAVAL ACADEMY.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., April 20, 1887.

ON Saturday morning the cadets went out at 8 o'clock on the first of the seamanship cruises of the season. Comdr. Harrington was in command with Lieut. Leutze as 1st lieutenant. The Wyoming went several miles down the bay and went through many evolutions. The drill was a long one, and the cadets did not return until after 1 o'clock.

At 8 o'clock in the evening, after a selection by the orchestra, the curtain rose to a large audience assembled in the gymnasium to hear the theatricals given by the officers' club. The first piece was a comedy entitled "Always Intended," with the following cast: Mary, Mrs. Muddle's niece, Mrs. Capehart; Mrs. Markwell, a widow, Mrs. Gheen; Jane, a servant, Miss Sampson; Mr. Muddle, Mr. Wise; Charles Constant, his nephew, Mr. Miles; Mr. Project, a lawyer, Mr. R. E. Smith.

Each one brought out the character entrusted to him in a creditable manner, the acting of Mrs. Capehart, Lieut. Wise and Ensign R. E. Smith being especially good. The comedy was interesting, but was unfortunately given on the same evening as the farce following, a piece decidedly more interesting and having as much substance as the comedy. It was received with a generous amount of applause, the actors named above receiving the greater share.

The orchestra having finished a second selection in fine style, the curtain again rose on the farce entitled "Poor Pillicoddy." Too much cannot be said in praise of this piece as the work of amateurs. The situations were comical, and the acting would not have been a discredit to professionals. The cast of characters was as follows: Mrs. Pillicoddy, Mrs. Mahon; Mrs. O'Scuttle, Mrs. Eyre; Sarah Blunt, Miss K. Sampson; Mr. Pillicoddy, Mr. Eyre; Captain O'Scuttle, Mr. Mercer.

Mr. Eyre in the character of Poor Pillicoddy was the special favorite of the audience, and his delineation of the joy, fear and despair of the unlucky florist must have been seen to be appreciated. His soliloquy concerning the chances of the return of his wife's "first" was the most comical of his speeches, and the drowsiness produced by taking poppy seed to end his troubles was irresistibly funny. It is only fair to say that his acting was the principal feature of the evening, and added greatly to the success of the piece. Mr. Mercer portrayed the character of a bluff, old, sea captain as vividly as could have been desired. His make up was very good, and his appearance on the scene was the signal for applause. Mr. Mercer has had some previous experience with private theatricals, and was the manager of the piece recently presented by this club. Mention should be made of the acting of Miss K. Sampson in the character of the florist's assistant. It was very good indeed, and showed a clear appreciation of the requisites of the part.

The audience was large and enthusiastic. As only those attended who had received special invitation, it consisted in great part of officers and their families, the cadet corps and some citizens of Annapolis.

It is reported that another piece is in progress and will be presented in a few more weeks. These entertainments are very popular with the cadets and officers, and as they must, of necessity, come on hop nights, this is a sure sign of their worth.

On Tuesday afternoon, while a steam-launch filled with First Classmen was sailing about the Severn River and the bay blowing up barrels with its torpedoes, as an afternoon drill, a torpedo spar broke under water out of sight, and brought the torpedo so near the launch that when it was exploded at the intended moment, the bow of the launch was shattered and it immediately sank. Ensign Muir, who was in charge of the boat, and the cadets took to the water and were picked up by an oyster boat. A launch was sent out from the Santee's wharf and soon brought Mr. Muir and the cadets back to the academic grounds. Fortunately, no one was hurt, and the only injury done was the wrecking of the launch. Had the torpedo been a heavy one, the case might have proved entirely different. One of the cadets was standing in the bow of the boat, but was uninjured.

The examinations for April have begun and will be continued during the week. The annual physical examination of the cadets began on Monday and will be continued for several weeks. It is thought that very few will fail in these examinations.

A society was recently organized in Washington known as "The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Bilgers from the Naval Academy." The meeting was held in the rooms of President Darby—late member of the Class of '87—and the society was joined by several young men, who have recently resigned from the Academy. It promises to become a large and powerful society, especially if all who find it necessary to resign from the Academy become members.

The game of ball played a week ago, Wednesday, between the officers and the First Class of Cadets proved so interesting that it was repeated on this Wednesday.

Lieut.-Comdr. J. E. Craig and wife spent Saturday and Sunday with friends in the yard.

Mrs. Wilson, of Norfolk, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Lieut. Miles, returned to her home on Thursday.

The little child of Lieut. Colvocoresses, who has been sick with scarlet fever, is very much better, and their quarters have been taken out of quarantine.

Rear Admiral Ammen paid a short visit to the yard on Saturday.

Miss Wilson, of Baltimore, was, this week, the guest of Lt. and Mrs. Wise.

Prof. Sanger and Mrs. Sanger have been called away by the illness of Prof. Sanger's mother.

The Misses Perkins, daughters of Captain Perkins, are still the guests of Prof. and Mrs. Terry.

Frances Belknap, son of Lieut. Belknap, has returned to his school in Baltimore, after spending his Easter vacation with his parents.

The watchmen at the gate are having great success in their efforts to check the constant pilfering of cadets' stores. Last week a covered wagon was found to have a quantity of butter inside. What was done in this case is not known.

Mr. Briscoe, of Annapolis, has returned from a short trip, and spent Sunday with friends in the yard.

The following candidates for admission to the Naval Academy have been instructed to report for examination in May: John Grindle and Charles R. Emrich, Ill.; C. I. Goble, Ind.; J. F. McAuley, Iowa; T. F. Maurin, La.; P. B. Consant, Mich.; P. B. McCord, Mo.; Geo. B. Shipman, N. J.; Elisha Tneall and C. H. McIntyre, New York; R. Lea Low and Louis J. Magill, Pa., and T. J. Senn, Rhode Island.

LIEUTENANT F. W. TOPPAN, U. S. N., attended the first annual dinner of the Electric Club at the Union Square Hotel, New York, on Thursday evening.

LIEUTENANT G. C. HANUS, U. S. N., is at work preparing a synopsis of the points at issue in regard to the Raritan Bay boundary, and the Commissioners will meet at the Astor House, New York, April 29, to effect a settlement.

CAPTAIN SELFRIDGE, recently relieved from command of the Omaha, arrived in Washington on April 15 and reported to the Secretary of the Navy on the following day. He is anxiously waiting for the Secretary to read the official report on the shell accident so that a decision may be reached as to whether or not he is to be the subject of a Court of Inquiry. He is rather anxious that a Court should be appointed as he is very confident that he will be able to show that he is not open to censure.

REVENUE MARINE.

THE U. S. Revenue steamer Bear went to Mare Island, April 9, for the purpose of going on the dry dock to clean and paint bottom preparatory to sailing for the North. This year she goes to the Arctic via Sitka and way ports. She will do patrol duty about the Seal Islands in the early spring until relieved, about June 1, by the steamer Corwin, which vessel will mount guard around the Seal Islands the coming season. The Bear will then proceed North along the coast of Alaska, going as far as Point Barrow if ice permits. Her mission is twofold, to prevent illicit traffic, and to assist any unfortunate whaler that may come to grief in pursuing his hardy and dangerous vocation. It can justly be said here that "Uncle Sam" has no vessel more fitly placed than the one he sends annually to the Arctic in the Government interest, and as a good Samaritan to the whaling fleet. Her coming is hailed by those hardy sons of Neptune as a "Mascot." That the efforts of the Government in that direction are more than appreciated is well attested. The cutters have rendered most valuable service in those waters which has added greatly to the already excellent record of the service.

The Corwin was towed from Astoria, Oregon, to San Francisco by the steamer Rush early this month. Hub of propeller being cracked, a new propeller has replaced the one broken, and other necessary repairs are being made, which are now about completed. Next week she goes to Oakland Creek to paint ship, which will occupy a week's time. The Corwin will then be ready to perform any duty for which she may be called upon.

The Rush has repaired her broken crank-pin and is again as good as new. At present she is laying astern of the City of Pekin, keeping a sharp eye to windward for the wily opium smuggler, and also to prevent the Chinese passengers from communicating with the shore, small-pox having broken out in a very slight degree amongst them.

It is reported that Capt. Shepard, of the schoolship Chase, is to assume command of a revenue vessel on the Pacific Coast. No officers, except such as have been by the Bear all winter, have yet reported for duty. Lieut. Kennedy and Engineer Cutchin are recent assignments, and it is not known who the rest will be beyond those mentioned. It is proposed that the Bear leave San Francisco on her cruise early in May.

The following is a resumé of the work performed by the U. S. revenue steamer Hamilton, Capt. Eric Gabrielson commanding, during the winter, cruising season 1886-7: Miles cruised, 7,594.9; vessels boarded, 1,416; vessels assisted, 9; vessels reported, 76; boat duty, miles, 240; value property assisted, $142,314. Dec. 7, assisted two schooners in Delaware breakwater during heavy gale, that were dragging on the beach. Jan. 28, found schooner Delhi anchored off the North Carolina coast, sails blown away, rudder gone and vessel leaking, distress signals flying, towed her to Norfolk. March 1, schooner Chief, anchored near by, was observed to be on fire, sent rescuing party and extinguished flames. March 7, quelled mutiny on schooner A. M. Allen. March 12, during heavy gale, N. W. gale, off Chincoteague, Va., fell in with schooner C. E. Colcord, dismantled, towed her to Norfolk. March 18, found Norwegian bark Arvil a anchored in dangerous position off Cape Henry, strong gale blowing, took her to safe anchorage. March 23 and 24, worked on schooner S. H. Walker, ashore on Hog Island shoals, in very dangerous position. March 25, picked up schooner Henry Withington at sea, unmasted, and having crew of a vessel with which she had been in collision, on board, took her into port and placed her in charge of steam-tug, she having no anchors. The past winter has been very severe on coasting vessels all along the coast, and the cutters have been kept very busy attending to the unfortunates.

The following assignments of officers of the Revenue Marine Service were made this week: Capt. D. B. Hodgdon, from the str. Perry, and assigned the Chase. Capt. L. G. Shepard, from the Chase, and assigned to the Rush. Capt. C. L. Hooper, from the Rush, and assigned to the Corwin. 1st Lieut. J. M. Grimes, assigned to the Perry. 1st Lieut. J. W. Howison, from the Corwin, and ordered to command the Hartley. 2d Lieut. A. Buhner, from the Hartley, and ordered to the Bear. Chief Engineer J. W. Collins placed on waiting orders. 2d Lieut. S. M. Crosley, from the Dix, and assigned to the Grant. 2d Lieut. F. G. F. Wadsworth, from the Hamilton, and granted leave of absence.

LATE ARMY ORDERS.

Major Morse K. Taylor, Surgeon, is relieved from duty at Fort Sill, I. T., May 6, and ordered to his home, San Antonio, preparatory to retirement.

1st Lieut. J. M. Cabell, Assistant Surgeon, is ordered to proceed to Fort Omaha for temporary duty.

Col. J. F. Wade, 5th Cav.; Lieut.-Col. George G. Huntt, 10th Cav., and Major J. M. Hamilton, 1st Cav., recently promoted, are ordered to join their regiments.

The leave of Lieut. C. C. Tear, 25th Inf., is extended to August 11, 1887, and his resignation accepted, to take effect from that date.

The leave of absence granted 1st Lieut. M. F. Jamar, 13th Inf., has been extended three months on account of sickness.

The leave of absence granted 1st Lieut. Robert W. Dowdy, 17th Inf., has been extended two months on account of sickness.

Maj. Chas. A. Wikoff, 14th Inf., is appointed Inspector of Rifle Practice, Dept. Columbia, and will relieve 1st Lieut. Jas. N. Allison, 2d Cav., of the duties of that office.

CAPTAIN LOUIS E. FAGAN, U. S. Marine Corps, and Mrs. Fagan, of Germantown, Philadelphia, gave an informal reception a few evenings ago to intimate friends and relatives who happened to remember the occasion of their marriage fifteen years ago. Many beautiful crystal and rare china presents were made, and the affair passed off merrily.

IT is thought by his family that Chas. A. Gibson, the missing pay clerk of the Ossipee, at the Navy-yard, is suffering from aberration of mind on account of disappointment in the expectation of getting shore duty. When ordered home it was his belief that he had been relieved for that purpose. Instead of this, however, he was assigned to another paymaster, which would compel him to be further absent from his family with no definite limit as to the time. His papers and accounts were found stowed away under his bed, but prove to be in a correct state, so there is no anxiety on that score. His wife was with him last on Sunday, March 27, and he disappeared the next day.

IT was stated early in the week that Lieut.-Col. Henry L. Lazelle, 23d Inf., had been selected to take charge of the office of Rebellion Records to succeed Col. Scott, deceased. At the War Department it is denied that a decision has been reached in the matter, but it is said that Lieut.-Col. Lazelle, together with Col. Closson, Asst. Adjt.-Gen. Vincent and one or two others had been recommended to the President by the Secretary as being officers possessing qualifications for the detail. Further than this nothing definite can be learned.

TO ARMY OFFICERS.

The undersigned having represented the Penn Mutual Life Ins. Co., of Philadelphia, as its General Agent for Northern Ohio, during the past year, with the experience thus gained feels himself to be competent to give Army Officers advice on many matters pertaining to Life Insurance, which may be to their advantage. To this end, therefore, he gratuitously offers his services to the Army, and respectfully invites correspondence from such as desire information on this subject.

While the Company he represents has no superior in the country for security or for liberality in its policies to officers in the Military Service, yet he will be pleased to advise and assist officers who may prefer to place their insurance in other reputable companies. Information as to the standing of the various companies and their relative profitableness for investment he will gladly communicate to those who desire it; also advice as to kind of policy best suited and most profitable to those of different ages.

By this announcement the undersigned hopes that he may serve the interests of his brother officers, enabling them to place their insurance in the most substantial and profitable companies, in a form of policy most advantageous to themselves.

AN English correspondent writes: "The recent Dover manœuvres of volunteers have a special interest in that they have developed the possibilities of using a cycle of mounted scouts to vast advantage. The natural comment that it should not have been left by regulars to volunteers to demonstrate this is enforced by the reflection that the volunteers from the first have led in all practical progress in real field work, and this despite steady indifference and often open discouragement from the army authorities. Just now the British public is too distraught by other matters to think of military reform, but when it gets around to it no doubt these volunteers' experience will do much to sweep away the royal and court favoritism that is now rotting the life out of the army."

THE Cincinnati Commercial says: "Gen. Grant's letter to President Johnson, when the latter wanted him to send troops to Baltimore to insure peace in the election of November, 1866, is now first published in the New York Herald in its first draft, and partly in fac-simile. It is of interest in two ways: as showing again Gen. Grant's firm opposition to militarism, or any interference in civil affairs tending toward that evil; and as showing the healthy influence of the counsel of John A. Rawlins, which caused the omission from the letter of an elaborate discussion of the political and legal questions at issue in Baltimore between Governor Swann and the police commissioners of the city."

U. S. ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, APRIL 23, 1887.

Office, No. 240 Broadway, New York.

No attention is paid to anonymous communications, but the wishes of contributors as to the use of their names will be scrupulously regarded.

Remittances should be made by express, or post-office money order, check, or draft, made payable to W. C. and F. P. Church. Postmasters are obliged to register letters if requested. No responsibility is assumed for subscriptions paid to agents, and it is best to remit direct to the office.

Subscriptions, $6 a year, and pro rata for a less period. In clubs of five, $4; clubs of ten or more, $3.

Postage within the United States prepaid. Foreign postage, $1.00 per annum, should be added to the subscription price.

The date when the subscription expires is on the Address-Label of each paper, the change of which to a subsequent date becomes a receipt for remittance. No other receipt is sent unless requested.

Change of address will be made as frequently as desired, upon notification; not otherwise, as the changes announced in the orders published in the JOURNAL furnish no authority for changing the address of the paper. Both the old and new address should be given.

We should be very glad to learn from any of our subscribers of any delay or failure to receive the JOURNAL, so that we may give the matter our immediate attention.

OUR NEW CRUISERS.

SOME sharp criticisms on the battery of the Atlanta which have appeared in the New York Tribune, have called forth a reply from Commander CHARLES O'NEIL, U. S. N. This we publish elsewhere, together with the rejoinder appearing in the Tribune. As to the actual facts we learn that work on the defective gun carriages of the Atlanta are being pushed forward as rapidly as the weather and the state of the appropriation will permit, and it is hoped that when all of the various adjustments and alterations have been completed, the guns of this fine ship will prove themselves as efficient and valuable, in their way, as the recent speed trial has shown the machinery to be. So far the main difficulty with the battery of the Atlanta seems to have been confined to the 8-inch rifles, or rather to the carriages for these guns. It appears that the gearing for training the piece was cast instead of being cut, and this is the more remarkable when it is considered that at the Washington Ordnance Yard are some of the finest gear-cutting machines owned by the Government. Considerable difficulty has also been encountered with the heavy castings of bronze containing the shaft, whereby the actuating engines below transmit this motion to the gun-carriage mechanism. It is this last point which is at present receiving attention, and the two 8-inch guns were dismounted soon after the late trial trip, and the work of reducing the metal by hammer and chisel progresses as speedily as can be expected. Although the ship and propelling machinery of the Atlanta are, to all intents and purposes, complete and ready for service, the unfinished condition of the battery, the absence of shields for the 8-inch rifles, the lack of ammunition, and the multifarious details required for a fine battery of modern breech-loading guns, such as this ship possesses, will prevent her from sailing on a regular cruise for a considerable time to come. The details of fittings and appliances, racks, tracks and slides, do not seem to have received the same attention in the battery of the Atlanta as will be found to be the case on board the modern ships of our English cousins across the Atlantic. Undoubtedly a great deal of this crudeness is more apparent than real, and will, to some extent, be remedied by use, but the impression conveyed is one of lack of finish and inadequacy. In so far as the guns themselves are concerned, it is probably true, as claimed, that they are the equal, and possibly the superior, of any pieces of like calibre afloat. This, however, is a matter of opinion rather than of proof, but the apparent insufficiency of operating mechanism with the radical defects in gear construction must, and will, seriously handicap the Anglo-American breech-loading rifles at present on the Atlanta.

We give elsewhere a tabulated statement of the performance of the Atlanta during the recent trial trip. The point which will at once strike the professional observer in the record of the speed and horse power of the ship and engines is the very little variation in either particular during the extended period of time covered by the trial. During the entire six hours during which the speed was maintained the difference between maximum and mean speed was but half a knot, while the mean of the difference existing between the maximum horse power and the minimum differs from the mean of the whole run by but two horse power. This must be regarded as a remarkable evenness of performance, and shows the good result of the various alterations and modifications which have been introduced into the engines and their appurtenances.

The result of this trial trip is the more gratifying in view of the various serious doubts which were at one time entertained as to the value of the vessel. It is hoped that the lessons learned from the mistakes made with her will prove of advantage in preparing the Boston for sea. Work upon that vessel is now being rapidly pushed to completion, and it is expected that she will be ready for the preliminary steam trials of engines and boilers some time during the month of May. During the sea trial of the Atlanta the irrepressible photographer was on hand and one of his most successful efforts was "catching" an excellent full length of the ship while underway at a speed of twelve knots, the little tugboat, carrying the artist and his assistants, struggling manfully, but in vain, to maintain its position at the higher speeds attained during the trial.

ARE IRONCLADS DOOMED?

A WRITER in "Blackwood's" for April, who considers the question, "Are Ironclads Doomed?" finds especial comfort in the views of our own Commander HOFF to the contrary. He begins and opens his discussion of the subject with extracts from Commander HOFF's paper read before the Naval Institute on March 11, 1886, and reasons that to argue that torpedo-boats can take the place of ironclads simply because the torpedo-boat is capable of destroying the ironclad, is equivalent to arguing that a CÆSAR or a NELSON could be replaced by the dagger or the bullet which sufficed to put an end to their existence. He quotes with approval, therefore, Commander HOFF's saying that the torpedo-boat "cannot fight forts, nor can it keep the sea for a long time, and if it costs less, its lifetime is out of all proportion less than that of the ship." It is certain, we are told, that the French officers and men are by no means as enthusiastic advocates of torpedo-boats and torpedo tactics as they were a year since. The experiments against Admiral LAFONT'S ironclad squadron on its passage through the Balearic Isles was not reassuring to their confidence or their "torpilleurs." They played a very subordinate part in China, and neither at the mouth of the Min nor at Alexandria would they have been of much use. On both occasions after the big guns had played their parts numerous landing parties were wanted.

Transports with reserves of men should accompany torpedo boats, and the question immediately arises whether these transports should not be able to defend themselves. If so, then once more appears upon the scene the big ironclad, which in the contest with the torpedo boat has the aid now of quick firing and machine guns, nets, and other devices. Even the Russians, who were the first to advocate and attempt to carry out torpedo warfare on a large scale, and the Italians, are eager for big ships, though both countries are exceptionally well situated to depend upon defensive warfare alone. In Russia and in Italy ironclads have been commenced during the past year, and Russia has quite recently offered rewards to Russian naval officers who may be successful in competing for "the best type of ironclad." Italy has recently taken the lead in conducting experiments in regard to naval construction, and is building the three largest war vessels in existence. Germany is holding her hand for the present; but for her wants as a Baltic Power, she is strong in ironclads.

Still, the contention is not for battle ships of enormous size and cost. It is recommended, on the contrary, that the majority should be of moderate size—ships like the Nile and Trafalgar being the 3-deckers of the fleet, the others representing the 74th. A tabulated statement accompanying the article shows that on May 17 last the relative equipment of the principal naval powers in the matter of warships was as follows:

	Complete.	Building.	Complete.	Building.	Complete.	Building.	Complete.	Building.
England...	51	12	62	13	3	15	81	59
France....	41	13	64	10	2	10	68	60
Russia.....	23	4	26	3	1	2	123	13
Germany...	13		23	6	3	1	58	32
Italy.....	15	7	8	4	1	10	55	28
Austria....	10	2	10		5	2	28	10
Greece.....	1		3		1		27

The building of the Brennas and Charles Martel included in the French list has been suspended because of faulty design. The French have in addition 8 ironclad gunboats of 1,000 to 1,600 tons building; Austria has two small armored gunboats not included, Russia two ironclad gunboats, and Germany 14, mostly of 1 gun each, and of 800 to 1,000 tons.

COLONEL MAITLAND, Superintendent of the Royal Arms Factory, has contributed an important paper to the Institution of Civil Engineers on the subject of the treatment of gun steel. With reference to it the Engineer says:

> The beneficial and evil effects that may be produced by oil hardening and annealing are discussed at some length, and it is evident that Colonel Maitland is inclined to discontinue oil hardening with large guns. He is in favor of rather more carbon than Sir W. Armstrong, and has hopes of good effects from manganese, tungsten, or chromium. It is a matter which might be most usefully discussed whether the softer steels would not make not only the most trustworthy guns, but in the end the most economical guns. They would cost a great deal less than the oil-hardened guns, and it has not yet been proved that very tough mild steel would not withstand erosive action as well as the harder steel; but whether this be the case or not, we could probably afford to make six soft steel guns for every four hardened high steel guns, and should have a more trustworthy article. At least we might expect so; and we say this because such anomalies exist as to the modes of fracture of steel that it is impossible to be certain.

Clearly, concludes our contemporary, "there is something in the nature of the forces that act in the rupture of steel or iron when built up into a gun structure, of which very little is yet understood." This agrees entirely with the conclusion maintained here. With reference to Colonel Maitland's paper, the Engineer says: "It gives results obtained by Colonel Maitland by a series of experiments suggested by his knowledge and experience, and carried out in a systematic way, and presented to us with a weight that would hardly belong to such experiments conducted elsewhere. The general quality of gun steel used in England, Germany and France, Colonel Maitland describes as a 'ductile material' breaking at about thirty tons per square inch in the soft annealed state, and at about forty-five tons when hardened in oil. Gun steel contains from 0.25 to 0.5 per cent. of carbon and from 0.05 to 0.8 per cent. of manganese. The French steel is higher in carbon and tenacity than that used in England and Germany." As the result of his experiments, Colonel Maitland concludes that "any portion of a gun which may be strained beyond its elastic limit will simply take the higher elastic limit of the supporting metal next to it, and the whole structure would be in this respect in harmony. It follows from this," says our contemporary, "that the great point to consider is the breaking strain, allowing a sufficient margin of safety between it and the working pressure. The effect of oil-hardening increases with the proportion of carbon present, and manganese increases the limit of elasticity in the unhardened state." On the effects of working, Colonel Maitland found that "thorough forging" greatly increases the power of steel to resist erosion. With this in view the breech halves of bores have been lined with thin metal specially worked. Interesting results are given of tests of oil-hardened and unhardened test pieces in different stages of working, and also a plan of testing the metal of tubes by forcing it open with taper mandrils driven in by a steam hammer, also of the testing of the breech piece, and various tubes and parts of built-up guns having their position and functions specially kept in view.

THE attorneys in the MARSHALL 40 per cent. longevity pay case, in which all colonels and lieut.-colonels on the retired list of the Army are concerned, have given up all hope of obtaining a decision by the U. S. Supreme Court during this term of the Court. Under Rule XX. of the Court they can submit the case in brief so as to get a decision early in October next, and this they now propose to do. The WATSON cadet service longevity pay case will be submitted at the same time and in the same manner. These two cases affect a large number of Army officers who are awaiting the final action of the Court with considerable interest.

IT may interest our artillery officers to see how they reason about artillery organizations in England. The Broad Arrow, which considers the subject at length, tells that the present system, which has grown up out of a battery organization, possesses but one merit as compared with that of other nations and this is its capacity to resist changes. From a small regiment the English artillery has been growing, at one time hardly perceptibly, at another by leaps and bounds, till from a small regiment, it has become a corps of from 1,500 to 2,000 officers and 35,000 men. This increase has not been accompanied, as in the case of the other arms, by adding a fresh foundation for each newly raised body, but the whole has been piled on the top of the original basis, till the result threatens to rival the Tower of Babel. It is also compared to the ark which contains all manner of beasts; the gunner is a cavalryman, an infantryman, an engineer, and a hundred other things varying in a greater or lesser degree. The officers are "all borne on one roll, and are liable to be called on to serve in any battery, except in the Horse Artillery, for which special qualifications are required. The average regimental officer is, thus, everything by turns and nothing long. Whenever he is promoted he begins life afresh, and it is a matter of absolute chance what particular line he then takes up."

The English artillery arm is, in fact, divided by a great natural line of cleavage into field and garrison artillery, the duties and special nature of which are altogether different. Each offers to the intelligent officer or man a career, but a career differing widely in its aims and in the nature of the training it demands. The field artillery is an essential part of a field army, and it is as a tactician and a practical soldier in the field that the field artilleryman must seek to perfect himself. The garrison artillery, in which are included the siege and fortress artillery, is only exceptionally connected with a field army, and then for the performance of special duties. It is par excellence the special and scientific service. It has the charge of guns, ammunition, carriages, and gear, of all natures—of fortresses, forts, and works, with their complicated mechanical appliances; it carries out experiments with guns and armor, and is, more or less, intimately connected with all the great artillery questions of the day. The next complaint is that the entire English artillery, a corps of 1,500 officers and 35,000 men, is administered in the same way as a regiment of infantry of 50 officers and 1,700 or 1,800 men, or a regiment of cavalry of 25 officers and 500 men. The almost unanimous voice of the artillery is, our contemporary tells us, for a change, and that change in the direction of a regimental organization. Of the only argument which has been brought against it, viz., that batteries are too seldom sufficiently concentrated to make a regimental organization workable, it says: "It is too flimsy to bear a moment's examination. The three regiments of the late Indian artillery and the regimental organization of the artillery in the armies of all the great Powers are practical proofs that the system is workable. Moreover, if 220 batteries can be worked as one regiment it follows à fortiori that eight or ten can be so organized."

IT is estimated that about twenty of the thirty-three naval cadets, who are now closing up two years' sea service preparatory to final graduation in June next, will be given appointments in the line of the Navy. There are twelve vacancies at present existing. The retirement of Lieutenant (junior grade) AMSDEN is accepted as a foregone conclusion and the LYETH and NOEL cases, now pending, will most likely be settled in time and in such a way as to cause two more vacancies, so that fifteen vacancies may be considered assured. There are also several officers condemned by boards of medical officers who will, in all probability, be relegated to the retired list within the next two months, not to say anything of other casualties such as deaths, resignations, etc., that may occur before the time arrives for the assignment of the graduates. There can be no appointments from the class to the Marine Corps, as the personnel of that branch of the Service is still four in excess of the number allowed by law. In the Engineer Corps there are ten vacancies in the grade of Assistant Engineer, five of which were left over from last year. It is uncertain how those will be filled, but it is hardly possible that there will be any chance for the graduates of this year. The vacancies undoubtedly belong to the restored Cadet Engineers, but just how they shall be assigned and arranged in the Register is a question that continues to puzzle the Secretary of the Navy. He has been giving the matter some attention lately and the officers concerned are quite hopeful that he will soon decide to give them their vacancies which would have belonged to them had they not been dropped by Secretary Chandler.

The Naval Torpedo Board, consisting of Captain A. P. Cooke, president; Commander Casper F. Goodrich, Lieutenant-Commander R. B. Bradford, and Lieutenants A. R. Couden and S. P. Comly, met in New York on Thursday, April 21. About thirty applications for the trial of inventions have been received from inventors, but the number of finished torpedoes ready for actual experiments that will be submitted for the judgment of the Board is very few. Among these are the Howell, Sims-Edison, and Patrick torpedoes. Inventors known to the Ordnance Bureau have been directed in a circular letter signed by Captain Sicard to inform the Board in writing what devices they may wish to present with a brief description thereof; all communications to be addressed to the president of the Board, Captain A. P. Cooke, U. S. N., who will communicate with the inventor regarding the examination or trial.

At the time General Willcox received the appointment of Brigadier-General we learned that it was the intention of President Cleveland to appoint Colonel Wesley Merritt to the vacancy which would result from his early retirement. There is no quarrelling with the decrees of Providence or the edicts of the sovereign; so had we any disposition to criticize so excellent an appointment it would be useless. There is but one objection to it and that is that it prevents the selection of men whose claim of long, able and patriotic service General Merritt would himself be the first to acknowledge. But such acknowledgements never go to the extent of declining, and if General Merritt had any such promptings he might, with advantage, recall the story Boswell tells of Dr. Johnson. Describing an interview he had had with the King, Johnson told how he had complimented him by expressing the pleasure he felt in having so distinguished a man among his subjects. Thereupon Boswell suggested that this statement was of course met by some deprecatory remarks from Johnson. "Sir," answered the great author, "would you have me contradict my sovereign?" In the matter of promotion those who are favored are little inclined to contradict the sovereign, and there is small profit to any one else in doing so. As General Merritt does not retire until 1900, he has an exceptionally long career as a general officer, longer than that of any colonel who could have been selected, except Elmer Otis. Still, Miles has the advantage of him, and will if both live be continued on the active list three years after Merritt retires. To reach Colonel Merritt six officers above him in relative rank were passed over, but as to his eminent fitness there can be no question. In his admirable history of the Second Army Corps during the late War of the Rebellion General Walker, speaking of the cavalry, says: "In no arm of the service had the movement of events tended more promptly and surely to bring the best men to the front; and though Bayard, Davis, and Farnsworth had fallen in battle, and the fearless Buford had succumbed to disease, the cavalry, under Sheridan, with Merritt, Custer, and Crook, Mackenzie, Devin, and Davies, had commanders well worthy to oppose the brilliant captains who had led the Southern horse in so many a daring raid, in so many a daring fight."

Of this group Sheridan has been made Lieutenant-General, Custer and Devin are dead, Mackenzie and Crook have been promoted Brigadiers in the Regular Army, and Mackenzie retired under the saddest of circumstances. Davies is a lawyer practicing at the New York bar, and upon Merritt's shoulders once more descends one of the two stars which adorned them in the days of his youth. Those of us who lived through those days will never be so young as we were again, but Merritt, though a seasoned soldier a quarter of a century ago, is the youngest man, with the one exception named, of all who hold the rank of general officer in the Regular Army. May he live to enjoy it until his clock strikes 64.

It is stated at the War Department that Brigadier General Merritt will not be removed from command of the U. S. Military Academy until after the close of the June examinations. It is expected that Colonel Parke will then succeed General Merritt. It is well known that Secretary Endicott is in favor of giving the Engineer Corps a chance this time, and that he considers Colonel Parke just the officer for the place. Colonel Parke has recently arranged his plans so as to return a few weeks earlier than he originally intended.

Colonel A. R. Buffington, U. S. Army, says the Springfield Republican of April 15, has dazzled the imagination of our park-loving citizens by suggesting that the Government might be willing to make over to the city the entire armory grounds provided it would build new armory buildings on territory near the water shops, thus bringing the shops all together. "We should," says the Republican, "have at the water-shops semi-public grounds surpassing even those on Armory Hill in beauty and delight. The city in gaining one splendid pleasure ground, would possess two, and with the numerous other beauty spots scattered about over its face, Springfield would be a place of unsurpassed attractions. The thousands expended in pursuit of the beautiful and the ideal would come back by tens of thousands in material business prosperity."

The proceedings of the Court-martial in the case of Major Frederick W. Benteen, 9th Cavalry, who was tried at Fort DuChesne, Department of the Platte, several months ago on charges of drunkenness while on duty, were reviewed by the President this week. The sentence of the Court was "to be dismissed the Service." This the President mitigated "to suspension from rank and duty for the term of one year on half pay." In his review of the case he administers a severe rebuke to the accused for his conduct. The general order announcing the proceedings, findings, sentence and mitigation and reprimand of the President in the case will be issued in a few days.

Secretary Whitney has appointed the following board to examine plans for armored ships: Captain F. M. Ramsey, Commander C. P. Goodrich, Lieutenant Harry Knox, Assistant Naval Constructor F. T. Bowles, Chief Engineer And. J. Kierstead, and civilians Edward Burgess and I. Shields Wilson. Mr. Burgess was the designer of the Mayflower and Puritan, and is an expert in lines of speed. Mr. Wilson was engineer and partner with Cramp until about five years ago, and designed the first compound engines built in this country. He is now with Halfie and Levy, and is interested in the steamship line between Wilmington and Philadelphia. He is highly recommended to Secretary Whitney.

The infantry again gets a slight lift by the retirement, April 14, from disability, of Captains John Hamilton, 1st, and W. H. Vinal, 16th Infantry, both of them officers of long and faithful service; the former dating from 1850 and the latter from 1862. In the 1st Infantry 1st Lieut. J. J. O'Connell, now on recruiting duty at Cincinnati, is promoted Captain and 2d Lieut. B. S. Wever 1st Lieutenant, the proceedings of General Court-martial in his case having now been disposed of. In the 16th Infantry, 1st Lieut. S. R. Whitall is promoted to Captain and 2d Lieut. Elias Chandler to 1st Lieutenant.

Major General D. E. Sickles, U. S. A., has courteously permitted the headquarters Memorial Committee, G. A. R., to be established this year, at Room 31, Cooper Union, New York City. William De Lacy is Grand Marshal and his office hours in April will be from 3 to 5 P. M., and in May from 8 to 10 P. M.

Recent orders to Department commanders stopping all orders involving the expenditure of money for mileage, have been modified by the Secretary of War, so as to enable paymasters to be ordered on their usual tours for monthly payments of troops.

Secretary Endicott, in order to dispose of, with some degree of promptness, the large amount of work in connection with rivers and harbors and other engineering matters, which accumulates in his office from day to day, has decided to add an engineer officer to his staff of assistants. Major M. B. Adams, now on duty with the chief of engineers, has been chosen for the work, and will take up his headquarters with the Secretary as soon as a room, which is now in the hands of the painter, has been fitted up for him.

We would suggest to Lieutenant Zalinski that he train his Dynamite Gun on the bureau system, which Secretary Whitney has tried without success to destroy. If he succeeds in breaking it up he is certain of a large order from the Navy Department.

THE DYNAMITE GUN.

The Secretary of the Navy has addressed the following letters to Capt. Howell, of the Dynamite Gun Board:

March 14, '87.

Sir: The recent appropriation act covers a sum for experimental purposes in such terms that I can now propose a thing which I have long desired.

The dynamite gun seems to be a most formidable weapon, I should like to see it destroy something a mile distant. Will you kindly arrange for a proper experiment that will illustrate satisfactorily the efficiency or inefficiency of this gun. If it is as destructive as it ought to be, judging from the tables where the destructive qualities of torpedoes is given it can show it practically.

It may fail in efficiency for some cause not apparent to the eye of reason and in my experience an actual test is about the best judge. Very respectfully,

W. C. Whitney.

April 20, '87.

Sir: Referring to my letter addressed to you on March 14 I intended that the dynamite gun should have an opportunity of testing its efficiency by blowing up some object at a distance. It is claimed that the gun has a certain destructive power. I desire that this power may be tested, not the ultimate extreme claim for the gun, unless the company wish it. The company should say what the present gun will certainly do. Will it destroy anything? If so, under what conditions; then let it be tried on those conditions and its ability tested to accomplish the object claimed.

Very respectfully,

W. C. Whitney, Sec. Navy.

THE ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.

The National Academy of Sciences held its annual meeting this week at Washington. The President, Prof. O. C. Marsh, occupied the chair, with Prof. Asaph Hall acting as Secretary. The members present were Cleveland Abbe, Spencer F. Baird, A. Graham Bell, Dr. John S. Billings, George J. Brush, Edward H. Cope, Capt. Clarence E. Dutton, Josiah Willard Gibbs, Theodore N. Gill, Benjamin A. Gould, Arnold Hague, Geo. W. Hill, T. Sterry Hunt, Samuel P. Langley, Gen. M. C. Meigs, Henry Mitchell, Edward S. Morse, Simon Newcomb, Frederick W. Putnam, Ira Remsen, Chas. A. Scott, Francis A. Walker and Charles A. Young.

The first paper read was one by Prof. T. Sterry Hunt, of Montreal, whose subject was "Chemical Integration." Other papers were read as follows: "Results of the Investigation of the Charleston Earthquake," by C. E. Dutton and Everett Hayden, read by C. E. Dutton; "On the Fore Limb and Shoulder Girdle of the Eryops and on the Vertebrates of the Triassic," by E. H. Cope; "On the Rainless Character of the Sahara," by Elias Loomis, read by Prof. Young; "A New Map of the Spectrum," by S. P. Langley.

GENERAL SHERMAN SPEAKS.

To the Editor of the Herald:

I have seen the paragraph which has been going the rounds to the effect that General Logan's papers contain letters from General Sherman of a compromising nature, which he and his brother, the Senator, had endeavored to suppress; and in your issue to day I find that one of your Washington correspondents has "interviewed" the Senator, who treats the whole matter with proper contempt.

Now I reaffirm every word my brother is reported to have said. General Logan's friends are at perfect liberty to publish in full any letter I ever wrote to him, private, confidential, or official; and further, if Mrs. Logan, or John A. Logan, Jr., will send to me an accredited agent I will permit him to see and copy all the letters I possess from General Logan in his own handwriting, to be published to gratify the curious.

All men in public station write private letters, as well as public, and in this instance I withdraw all limitations as to publication, only suggesting that the letter and answer be published together as more satisfactory to the honest reader. A paragraph here and a paragraph there "a la Boynton," is as much a forgery as the raising of a check.

Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, April 16, 1887.

Lieutenant E. F. Willcox, 6th Cavalry, late A. D. C., after closing up his business at Fort Leavenworth, will join his troop at Fort Union, N. M.

Ephraim Uhler, formerly U. S. Army, or anyone knowing his present whereabouts, will find it to their advantage to communicate with W. U. Hensel, Lancaster, Pa. See advertising column, editorial page.

General M. C. Meigs, U. S. A., has been elected one of the Board of Council, and Major John S. Billings, Surgeon, U. S. A., treasurer of the National Academy of Sciences at the session held in Washington this week.

THE "ATLANTA'S" ARMAMENT.

To the Editor of The Tribune:

SIR: I have read the articles in your columns with regard to the Atlanta and editorial to the Evening Post, asking for "a bill of particulars." As I can probably furnish more information on the subject than anyone else, the following items are volunteered, that you may see how accurate your reporter was in the matter:

(1.) "The cause of delay in getting the ship ready for sea, due to the failure of the ordnance officers." The vessel only left the Yard yesterday, being only then ready for her steam trial, and her ordnance work has had nothing whatever to do with her detention. (2.) It will be news to the Service "that the Bureau of Ordnance is the object of considerable criticism because of the blundering and incompetence it is showing in the matter of placing the guns on board the Atlanta." No blunders have been committed, and when they are no attempt will be made to shirk responsibility. (3.) "It was hoped that upon this (her present trial trip) the guns would be tested, but they are not in shape to fire even wadding." The guns are in shape for firing, training, elevating or depressing at any time. (4.) "The more the guns are tinkered at to make them fit the ship, the worse they get." If the work of fitting, placing, fastening and connecting the numerous carriages, mounts, dynamos and engines comes under the head of "tinkering" the Ordnance Department will have to plead guilty, as it belongs to it to do the work.

(5.) "The Bureau discovered that after the gun tracks were laid and firmly fastened, the copper rivets were being eaten by galvanic action." There was no galvanic action, as the tracks are of bronze. (6.) "The Bureau took the advice of a practical engineer." Not so. Who is he? The exact statement as to rivets is as follows: The six-inch gun tracks were originally fastened with copper bolts, and remain so to-day, no change having been made or contemplated with regard to them. One of the two eight-inch circles was fastened with copper bolts, when it was found in the trial firing at the proving ground that for the eight-inch guns it would be desirable to use a stronger metal, and an experiment was made with about one dozen steel bolts, which, not proving entirely satisfactory, iron was used. An attempt to give undue prominence to this trifling matter and magnify it into an evidence of blundering is unworthy of comment, especially as these precautions were taken that no accident should occur on board.

(7.) "When the guns were placed on board it was found they would not work on the tracks": "the guns pointed the wrong way." The guns worked all right on the tracks from the first, and cannot by any possibility point the wrong way. (8.) One man can train the six-inch guns with ease, and two men the eight-inch, hence they cannot work very badly. The only incomplete portion is the steam attachment to the eight-inch carriages, but neither the carriages nor engines are at fault in the matter, which is one of adjustment and easily remedied. This has nothing to do with the efficient working of the guns, which are entirely independent of the steam power and complete in themselves without it, it being intended simply to relieve the crew in the long train from one side to the other by an engine, and as two men can work the cranks a small engine is all that is required. The criticism that all this comes from trying to make line officers do mechanical work of which they know nothing is too absurd and indicates from what quarter it comes; all the guns and carriages in the Navy were designed and always have been by line officers, and it is well known that there are among them several very expert designers. The young officer who comes in for a rap in connection with the training engines is well known as an authority in electrical engineering and as a man of unusual inventive genius.

The chiselling the plates to which you refer might be construed into indiscriminate slashing into the vessel's hull, whereas it is simply the carrying out of a part of the original design of the Advisory Board for housing the three-pounders, and it is being done by construction, the ordnance department having nothing to do with it, nor has it any bearing upon the use of the guns referred to.

If the courteous officer who gave the Tribune reporter his points will come out over his own signature his criticism may have some claim, and we shall at least learn how competent he is to discuss the subject. Unfortunately there are a few officers who delight in attempts to throw discredit upon the efforts of others, and who in general are not distinguished for having contributed anything of special value to the Service, and also a few so wedded to bygone days as to lament the very timely demise of the Tennessee and her sisters; neither of these classes will say anything in favor of the Atlanta or her armament.

As the Tribune thinks I may be responsible for some of the "blundering" and perhaps therefore interested in putting the matter in too favorable a light, I would suggest that one of its reporters and one from the Post (and one from the Herald to see that they report correctly) pay me a visit, and I will by the courtesy of the commanding officer take them on board the Atlanta and let them find any gun that is not properly or efficiently mounted and ready for service, and let them make inquiry of the officers in charge. While the vessel herself has come in for more or less criticism, her battery and ordnance outfit has received unqualified praise, and it will be difficult to find an officer who will not say it is the finest and most powerful battery ever mounted on a man-of-war in this country. If the "old officer" who has so many brownstone fronts that he is willing to wager one against a yard of calico that the vessel will not be ready to test her battery for two months will send his address, he can be accommodated, as we are all a little short of such luxuries at present and shall be glad to obtain one so cheaply.

CHARLES O'NEIL,
Commander, U. S. N., Inspector of Ordnance.
ORDNANCE OFFICE, NAVY-YARD, N. Y., Apr. 14, '87.

The "Old Naval Officer," whose long experience and familiarity with all the facts of the case entitle his opinions to deference and respect, smiled sadly yesterday when the letter of Commander O'Neil was shown to him. Being urged to give his opinion as to its statements, he said:

"That letter shows a deliberation of composition and a literary style not often seen in the Naval Service. The writer has given a bill of particulars which is as remarkable for the evasion of some things that have been charged in the Tribune as for the total ignoring of other and more essential allegations. It is not requisite to enter into a technical discussion with Commander O'Neil, but as briefly as possible I will answer each statement in turn.

"(1.) In regard to the detention at the Navy-yard, the Atlanta, it is true, has not had her steam machinery ready; but has her ordnance been ready? Carpenters were at work laying out the tracks for the gun carriages when she was brought into the yard July 19 to go into commission. They have been at work ever since and still her ordnance is not ready, as will be shown further on. She is not ready yet, and if the defect in the steam gearing, which could have been remedied in a month after the first trial, has been remedied, I would like to know whether her detention could be put down to construction or ordnance? They have shouldered the blame on the construction and left the public to think the ordnance was perfect.

"(2.) He says it will be news to the Service that the Bureau of Ordnance is the object of considerable criticism, and asserts that no blunders have been committed. Every issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL since March 12 has teemed with criticisms from Naval officers, both line and staff, of the Ordnance Bureau, its arbitrary methods and its especial unfitness as displayed by its lack of the knowledge of metallurgy.* Its work on the Atlanta is a fitting sample of its ability and proves everything that has been charged against it. No blunders, eh? Well, we'll see further on.

"(3.) A casual observer on board the Atlanta to-day could not have failed to observe the pivot guns blocked up ready for removal from the positions which have cost time and trouble and money to put them in, in order to remedy the defects of the carriage tracks. The 8-inch pivot guns cannot be trained except by hand when the ship heels over because of the binding of the carriage on the tracks. And yet four engines, bought by the 'inventive young Lieutenant' for the purpose are on board and of no earthly use because of the miscalculations of the Ordnance Bureau. Before they can even be worked by hand it is necessary to throw out the steam gear.

"(4.) This relates to the fact that the battery shows no improvement despite the 'tinkering.' Now, just read over the answer and see if it is an answer. What on earth have the dynamos to do with the battery? Besides, which dynamo does he mean? There are two on board, one under charge of the Bureau of Navigation, the other for a search light in charge of the Ordnance Bureau. What has it to do with fitting the guns? The fact that the immense eight-inch guns are blocked up for removal after the Bureau has been working since July shows that the department is right where it begun.

"(5.) In regard to the copper rivets, look at the answer. Does Commander O'Neil mean to say that the copper rivets do not go through the bronze tracks, through the wooden deck and through the steel decks, underneath which they are clinched? What an evasion!

"(6.) My name does not matter. I don't want to be transported to the China Station; but I do want to see the Service benefited by a few healthy criticisms. Commander O'Neil gives what he calls the exact statement as to the rivets. The fact that the six inch guns are still fastened with copper rivets is in itself a gross blunder and a defect, and the sooner they jerk them out the better. The six-inch guns are all under the superstructure. This covered deck is bolystoned every day, and it is only a question of time when the rivets will be eaten away by galvanic action due to the contact of copper and steel wet with salt water. This is a crowning proof of the ignorance of metallurgy displayed. Commander O'Neil leaves the reader to infer that the copper rivets were found to be too weak on the trial firing at the proving ground at Annapolis. The Atlanta has never been within 150 miles of the proving ground. If the copper bolts were found too weak at the proving ground, why were they brought on here and fastened to the decks of the Atlanta? That statement is worse than an evasion. As for the steel bolts, the 'experiments' were made in Washington. Weeks of time were consumed in making them; they were sent on here, and, as I said, the heads flew off when struck with the hammer. The copper rivets may have been withdrawn because of weakness, but they would have had to be withdrawn because of the galvanic action due to the salt water. Commander O'Neil calls this a 'trifling' affair. Is it a 'trifling' matter that 1st Lieut. Berry was kept out of his room nearly nine months and holes were left all over the decks for salt water to percolate through to the steel decks, corroding them and inconveniencing everybody on the ship?

"(7.) 'The guns worked all right in the tracks, etc.' I will set against this the following clipping from the Herald:

"'The alterations to the eight-inch gun carriages are not important and will not take much time. There is a broad circular flange to the pivot socket, into which a flange of the carriage fits concentrically so as to take up a part of the recoil. If these two were in the same plane as that of the tracks on which the trucks move there would probably be no trouble; but, as it is, any irregularity in the track causes one flange to bind against the other. The inner flange will be filed down so that the fit will be a little less snug and the whole difficulty will be avoided. The Atlanta will then be ready for her ammunition for going to sea.'

"(8.) 'One man can train the six-inch guns with ease, etc.' Commander O'Neil surely cannot deny that ten men could not train the six inch guns that fire broadside, fore and aft. It would take fifteen men with difficulty to 'shift pivot' with these guns. His next point about two men working the eight-inch guns is best answered by asking for what purpose the four engines were bought? It was to permit the working of the guns by gunners under cover. If men had to go into that circular uncovered cockpit in battle to work the guns it would be certain death to the poor creatures. Commander O'Neil thinks the incomplete portion of the steam attachment 'one of adjustment and easily remedied.' Nine months of pottering away, and the eight-inch guns blocked up for removal, and the end not yet. Commander O'Neil is mistaken when he thinks this criticism is due to jealousy between line and staff. It is intended to fasten the blame where it belongs, to the Ordnance Bureau, of which Commodore Sicard is head, which by arbitrary methods and self-assumption of all earthly knowledge on the subject have brought about these costly blunders. For costly they have been and the money expended is so large that the amount will never be known. Last week Commodore Sicard himself came on from Washington to satisfy himself of the blunders his bureau are responsible for, and he went back in an uncomfortable frame of mind. As for the youthful Lieutenant, he will no doubt be an honor to the service when he grows older, but his ability as an electrical expert and inventor is out of place selecting steam gearing for a war ship. One more point concerning the chiselling of the gun towers. It is a curious thing that a contractor should have left a big section of steel only to be chiselled out afterward. While on this topic I would like to ask Commander O'Neil if the plans of the Advisory Board called for the cutting away of the port shutters in order to get the gun muzzles through, or was it due to improperly-laid carriage tracks? I would also like to have him tell it the shields for the great eight-inch guns are ready—in fact, if they have ever been begun? Yet the shields are a most important part of the Atlanta's armament. The rest of Commander O'Neil's letter needs no answer. But you can say that all of this trouble grew out of men in the Ordnance Bureau who never had an original idea, copying plans from English armaments, and without consulting with their American subordinates, arbitrarily trying to fit out our new Navy with them. Line and staff have both been ignored at Washington."

*"Old Naval Officer" must read his ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL with magnifying glasses. We have published criticisms of Ordnance officers from both line and staff, but it is overstating the case to say that our columns have "teemed" with them.

OAKLAND Tribune—"If we may believe the despatches the bicycle is the war horse of the future. It may get on the warpath, but it cannot snuff the battle from afar."

THE ATLANTA'S TRIAL TRIP.

Commodore Bancroft Gherardi, Commandant Navy-yard, New York:

SIR: In obedience to your order of the 12th inst., to "proceed with the trial of the Atlanta on the 13th, as set forth in the instructions you have received from the Navy Department," the ship left the yard at 6 A. M. on the 13th. She had on board her battery, two and a half months' provisions and stores, and 265 tons of coal. Her draught was: Forward, 14 feet 9 inches; amidships, 17 feet; aft, 19 feet, 3 inches. Orders were given to take indicator cards and other data at half-hour intervals during the six hours' run, and at 10 A. M. the run began—to do the best possible with the engines for the six consecutive hours. The following is a summary of the six hours' run: Average speed for the six hours, 15.5 knots; average revolutions per minute, 67.27. Average steam pressure, 87.1 pounds. Average slip of screw, 4.44 per cent. Average collective horse power, 3,300. The horse power is now being accurately measured from the indicator cards, and will be forwarded to you, with the cards, as soon as the necessary computations are completed. An appended table gives the data recorded by the half hour. The ship anchored off Whitestone at 6 P. M. last night, and getting under way at 7 o'clock this morning, arrived at the yard at 9.30 A. M.

Very respectfully,
F. BUNCE,
Captain Commanding.

DECISIONS BY THE SECOND COMPTROLLER.

THE Acting Second Comptroller has delivered the following opinions for the guidance of Army and Navy purchasing officers:

A post-dated certificate by a purchasing officer that a public exigency requires the immediate delivery of certain articles will not be deemed sufficient.

The word "supplies" as used in the statute evidently has reference to those things which the well-known needs of the public service will, from time to time, require in its various branches for its successful and efficient administration. In my judgment, it was never the intention of the law to require that purchases of small articles or a miscellaneous lot of small stores, needed from time to time, could only be made after advertising when the value of the articles purchased would be less than the cost of advertising. If the law must be construed ex visceribus suis, all the more need for a reasonable construction and application, and, as has been so well said by the late distinguished Comptroller, "a thing which is not manifestly within the intent and spirit of the enactment should be held to be excluded, although a technical and literal construction of the language employed might not exclude it."

Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

At the annual meeting of the California Commandery to be held in San Francisco, May 4, the following will be balloted for: Col. Charles E. Blunt, U. S. Army, retired; Major T. S. Hall, U. S. V.; Surg. N. S. Hamlin, U. S. V.; Lieut. C. A. Johnson, 14th U. S. Inf.; Lieut. J. G. De Turk, U. S. V. The committee to nominate officers for the ensuing year are: Col. J. M. McNulty, U. S. V.; Col. C. J. Sprague, U. S. A., and Major C. N. Ellingwood, U. S. V.

Col. Nicholson, Recorder-in-Chief, announces that the memorial volume of the Commandery-in-Chief to the memory of Maj.-Gen. W. S. Hancock is ready for distribution, and will be sent to any address on receipt of 75 cents.

THE STATE TROOPS.

FORMAL OPENING OF THE NEW ARMORY OF THE TWELFTH N. Y.

WHEN the Twelfth New York in marching to its new quarters, of which we gave an illustration in our last week's issue, was able to do so with a strength of 12 companies, of 20 files front, this fact created general astonishment among military men, while the handsome, steady company fronts and the discipline and military bearing of the men elicited admiration in all directions. The transformation from an organization on the verge of dissolution to a first class regiment in point of numbers as well as regards instruction and reliability, in the short period of three years certainly indicates good management and faithful work. It also shows that if the city provides proper quarters in respectable localities men will flock to the colors as a matter of course. The boom in the Twelfth is doubtless genuine, because at a working drill on Friday, April 15th, the regiment turned out sufficiently strong to form three four company battalions of 32 men in ranks without file closers. The parade on the 11th of April, referred to above, was, however, not the formal opening of the new armory. It was a simple removal without ceremony. The armory was formally opened on Thursday, April 21st, and, on account of the brilliancy of the affair, the distinguished and numerous audience, the general success and able management of the whole, and the novel features introduced is worthy of more than ordinary notice.

Gen. Wm. T. Sherman, U. S. Army, took the review. Sharp on time the companies, numbering 12, with an equalization of 16 files, formed around the hall, and at the adjutant's call promptly ployed into line of masses consisting of 3 four company battalions. The smoothness with which the manœuvre was executed demonstrated thorough preparation, while the steadiness of the men, the precise dress and correct distances gave the command an exceedingly compact, military appearance. To our knowledge, a formation like this has not been used in the New York National Guard for years, if ever, and it is safe to say, that the majority of the military spectators present had never seen a battalion drawn up in line of masses. For this reason and on account of the striking appearance of the command, everybody was more than usually interested and pleased, and Col. Jones will doubtless find many imitators. The time for review had now arrived, and Gen. Sherman in evening dress took position in front. His appearance was the signal of thundering applause in every part of the building. Though probably his hair and beard have turned a few shades whiter, the renowned warrior was as erect, his step as elastic, and his eye as bright as ever. He passed through every rank of the three battalions, scrutinizing everything very closely, and with much apparent interest. A staff, of which Col. John Hamilton, 5th U. S. Artillery, seemed to be the chief, accompanied him.

In order to gain all the space possible the command was then marched back as far as possible from the reviewing party, and then instead of executing the usual wheel to the right the three battalions executed change direction by the left flank. This manœuvre was skilfully performed on this account, and its novelty on such occasions created much interest. The march past was accomplished by breaking the companies successively into column of fours, and re-forming them into line at the point for the second change of direction. In this manner the hall, which is about 200 x 175 feet, afforded ample space for a very satisfactory passage.

A new formation into line was then executed, and General Daniel Butterfield, a former colonel of the Twelfth, made an address to the command and presented the long service medals to a number of officers and men who had won them by long and faithful service, some of them dating back to ante-bellum times. A very well executed dress parade then brought to a close one of the best-executed, most appropriate and most interesting and successful military entertainments we ever witnessed. The Twelfth have entered upon an era of prosperity such as they hardly dreamt of themselves only a few years ago.

A larger and more distinguished military audience has seldom graced an affair of this kind. Four ex-colonels of the regiment, Daniel Butterfield, S. V. R. Cruger, John Ward and Wm. G. Ward were present in the hall. There was Major-Gen. W. D. Whipple, of General Schofield's staff, with a large delegation of artillery and ordnance officers from Governor's Island, Major-General D. E. Sickles, in full uniform, Brigadier-General James McLeer, of the 2d Brigade, similarly attired, Lieut.-Col. Francis A. Schilling, of the Eighth, Captain W. V. King, of the Twenty-second, Capt. Daniel Appletou and Adjt. Geo. Rand, of the Seventh, Capt. F. P. Earle, of the 2d Battery, and a host of others too numerous to mention. Everybody expressed satisfaction at the commodious armory and the performance of the regiment.

There is a little drawback, however, which can hardly be passed over in silence. An immense crowd, far exceeding the capacity of the hall, was clamoring for admittance, testing to the utmost the vigilance and forbearance of the sentries at both entrances. The street was blocked, and at times it looked as if there was to be trouble and that the doors would be broken in. Among those seeking entrance, however, were a large number who had been invited and provided with tickets, many of them military officers of high rank. Considerable of these failed to get in and had to go back, which was highly mortifying. While probably the guard did their best, we believe if an officer had been stationed with the men at each door to discriminate whom to admit and whom to exclude, the matter could have been better regulated, and it would be well to adopt such a course in the future.

MONTANA.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL TURNER has been notified by the Ordnance Bureau of the War Department that, May 31, there will be issued to the Territorial militia all the arms, camp equipage and quartermaster's stores that may be needed for their equipment. Montana, consequently, feels happy.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

THE President appointed Gen. Albert Ordway Brigadier General of the District of Columbia April 19. He has an excellent war record, an expert in military tactics, and an enthusiast on National Guard matters.

TRIALS IN THE 13TH BROOKLYN.

G. O. No. 15, A. G. O., S. N. Y., Albany, April 16, 1887, dissolves the Court-martial which tried Major Ackerman, of the 13th Regiment, and released him from arrest. After setting forth the proceedings and the results of the trial, Adjt. Gen. Porter says:

It is shown by the record that an election was held in September, 1886, to fill the office of Colonel of the 13th Regiment. From the testimony of Major Ackerman, it appears that this contest gave rise to some warmth of feeling, and that considerable discontent and dissatisfaction continued amongst the members of the regiment after the election was completed. In the contest between the candidates for this position, Major Ackerman, according to his own statement, took "an earnest and leading part" in opposition to the successful officer.

Every officer has a right to interest himself in any such election, and to vote for that candidate whom he deems best qualified to discharge the duties of the position to be filled. But when the election is ended and the result of the ballot is made known in form of law, it becomes his duty to lay aside any feeling of opposition he may previously have entertained against a candidate, and yield to his superior officer most loyal assistance in carrying into execution his plans for the welfare of the regiment, and for the maintenance of order and discipline. It becomes his duty also to promptly repress and discourage any feeling of discontent or dissatisfaction which may have arisen from the warmth of the contest or from any other cause. In the present case, the action of Major Ackerman, as charged in the third specification, tended directly to keep alive any existing feeling of dissatisfaction to his superior officer, and was to the prejudice of good order and military discipline.

It is so important that any feeling of opposition against a candidate for office in the guard should promptly cease with the announcement of his choice by election, and the existence of such feeling is so sure to evidence itself by overt acts and lead to laxity of discipline, and, ultimately, to destroy the usefulness of the organization in which the same is permitted, that the Commander-in-Chief in the present case has felt himself called upon to formally disapprove of the action of the court in this case, in order that it may not be taken as a precedent in the future.

The Commander-in-Chief is sensible of the respect which is due to the judgment of a Court-martial, and of the consideration to which Major Ackerman is entitled in view of his military record and previous service to the State. He is, however, impressed with the consideration that the responsibility of maintaining the discipline and order of the National Guard rests, not upon the officers composing any court, but upon those to whom the command of the guard is by law committed. To the proper discharge of this duty, every consideration of delicacy towards individual officers and public tribunals must be subordinated.

G. O. No. 16, April 18, modifies the sentence in the case of 2d Lieut. Wm. K. Smith, who was tried on charges unbecoming an officer and gentleman, disobedience of orders and unmilitary and unofficer-like conduct. The order says:

"The Commander-in-chief has approved the proceedings, findings and sentence of the court, except the finding of guilty on the second and fourth specifications of the first charge, which have been disapproved for the reason that neither the specifications nor the evidence given thereunder, sustain in law the charge; and with the further exception of the finding of guilty upon supplemental charge one and the specification thereunder, and upon specification two of supplemental charge two, which findings are disapproved for the reason that the evidence adduced does not sustain such charge and findings as a matter of law.

"The court found Lieut. Smith guilty on all the charges and specifications, and its sentence as approved and modified, by remitting a part of the punishment, is that he be cashiered.

"II. By the evidence in this case it appears that the commanding officer of the 13th Regiment having been informed that Lieut. Smith was inciting insubordinate conduct, sent for him and asked whether the report was correct. According to the finding of the court, Lieut. Smith admitted he was inciting opposition to the captain of his company and against the remonstrance and strict orders of the colonel commanding, he avowed his intention to continue his conduct till his company commander was forced from his position. Instead of heeding this timely admonition, it is found by the court that Lieut. Smith at a subsequent date, and when under arrest awaiting trial on the serious charges above set forth, took part with other members of his company in a secret caucus plainly called for the purpose of determining what action, looking towards the captain's removal from command, could be taken with safety to those concerned. He approved of the action of that caucus, and was present and acquiesced in the public presentation to his company commander of the request for his resignation.

"The argument that Lieut. Smith's conduct was dictated by considerations of what the best interest of his company required, cannot avail. It is not left to every member of the guard to pass on the propriety of his superior officer's conduct; to determine his unworthiness to continue in the Service, and to force him from command if he deems that result desirable. There are legal and orderly methods provided for the determination of such matters, and when a soldier departs from them, he does so on his own responsibility. The conduct of Lieut. Smith in this matter appears to have been partly if not wholly due to the action of his superior officer in voting at the then recent election for colonel of the regiment. The present case is another instance of the grave results to which such feelings, if not promptly put aside, may lead, and to which the Commander-in-chief has recently directed attention in General Orders.

"The language which Lieut. Smith used when ordered to attend his colonel and when speaking of a brother officer, was most unbecoming, unjustifiable and inexcusable."

ANNUAL INSPECTION AND MUSTER.

31st Separate Company, Mohawk, Tuesday, May 10, 2.30 P.M.
28th Separate Company, Utica, Wednesday, May 11, 2.30 P.M.
40th Separate Company, Syracuse, Thursday, May 12, 3 P.M.

THE NATIONAL DRILL.

THE letter from Mr. T. C. De Leon which appears below was received at the office of the Adjutant-General of Mississippi, April 12, and is an answer to the following telegram:

"JACKSON, MISS., April 8, 1887.

"Major T. C. De Leon, Washington:

"Your letter of the 5th is at hand. It is not sufficiently explicit. Please answer direct. Must Southern soldiers compete, drill, camp, do guard duty, and march in parade with negroes?

"WM. HENRY, Adjutant-General State of Mississippi."

"WASHINGTON, April 8, 1887.

"Gen. Wm. Henry, Adjutant-General of Mississippi, Jackson, Miss.:

"GENERAL: Your telegram stating that my letter is not 'sufficiently explicit' was received just at the close of office hours, and I answered by wire that I could not answer intelligently except by mail. This I now do, in detail, as per your queries, and this reply is the final decision of the committee:

"1. No exception can be made for Southern troops which drill. With entries from twenty-nine States there could be neither propriety nor reason in making any sectional exceptions.

"2. If either of the three negro companies entered come and drill for the prizes, they will be the same prizes drilled for by the whites. This point was fully and carefully weighed by this committee after an appeal from negro troops to have a separate negro day. It was decided that to do so would open the drill to perhaps fifty negro companies, which would be impossible to keep within the strict limits, to which we easily confine the three entered, if they come. This point was carefully considered, and we felt that we could best control the colored question by ignoring it in all public manner.

"3. No white companies will camp with negroes. The latter will be in separate camps.

"4. White soldiers, not being in the same camp with the negroes, will not be on guard with them. The negro guard detail will be made for their own camp alone. I believe this is as explicit as I can make it.

"5. On Governor's Day all troops in camp will parade through the avenue for review. The colored troops will, of course, not be debarred from that part. Two of the colored companies belong to the 1st Virginia Brigade, and Gen. Anderson says he will have them in that brigade under his own command. As negro troops parade with white on all public occasions on Pennsylvania avenue; as these same two companies paraded under Fitz Lee in the inauguration of Cleveland, and as they paraded in Richmond between the 1st Virginia and Richmond Howitzers, to lay the corner-stone of the new City Hall, you will see that there could be no shadow of reason for us to refuse their parade before the Governors of several States in a national gathering, under Government grant and approval.

"In brief, the negro companies will parade (if they come at all) on Governors' Day. They will parade with the dress parade of the brigade to which they are attached on the day assigned to that brigade, unless otherwise ordered by the Brigadier-General commanding it. At the same time, if the two Mississippi companies come and do not desire to parade on the occasion because the negroes do, there will be no order to do so, and they can be excused by the commandant of the camp. They can, of course, use their discretion about that, as they, of course, will about coming.

"And now, General, I hope I have been full and explicit, not only as to the existing status, but also to the reasons which first created and which still control it. I regret that I have been necessarily so lengthy in explanation, but you wanted all the facts, and it was due to you and to both companies that I should give them. I am, very respectfully,

"T. C. DE LEON, Managing Secretary."

A CHOCOLATIERE DRILL.

ON Monday evening, April 25, the new 12th Regiment Armory is to be the scene of an entertainment given under the auspices of the Ladies' Association of the Manhattan Hospital for the benefit of the hospital and the Armory Fund. The entertainment will consist first of all of a "Chocolatiere Drill," by a company of 50 young ladies, who have been trained in military evolutions by Lieut. Colonel Dowd, who will command them. The Berkeley school boys will also give an exhibition drill with Gatling guns. A "Garland Dance" will be given by a number of children who have been trained by Prof. Wallace. A social drinking of chocolate will follow, the beverage being served by the members of the "Chocolatiere" company, who will also preside over the selling of other refreshments. The uniforms of these modern amazons will be very picturesque, and will be copied from the costume in the picture of "Das Chocoladen Madchen," in the Dresden Gallery. The price of tickets will be $1.

THE SEVENTH'S VETERANS.

THE NATIONAL GUARD IN BUFFALO.

THE 74th Regiment Athletic Association has been organized with a membership of about 50. The officers are: Lieut. William E. Otto, Co. F, President; Sergt. E. L. Gager, Co. B, Vice President; Thomas D. MacNoe, Co. E, Secretary; and John L. Corner, Co. C, Treasurer. Lieut. Otto has been the prime mover in the enterprise, and his election was unanimous. Sergt. Gager has already won his spurs in the military athletic field. He distinguished himself in the competitive march at Glen Island, near New York, last summer, in the "Military Test of Physical Endurance," from June 28 to July 10. He made the highest score and was one of the prize winners. The Athletic Association is founded on a plan quite similar to that of the 7th Regiment. It is intended, if all goes well, to have annual series of athletic games. The association bought from the Boston Gymnastic Supply Co. apparatus costing about $650. The apparatus will be set up shortly in the small drill hall of the administration building of the armory. The hall is 56x66, 30 feet high, making an excellent room for the purpose. The apparatus will be so suspended that it may be hoisted, and thus not interfere with the use of the hall for drilling.

The association borrowed $500 from the regimental fund, which, it is expected, will be repaid from the proceeds of the annual dues, $2. The control and management of the gymnasium is vested in an executive committee composed of four officers of the regiment and a representative from the board of officers of each company. The gymnasium will be ready for use about May 1, but there will be no instructor until fall.

The newly-acquired library of the regiment is in the room of the board of officers, and contains about 200 volumes, to which additions are constantly being made.

April 11 was the fourth anniversary of Colonel Bloomer's election as commandant of the 74th Regiment, and during the evening his officers made him a congratulatory call at his home.

The matter of the colonelcy of the 65th Regiment still hangs fire. Ex-Colonel Waud is in Iowa and the command devolves upon Lieut.-Colonel S. N. Welch, who will probably in time become Colonel, the hitch being to overcome the objections of the Hon. D. N. Lockwood, U. S. District Attorney, in whose office Welch is employed as assistant.

EXTREM.

DISTRIBUTION OF ORDNANCE STORES.

THE $200,000 appropriated by the United States for Ordnance Stores for the militia for the last fiscal year, 1885-6, was apportioned as follows:

Alabama, $4,640.37; Arkansas, Minnesota, each, $3,248.26; California, Louisiana, Maryland, each, $3,712.30; Colorado, Delaware, Nevada, Oregon, each of the nine territories and the District of Columbia, each, $1,392.11; Connecticut, Maine, West Virginia, each, $2,784.22; Florida, Vermont, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, each, $1,856.15; Georgia, Tennessee, Virginia, each, $5,568.45; Illinois, $10,208.82; Indiana, $6,960.56; Iowa, Michigan, Texas, Kentucky, each, $6,032.48; Kansas, Mississippi, New Jersey, South Carolina, each, $4,176.34; Massachusetts, $6,496.52; Missouri, $7,424.59; Nebraska, $2,320.19; New York, $16,705.33; North Carolina, Wisconsin, each, $5,104.41; Ohio, $10,672.85; Pennsylvania, $13,921.10.

MILITIA ITEMS.

Col. Edward Fackner, of the 13th Regiment, and Mrs. Fackner and her father sailed in the North German Lloyd steamship Elder on Saturday afternoon. Before Col. Fackner sailed General Hdqrs. relieved Maj. J. Fred. Ackerman from arrest and he was placed in command pending the Colonel's return. The application for Maj. Ackerman's reinstatement has been before Gov. Hill for several days.

Sergt. Gustave Sussmann, Co. E, 9th Regiment, died April 16 of lung disease. Sergt. Sussmann was 26 years old, and a son of Col. Herrmann Sussmann, of the 11th Regiment Veteran Association, well known in former years as lieutenant colonel of the 11th Regiment.

The 47th N. Y. will assemble at the armory, in dress uniform, white body belts and forage caps, on Sunday, April 24, for the purpose of attending divine service at Christ's Episcopal Church, on invitation of Rev. Newland Maynard, D. D., Chaplain 47th Regiment.

On Monday evening, April 11, the 1st Regt., N. G. P., appeared in the new dress uniforms, and for the first time wore the white cross and waist belts. On Tuesday, April 19, the regiment paraded in full dress uniform to commemorate the 26th anniversary of the organization. The line was formed in the armory at 3 o'clock P. M., and at the Union League Mayor Fitler reviewed the column. In the evening the Veteran Corps attended their annual banquet at the Union League. The several companies also partook of banquets at various hostelries.

Co. A, 1st Inf., N. G. P., will proceed to Cape May on May 28, and return on the evening of April 30, or morning of April 31.

Arrangements have been made with the Long Island Railroad Company whereby members of the Guard desiring to shoot in the monthly matches of the National Rifle Association at Creedmoor the coming season can obtain excursion tickets for 40 cents.

Adjt. Gen. Dalton and Surg. Gen. Holt, Mass. V. M., are considering plans for furnishing bathing facilities to the camp at South Framingham, Mass.

The 9th N. Y. will parade on Tuesday evening, April 26, for battalion drill and the distribution of marksmen's badges. The regiment has 107 marksmen. Capt. Swift, of Co. D, has the highest score in the regiment. Capt. G. Henry Witthaus, rendered supernumerary on Jan. 12, 1887, has been assigned to duty at headquarters. Lieut. Daniel H. Skinnell has resigned.

The entries for the Athletic Games to take place May 2, at the new armory of the 12th regt. N. Y., close Saturday, April 23, with C. J. Leach, P. O. Box 3201, N. Y. City, or can be made at the armory, 9th Ave. and 62d St., on April 23. The handicapping will be done by the official handicapper N. A. A. A., and some fine sport is anticipated.

Adjutant F. A. Downs was elected Major of the 71st Regiment April 19 to succeed Major Kopper, promoted. Captain L. Frank Barry, of Co. I, was also a candidate. Adjutant Downs received 12 and Capt. Barry 9 votes.

Col. Charles W. Fincke resigned his commission as Colonel of the 23d Reg., N. G., of Brooklyn, April 21, on account of ill-health.

At the recent election for a Major of the 71st N. Y., Capt. Charles A. Hess, heretofore the Inspector of Rifle Practice, was elected Major. The election was the result of the inability to agree upon any other candidate. Unexpected as the result is, it was certainly a fortunate occurrence, because Major-elect Hess is doubtless an improvment upon any of the other candidates proposed. Capt. Hess was appointed quartermaster of the regiment, May 8, 1883, and Captain and I. R. P., March 4, 1885, both of which positions he filled with credit.

Co. D, 14th Regiment, has accepted an invitation to visit Co. E, 4th regiment, New Jersey, in Jersey City, on Wednesday evening, April 27, to be present at a stag racket given by that company. They will meet at the armory that evening at 7.30 o'clock. Co. D on Decoration Day will go to Yonkers, if permission can be obtained. They will be the guests of the members of the 4th Separate Company.

$6,000 has been set aside by the city authorities for the building of armories for the 8th and 22d New York regiments. The armory now vacated by the 12th, at 45th st. and Broadway, has been re-leased for two years for $20,000 a year, and the 71st has been authorized to occupy it May 1, when the 8th will move into the present 71st regiment armory.

PENNSYLVANIA NATIONAL GUARD.

BEING a veteran of the war and supposed to have the good of the National Guard at heart, it was expected that Gov. Beaver, in appointing a staff, would make choice of those, who by their military experience and ability would not only bring credit to himself but give confidence to the civilians and the National Guard, should it ever be necessary to call the latter into active service, but with one or two exceptions, he pursued an entirely different course. One exception was Col. D. S. Ha-singer, the notice of whose death was given in the JOURNAL of April 5. He served with distinction during the late war and continuously as Asst. Adjt.-General of the Pennsylvania National Guard since 1873 until the time of his death.

Col. Hill, Q. M. General, is also a veteran of the war. The good appointments were so few, however, that they do not serve to leaven the lump, and the action of the Governor has caused much criticism. One appointment is a special cause of criticism. This is of an aide whose previous record is shown by the following:

PHILADELPHIA, March 25, 1873.

General Orders No. 3.

I. Before a regimental court-martial, of which Captain Washington H. Gilpin, 1st Regt., 1st Brigade, was president, convened at the City Armory by virtue of G. O. No. 1, dated Jan. 18, 1878, from these headquarters, was arraigned and tried. . . .

16. Private John H. Sanderson, Co. K, 1st Regt. Infantry, on the following charges and specifications:

Charge I. Neglect of duty.

Specification I. In this, that the said John H. Sanderson did, after having been ordered to join his company, fail to report for duty.

Charge II. Absent without leave.

Specification II. In this, that he, the said Private John H. Sanderson, Co. K, 1st Regt., N. G. Pa., was absent from his company, without permission, on its rscent tour of duty; all this at or near Philadelphia, Pa., on or about August 5, 1877.

To which charges and specifications the accused pleaded as follows: Specification I. Not guilty. Charge I. Not guilty. Specification II. Not guilty. Charge II. Not guilty.

After mature deliberation on the evidence adduced the court found the accused as follows: Of specification I. Guilty. Of charge I. Guilty. Of specification II. Guilty. Of charge II. Guilty.

And the court did therefore sentence the said Private John H. Sanderson to be dishonorably discharged from the National Guard of Pa. . . . The proceedings, findings and sentences of the court in the cases of . . . Private J. H. Sanderson, Co. K, all of 1st Regt., N. G. Pa., are confirmed, and the men named will accordingly be dishonorably discharged from the National Guard of Pa. By command of

F. DUPONT MARSTON, 1st Lieut. and Actg. Adjt.

A large audience assembled at the armory of the State Fencibles, Philadelphia, on Wednesday to witness their first exhibition drill under the command of Major W. W. Chew, Brig.-Gen. Snowden and staff were present, as also were Cols. Dechert, Bonaffon and Schall, each with his regimental staff in uniform. Capt. W. S. Witherup was presented with a U. S. regulation army sword by his company. Gen. Snowden also presented the brigade medals won in the last contest of marksmanship.

OREGON.

COMPANY K, 1st Regt., 2d Brigade, gave, on the evening of March 22, at the Pavilion in Portland one of their monthly dress drills and promenade concerts. Their drill, both as to manual and movements, was very good and showed vast improvement. Capt. C. F. Beebe has done a wonderful amount of work in bringing the company to its present state of excellence, particularly as the company was only a year old on March 24, having been organized during the Chinese troubles a year ago.

The quarterly inspection and muster of four of the companies, E, F, G, and K, of the 1st Regt., 2d Brigade, was held in the Pavilion at Portland, on Friday evening, March 25. A very good showing was made by all but Co. F, which turned out with but very few men. After a dress parade and review tendered to Brig.-Gen. J. C. Shofner, Major H. M. Taylor, in the absence of Lieut.-Col. E. H. Merrill, inspected and mustered the companies. Co. A has lately been reorganized and was excused from attendance. Co. H was inspected at its armory in Astoria on March 18. The regiment labors under great disadvantage in not having proper facilities for drilling.

Co. B, 2d Regt., 2d Brigade, gave a very successful drill and entertainment at their armory in Salem, on Friday evening, April 1. Those present had an exceedingly pleasant time and the company shows marked improvement in their drill.

The State Fair Association have offered a prize of $500 for the best drilled company in the State, the competition to take place during the Fair this fall. It is hoped that the Governor will order the annual encampment at the same time so that all companies will be present.

LIGGOC.

CALIFORNIA NATIONAL GUARD.

THE question of the summer encampment, says the Alta, has been practically settled by Generals Cosby and Dimond, composing the Board of Location, deciding to leave the matter in the hands of the Commander-in-Chief, with a recommendation that a brigade encampment be held. The suggestion has been made that Santa Cruz be selected as a desirable location, and July 2 as the day to start. The regulars from the Presidio will be in summer camp at Santa Cruz at the time, and have already secured a portion of the grounds occupied in August, 1885, by the Division Encampment, but there will be an abundance of room left for the 2d Brigade. Colonel Guthrie has been elected to succeed Colonel Sheehan, of the 1st Artillery. Major McKee was elected Lieutenant-Colonel and Adjutant Neary Major. All of the newly-promoted officers are efficient and popular in the regiment.

Co. G, 2d Artillery Regiment, will celebrate its first anniversary by a ball April 29.

The following named officers are appointed to constitute a Board to determine and prescribe a Service Uniform and Equipment for the National Guard of California, viz.: Brig. Gen. W. H. Dimond, comdg. 2d Brigade, N. G. C.; Brig. Gen. John T. Carey, comdg. 4th Brigade, N. G. C.; Brig. Gen. Eugene Lehe, comdg. 3d Brigade, N. G. C.; Maj. Thos. F. Barry, comdg. 3d Infantry Regiment, N. G. C.; Capt. Frank H. Sweet, comdg. Co. E, 5th Infantry Regiment, 2d Brigade, N. G. C.

In G. O. 10, Adjutant-General Cosby gives some interesting data as to the percentage of attendance at drill and company membership for February. The Cadet Co., 1st Infantry Regiment, had the highest attendance at drill—99 per cent.; and Co. D, 6th Infantry Battalion, the lowest—39 per cent.

MASSACHUSETTS MILITIA.

CANNONEER propounds the following: The Boston Light Artillery, of Boston, was organized Nov. 17, 1853. Are we not the oldest light battery in the militia force of the U. S.? If not, what battery is older?

The Local Veteran Militia Organizations of Boston and vicinity announce the following programme in connection with the convention of the National Veteran Militia Association to be held in Boston on June 17. The visiting bodies will be requested to assemble at Boylston Hall at 9.30 A. M., to prepare for parade. The convention will convene at Boylston Hall at 2 P. M. Visitors will be entertained by local organizations, and the Charlestown Cadets Veteran Association will open the rooms for the entertainment of all veteran military organizations. On June 18 they will be the guests of the city, and a harbor trip and other hospitalities will follow.

MERCHANT STEAMERS FOR STATE PURPOSES

A PARLIAMENTARY paper was issued March 17, containing correspondence respecting the subvention of merchant steamers for State purposes. In an Admiralty minute to the Treasury, dated Feb. 2 last, the views of the Admiralty on the subject are set forth. It is stated that the co-operation of the Postmaster-General has been obtained, and mentions the arrangements come to with the Cunard and White Star Companies. Plans of two proposed new vessels to be forthwith constructed, and completed in about 18 months or two years, have been laid before the Director of Naval Construction. That officer has reported to their Lordships that these plans would provide vessels far in advance of anything that has yet been submitted to the Admiralty for the purpose of armed cruisers. They would be of large size, of exceedingly high speed, provided with twin screws, have their engines and boilers placed below the water-line, be divided into numerous compartments, and have a protected steering gear. In regard to capacity, they would be capable of conveying fully 2,000 men whom they could land at Bombay, via the Suez Canal, in 14 days, or via the Cape, in 22½ days. Their coal capacity would be such that at a cruising speed they could probably keep the sea for a long period, probably not less than three months. It is also proposed that the owners should arrange for at least half the crew to consist of men belonging to the Royal Naval Reserve. As respects the Cunard Company, the Board have entered into negotiations to retain the Umbria and Etruria, and the Aurania, a steamer almost equal in speed, on similar terms to those made with the White Star Company. The annual expenditure for the retention of these vessels will amount to an average of £5,400 each.

REDCOATS, BLUEJACKETS AND RED TAPE

I.

Where sleeps our old-world England? Is it nought
Her sword is blunted in the battle play?
Nought the dim laurels of an earlier day,
Cressy, Poitiers and Harry's Agincourt,
And where Spain's spent Armada reeled distraught?—
Heroes of Blenheim, Ramilies, Malplaquet,
And Abraham's deathless heights, Plassy, Assaye,
Sobraon—gods! we fight not as they fought.

Not ours, not ours the meteor flag that flew
From Badajoz to Vittoria; not the roar
Of Alma, Balaclava, Inkerman,
Delhi and proud Lucknow, avenged Cawnpore,
And those twin trumpet voices in the van—
Trafalgar and immortal Waterloo.

II.

Souls of our sires who gained a soldier's tomb,
Sleeping the dreamless sword sleep oversea,
Behold unrecognized your empery,
Your victories vanished in the gathering gloom
Before us stands the Angel of the Doom;
Behind, implacable, thy memory,
Majuba, and the lingering agony
Of him who unregarded held Khartoum.

Soldiers outnumbered, Navy undermanned,
Burst cannon, bayonets shattered, sabres bent—
Whence crawls this curse upon us, year by year?
Ask of the red-tape crew, whose crooked hand
Claws the sparse millions fools opine are spent
On fleet and Army. Lo, the curse is here!

THE HAWAIIAN NAVAL FLAG.

THE flag for the Hawaiian Navy has been designed by Mrs. Strong, and contains in the centre, on a white background, a gold crown resting on a yellow shield. The shield contains a white taboo stick, crossed by two red kahilis, one representing his Majesty, the King, and the other Princess Liliuokalani. Above, below, and on both sides of the crown and shield are alternate stripes of red, white, and blue. The borders of the flag are gray. Seven of them have been made—three 3 feet wide, two 4 feet wide, one 7 feet wide, and one 8 feet wide; length in proportion to width.

RESULTS WITH MANGANESE STEEL.

THE difficulty experienced in producing manganese steel of a perfectly homogeneous character and of an invariably uniform quality seems to have been overcome by Pfeil and Co., who, after long trying to do so, have apparently succeeded in accurately proportioning the ingredients so that the above results are attained, in their "retort manganese steel," as it is called. We recently witnessed some remarkable results at their stores, Clerkenwell, London, with bolts and nuts made from this metal. Bolts were bent over by hammering through about 120 degrees in the threaded part without showing the least sign of distress, and nuts were hammered down until the screwed way was nearly closed, with similar results. The same test was applied to the necks of the bolts, which were only broken through by being hammered back again, the metal showing an excellent fracture. Bolts and nuts of this steel have been severely tested by the Government, with the result that they are now being used in the royal dockyards and in the carriage department at the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich.

THE JAPANESE ARMY.

GENERAL NAGAYAMA and staff of the Japanese Army, arrived in New York this week on their way to Russia to study the military system of that country. The General says the army has greatly improved of late years. It is divided into two brigades. These are in turn subdivided into three regiments each, and these into four companies of 160 men each. In addition there are six cavalry regiments, the Emperor's Life Guards and the Engineer Corps. This is the army on a peace footing. In times of war the number is doubled. The army is armed with a rifle invented by a young officer named Murata, who was educated in France, and is believed to be one of the best arms in the world.

THE ITALIANS AT MASSOWAH.

THE Italian Minister of War has given orders for the formation of a corps of 6,000 men for Massowah, intended to retake Vua and Saati and seize Keren. General Giusiana, commanding Catanzaro Division, will succeed General Genè in command. The advanced fort occupied by the Italians, is held by 1,200 men, armed with seven guns and two machine guns. Count Salimbeni, who was taken prisoner by Ras Alula, gives the following account of the battle of Dogali, which he witnessed from Ras's camp: "I do not know whether too great confidence was universally felt by the Italians that the enemy they had to deal with was not of much account, but it is certain that a dangerous and false idea to that effect, and one which I never succeeded in dispelling, was too prevalent. One might say that the Abyssinian is a warrior from his birth. He lives by war. He can make long marches without food or water, he is very active, wiry and cunning, ready to let himself go like a spring, and dash forward to the attack at a pace more like flying than running. At the first sound of musketry Ras Alula advanced his cavalry, and it met the head of the Italian column near the river. Our soldiers took up a position on a hill on the right of the track, then by successive echelons they occupied a still higher one, which they kept to. At this moment the whole camp (Ras Alula's) made its way to the scene of action, at which they also desired me to be present, while my companions were kept prisoners in the camp. From the isolated hill whither I was taken, still in irons, I could see how the Abyssinians, who swarmed up like ants, prepared to turn the Italian position by two immense, nearly concentric circles. I should estimate their number at about 20,000, the greater part of whom were only armed with clubs and heavy swords and shields. It seemed to me that the Italians commenced firing at too great a distance, and that it had but little effect on the enemy. A little after mid-day Ras Alula's men had succeeded in carrying out their turning movement. For several hours the mitrailleuses had ceased to act. It might have been a little past 1 o'clock when the Ras gave the signal for the attack, the drums and tom-toms never stopped beating, and all of a sudden from all sides, as if they had come out of the ground, a cloud of men dashed forward to the attack, the horsemen charged from the high ground against the flank, and in a few minutes all was over. They gave no quarter to the wounded, who, by order of Ras Alula, were all killed and frightfully mutilated. After the battle the Ras, much enraged by the loss which his troops had suffered, gave the order to cut my throat; but his cupbearer dissuaded him from it, suggesting to him instead to cut a hand or a foot off each of us, and to send us back thus mutilated to Massowah." The Ras, however, did not take this advice, but took his prisoners back with him to Asmara.

SEA WATER AS A PRESERVATIVE.

The capability of sea water as a preservative is shown by the fact that among the articles recovered from vessels sunk in the harbor of Vigo, Spain, in 1702, there have been recovered specimens of logwood and mahogany that, notwithstanding their 184 years' submersion, are in the most perfect state of preservation. Dyers who have experimented with the logwood state that it is even better for dyeing purposes than the wood now imported. The mahogany, too, is very fine and solid, one log twelve feet long and twenty-two by thirty-two inches square being subsequently worked up in the shape of furniture and walking sticks as mementoes. The chief object of interest, however, is an ancient pulley block four and one-half feet high and three feet broad, with four solid copper sheaves eighteen inches in diameter. It is of solid oak, and was probably used in hoisting heavy articles of merchandise or the anchors. The wood is perfectly preserved, but an iron band is completely corroded away, while the copper wheels are but slightly oxidized.

A NEW RAPID FIRING GUN.

LIEUTENANTS DRIGGS and Schroeder, of the Navy Intelligence Office, are the inventors of a new rapid firing single loading gun that is attracting some attention from the ordnance bureaus of the two services. A full size working model has been on exhibition in Capt. Sicard's office for several days and is now in Gen. Benét's office, where it will be examined and its merits reported upon by a board consisting of Capts. Smith and Birnie. A naval board will also probably be appointed to make an official report upon the invention. When the opinions of the two bureaus have been officially expressed, the inventors purpose, if the reports are favorable, to have a gun constructed for practical experiments.

In this gun the mechanism for opening and closing the breech, cocking the firing pin, etc., are enclosed within the breech, and thus protected from hostile shot, excepting the handle for revolving the breech block and the pistol grip, and should the latter be shot away the piece can still be readily fired from the rear of the breech. In all respects the mechanism differs from others adopted so far, and has won several strong commendatory remarks from individual officers known to be experts in ordnance. The opening of the breech is effected by a cam; the top of the movable block has a number of projecting ribs which take in corresponding grooves in the breech of the gun, the first movement of the cam lowers it bodily, after which it swings to the rear, leaving the bore open. During this movement a projection from the cam pushes back the firing pin which is then held back (cocked) by a sliding leaf actuated by a rear spring. While opening the breech a pair of extractors grasp the base of the cartridge, drawing it out slowly at first, finally flinging it to the rear. With a dummy cartridge it is claimed that the operations of loading and firing can be easily executed by one man 16 times in 30 seconds. The points to which attention is specially asked are, there is no opening through the top of the breech: so sand and rain can only enter from underneath: premature firing before the breech is securely closed is impossible, as the firing pin if released would take against the cam projection which cocks it; the weight of the movable block is very little, being about half that of the Hotchkiss; in loading the cartridge does not have to be pushed close home (as is necessary with other similar guns), as the revolving block does that automatically. The model that is being examined is that of a 47 millimetre or 3-pounder, but the system will be applied to much heavier calibres, the advantage of lightness in the breech block increasing with the size.

THE Vienna Armeeblatt of this year contains a valuable article "On the Efficiency of the Range-finders in Use," by T. Rkz.

THE November number of the Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete des Seewesens, published by the Imperial Austrian Hydrographic Office at Pola, contains an article on "The Application of Celluloid for the Protection of a Ship's Bottom."

THE revised English musketry regulations provide that in the course for recruits at 300 and 500 yards, the second five rounds are to be fired sitting instead of kneeling and lying down. For rapid volleys the distances are to be 300 and 400 yards.

A WRITER in the Figaro declares that the Gras can now be fired more rapidly than any repeating-rifle; that this has been satisfactorily proved at the camp of Châlons. He adds that he saw as many as 27 shots fired from the Gras in a minute, without the weapon being heated. However, the bore is to be reduced, and a magazine attached to the Lebel-Gras, in the interest of the morale of the troops.

COPIES of an instruction pour le combat have been distributed to the several infantry corps of the French Army. They provide for—(1), a general increase of offensive operations; (2), an augmentation of the density of musketry fire by a reduction of the front, men being drawn up shoulder to shoulder as soon as fire opens at 600 metres; (3), the constitution in each offensive formation of a solid body of men (troupe de choc), apart from the skirmishing force (troupe de préparation.) bake into bread for themselves, or 1 pound 13 ounces, of biscuits is issued per man, and to this is added 4 4-5 ounces of groats, 4-5 ounces salt, and for every 100 men 11 7-10 ounces tea and 2 pounds 3 3-10 ounces of sugar. The daily field ration of the British soldier is 1 pound of meat, 1½ pounds bread or 1 pound biscuit, ⅛ ounce coffee, 1-6 ounce tea, 2 ounces sugar, and ⅓ ounce salt, and when hard work is being done another ½ pound meat is added if possible, and it is also usual to serve out 2 ounces compressed vegetables and 4 ounces preserved potatoes.

THE determination of the manufacturers to furnish the smoker a strictly first-class Havana-filled Cigar at 5c. accounts for the wonderful demand for "Tansill's Punch."

HANCE BROS. & WHITE, manufacturing chemists of Philadelphia, are public benefactors by their introduction into this country of PHENOL SODIQUE, the marvelous remedy of so many ills and injuries that man and beast are subject to. Many a limb has been saved from amputation, and possibly a life saved, by the prompt use of PHENOL SODIQUE after the accident.

HEALTH AND STRENGTH REGAINED.

NINTH YEAR. THE REVIEW. ADVICE TO INVALIDS.

COPIES FREE.

INVALIDS AND OTHERS SEEKING HEALTH,

Strength, and Energy, should avoid Drugs, Secret Medicines, etc., and send for "The Review," or "Health and Strength Regained," a large Illustrated Journal, published entirely for their benefit.

It Treats on Health, Hygiene, Physical Culture, and Medical Subjects, and is a complete encyclopædia of information for suffering humanity afflicted with long standing, chronic, nervous, exhausting, or painful diseases. Every subject that bears on health and human happiness receives attention in its pages; and the many questions asked by ailing persons and invalids who have despaired of a cure are answered, and valuable information is volunteered to all who are in need of medical advice. No similar work has ever been published. Every sick or ailing person should have it.

Young and Middle-Aged Men, and others who suffer from nervous and physical disability, exhausted vitality, premature decline, etc., are especially benefited by consulting its contents. Everything such sufferers wish to know is fully given in its pages. If in need of medical aid or counsel, read it before "doctoring" or investing in medicines or appliances of any description, and you will save time, money, and disappointment. If using medicine, or medical treatment of any kind, read it and learn the better way.

THE REVIEW exposes the frauds practiced by quacks and medical impostors who profess to "practice medicine," and points out the only safe, simple, and effective road to health, vigor, and bodily energy.

Beware of the sham curative articles called Shields, Generators, Girdles, Pads, Brushes, Corsets, Clothing, Plasters, etc., now deceptively advertised as Electric, Voltaic, or Magnetic. These articles are as entirely spurious as the advertisements concerning them are insidious. This can be easily detected by a simple test which is fully explained in THE REVIEW.

Electric Belts and all curative appliances are treated upon: all about them. Belts on thirty days' trial (?) and other fallacies reviewed. Thousands of dollars saved nervous-debility sufferers and others by the advice given.

Reader, are you afflicted and wish to recover the same degree of health, strength, and energy experienced in former years? Do any of the following symptoms, or class of symptoms, meet your deceased condition? Are you suffering from ill-health in any of its many forms consequent on a lingering, nervous, chronic, or functional disease? Do you feel nervous, debilitated, fretful, timid, and lack the power of will and action? Are you subject to loss of memory, have spells of fainting, fullness of blood in the head, feel listless, moping, unfit for business or pleasure, and subject to fits of melancholy? Are your kidneys, stomach, urinary organs, liver, or blood in a disordered condition? Do you suffer from rheumatism, neuralgia, or other aches and pains? Are you timid, nervous, and forgetful, with your mind continually dwelling on the subject? Have you lost confidence in yourself and energy for business pursuits? Are you subject to restless nights, broken sleep, nightmare, dreams, palpitation of the heart, bashfulness, confusion of ideas, aversion to society, dizziness in the head, dimness of sight, pimples and blotches on the face and back, and other despondent symptoms? There are thousands of young men, middle-aged and old, who suffer from nervous and physical debility. There are thousands of females broken down in health and spirits, and who, from false modesty or neglect, prolong their suffering.

Why further neglect your health and future happiness, or continue to be dosed, drugged, and quacked, when THE REVIEW, which costs you nothing, teaches the true and way to permanent health, strength, and vigor?

THE GATLING GUN.

The Accles' feed magazine allows the gun to be fired at all angles of elevation or depression, at the rate of over 1,200 shots per minute.

THE statue of the Palmetto State's great son—JOHN C. CALHOUN—was unveiled with imposing public ceremonies, April 26, at Charlestor, S. C. The statue stands on Marion Square.

THE orders of Captain MCNAIR to command the Omaha, on the Asiatic Station, have been temporarily suspended, pending action upon Captain SELFRIDGE'S request for a Court of Inquiry, or a prompt restoration to his command. The Secretary has, so far, not signified his intentions in the matter, but it is probable that a Court of Inquiry will be directed to investigate and report.

THE 65th anniversary of the birthday of General GRANT was duly celebrated in New York and elsewhere on Wednesday of this week, April 27, and fitting honor was universally paid to his memory. On Wednesday a meeting, over which General SHERMAN presided, was held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel and an association formed for the purpose of celebrating General GRANT'S birthday and the Americus Club, of Pittsburgh, had a special celebration which was attended by many distinguished guests.

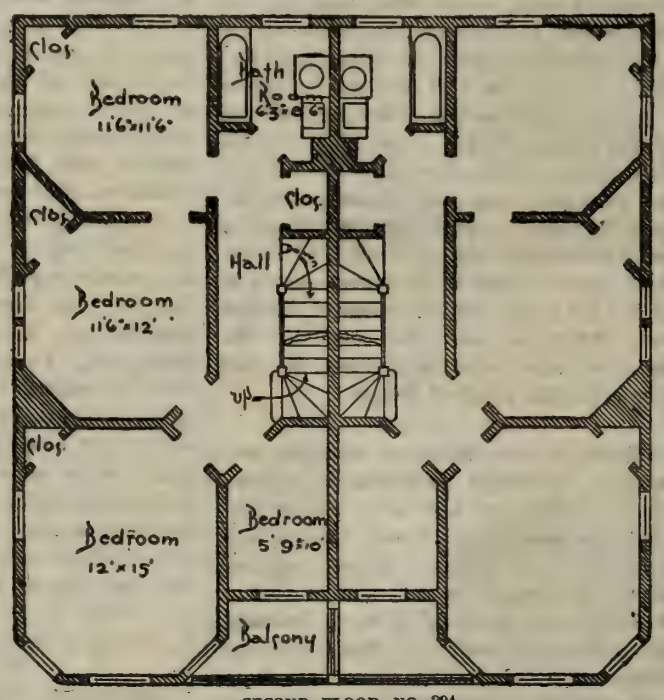
ST. AUGUSTINE is left desolate, for this week its chief attraction of late, the Indian prisoners at Fort Marion, were removed, some to Mt. Vernon Barracks, Ala., some to Fort Pickens, Fla., and some to the Indian Training School at Carlisle, Pa. The wives of the Indians at Fort Pickens have joined them there and GERONIMO and his companions are comparatively happy. The larger number of course goes to Mt. Vernon Barracks, which has ample resources and plenty of room for an encampment. The commander there is Major WILLIAM SINCLAIR, 3d Artillery, an experienced officer.

THE Naval Torpedo Board, Captain A. P. COOKE, President, met in New York on Thursday last, and, after examining the papers submitted by 25 or 30 inventors, adjourned to meet on May 5 next. Of the patents referred to the Board only two—the HOWELL and BURDAN—are thought to possess sufficient merit to warrant a practical test. Mr. BURDAN will be given an opportunity to explain his invention at the next meeting of the Board, after which the Board will witness some practical demonstrations with the new torpedoes on Long Island Sound. Lieutenant COMLY has been detailed to select a suitable site for the experiments, and he is now in New York on that mission.

BY a recent order the intention is indicated on the part of the Navy Department of sending the Trenton to the South Atlantic Station with crew, stores, and officers for the Lancaster, flagship of Acting Rear-Admiral BRAINE. There are those, wise in their day and generation, and taught by experience, who strongly surmise that instead of coming home in the Trenton, the return voyage of those officers and men whose cruises will have expired by that time, will be made in the Lancaster, the Trenton remaining on the station. It should be noted, however, in this connection, that no intimation has come from the Department that any deviation is to be made from the official programme.

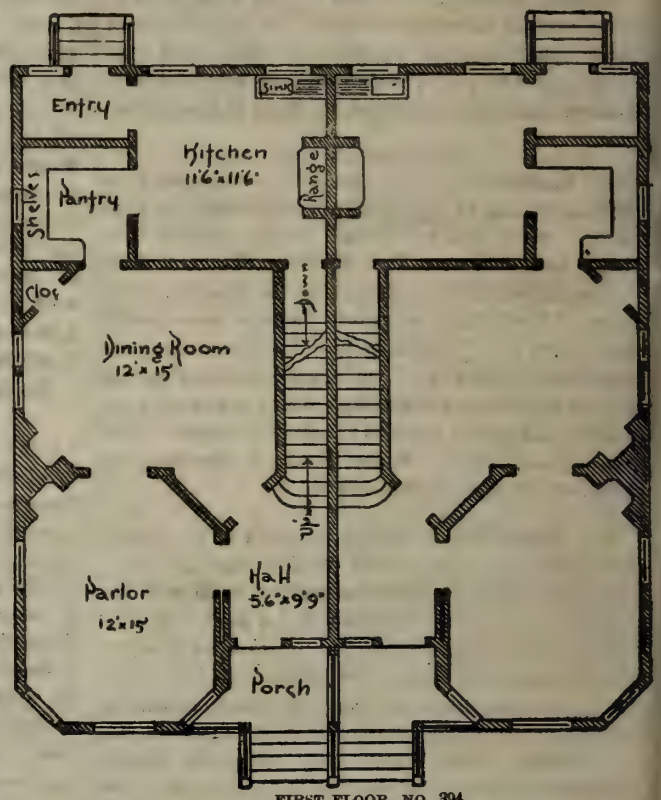
THE Naval Intelligence Office is actively engaged getting into shape for the printer the final manuscript for General Information Series No. VI. This volume will contain papers which have been made up in great part from the reports of officers stationed in foreign parts, descriptive of the more important naval operations which have taken place in all parts of the world since the last annual publication. The forthcoming compilation will be valuable in more ways than one, but its chief importance will be in the changes and improvements that will be shown to have taken place in ship, gun, and torpedo construction during the past year. Papers on those subjects are being prepared by experts in the office especially adapted to the work assigned them. Lieutenants W. I. CHAMBERS and J. C. COLWELL are doing the work on ships, Lieutenant DRIGGS on heavy ordnance, Lieutenant BEEHLER on small arms, and Lieutenant SCHROEDER on torpedoes.

THE contract recently given by the Turkish Government to German armories for 550,000 Mauser repeating rifles and necessary ammunition, it is pretty certainly known, would have come to the United States but for the fact that Minister COX returned to this country before his place was filled by a successor and left the field free to the German Minister, an influence essential to dealing with the officials of the Porte. Turkey pays more for the Mauser than she would have had to for the Lee and will receive an inferior arm, while American manufacture loses the incentive of $15,000.000 business. The Mauser was originally made in the United States, its inventor—after whom it is named—being at work here in 1873 under the patronage of SAMUEL REMINGTON. After the model was completed Mr. REMINGTON, dissatisfied with the prospect, disposed of his interest for five hundred dollars.



SOME difficulty is experienced in carrying into effect Secretary Whitney's consolidation scheme. Separate appropriations are now made for the purchase of the same articles by different bureaus, and there are altogether five thousand articles required for the use of the Navy, a considerable proportion of which are articles used by different bureaus. When the consolidation goes into effect the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing will keep accounts showing just the amount of supplies of this sort used by the several bureaus. Everything will be purchased in bulk, and issued to the bureaus upon requisition, and amount drawn will be charged against the bureau. This will create a necessity for an endless number of accounts, and will be hindrance to the successful operation of the consolidation scheme. Further legislation will accordingly be asked for allowing the appropriations to be made for "coal for the Navy," "oil for the Navy," etc., without crediting them to a particular bureau. This will avoid the present necessity of buying out of many appropriations and keeping separate accounts of the amounts expended out of each. Many of the bureaus have on hand supplies for 15 and even 20 years. Under the consolidation scheme it is proposed that the supplies on hand shall be limited to one year.

THE Naval Bureau of Ordnance has begun the work of construction of a third 10-inch gun with the forgings now on hand. Two of these guns have been practically finished and will soon be ready for trial. The Bureau has determined to push the work in the Washington Navy-yard, and expect to soon have it converted into a well equipped ordnance factory. Mr. J. W. PUGSLEY, of Baltimore, has been selected to take charge of the changes to be made. The Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance has ordered that all the machinery in the yard be concentrated in the anchor, machine and steam engineering shops. The general plans for the remodelling of the buildings are now being prepared. It is proposed to strengthen the foundation of the anchor shops and to remodel them for the accommodation of new machinery. An ordnance foundry will be erected adjoining the anchor shops. It will be constructed for the especial purpose of accommodating machinery suitable for the handling of the heaviest guns. A steam crane of the latest pattern is to be provided that will carry a 16-inch gun. The foundry will also have other large and powerful machinery, and it is expected will compare favorably with the best of those in foreign countries.



PROBABLY in no other Army do we find such curious offences against discipline as in our own. This is perhaps to be explained by the somewhat exaggerated idea of personal freedom, so universal among us, and which the soldier does not entirely rid himself of, notwithstanding his virtual surrender of it under his contract of enlistment. We note a recent court-martial case where a soldier when at drill having been corrected by his commanding officer for a mistake, did speak out in ranks and say, "I was right," and after the company had been brought to "place rest," approached his commanding officer and said, "lieutenant, I was right and you were wrong," and having been ordered to stop his talk and return to his place in ranks, said, "I won't shut up and I won't allow myself to be bulldozed by you or anyone else." This unfortunate exercise of the freedom of debate results in the withdrawal of the party of the second part from the active list for the period of one year and a forfeiture of the sum of $120. Possibly this even may be considered a trifle by the argumentative private in view of the fact that before his world (the garrison) he has asserted his right as a free born citizen to dispute the superiority in tactical knowledge of his commissioned superior.

THE Bureau of Statistics, Washington, publish statistic on the annual consumption of distilled malt liquors and wines in the United States, and their average annual consumption per capita of population, during the years 1840-1850-1860, and the seventeen years from 1870 to 1886 inclusive. They show a remarkable change in the liquor drinking tastes of the country. The consumption of malt liquors which in 1840 was 1.36 gallons per capita was in 1886, 11.18 gallons per capita. The consumption of distilled spirits meantime declined one-half, viz.: from 2.52 gallons per capita in 1840 to 1.24 gallons in 1886. The consumption of wines increased from 29 gallons per capita to 38 gallons. The total consumption of all wines, liquors, etc., which was only 4.17 gallons per capita in 1840, was in 1886, 12.62 gallons. One of the authorities quoted for these figures is the President of the Wine and Spirit Traders' Society of New York, Mr. CHAS. MCK. LEOSER, a graduate of the Military Academy of the class of 1861, formerly an officer of the 5th Artillery. Army and Navy experience will confirm the conclusions from these statistics, which is that the old whiskey drinking habits are in a measure disappearing from this country, the light wines and malt liquors gradually taking the place of more fiery potions.

DESIGNS FOR OFFICERS' QUARTERS, NO. 394.

Size of structure: Front, 38 ft., 3 in. Side, 41 ft. Size of rooms: See floor plans. Height of stories: Cellar, 7 ft.; First Story, 10 ft.; Second Story, 9 ft. Materials: Foundation, stone; First Story, clapboards; Second Story, shingles; Gables, shingles; Roof, shingles. Cost: $4,500 to $5,000 complete, except mantels and ranges.

Special Features.—A double cottage, very economically utilizing all the space. Two rooms can be finished in the attic of each house, if desired, or the space can be left unfinished for storage purposes. Cellars under the whole of each house with outside entrances to the same from the yard.

With reference to the subject of quarters an officer writes us as follows:

"You are doing a great, good work for the Army by publishing designs for Officers' Quarters, as it will open the eyes of the Quartermaster's Department to the fact that a picturesque and convenient house can be built as cheaply as have been the ugly and badly arranged ones at the posts, without furnaces, laundries, closets, or other conveniences.

While on the subject of quarters, and while the Army Regulation board is at work, another move in the right direction will be to advocate a larger allowance of rooms to officers. The number allowed is fixed by the Regulations, while the commutation allowance per room is fixed by law at $12—vide Act approved June 23, 1879. Par. 1,863, Regulations 1881, fixes the allowances as follows:

Lieut.-General or Maj.-General, 5 rooms as quarters and 1 kitchen; total, 6 rooms.

Brig.-General or Colonel, 4 rooms as quarters and 1 kitchen; total, 5 rooms.

Lieut.-Colonel or Major, 3 rooms as quarters and 1 kitchen; total, 4 rooms.

Captain or Chaplain, 2 rooms as quarters and 1 kitchen; total, 3 rooms.

Lieutenants, 1 room as quarters and 1 kitchen; total, 2 rooms.

Think of our beloved country crowding its distinguished Lieut.-General and his charming family into a bird-cage cottage of five rooms and a kitchen! But then regard the sad plight of the senior Lieutenant of 20 years' service with a numerous family, accorded only one room and a kitchen.

If it were not for par. 1,841, Regs., which provides that attics shall not be counted as rooms, the families of officers would fare badly indeed. By common consent the half story above the ground floor is by a stretch of commanding officer—quartermaster—inspector conscience counted an attic.

It is better to stop squinting at these matters but to look them squarely in the face, and to acknowledge the fact that as long as there is no law or regulation forbidding an officer to marry he will follow the dictates of nature in this matter, and to provide for the contingency in the way of more commodious quarters. Our policy, as a nation, has always been to encourage marriage, and it has ever been regarded a patriotic duty to assist in increasing the population.

At posts where the garrisons are large an officer with a family may receive no more than his actual allowance of rooms, and may, from necessity, even have this allowance reduced by par. 1,836. Sometimes several families are put into one house, which crowding is indecent, and is attended inevitably with social misunderstandings. As a rule the young, unmarried officers have with a commendable unselfishness, generosity and self-abnegation given up to married officers part of their allowance of quarters, when the necessity arose. But there should be no such necessity at any post. The amount received for commutation of quarters is inadequate to rent a decent house in any of our cities, and it is a bitter experience tasted by nearly all recruiting officers who leave their regiments and come to cities for a tour of duty, to find that their commutation will not procure them a top flat in an apartment house, in an obscure part of the city, much less rent them a small house in a respectable neighborhood. An old bachelor officer says there is nothing in the Regulations recognizing the family of an officer. True, there is not, but is it not time for us to have progressed far enough to recognize and provide for the fact that officers like all other officials, and all the human family, will have families and that quarters are inadequate as now allowed. Could not the Regulations Board put on its marital spectacles and make par. 1,863 read: for the Lieut.-General, 12 rooms; a Major General, 10 rooms; Brig.-General and Colonel, 8 rooms; Lieut.-Colonel and Major, 6 rooms: Captain, 5 rooms, and Lieutenants, 4 rooms.

With a house for each officer and a furnace in the cellar and a laundry, the surroundings of officers, which contribute so largely to a refined life and contentment, will be established on the proper basis. The number of rooms, when commuted, will enable officers, whose duties require them to live in cities, to secure houses which are habitable and in a good neighborhood."

HOSPITAL STEWARDS' UNIFORM.

A correspondent impressed with the idea that the uniform of hospital stewards should correspond somewhat to that of their superiors in the Medical Department, suggests the following:

"Undress coat or blouse, as at present, of dark blue cloth or flannel, omitting chevron, with Geneva cross, of white metal on collar. Trousers of dark blue, with stripe or cord on seam, if deemed necessary. Forage cap as at present, with wreath and Geneva cross in centre. Full dress coat, dark blue frock, same pattern as at present, omitting green facings and chevron, with shoulder knot of green worsted, with Geneva cross in centre of same. Service chevrons as at present. All buttons to be U. S. staff. Great coat of dark blue cloth, same pattern as at present worn, with detachable cape, and to close with black horn or rubber buttons. Full dress hat a chapeau, similar in shape to that worn by officers of the General Staff, but of plainer material; ornament similar to that on forage cap. Sword belt of black leather with plate, having arms of U. S. and Geneva cross in white metal; sword similar to the old sergeant's sword, with bronzed scabbard, to be attached by means of hooks and slings."

PERSONAL ITEMS.

MAJOR H. C. CUSHING, U. S. A., rejoined at Fort Trumbull, Conn., early in the week from a short leave.

LIEUTENANT A. M. PATCH, 4th Cavalry, has returned to Fort Huachuca, Arizona, from a trip to Los Angeles, Cal.

LIEUTENANT H. DE H. WAITE, 5th U. S. Cavalry, bade adieu to friends in Washington this week and started for Fort Reno, I. T.

CAPTAIN C. E. HARGOUS, 5th U. S. Inf., lately visiting relatives in New York City, will rejoin at Fort Keogh, Montana, about May 1.

MAJOR A. T. SMITH, 7th U. S. Infantry, leaves Fort Washakie, Wyo., in a few days, to be absent until October next in search of health.

MAJOR C. L. HEIZMANN, Post Surgeon, Fort Ontario, N. Y., left there early in the week for Washington, to sit on the Hospital Corps Board.

SECRETARY OF WAR ENDICOTT returned to Washington early in the week from a short visit to Massachusetts. On his way he visited in New York.

MISS COWELL will kindly read "Onalinda" in Chickering Hall, New York, on Tuesday next, for the benefit of the Indian Training School at Carlisle, Penn.

LIEUTENANT W. H. COFFIN, 5th U. S. Artillery, returned to Fort Schuyler, N. Y. H., on Wednesday from a visit to his father, Professor Coffin, U. S. N., at Washington.

MAJOR MORSE K. TAYLOR, Surgeon, U. S. A., now on duty at Fort Sill but to be retired for age, May 14, goes in a few days to San Antonio, Texas, which he has fixed upon as his home.

COLONEL J. R. SMITH, Surgeon, U. S. A., left New York City for Washington early in the week to sit on the Board which met on Thursday to prepare rules for the government of the Hospital Corps, U. S. A.

COLONEL J. S. MASON, 9th Inf., of Whipple Barracks, goes to Fort Thomas, A. T., next week, to preside over the Court-martial appointed by General Miles for the trial of Lieut. R. D. Read, Jr., 10th Cavalry.

MAJOR WILLIAM SINCLAIR, 3d U. S. Artillery, commandant of Mount Vernon Barracks, Ala., is making speedy preparation for the reception at that post of the Indian prisoners to be sent there from Fort Marion, Fla.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL ABSALOM BAIRD, U. S. A., grand marshal of the procession at the Garfield Statue dedication, May 12, has issued a call to non-military societies desiring to participate to communicate with him.

LIEUTENANT R. W. HOYT, 11th U. S. Infantry, Quartermaster at Bismarck, D. T., has been warmly thanked by Col. Sheafe, commanding 2d Regiment, Dakota National Guard, for valuable and useful suggestions in a revision of the Military Code of Dakota.

THE funeral of the late Major J. E. Blaine, Paymaster, U. S. A., was expected to take place at South Bend Ind., early in the week, but owing to the indisposition of Mrs. Blaine and her inability to start immediately from Hot Springs, it was postponed until the last of the week.

LIEUTENANT H. L. HARRIS, 1st U. S. Artillery, has succeeded Lieut. J. M. K. Davis as regimental adjutant, the latter having held the position since August, 1877. Lieut. Harris is a well qualified officer of 18 years' service, Lieut. Davis, who is an exceedingly popular gentleman, will remain on duty at the Presidio.

LIEUTENANT C. A. L. TOTTEN, 4th U. S. Artillery, visited friends in New York this week and on Wednesday evening delivered before the 23d Regt., N. G., S. N. Y., at Brooklyn, an interesting lecture on "The Romance of History." The subject being one which the lecturer has made a special study for years, was skilfully handled.

LIEUTENANT HAYDN S. COLE, 3d U. S. Infantry, was married, April 27, at St. Louis, to Miss Mary Meuse, daughter of Mrs. M. E. H. Meuse, of that city. The ceremony was performed at the Central Presbyterian Church, in the presence of many relatives and friends. The married couple go to Fort Custer, Montana, after a short wedding tour.

IT is related that while Mr. Blaine was recently ill at Fort Gibson, I. T., Dr. Mudd made an examination of his lungs and then said to Col. Coppinger in an undertone: "He'll come out all right; he's strong enough for a prize fighter." Mr. Blaine heard the latter part of the sentence and remarked: "Coppinger, perhaps, after all, I have mistaken my vocation. Doctor, am I too old to train?"

LIEUTENANT P. H. RAY, 8th U. S. Infantry, of Fort Niobrara, goes to Omaha for duty as Acting Judge-Advocate on Gen. Crook's staff, which gives him while on that detail the rank, pay and allowances of a Captain of Cavalry. Major Henry, 9th Cav., in addition to his other duties has been looking after the Bureau of Military Justice of the Platte since Col. Burnham went to San Francisco.

LIEUTENANT F. M. H. KENDRICK, 7th U. S. Inf., of Columbus Barracks, O., was in St. Paul this week.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SHERIDAN, attended by Colonel Kellogg, A. D. C., visited New York early in the week.

COLONEL J. F. WADE, 5th U. S. Cavalry, now at Fort Apache, Ariz., will join at Fort Riley, Kansas, early in May.

LIEUTENANT H. E. TUTHERLY, 1st U. S. Cav., will come East from Wyoming soon to spend a couple of months' leave.

COLONEL P. C. HAINS, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, spent most of the week at Fort Monroe, Va., on board duty.

CAPTAIN JOHN PITMAN, Ordnance Corps, U. S. A., has returned to Fort A. Lincoln, Dak., from a brief visit to St. Paul.

GENERAL CHAUNCEY MCKEEVER, U. S. A., has returned to San Francisco from a pleasant visit to Santa Barbara, Cal.

GENERAL WILLIAM T. SHERMAN, U. S. Army, and Senator John Sherman visited their home at Woodbury, Conn., on Tuesday, to look after the graves of their ancestors in the village cemetery.

MR. EDWARD BATES DORSEY offers to be one of the twenty or more to subscribe $100 each to raise a fund toward supplying the more urgent deficiencies of the library of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

GENERAL J. G. PARKE, U. S. A., was a recent guest at the Brevoort House, New York City, preparatory to sailing for Europe. There seems to be no doubt now that he is booked for West Point and will return in season to take charge next fall.

GENERAL H. A. MORROW, U. S. A., presiding over the Court of Inquiry at Fort Robinson, to inquire into the circumstances connected with the recent theft of public funds from Major D. N. Bash, Paymaster, U. S. A., expected to finish the proceedings this week.

ALMOST the very day Gen. A. W. Greely, of the Signal Bureau, received his promotion to brigadier-general, a little girl baby was born into the family. A few days later Gen. Greely received a letter, without date or signature, enclosing a check for $500, which the writer desired invested for the benefit of little miss, until her eighteenth birthday. He also desired that the baby should be given the name of Rose. This was not practicable, however. General Greely, after making a number of unsuccessful efforts to discover the donor, decided to accept the gift in the spirit in which it was tendered, and the money has been placed to the baby's credit.

CAPTAIN S. P. JOCELYN, 21st U. S. Infantry, will leave Fort Du Chesne, Utah, next week for a couple of months for the benefit of his health.

PROF. W. H. C. BARTLETT, U. S. A., retired, spent a few days at Governor's Island this week, the guest of his son-in law, Maj. Gen. J. M. Schofield.

LIEUT. E. S. DUDLEY, U. S. A., has recently been elected Right Eminent Grand Commander of the Knights Templars of Nebraska, and was duly installed at Beatrice April 20.

MAJOR H. N. ADAMS, Corps of Engineers, lately on duty under Gen. Duane, has entered upon duty in the office of the Secretary of War, especially with reference to engineering matters.

THE measles have prevailed among the children of the officers of the 4th Art. at Fort Adams of late. The disease was, however, of a mild type and all the children are either well or convalescent.

COLONEL EDWARD HATCH, 9th U. S. Cavalry, makes but a short stay at Fort McKinney, Wyo., since his return from Fort Du Chesne, and now goes with his headquarters to Fort Robinson, Neb.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND, it is expected, will be present at the dedication of the Soldiers' and Sailors' monument at East Rock Park, New Haven, Conn., June 17. Gens. Sherman and Sheridan and many other prominent men are also expected.

MISS LA MIRE SCOTT, daughter of Chaplain Winfield Scott, U. S. A., of Angel Island, Cal., has painted an excellent life-size portrait of Maj.-Gen. O. O. Howard, U. S. A., which is now on exhibition at one of the principal music stores of San Francisco.

A DESPATCH from Key West, Fla., reports that a plot was laid during the visit of Senator John Sherman to a plantation on the island of Cuba for his capture by banditti and which he escaped by departing just five minutes before the banditti arrived.

LIEUTENANT GILLETTE, of the U. S. Engineer Corps, took part in an amateur theatrical performance in Flushing, L. I., Wednesday evening. The proceeds of the play were for the benefit of the Flushing Hospital fund. Tom Hood's "Plot and Passion" was the play set forth.

GENERAL SHERMAN, N. T. Sprague, Levi M. Bates, Gen. Charles H. T. Collis, Gen. Horace Porter, and Frank Work united in a circular extending a general invitation to a meeting which was held Wednesday evening, April 28, at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, looking to a permanent organization to provide for the annual celebration of General Grant's birthday, April 27.

JEFFERSON DAVIS, in the New Orleans Picayune of Sunday morning, April 23, replies to the communication of Gen. Beauregard in that paper of the previous Sunday animadverting on the remarks of the former delivered at the time of the unveiling of the bronze equestrian statue of Albert Sidney Johnston at Metairie Cemetery, in New Orleans, on the 6th of April.

SECRETARY OF WAR ENDICOTT, says a Washington correspondent, has ordered, with regard to callers upon him at the War Department, that all cards shall be delivered at once to him, and he will make an effort to see all who call on him during the appointed hours. Mr. Endicott has discharged the duties of his office as faithfully as any man of his physical strength could do, and although slow in some things, his course on the whole has been very creditable to him.

CAPTAIN J. J. O'CONNELL, U. S. A., says the Cincinnati Gazette, is being congratulated on all sides on having at last received his captaincy. "He has spent a lifetime in constant and arduous service on the frontier, and has had the mortification, along with other gallant officers, to see several times carpet soldiers who were suffering around Willard's in Washington or on soft staff duty promoted over his head. The extra bar is well deserved, and we hope the Major's gold oak leaf may not be very long in sprouting.

THE remains of Peter S. Ney, who came to North Carolina in 1816 and taught school for a number of years, are to be exhumed May 3 for the purpose of settling the question whether he was not the French Marshal who surrendered with the rest of Napoleon's army after Waterloo. The skull of Marshal Ney had been trephined and the object of the exhumation is to ascertain whether there are marks of such an operation on the cranium of the mysterious exile who died and was buried in the old North State. According to well-authenticated history Marshal Ney was executed for treason in 1815, but there is a tradition that, like Soult and Grouchy, he escaped by flight and made his way to America.

THE long pending vacancy on the list of Army post chaplains, occasioned by the retirement of Post Chaplain Rayner, was filled, April 23, by the appointment of Rev. Wm. K. Tully, of Fla. This selection was made after the President had examined the papers of a hundred or more applicants, and was the result of strong social and political endorsements. His papers bore the names of Secretaries Vance, Cole, Brown, Butler, Berry, Beck, and other Southern secretaries; Representatives Springer, Randall, and forty or fifty other prominent members; all the State officers of Florida, and many prominent citizens of the South. Chaplain Tully was born at Princeton, New York, Nov. 9, 1851, and is consequently 36 years of age. He is of the Presbyterian faith, and is well known and highly esteemed by members of that denomination in the Southern States.

MISS FLORENCE HOYT, a niece of Gen. Sherman, was married, April 27, at New York City, to Mr. W. K. Otis. The General and Senator Sherman were present.

ASSISTANT SURGEON C. E. WOODRUFF U. S. A., will join at Fort Wayne, Mich., early next week, as temporary assistant to Major McElderry, post surgeon.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL J. S. POLAND, 21st Infantry, and Lieut. F. B. Taylor, 9th Cav., are the latest admitted patients to the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs.

WE regret to learn that sickness has prevented Gen. A. V. Kautz, U. S. A., from sitting on the court of inquiry at Fort Robinson, Neb., in which Paymr. Bash is interested.

"THE Fordham Monthly," published by the St. John's College, at which Lieut. H. G. Squier, 7th Cavalry, is Professor of Military Science and Tactics, has in its April number an article on the "Coast Defences," by Jos. I. Kelly, cadet 2d lieutenant, class of 1887.

GENERAL A. W. GREELY, chief signal officer, U. S. A., is considering the subject of more suitable quarters for the Signal Service. The Butler Mansion on Capitol Hill, Washington, is one of the buildings which have been tendered, and its selection is under consideration.

H. C. PARSONS, of Natural Bridge, Va., says that Gen. Sheridan is making up a party of friends to take a long horseback ride down through the Shenandoah Valley, the scene of his old cavalry exploits. The party will start some time next month. Senator Don Cameron will be one of the number.

MISS CARROLL, step-daughter of J. Fenner Lee, Secretary of Legation at Vienna, recently married a gentleman with a most striking title. He is "the Count Anton von Heussenstamm of Heissenstein and Grafenhausen, Baron of Starhemberg, Chamberlain and Lieutenant in the Uhlan Regiment of Archduke Carl Ludwig, No. 7."

THE Fort Davis News of April 22 says: "A well-attended hop was given in honor of Lieuts. Dunning and Cowles on Saturday evening. They are down from El Paso, guests of Major W. H. Clapp, for a few days, and leave on Monday....Dr. Paul Clendenin has been here on a short leave from Pena Col., visiting his parents and many friends."

THE officers of the Line now on special duty under the Chief Signal Officer are: Lieut. H. H. C. Dunwoody, 4th Art., originally detailed June 4, '72; Lieut. R. E. Thompson, 6th Inf., Aug. 12, '86; Lieut. I. M. Woodruff, 5th Inf., Jan. 17, '83, and Lieut. Robert Craig, 4th Art., March 12, 87. Under the law another officer could be detailed to duty as acting signal officer, but it is understood that the Secretary of War has refused to allow another assignment.

THE trial of Lieut. J. H. G. Wilcox, 7th Cav., for duplication of pay accounts, etc., was commenced at Fort Snelling on Monday. A despatch from Fort Snelling says: "What probably has never been done before within the memory of the oldest officer—Wilcox has been confined since his arrest in the common convict prison here. He was not furnished with the charges against him in the limit set by law after his arrest, and nevertheless he was not released, as the law in such cases provides. The young man comes from Kentucky, where his family still lives. He is of high social connection."

THE New York Tribune, in an article on "What Public Men Drink," says: "Gen. Arthur drank gin straight when he felt the need of a little stimulant. Gen. Grant used to come in (Fifth Avenue Hotel) occasionally in his last years, and drink a bottle of Bass's ale at the bar. Gen. W. T. Sherman has stuck to one brand of whiskey so long that others have come to ask for it as Sherman whiskey. He drinks a good big drink but not often. Gen. Phil Sheridan takes a square drink of the same beverage and has no use for water. Senator John Sherman is a light man on liquor. He takes a bit of whiskey rarely. Gen. Hancock took whiskey, but above all things he liked a bottle of champagne."

THE New York Sun says: "The recent election of Gen. E. Porter Alexander, a distinguished graduate of West Point, and for many years a close student of scientific railroading, as President of the Georgia Central, and his selection of Mr. M. S. Belknap, a graduate of l'Ecole Polytechnique of Paris, as general manager, may be considered as the most conspicuous effort of the day to secure in the South a management combining the highest technical education with the practical knowledge gained by long experience. The result can scarcely be doubtful, although it is certain that many railroads are financially successful without such management, while not a few have failed with it."

THE New York Sun tells a story of Mayor Hewitt of New York and his brother-in-law, ex-Mayor Cooper, having lost $500,000 by an Executive order. It says: "The President made an order closing the Cheyenne and Arrapahoe Agencies in the Indian Territories. Hewitt and Cooper jointly had large cattle interests there. To comply with the order with respect to the limitation of time required the transfer of an almost countless number of cattle when the climatic change involved peril. Hewitt besought the President to either annul or modify the order until a season more favorable for the transfer. The President refused. The result was that the transfer was made under unfavorable and unhealthy vicissitudes, and the outcome was that Hewitt and Cooper lost $500,000."

HON. J. M. PALMER, of Springfield, Ill., has declined the appointment as a member of the board of visitors to West Point, on account of pressure of business. The President will name some one to take his place in a day or two.

THE following Mexican War claims were allowed by the second comptroller this week: S. B. Maxey, Bvt. 1st Lieut. 7th Inf., $90; Henry S. Turner, Capt. 1st Dragoons, $150; Oden Bowie, Capt. U. S. Voltigeurs, $45, and Chas. S. Merchant, Capt. 2d Art., $15.

THE longevity pay case of General Adam Badeau, in which his right to a commission as a retired Army officer is involved, was argued in the Court of Claims by Maj. Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, U. S. A., retired, on the 28th inst. A decision is looked for on Monday next.

MAJOR-GENERAL SCHOFIELD, U. S. Army, says the Cincinnati Gazette of April 27, "will arrive at the Newport Barracks this evening to select a site for the new barracks and to arrange for the disposal of the present location. Gen. Schofield is without prejudice in the matter, and he will no doubt give respectful attention to the claims of Bellevue." As a matter of fact, Gen. Schofield will not be at Newport Barracks, Ky., until next week on the business in question.

CAPT. CASS DURHAM, 18th U. S. Infantry, who has been absent from his regiment on sick leave since May 9, '85, is still unable to rejoin by reason of his disability, and probabilities are that he will soon be examined for retirement. It was thought last fall that he would be retired, his application to that end, approved by his colonel, having been forwarded to the War Department, but for some reason his case was not taken up. His regiment contains the senior first lieutenant of the Infantry arm, whose commission as such bears date Oct. 14, 1864.

THE Vancouver Independent of April 20 says: Gen. John Gibbon has been elected a vice president of the Military Service Institution....Col. Thos. M. Anderson, 21st Inf., lectures April 27 before Ellsworth Post, G. A. R., in Vancouver, on "American Loyalty"....The ladies and gentlemen of Vancouver Barracks gave at the Standard Theatre in Vancouver another rendition of the comedy of "Our Boys," April 13, to a good audience. The dramatic association of 1886-7 at the barracks is a decided success.

LIEUT. C. A. L. TOTTEN, 4th U. S. Artillery, delivered a lecture entitled "The Romance of History" at Historical Hall, Brooklyn, N. Y., on May 27, before an excellent audience. It was given under the auspices of the 23d Regt., N. G. S. N. Y., the lecturer being introduced by Gen. Barnes. The lecture was illustrated by stereopticon views representing geographical descriptions, scenes in Palestine, Queen Victoria's coronation, the coronation chair and other incidents attending that event, the excellence of its diction and delivery securing the close attention of the audience. At its conclusion the lecturer was warmly applauded.

THE Chattanooga Times, referring to the completion of the wonderful inclined railroad on Lookout Mountain, of war memory, says: "The idea of building the incline was first conceived by Major W. R. King, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., present at the opening. He was stationed here for eight years in charge of the Tennessee River improvement, and his office was in full view of Lookout. While sitting there his mind, ever active and always alert, conceived the magnificent project. He purchased a place on the mountain and for an entire year perfected his plans. He then associated certain gentlemen with him, and with characteristic Chattanooga pluck, they were quick to execute."

MISS KITTY SHARPE, the accomplished daughter of Gen. G. H. Sharpe and sister of Captain H. G. Sharpe, U. S. A., on duty at West Point, was married at Kingston, N. Y., April 27, to the Hon. Ira Davenport. The marriage was performed in the presence of a large company of friends at the First Reformed Church. The ushers, Mr. Robert Ray Hamilton, Col. James M. Varnum, Mr. Severin Sharpe and Capt. Sharpe, U. S. A., preceded six bridesmaids—Misses Susan and Louisa Warren, Miss Charlotte Shepherd, Miss May McElroy, niece of the late President Arthur; Miss Fannie Rogers, niece of Mr. Davenport, and Miss Helen Janeway. General Sharpe and the bride walked arm-in-arm directly behind the bridesmaids.

P. A. PAYMASTER W. W. BARRY, U. S. N., registered at the Occidental Hotel, San Francisco, a few days ago.

PROFESSOR C. E. MUNROE, U. S. N., has been invited to be present at the session of the British Association for the Promotion of Science, to be held at Manchester, England, in August next.

MISS FLORENCE HAMILTON, a daughter of the late Surg. J. W. Hamilton, U. S. N., was married at Brooklyn, April 27, to Mr. F. L. Smith. Among those present at the wedding were Capt. Milton Haxtun, U. S. N., and Mrs. Haxtun.

LIEUT. EMORY, U. S. N., and wife have taken a house adjoining the Richmond Flats, Washington, D. C., and will not return to their Connecticut avenue residence, which is being fumigated and thoroughly cleansed. Since the death of their little daughter the rest of the children have been with General and Mrs. Emory. Lieut. and Mrs. Emory soon start for California, where Mrs. Emory will reside with her family for the next three years, during the sea term of her husband.

THE marriage of Asst. Engineer Frank S. Schell, U. S. N., to Miss Gay Warner Miller, daughter of W. G. Miller, Esq., of Richmond, which took place at Richmond, April 27th, was an event that will long be remembered in Richmond society. The wedding ceremony was performed in St. James Church, which was filled to overflowing by Richmond's best people. The Rev. Dr. Peterkin officiated. The bride and bridesmaids were handsomely dressed in white silk and carried large bouquets. The groom and groomsmen wore their special full dress uniforms. Ensign R. C. Smith, did the honors as best man. The other groomsmen were Ensign H. K. Knapp, Asst. Engineers M Bevington, W. S. Smith, and F. C. Bieg.

COMMODORE WM. RONCKENDORF, U. S. Navy, retired, looked up old friends in New York City this week.

MRS. REDFIELD sailed, April 16, from San Francisco for China, to join her husband, Paymr. Redfield, U. S. N., who is on duty on the Monocacy.

LIEUTENANT E. K. MOORE and wife and their sister, Mrs. Frank Courtis, have established themselves at 54 Washington street, Newport, R. I., for the season

LIEUT. CHAS. D. KENNEDY, U. S. Revenue Marine, was married at Oakland, Cal., April 19, to Miss Genevieve Wright. Lieut. Kennedy is soon to go to the Arctic in the Bear.

OFFICERS of the Navy Mutual Aid Association are reminded that Paymr. L. A. Frailey was elected to succeed Paymr. Stancliff as Treasurer, and much inconvenience will be avoided if this fact is borne in mind when paying their assessments.

P. A. ENGR. J. C. KAFER, U. S. N., who has been spending the winter at Thomasville, Ga., for his health, is reported as little improved. Mrs. Kafer has been with her husband, and will accompany him North as soon as the heated term renders a change of climate desirable.

LIEUT. P. J. WERLICH, U. S. N., accompanied by Mrs. Werlich, are paying a short visit at Fortress Monroe, being domiciled for the present at the Hygeia Hotel. The recent bereavement in the death of their only child will be recalled by this paragraph, and a change of scene was regarded as necessary for Mrs. Werlich under the circumstances.

LIEUT. J. T. NEWTON, U. S. N., who is detached from the steel cruiser Atlanta and assigned to duty with Comdr. Evans as assistant inspector of steel for the new ships, is an officer of exceptional ability in his profession, as is natural to expect, for he is the son of Gen. John Newton, U. S. A. Lieut. Newton will leave at once for his new field of duty.

ADML. LORD ALCESTER has just celebrated his 66th birthday. Another officer of the English Navy, Rear Admiral Herbert, if he had it to do over again, would delay his birth just one month. He was retired when at the head of the list and within a month of his promotion to Vice-Admiral, which would have secured to him five years more on the active list.

CHIEF ENGR. HARRIS, of the Bureau of Steam Engineering, whose recent trip to New York was in connection with matters on the Boston, has resumed the duties of his desk at the Department. Mr. Harris was much impressed with the completeness of the motive power of the Boston, and thinks economy of space occupied by machinery can no further go.

ASST. ENGR. C. G. TALCOTT, U. S. N., who has lately reported for duty in the Bureau of Steam Engineering, is a graduate of the class of cadet engineers who entered the Naval Academy in September, 1875. Mr. Talcott graduated June 10, 1881, and is a member of the same class with Asst. Engr. Bevington, also on duty at the Bureau. Asst. Engr. Talcott assumes the duty lately performed by Cadet Engr. Byrne.

SAN FRANCISCO, says a correspondent, is redolent of royalty, and one can scarcely pass through the courtyards of Palace Hotel without rubbing shoulders against some titled dignitary. Queen Kapiolani held a levee April 23. Following the representatives of civic and military state came a delegation from the Navy composed of Commodore Belknap, Commander Coghlan, Chief Engineer County, Maj. Collier, Lieut. Qualtrough and Pay Director Dennison. Prince Leopold and Prince Esterhazy have by no means passed unnoticed, Prince Leopold is the grand nephew of Emperor William. The princes leave for New York April 23 and Queen Kapiolani next week.

PAYMASTER L. A. FRAILEY, U. S. N., reported for duty at the Navy Department on Tuesday, and assumed charge of the books and accounts of the Navy Mutual Aid Association, relieving Paymr. Stancliff. The latter officer is assigned to duty in the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing, having been on special duty as secretary and treasurer of the Navy Mutual Aid since Dec. 1885. The last annual report of the treasurer of this Navy Life Insurance Company, which it is in effect, shows a balance of cash on hand of $35,039.43. The total membership at this present time is 779, and the resulting benefit amounts to no less than $3,644.20. The last death assessed for was that of Capt. E. P. Lull, U. S. N., who died at the Pensacola Navy-yard March 5, 1887.

THE father of the late Bishop Lee was, when a young man, a midshipman in the Royal Navy of England. His principal associates and companions were Nelson, afterward Lord Admiral, and the Duke of Clarence. Young Lee was a high-spirited middy, and having engaged in a quarrel with a superior officer, promptly challenged him to a duel. For this he was tried and sentenced to death, but owing to the influence of the Duke of Clarence, the sentence was commuted to dismissal from the service. Undismayed and undaunted he was no sooner set ashore than he wrote out another challenge to the same officer and sent it back by the boatswain, who had set him ashore. It was accepted. Lee left his foe dead upon the ground, fled to America and entered the merchant marine. It is related of him that in his latter years when reading of the victorious career of his former messmate, Lord Nelson, which ended at the battle of the Nile, he would pace up and down the verandah of his home in Cambridge and lamented the day he left the navy, protesting that he was as good a seaman as Nelson, and might have won honors equal to his. He was for many years one of the boldest of New England's navigators.

PAY OF THE ARMY.

IN your issue of April 2, 1887, there is a long letter on "Paying the Army," signed "K.," in which the writer upholds, by some very weak and improbable arguments, the present pernicious system of paying the Army. From the tone of the communication referred to one might imagine it was written by a member of the Pay Department. If the figures given by "K." showing the great advantages to the interests of the Government by the present system are correct, it is a sad comment upon the officers of the Army that disbursed the cash from 1808 to 1811, and far sadder for the same class from 1811 to 1816, when the percentage of loss and cost of disbursing amounted to 7.32, as against three-fourths of one per cent. under present system. Did it strike "K." that if the expense of all the Courts-martial entailed by the present system were added to the three-fourths of losses and costs referred to that the expense to the Government is largely increased, an increase of expense which can be demonstrated by any person who would take the time and patience to sum up the loss to the Government caused by the thousands of Courts-martial annually growing out of that curse to the Army "pay day."

Evidently "K." had not the most remote idea that a system might, could or should be devised which would eliminate the corps of paymasters in toto. No matter what system might be adopted there is one indisputable fact remains in spite of argument to the contrary, and that is the fact that the present system of paying the troops but once in two months is pernicious to discipline at almost every post in the Service, and that "pay day" has been looked upon for years back by the company officers and many post commanders as the one day in each two months to be dreaded. With all due deference for the opinion of "K.," the communication of the non-commissioned officer published in your issue of March 19 last has the inherent weight of making a protest against a system which he knew by practical experience was inherently wrong, and if he did put his criticism in "a rather petulant" manner it does not affect the inherent weight of argument against the present system.

The JOURNAL, in advocating shorter time for making payments to the enlisted men of the Army, is in accord, I would venture to say, with a very large majority of the Army. * * *

TWO ARMY SOBRIQUETS.

REFERRING to the clippling from the Boston Commercial Advertiser which appears in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL of April 2, under the caption of "More Amusing than True," permit me to say that to the artillery service "Johnny-come-lately" is perfectly well known, and has been these fifteen years. He is a good fellow, is Johnny, but when he first came he was awfully strict, and his sobriquet has followed him. As to "Old Boots," they called him "Old Squashum" in those days.

POWDER MONKEY.

INSIGNIA FOR LONGEVITY SERVICE.

IT is suggested, as an additional ornament to our uniform, and as a means of indicating length of service, that for each five years' service, officers be permitted to wear one small gold or silver ball, bar, leaf, eagle wing or star—according to rank—on each side of the coat collar, viz.: 2d Lieutenants, small silver balls; 1st lieutenants, small gold balls; captains, small silver bars; majors, small gold leaves; lieut.-colonels, small silver leaves; colonels, silver eagle wings; general officers, gold or silver stars.

TARGET PRACTICE.

THE following letter written Colonel Henry by General Robbins, Inspector of Rifle Practice, National Guard of New York, may be of interest to those who question scores made in target practice:

S. N. Y. DEPARTMENT OF RIFLE PRACTICE,
NEW YORK, April 19, 1887.

Major Guy V. Henry, U. S. A.:

MY DEAR MAJOR: Allow me to thank you for the spirit of your letter published in the last number of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL. I am one who believes in the honor of men and, though I know there have been instances of false scoring, and possibly bribery of scorers, in our National Guard, we have generally found them out, and the punishment has been quick and severe. To-day, I believe, our scores are correct, and I prefer to think that most shooters would not willingly make a false score. We try to inculcate the idea that anyone who would shall be sent to Coventry by all, and the effect is good. Each year finds less apparent need of the safeguards thrown around our practice.

Yours, respectfully,
(Signed) CHAS. F. ROBBINS.

(From the Memoirs of Count Beust.)

COUNT BEUST DROPPED THE HAM.

I CANNOT conclude the reminiscences of Paris without mentioning the Court. Even the adversaries of the Orleans family must own that its members have personally much that is sympathetic and attractive, and have never omitted to do graceful and pleasing things. Thus, although I then occupied a subordinate position, I was invited before my departure to dine with the royal family at St. Cloud. The King was quite a bourgeois on such occasions, and carved himself, a task to which he was not equal, so that it could perhaps be said of him: "Qu'il savait mieux trancher les difficultés que les viandes."

His awkwardness caused an accident to befall me, which was fortunately not attended with any bad consequences. A dish of ham was handed to me, and I took a slice to which another slice was hanging. It fell on the dress of the Queen, next to whom I was seated, but her Majesty did not notice it. I did not lose my presence of mind, and the moment the Queen was looking another way, I made a bold move and seized the slice of ham and put it in my coat pocket.

COURT OF CLAIMS.

CLINTON M. OSTRANDER was appointed an acting paymaster in the United States Navy by Francis J. Higginson, Commander in the United States Navy, at Canton, May 6, 1884, and the claimant on that date assumed the duties of the office of paymaster on board the Monocacy, and performed them until Oct. 22, 1884. He was then relieved and ordered to proceed to the United States. The Court of Claims has disallowed the claim for compensation prescribed by Section 1556, Rev. Stats., to the day and date of the proper legal revocation of his appointment. It is held that the appointment of an acting paymaster is merely the assignment to certain duties of the person so appointed, and no revocation is necessary. The appointment was at an end as soon as the necessity for the performance of the duty to which the appointee was assigned ceased to exist.

DISABLED SOLDIERS.

THE board of managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers met April 19 in room 6 at the New York Hotel. The board will visit California probably in June to select the site for the new home. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Gen. W. B. Franklin, president; Col. L. A. Harris, first vice-president; Gen. John A. Martin, second vice-president; Gen. M. T. McMahon, secretary. There are now 8,600 inmates in the five homes in charge of the board. New hospital buildings are to be erected at the Dayton and Leavenworth homes. The cost of supporting the members of the homes last year was $122.27 per capita.

ROYAL COURTESIES TO NAVAL OFFICERS.

ON the evening of February 26, Admiral and Mrs. Franklin, Capt. Dewey, Lieut-Commander Hitchcock and Flag-Lieutenant Sargent were entertained at dinner by the King of Greece, in the palace at Athens, when the members of the royal family and high government officials were present. The dinner being given to our commander-in-chief, he was given the place of honor on the Queen's left, while Mrs. Franklin was put on the left of the King; the places on the right of King and Queen respectively being, according to court etiquette, reserved for royalty, which, in this case, consisted of the eldest princess and the crown prince of Greece.

A week later the commander-in-chief made arrangements to give a return breakfast on board ship as an expression of his appreciation of the honor he and his staff had received, and the 8th instant was appointed by the King as the date when he could visit the Pensacola. At noon on that day the admiral's barge, which the King expressed a preference for, although having many excellent boats of his own, in charge of Lieut. Sargent, met the royal visitors at the Piræus landing and conveyed them to the ship where they were received by Admiral Franklin and staff. King George was accompanied by Queen Olga, the Crown Prince Constantine, the Princess Alexandra and suite, consisting of Col. Hadjipetras, master of ceremonies, and aide-de-camp to the King, and the Queen's maid of honor. The best proof of the enjoyment experienced by the royal party was afforded by the fact that they remained on board until nearly four o'clock, when they left the ship in our barge. When the barge was well clear of the ship's side a personal salute of twenty-one guns was fired, the marine guard being at present arms on the forward bridge, with the band on the forecastle performing the Greek national air.

U. S. ARTILLERY SCHOOL.

FORT MONROE, Va., April 26.

NED FARRELL, with his brace of brisk mules, having mown the parade ground last week so as to cause it look like a velvet lawn, partly occasioned the remark of a strange gentleman visiting the fort last Saturday. On entering he was very agreeably surprised, and compared the scenes before him to those of the recreation ground of a big city on some special holiday. Two games of base ball and three or four of lawn tennis were going on nearly at the same time, and numbers of little ones gyrating on their bicycles.

Lawn tennis is a fashionable game here, and we have good players. When officers and visitors, and ladies too, occupy some half dozen courts in their handsome costumes, and are eagerly watched by admiring friends, who cheer on and encourage their favorite sides, the scene becomes really exciting.

The youngsters organized a club here a few days ago which they called "The Young Artillerists." They are mainly composed of the sons of officers and enlisted men, and with true American smartness, appealed to the officers for equipment funds. They succeeded in no time, and may be seen any day in their fancy new uniform. Last Saturday they played against and obtained an easy victory over "The New Cruisers," a kindred organization from Chesapeake City.

The young artillerists desire, through the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, to thank the officers and others who gave them such a speedy and successful start, and in all the ardor of youthful patriotism, state that whether in the ball field or battlefield, their greatest pride will be to prove themselves true Americans and to follow in the footsteps of their fathers.

The Artillery School B. B. C. has notified, through the columns of the Norfolk Virginian, its readiness to meet any visiting club. Not for money, but amusement; for promoting national game and for maintaining that friendly intercourse that has for years existed between the soldiers of the U. S. Army and the citizens of Virginia. No gate money is wanted here. The fort is free and open to all; so are our libraries and museum, so are our "hops" and theatrical performances, and so will our base ball grounds be. B. B.

REVENUE MARINE.

While performing winter cruising duty from Dec. 1, 1886, to March 31, 1887, the revenue steamer Dallas, Captain Frank Barr commanding, assisted 17 vessels, boarded 274 and cruised 6,763 miles.

The following assignments of Revenue Marine officers were made this week:

Chief Engineer John R. Dally from the McCulloch to the Johnson at Milwaukee.

THE engagement of Miss May Buffington, daughter of J. W. Buffington, of Troy, N. Y., to H. Raymond Asserson, son of Civil Engr. P. C. Asserson, U. S. N., is announced.

MAJOR R. C. PARKER has returned to Washington with his family, and will occupy his residence, 1214 Connecticut Avenue.

THE ARMY.

G. O. 31, H. Q. A., April 13, 1887.

By direction of the Secretary of War, par. 2790 of the Regulations is amended to read as follows:

STANDARDS AND GUIDONS FOR MOUNTED REGIMENTS.

2790. Each regiment will have a silken standard, and each troop or mounted battery a silken guidon. The standard for cavalry to be made of a single thickness of seamless yellow banner silk, to be four feet fly and three feet on the lance. To have the coat of arms of the United States, as on the standard sample on file in the office of the Q. M. Gen., and which may be described as follows: An eagle with outstretched wings; on its breast a U. S. shield; in the right talon an olive branch with red berries, and in his left ten arrows bunched. A red scroll held in eagle's beak, with the motto, "E pluribus unum," in yellow; over the scroll a group of thirteen white stars, surmounted by an arc of diverging sun rays, also in white. Below the eagle a red scroll, with the number and name of regiment in yellow, as for example, "3d U. S. Cavalry." The design, letters, and figures to be embroidered in silk, the same on both sides of the standard. The standard to be trimmed on three sides with United States silk knotted fringe two and one-half inches deep. Lance to be nine feet six inches long, including metal spear and ferrule. To have a waterproof case or cover, to protect the standard when furled.

By command of Lieutenant General Sheridan:
R. C. DRUM, Adjt.-Gen.

WAR DEPARTMENT, A. G. O., April 25, 1887.

The following regulations prescribed by the President, in conformity with Sec. 2 of the act entitled "An act to amend Sec. 1661 of the Revised Statutes, making an annual appropriation to provide arms and equipments for the militia" (see G. O. 16, c. s., from this office), are published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, April 22, 1887.

1. Each Territory shall, if included within the provisions of said act, annually receive arms, ordnance stores, quartermaster's stores and camp equipage equivalent to the quota of a State having the least representation in Congress, and the District of Columbia shall annually receive arms, ordnance stores, quartermaster's stores and camp equipage not exceeding double the quota of a State having the least representation in Congress.

2. Arms, ordnance stores, quartermaster's stores and camp equipage shall be issued to the Territories on requisitions of the governors thereof, and to the District of Columbia on requisitions approved by the senior general of the District Militia present for duty. Returns shall be made annually by the senior general of the District Militia in the manner as required by Secs. 3 and 4 of the act above referred to, in the case of States and Territories.

3. It is forbidden to make issues to States and Territories in excess of the amount to their credit under the provisions of Sec. 1161, Revised Statutes, as amended by the above act.

4. The regulations established by President Pierce, April 30, 1855, under the act approved March 30, 1855, are hereby revoked.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

By order of the Secretary of War:
R. C. DRUM, Adjt.-Gen.

CIRCULAR 3, H. Q. A., April 23, 1887.

The following decisions, rulings, etc., have been made during the month of March, 1887, and are published to the Army for the information of all concerned:

SUBSISTENCE OF RETIRED MEN IN HOSPITAL.

The amount which is paid a retired enlisted man as commutation of rations will be a fair and proper charge against him for subsistence while in a military hospital, and that amount will be charged accordingly, to wit: Sergeants and corporals of ordnance, 28⅛ cents per day; other enlisted men 18¾ cents per day.—(Decision Sec. War, Feb. 1, 1887.)

RATIONS OF BREAD AND FLOUR.

The ration of soft bread should never be less than 18 ounces. If a company requires more, and its allowance is increased (under G. O. 4, of 1882, from this office) to not exceeding 22 ounces, the company should not, in view of such increase, retain any of its flour rations in flour; but if a company commander elects to retain a portion of the flour (under G. O. 94, of 1886, from this office), not exceeding 2 ounces per ration, the ration of soft bread for that company should be 18 ounces, and no more.—(Decision Sec. War, letter March 8, 1887.)

COFFEE MILLS FOR USE OF COMPANIES.

The purchase of coffee mills for the use of companies is not a proper charge against the appropiations for the Quartermaster's or Subsistence Departments, but should be made from the company fund.—(Decision actg. Sec. War, letter March 15, 1887.)

ENLISTED MEN RETAINED IN SERVICE BEYOND TERMS OF ENLISTMENT.

When enlisted men are retained in service beyond the terms of their enlistments awaiting trial by court-martial, or under sentence of court-martial, their clothing accounts and retained pay should be computed at fifth-year rates to actual date of discharge as expressed in their final statements, unless forfeited by the terms of the sentence or by law and regulations.—(Decision Sec. War, letter March 19, 1887.)

REGIMENTAL STAFF OFFICERS.

A regimental commander is restricted, in his choice of regimental staff officers, to those lieutenants of the regiment who are on duty with it, and who are not at a school of instruction or with the light batteries.—(Decision Sec. War, letter March 22, 1887.)

EXPENSES INCURRED BY OFFICERS AS DEFENDANTS IN SUITS IN WHICH THE UNITED STATES IS INTERESTED.

To avoid any doubt about the method of payment of the expenses of these officers, it is better in all cases that when they are the nominal defendants in suits brought against them in the official discharge of their duties they should be subpœnaed on the part of the Government, who is the party in interest, to appear as witnesses.—(Opinion Atty. Gen.)

COMPANY COUNCILS OF ADMINISTRATION.

The time for meeting of company councils of administration should be determined by the post commander.—(Decision Lieut. Gen., letter March 16, 1887.)

TACTICS.

Par. 758, Infantry Tactics, referring to the manner of carrying the sword, applies to dismounted officers only.

Manœuvring in restricted drill-rooms and other contracted places may sometimes necessitate some simple movements not laid down in the tactics in order to change the position or formation of troops. Expedients for such purposes could well be left to the discretion of the commanding officer, and it would be unwise to prescribe how and by what commands they should be executed.

In executing the "load," etc., by the numbers, the subdivision of the motions relative to the cartridge should not be authorized. It is plainly to be inferred from the third paragraph, page 31, Infantry Tactics, that the same regularity is not expected in the execution of the motions relative to the cartridge and bayonet as in the execution of the other parts of the manual. Clock-like regularity in these motions can only be obtained by an expenditure of time that could be better employed in more useful instruction to the soldier.

Pars. 238 and 239, Infantry Tactics, prescribe that in forming column of twos from column of files, in double rank formation, the leading file advances three yards and halts, the movement being necessarily a successive one. While it is practicable to execute this movement simultaneously in single rank formation, it is believed to be the general practice in the service to execute it successively in accordance with the directions in Pars. 238 and 239, taken in connection with Par. 247.

The first sergeant does not come to "arms port" in dismissing company.

A company marching meets the colonel commanding, or other person entitled to a salute, the captain should bring the company to a "carry," and himself salute the commanding officer and all general officers. The guides and file closers do not salute.

The first sergeant should salute the captain on receiving orders to dismiss the company.

The adjutant does not return his sword when reading orders at dress parade. During the publication of the orders he drops the sword, which is held suspended by the sword-knot attached to the wrist. After he has folded up and put away the orders, he resumes the "carry," then faces about and salutes his colonel with his sword, and reports, "Sir, the orders are published."

In executing the load it is customary simply to carry the hand to the cartridge box without opening it, when cartridges are not used.

POST COMPANY GARDENS.

The appropriations for the Quartermaster's Department are not applicable to the purpose of fencing post or company gardens.—(General decision, letter March 9, 1887.)

By command of Lieut. Gen. Sheridan:
R. C. DRUM, Adjt.-Gen.

CIR., WAR DEPARTMENT, A. G. O., April 20, 1887.

The circular from this office, dated December 20, 1886, referring to the Army and Navy General Hospital at Hot Springs, Arkansas, is modified.

[The original Circular was published in JOURNAL of Jan. 8, 1887, page 469. The modifications are as follows: From the list of diseases for which relief may be expected is stricken out the words "specific infection" and especially if traceable to specific infection, from specific infection, either syphilitic or malarial, chronic alcoholism. The words "to prevent permanent disability" at the end of the 9th paragraph are stricken out. There is no change in the general features of the original circular.]

G. O. 1, DIV. OF THE MISSOURI, April 25, 1887.

Col. Edward Hatch, with the Regtl. Hdqrs., Staff, and Band, are relieved from duty at Fort McKinney, and will proceed to Fort Robinson, Neb., and take station. On account of the scarcity of quarters at Fort Robinson, Regtl. Chaplain Henry V. Plummer and the senior veterinary surgeon will remain at Fort McKinney (S. O. 39, April 18, D. Platte.)

Lieut. Ladd made nine bull's-eyes in succession with the new cavalry carbine at 300 yards. Gen. Hatch, who is a good shot, says it shoots well.

Before a G. C.-M. which convened at Fort Du Chesne, Utah, and of which Col. A. V. Kautz, 8th Inf., was president, was tried Major Frederick W. Benteen, 9th Cav. Charge 1. Drunkenness on duty—six specifications alleging drunkenness while in command of Fort Du Chesne on Sept. 25 and 27, Oct. 10, Nov. 10, 11, and 12, 1886. Charge 2. Conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman—the specification alleging that when in command of Fort Du Chesne, Nov. 11, 1886, he did conduct himself in a scandalous manner in the post trader's store, using obscene and profane language; taking off his clothes, to quarrel with citizens, and exposing his person. This to the dishonor and disrepute of the Military Service. The court found him guilty, except of the drunkenness on Sept. 27, Nov. 10, and Nov. 12, and of the words "and exposing his person" in the specification to the second charge. Guilty of both charges. The proceedings, finding, and sentence having been approved by the proper reviewing authority and the record forwarded for the action of the President of the U. S., the following are his orders indorsed thereon:

"EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, April 20, 1887.

"The proceedings and findings in the case of Major Frederick W. Benteen, 9th U. S. Cavalry, are hereby approved.

"In view of his long and honorable service and the reputation he has earned for bravery and soldierly qualities, so sadly injured by the scandalous conduct of which he has been justly found guilty and by his insubordinate behavior upon his trial, I have determined, in the hope that a remaining sense of honor and an unextinguished regard for his military profession will lead to further valuable service in the Army, to mitigate his sentence of dismissal from the Service of the United States to suspension from rank and duty for the term of one year upon half pay.

"GROVER CLEVELAND."

10th Cavalry, Colonel Benjamin H. Grierson.

Hdqrs., Santa Fe, N. M.; E, F, K, and L, Ft. Grant, A. T.; D, San Carlos, A. T.; A, C, and H, Ft. Apache, A. T.; I, Ft. Verde, A. T.; B and G, Ft. Thomas, A. T.; M, Ft. McDowell, A. T.

2nd Artillery, Colonel Romeyn B. Ayres.

The Kansas City Times says: "Indications point that Woodruff's Light Bat. F will be sent to Fort Riley. The people of Fort Leavenworth have a kindly feeling toward Col. Williston, 3d Art., the battery's former commander, but this love may be somewhat cooled for asking Gen. Sheridan to send the battery to Riley. The Colonel should have some consideration for the good people of this place."

Hdqrs., A, C,* E, H, K, and L, Washington Bks., D. C.; B, Newport Bks., Ky.; D, G, and I, Ft. McHenry, Md.; M, Ft. Monroe, Va.; F,* San Antonio, Tex.
* Light battery.

4th Artillery, Colonel Clermont L. Best.

Hdqrs., B,* D, E, G, and L, Ft. Adams, R. I.; A and C, Ft. Trumbull, Conn.; F,* Ft. Snelling, Minn.; H and K, Ft. Warren, Mass.; I, Ft. Monroe, Va.; M, Ft. Preble, Me.

5th Artillery, Colonel John Hamilton.

Hdqrs., F,* I, and H, Ft. Hamilton, N. Y.; A, C, and L, Ft. Columbus, N. Y.; G, Ft. Monroe, Va.; B, Ft. Wadsworth, N. Y.; D,* Ft. Douglas, Utah; E and K, Ft. Schuyler, N. Y.; M, Ft. Wood, N. Y. H.
* Light battery.

Private Winfield S. Miller, Bat. G, Fort Monroe, was drowned, April 25, while returning from the theatre. His body was recovered.

2nd Infantry, Colonel Frank Wheaton.

The leave on Surgeon's certificate granted 1st Lieut. Wm. R. Abercrombie is extended two months on Surgeon's certificate (S. O., April 25, H. Q. A.)

The following companies went to Bellevue Rifle Range, April 29, equipped for practice match: The right wing, under command of Capt. Mills, Cos. A, B, G, C, and E, Capts. Mills, Keller, Dempsey, Catley, and Ames, Lieuts. Pickering, Moffatt, Muhlenberg, Wilson, Wright, Rowell, and Towsley.

3rd Infantry, Colonel John R. Brooke.

DEPARTMENT NEWS.

Division of the Atlantic.—Maj.-Gen. Schofield.

Incidental to the erection of new buildings at Fort Porter, N. Y., some of the good citizens of Buffalo have been holding indignation meetings concerning the location of the guard-house, which they want put out of sight instead of at the main entrance. They are becoming quieter, however, as there is a prospect of modification.

A despatch from St. Paul says: "Owing to the great dissatisfaction over the Government's action in calling out the Regular troops to drive off the settlers on the Winnebago and Crow Creek reservations, the military orders have been modified, and an endeavor is now being made to make the move as harmless as possible."

A gentleman just returned to Minneapolis from the Winnebago and Crow Creek Reservations, says the greatest excitement exists. Indians covered with war paint and armed with Winchesters were met on the road, mounted and following the troops. The news that the soldiers would drive the settlers from the land was known in every Indian tepee, and the chant of squaws and braves is heard.

A despatch from Pierre says: Co. E, 11th Infantry, commenced to evict settlers, April 26, from the Crow Creek. A poor old widow named Ryan, with her four daughters, were requested to leave, and with tears besought Capt. Myer, U. S. A., to assist them, as they had all their earthly possessions on the claim and could not go unless aided. The generous captain ordered her household effects loaded on the Government wagon and, with the five women, had them taken to the nearest railroad station. News from Fort Sully reports that the War Department has instructed Col. Dodge to remove the settlers forthwith, but to destroy as little property as possible.

FORT BAYARD, N. M.

Among late official and social events is the arrival of Major H. C. Cook, 13th Infantry, with Mrs. Cook and family, from Fort Wingate, to take station here. Also the departure of Major V. B. Hubbard, post surgeon since early in 1884, and the arrival of his successor, Asst. Surg. W. D. Dietz, an officer young in years, but of evident high ability.

Dr. Dietz's four lectures, lately delivered, on medical and surgical subjects, were largely attended by the officers and enlisted men, all of whom were sorry to see them come to a close.

Lieut. Edward E. Dravo, 6th Cavalry, who rendered some very efficient services toward the close of the late Indian campaign in connection with the heliograph, succeeds Lieut. Carter as regimental and post Q. M.

The departure of Lieut. Cecil and his amiable wife for Fort Wingate, the lieutenant's future station as adjutant of the 13th, is much regretted at the post.

Mr. Biddle and the Misses Biddle, father and sisters of Lieut. Biddle, 13th Infantry, who have been on a prolonged visit to the lieutenant, and have done much to enliven the post during the last six months, have returned to their home in the East. The band of the 6th Cavalry brought them a serenade on the eve of their departure. An air of gentle melancholy has been observed on the faces of the young bachelors of the post for the past few weeks.

Lieut. Cole, of the 6th, and bride, the daughter of Major Tupper, Captain 6th Cavalry, have returned from their wedding tour, and are at present quartered with the parents of Mrs. Cole.

The ladies and gentlemen of the post have their weekly ordinary, and occasional extraordinary hops. Once in awhile they attend entertainments given by some of the élite of Silver City—always sure to be enjoyable. A few weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. Kidd, of that metallic town, gave a ball and supper in the Court-house, which was attended by nearly all the officers and ladies of the post, and is said to have been a most elegant affair. Lieut. Carter led the german.

On the 22d of February John A. Logan Post No. 9, G. A. R., located here, gave a grand ball that was also a very pleasant and successful affair, and on St. Patrick's Day the wives of the N. C. staff officers and others had a neck-tie party and supper. So, with occasional amateur dramatic and minstrel entertainments, we have a fair measure of enjoyment.

The following officers are at present stationed here: Gen. E. A. Carr, Col. 6th Cav.; Major H. C. Cook, 13th Inf.; Captains Tupper, Kendall, and Stanton, 6th Cav., and Guthrie and Cavenaugh, 13th Inf.; Lieuts. Hanna, Carter (A. C. S.), Craig (Regtl. Adjt.), Touey, Dravo (R. Q. M. and A. A. Q. M.), Glass (absent on leave), Sands, Cole, Koehler, and Pershing, 6th Cav., and Hall and Biddle, 13th Inf.; Asst. Surg. W. D. Dietz, U. S. A., Post Surgeon, and Act. Asst. Surg. C. H. Allen, U. S. A.

ASSIGNMENTS OF STAFF OFFICERS.

THE names of the following paymasters were accidentally omitted from our list of staff officers, with the dates of their assignments: Major W. A. Rucker, Dept. Mo., July 11, 1885; Major John C. Muhlenberg, Dept. Texas, May 23, 1882 (now under orders to Dept. of Columbia); Major Geo. F. Robinson, Dept. Texas, June 24, 1883; Major DeWitt C. Poole, Dept. Columbia, Oct. 25, 1882 (now under orders to Dept. Tex.)

WEST POINT, N. Y.

THERE is quite an epidemic of measles here, over 25 cases being reported yesterday, but all confined to the soldiers' children. In order to prevent the spreading of the disease, the soldiers' school and the Sunday schools have been discontinued for the present. All visiting among the families of enlisted men has been prohibited. Dr. Kimball has charge of all the cases.

On Thursday evening of this week we are to be favored with a symphony concert in the library, given by a number of the musical ladies and officers of the post.

On Saturday evening Mark Twain will entertain and amuse the residents of the Point with a reading in the cadet mess hall. The cadets hope to have a small german in the afternoon.

The officers have tendered a complimentary reception to Gen. and Mrs. Merritt, in honor of his recent promotion. The date has been fixed for Wednesday evening.

The Corps of Cadets looks unusually small at parade. It only numbers 257, so that there are 90 vacancies. If all the places are filled next June, there will be 154 plebes to report, besides the alternates.

The Mearn's House, below Highland Falls, now known as Davidson's Highland Villa, has been returnished, and will be ready for guests by May 15.

John M. Groff, New Providence, R. I.
David E. Storms, Stockwell, Ind.
Cassius McMullen, Aurora, Ind.
David M. Mottier, (alt.,) Florence, Ind.
William H. H. Chapman, Green Bay, Wis.
Bernard E Jarrell, Bainsville, Miss.
Palmer E. Pierce, Traer, Iowa.
William G. Meissner, (alt.,) Reinbeck, Iowa.
Edward F. Daly, Kansas City, Mo.
Fred. H. Fitch, (alt.,) Kansas City, Mo.

WASHINGTON BARRACKS, D. C.

APRIL 25, 1887.

THE afternoon open air concerts and dress parades, which commenced with the present month, continue to attract a large number of visitors. There are two posts on, "the main and picket," and the average number of nights the men get in bed is only two. Target practice, with its usual amount of excitement and labors is progressing very favorably.

Officers and enlisted men hops, crabbing, sailing, and fishing, etc., are a small portion of the month's doings.

During the summer months fishing is the sport of the day and many groups are seen sitting along the banks.

The following varieties of fish inhabit the Potomac River: Shad, perch, catfish, rock-fish, herring, sunfish, eels, and smelt. The warm weather is just making its appearance. The men are busy with their gardens, any side you may turn will behold the scene of industry. The area of the post garden is about eight acres. Tho variety of products are sweet potatoes, onions, parsnips, carrots, cabbage, radishes, lettuce, beets, turnips, corn, beans, peas and cucumbers.

There is some gossip about the troops going into camp this year, providing work will be commenced on the old canal, which passes through South Washington and along the east side of the garrison grounds. The sewage of this canal, moves very slowly, causing a large exposure to evaporation, which in warm weather emits a very unhealthy miasma; and very frequently a most offensive odor, which, furthermore, is most injurious to the health of the post.

The officers of the post gave a german on the evening of April 19. Monday, the 21st, being Emancipation Day, the colored troops of the city had a big parade, and a salute was fired at the post in the afternoon in honor of the occasion. Workmen are now engaged in making new pavements in front of stables and men's quarters.

A prominent attorney of this city undertakes to prosecute the claims of the cooks and nurses throughout the Army for the extra duty pay due them according to law. The fee will be small and not payable unless attorney is successful. Circulars to that effect have been issued to all the posts.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, KAS.

THE "Orphans' Friend" says: "The ladies of Chaplain Barry's parish at Fort Leavenworth have during the Lenten season provided and finished a number of suits for the children of the Kansas Orphan Asylum. There were about 170 garments in all. Also, from an entertainment given at the post, a sum of money, about $100, has been donated to the asylum, and through this little sheet we thank our kind friends for their generous offering."

The german given by Lieut. and Mrs. Hamilton Rowan, 2d Art., April 20, proved a most decided success and was the social event of the season. About 30 couples participated and were pronounced in their praise of the leadership of Lieut. Pardee, 18th Inf. Miss Fenton was the happy recipient of the ladies's prize, a pearl lace pin, and Lieut. Ripley the gentlemen's, a handsome photograph case.—Kansas City Times.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Spon's Mechanics' Own Book: A Manual for Handicraftsmen and Amateurs, is a work published by E. and F. N. Spon, 125 Strand, London, and No. 35 Murray street, New York, which should be within reach of everyone who has any possible occasion to "tinker." Its contents include practical hints on the subject of mechanical drawing, casting and founding; forging and finishing; soldering; sheet-metal working; carpentry; cabinet-making; carving and fret-work; upholstery; painting, graining and marbling; staining; gilding; polishing; varnishing; mechanical movements; turning; masonry; plastering and whitewashing; roofing; glazing; bell-hanging; gas-fitting; paper hanging; lighting; ventilating; warming; foundations; roads and bridges; banks; hedges; ditches and drains; water supply and sanitation, and finally, house construction. The information on all these subjects is very full and exact. It is a volume which is simply invaluable to everyone who has occasion to deal with any of the forms of skilled labor which are included in its ample scope. It is a work intended for the emigrant and colonist who is often compelled to depend upon his own ingenuity for comforts and conveniences he would be deprived of if he waited for professional help. "Amateur readers," as the preface says, "will be glad to avail themselves of the simple directions and ingenious devices by which they can, in a great degree, overcome the disadvantages of a lack of manipulative skill."

"Civil War in Kansas," "Jefferson Davis on Rebellion," and "The Conventions of '56" are the sub-topics of the May installment of Messrs. Nicolay and Hay's "Abraham Lincoln: A History," in "The Century." Among the illustrations are portraits of Governors Shannon, Robinson, and Geary; of John Sherman, Millard Fillmore, John C. Fremont, and others. Among the illustrated articles is one by Lieut. Frederick Schwatka on the Apaches, with portraits of some of their chiefs and scouts. In an article on "Pharaoh," J. A. Paine advances the novel theory that Rameses the Great married his own daughter, the patroness of Moses. Prof. Paine points out indications and evidence proving that she was not the daughter, but the granddaughter, of Seti, and that Rameses, who she married, was not her brother, but her own father.

Charles Scribner and Sons include in their series "Epochs of Modern History," "The Early Tudors, Henry VII.; Henry VIII., by the Rev. C. E. Moberly, M. A., late a master in Rugby School. It is in a small, 18mo. volume, illustrated with maps and plans. The idea of the series is to treat great movements, which are entitled to be regarded as constituting epochs, not according to narrow geographical and national limits and distinction, but universally, according to their place in the general life of the world. The epoch here treated of is that of the Tudor despotism, and its results upon national unity are considered in a spirit of philosophical inquiry.

Mr. Simon Newton, Chief Clerk of the Washington Aqueduct, District of Columbia, has compiled and published a "Register of the Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, from its establishment, March 16, 1802, to March 16, 1885." It is a neat volume of 62 pages, contains much valuable information, and shows in every line that it has been with Mr. Newton truly "a labor of love." The lineal rank of officers is first given, and then comes the "Register" with an outline of the military history of each officer of the corps.

In "Scribner's" for May, J. Macdonald Oxley describes Sable Island in an illustrated article bearing the title of "An Ocean Graveyard," the fitness of which is more than proved by the curious "wreck-chart" accompanying the article, on which is recorded the long list of vessels that have met shipwreck and disaster on its barren sands.

Soule's Military List for April contains, in addition to the usual varied Military information, an excellent likeness of Major General O. O. Howard, U. S. Army, and a sketch of his career since he left West Point in 1854. The number is an excellent one.

Lippincott's for May contains a complete novel by Capt. Charles King, whose Army stories have taken a prominent place in recent fiction. It is called "The Deserter," and is a powerful, well constructed tale that will bring new fame to its author.

Messrs. Merchant and Co. publish a little pamphlet containing "facts about the manufacture and relative value of roofing plates, and about the laying of a good" roof, which are of value to all having occasion for any work of this sort.

THE NAVY.

WHEN AND WHERE LAST HEARD FROM.

All mail must be addressed to the Galena, care of Navy Pay Office, 29 State St., N. Y.

RICHMOND, 2d rate, 14 guns (f. s. n. a. s.), Capt. Robt. Boyd. At St. Thomas, W. I., April 15.

S. Atlantic Station—A. R. Admi. D. L. Braine.

Mails should be addressed to care of U. S. Consul, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, unless otherwise noted, or care of B. F. Stevens, 4 Trafalgar Square, London.

LANCASTER, 2d rate, 10 guns, (f. s. a. s.) Capt. S. L. Breese. Reported by cable to have arrived at Montevideo, Uruguay, March 16. All well. Expects to reach Rio about June 1, 1887.

European Station—R.-Admi. Sam. R. Franklin.

Mails should be addressed to care B. F. Stevens, 4 Trafalgar Square, London, England, unless otherwise noted.

The U. S. Minister, referring to the sojourn of the Pensacola at Athens, writes that he cannot commend too much the conduct and bearing of both officers and men of the ship, and their departure was much regretted by our countrymen at Athens, as well as by the Greeks. The ship was visited by the king and royal family, who dined on board the members of the cabinet, the foreign ministers and other distinguished persons. The Admiral, Captain Dewey and other officers were entertained at the Palace by the King and Queen.

A correspondent, writing from Athens, Greece, March 16, 1887, says: The Pensacola has been riding at anchor here since Feb. 10, having arrived that day from Alexandria. The passage was particularly favorable as to weather, and the only incident beyond the usual monotony of a sea voyage was target practice with great guns on the afternoon of the 9th. The Pensacola has saluted the following officials who have made reciprocative calls upon Admiral Franklin: The prefect of Athens, the Greek ministers of marine and war and a Commodore of the Greek navy, Russian, French, English, Roumanian, Austrian and German ministers, the Turkish charge d'affairs, United States Minister Walter Fearn and our consul and vice-consul at Athens and the rear-admiral of the French flagship Victorieuse. It is likely the Pensacola will remain here until the 1st of April, when she will leave for Leghorn, on the 15th of which month stores and provisions are expected to arrive there from the United States for her and the Quinnebaug.

QUINNEBAUG, 3d rate, 8 guns, Comdr. Geo. W. Coffin. Comdr. W. M. Folger was ordered to command. Was at Leghorn, Italy, April 2—to leave there about middle of May.

Pacific Station—Captain H. L. Howison

ALERT, 3d rate, 4 guns, Comdr. J. D. Graham, Arrived at San Jose de Guatemala March 29.

ADAMS, 3d rate, 6 guns, Comdr. Louis Kempff. Arrived at Guaymas, April 19, from Mazatlan.

JUNIATA, 3d rate, 8 guns, Comdr. G. T. Davis. Arrived at Coquimbo, Chile, March 18. To leave April 10 for the North. It is very probable that the Juniata will be ordered to the Asiatic Squadron.

IROQUOIS, 3d rate, 7 guns, Comdr. J. Crittenden Watson. At Talcahuano, Chili, March 31. Commander Richard P. Leary was ordered to command this vessel per steamer of April 1.

PINTA, 4th rate, screw, 2 guns, Lieut. Comdr. John S. Newell. At Sitka, where she will winter. Mail matter will reach this vessel quickest by sending it direct to Sitka, Alaska.

VANDALIA, 2d rate, 8 guns, (f. s. p. s.), Capt. Henry L. Howison. Arrived at Taboquilla, in Panama Bay, March 28. After a short stay intends to sail northward.

Asiatic Station—Rear-Admi. Ralph Chandler.

The iron-clads Ajax, Catskill, Lehigh, Mahopac, Manhattan and Wyandotte, are laid up at City Point, Va., in command of Comdr. D. W. Mullan.

Swatara—At Portsmouth, N. H. Is to have new boilers. It is not known at present when she will be ready for sea. The construction work will be completed about the middle of June. When ready she will be assigned to duty on the North Atlantic Station.

Enterprise and Nipsic—Undergoing repairs at New York. Will be ready in a few months, and in all probability be assigned to the North Atlantic Squadron.

Trenton—Undergoing repairs at Norfolk, Va. Expects to be ready for commission about May 25, and to sail May 28 with new crew for the Lancaster, and later will probably be assigned to the North Atlantic Station.

Chicago—Will be finished at New York. The engines are practically completed, and but little construction work remains to be done. (Report of March 19.)

Boston—At New York. Is being fitted with ice machines, electric lights and steam separators. She will be ready for a trial trip in about 60 days. (Report of March 19.)

Ossipee—At Norfolk. Ready for commission about May 15.

Constellation—Cadet Practice Ship. Ready for sea in about a week.

VARIOUS NAVAL ITEMS.

THE U. S. Coast Survey steamer Blake was at Key West, Fla., April 23, and will probably leave for Charleston and Norfolk, Va., on May 7.

THE San Francisco Chamber of Commerce has forwarded a memorial to the Secretary of the Navy asking that the Hartford be repaired and kept in service owing to her historical character.

THE United States practice ship Constellation, which went ashore on Craney Island flats, near Norfolk, April 13, remained until high water, April 14, when she was pulled off and towed up to the yard by the tug Fortune.

THE Evans Steel Board are receiving very encouraging reports of the progress made by steel men in producing plates for the armor of the Baltimore and Charleston. A very small percentage of the ingots recently submitted for inspection have been found defective.

THE commander of the United States steamer Mohican recently wrote a long letter to the Star and Herald regarding quarantine regulations in Panama, in which he expressed the opinion that men-of-war were exempt from disease. In reply the Star and Herald referred him to the mortality records of the Jamestown, the Saranac, and the Swatara.

A NEW steering apparatus for the U. S. despatch boat Dolphin was this week ordered from Williamson and Son, of Philadelphia. It is to be delivered and put in place within one month, and will cost $5,000.

THE Board, of which Capt. F. M. Ramsay is President, appointed to examine the designs for the 6 000-ton armored cruisers, met at the Navy Department to-day, in one of the rooms formerly occupied by the Naval Advisory Board.

A BOARD, consisting of Majors Nicholson and Heywood, Surg. Ruth, Captain Pope, P. Asst. Surgeon Dickson, and 2d Lieut. Stayton, has been convened at the Navy Department for the examination of Captain Meade, of the Marine Corps, for retirement.

THE active list of the Navy, according to a statement compiled by direction of the Secretary of the Navy for the use of the Cockrell Committee, consisted on April 16 of 1.532 officers, including warrant officers, mates, and the 58 naval cadets now at sea; 199 cadets at the Naval Academy, and 7,682 enlisted men, including apprentices on training ships.

ANOTHER change of equipment is about to be made in H. M. S. Impérieuse at Portsmouth. It was decided to deprive her of her spars, and two substantial iron military masts had been erected in their place, with tops for machine guns. These have now in their turn been removed, and the ship is to be provided with a single military mast.

THE Board on Life-Saving Boats for the Navy visited Philadelphia on Tuesday and carefully examined the Norton invention. The Board still adheres to the views already expressed in the JOURNAL and will submit a report to the Secretary of the Navy on Saturday recommending that none of the boats submitted to the Board be adopted for use in the Navy.

ADVERTISEMENTS were issued from the Bureau of Yards and Docks this week, inviting bids for furnishing the material for and building an iron floating gate or caisson for the stone dry dock at the Boston Navy-yard. The proposed caisson is a double-ended hull with curved stems and deep keel; it has two decks and a rail; the whole structure is to be water-tight.

LIEUTENANT EMORY, in command of the Thetis, has not yet left Washington, but will soon leave for his station, and it is probable that early in May the Thetis will sail for Alaska. This vessel will go out carrying quite a large amount of stores and outfit pertaining to the Fish Commission steamer Albatross, this latter vessel not being arranged for large carrying capacity.

SEVERAL minor changes were made among the clerks in the New York Navy yard on Wednesday. Julius J. Feeks, of Locust Valley, L. I., has been appointed Chief Clerk in the Construction Department, and J. Sutcliffe, his predecessor, has been made second clerk in the Commodore's office. J. Kelso was appointed Chief Clerk in the Ordnance Department, and Lieut. H. Knox, Navigating Officer on the Boston.

THE presence of two British men-of-war in harbor, says the San Francisco News-Letter, has caused a flutter of excitement in many feminine breasts, and several very pleasant parties on board them have taken place. The Triumph is an old acquaintance, having paid many visits to San Francisco Bay in the last few years, but this is the first visit of the Conquest to this port. English Navy officers are popular guests with our people, and are always warmly welcomed. If there is a fault to be found, it is that their stay is generally so very brief.

THE report of the Board authorized to be appointed annually by the commanding officer of the New Hampshire, for the examination of the three apprentices selected from the three training ships, upon the return of the squadron from the winter cruise, to compete for the Bailey gold medal, is expected daily by Commander Schley, Chief of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting. As soon as the successful competitor is named, Comdr. Schley will visit Newport to personally present the medals.

AN important addition has been made to the Royal Navy by the completion for active service of the new fast cruiser Arethusa, 10, 3,540 tons, 5,000 horse-power, which was built for the Government by Messrs. Napier and Sons, of Glasgow. The Arethusa is built of steel, and is sister ship to the Leander. She is armed with ten 6-in. steel breech-loading guns, all of which are mounted on Vavasseur fittings. She also carries twelve Gardner and Nordenfeldt machine guns, together with a strong equipment of Whitehead torpedoes. She is fitted with the electric light, steam capstans, and all the latest improvements, and will be manned by a crew of 300 officers and men.

IN the trials a fortnight ago of H. M. S. Anson with 94 lbs. of steam and 97 revolutions, the indicated horse power was 8,320, and the speed 16½ knots, the consumption of coal being 2.3 lb. of coal per indicated horse power per hour. With both screws working ahead the port half circle was turned in 2 min. 28 sec., the complete circle, 640 yards diameter was turned in 5 min. 15 sec. The starboard half circle was turned in 2 min. 46 sec., and the complete circle, 650 yards diameter, in 5 min. 47 sec. On the forced draught trials the steam pressure was 101 lb., revolutions 108.6 port, 108.9 starboard, indicated horse power 12,567.78, consumption 2.2 lb. coal per indicated horse power per hour, speed 17.435 knots an hour.

LORD ALCESTER writes: "In these days, when it is the fashion to depreciate everything in the way of ordnance with which the navy is supplied, it may be satisfactory to the public to learn the opinion expressed of the most recently constructed guns by the captain of her Majesty's ship Colossus, one of the best and most scientific of her gunnery officers." He then gives the following from Capt. Cyprian Bridge, dated from Malta, March 23: "I am sure that you will be glad to hear that our new guns, which I fired twice on the way out, have given every satisfaction. We fired at a target under the lee of Jeremias, in Morocco, before passing the Straits, and again after leaving Gibraltar. Everything went well, guns, hydraulic machinery, and electric appliances. We now really seem to have efficient and trustworthy guns."

ORDERS have been given by the Navy Department to the ordnance shops at the Washington Navy-yard to begin immediately the construction of another 10-inch breechloading rifled gun for the Boston. The two 10-inch guns now building at the Navy-yard are well on toward completion.

THE machinery of the monitors Terror and Amphitrite, now at Philadelphia and Wilmington respectively, is practically completed and the Secretary of the Navy will in a few days prescribe the formal tests to which it must be subjected before the vessels are accepted by the Government.

PLANS and specifications for a new Hospital and wharf to be erected at Widows Island, Maine, has just been completed, and the work of construction will soon be commenced. Surgeon General Gunnell proposes calling the New Hospital the "Naval Sanitarium." The chief object of the new building is to provide hospital treatment for officers and men suffering with yellow fever and other contagious diseases.

SEALED proposals will be received at the Navy Department until noon on Saturday, July 30, 1887, for the purchase of the following-named vessels, which have been stricken from the Navy Register, viz: Tennessee, appraised at $35,000, Powhatan at $17,000, and Ticonderoga at $15.000, at the Navy Yard, Brooklyn, New York; Shenandoah at $12,000, Lackawanna at $12,000, Wachusett at $10,000, and Cyane at $3,000, at the Navy Yard, Mare Island, California.

Secretary Whitney has concluded to withdraw from the inspectors acting under the direction of Commander Evans certain responsibilities thus far imposed upon them. The inspection of steel for the machinery, except the shafts and boiler plates, of the new vessels has been transferred from Commander Evans' inspectors to the Engineer officers who have been on duty in connection with the machinery for the cruisers and gunboats. Engineer-in-Chief Loring has prepared instructions for the guidance of the Engineers in the performance of their respective duty, which he will submit to Secretary Whitney for approval on his return from New York.

THE board, consisting of Capt. George Brown, Lieut.-Commander Charles H. Stockton and Civil Engineers M. T. Endicott and R. E. Peary, appointed to select the site for the new dry dock to be built at Norfolk, has completed its work and the members have resumed their respective duties. The location selected is situated 125 feet south of and parallel to the present dock. The condition of the soil of the site selected is considered favorable to the construction of a dock 500 feet long, 125 feet in general breadth, and 80 feet width of entrance, and will give a draft of water of 25.6 feet of water over the site. The board, consisting of Commodore Bancroft Gherardi, and Civil Engineers P. C. Asserson and F. C. Prindle, appointed to select the site for the New York deck, has not yet reported.

NAVAL ACADEMY.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., April 27, 1887.

THE death of Lieut. Danenhower was a great blow to his many friends in the Yard, as it must be to all who knew him. He had several thousand dollars, recently made in lecturing, and was insured for $20,000. He must have formed the plan for suicide in the morning or during the night, as he gave several orders for things he would attend to on the next day. Lieut. Danenhower was a favorite in the Yard, and was universally admired by the cadets for his sterling principles. For two years and a half he has been attached to the Academy as Officer in Charge and recently was detached from this duty and made Secretary of the Naval Institute. The german to be given by the officers Wednesday evening was postponed, as was the game of base ball to be played by the officers and cadets.

Comdr. Chadwick and wife were present at the theatricals on Saturday evening of last week.

It is reported that Lieut. Merrill will be ordered away on May 1, and that Lieut. Porter will be ordered to the Trenton on May 15.

Lieut. C. R. Miles will fill the position of Secretary to the Naval Institute until Mr. Danenhower's successor is appointed. It is believed that Mr. Miles will succeed Mr. Danenhower, as he is thoroughly conversant with the affairs of the Institute.

The first of the hops since Lent was given by the first class of cadets on Saturday night. It was not a crowded hop, but all seemed to enjoy themselves. The cadet hops usually close at 10 o'clock, but the Superintendent gave his permission and this was held until 11 o'clock. Among the ladies present were noticed the Misses Sampson with Miss Casey and Miss Green, Mrs. Lieut. Miller with Miss Taft, Mrs. Lieut. Gheen, Mrs. Lieut. Mitchell, Mrs. Hendrickson, Mrs. Lieut. Barnette, Miss Brooks, Miss Fowler, Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Jasper, Mrs. Pendleton, Mrs. Woods with Miss Thom, Mrs. Nicholson and Miss Farmer. Among the officers were Lieuts. Barnette, Bartlett, Miller, Jasper, Mitchell and Nicholson, Ensigns Smith, Blish, Atwater, Hill and Muir, Paymasters Arms and Loomis, Chief Engineer E. Farmer and Assistant Engineer Gow, Lieuts. Gibson and Woods, M. C. A large number of cadets were present; some of these have not previously attended the hops, but were drawn out for the first time.

The rainy weather on Saturday interfered with the accustomed morning cruise down the bay, and the battalion of cadets were exercised at infantry in the armory.

The officers concluded on Saturday afternoon, that, owing to the absence of several players belonging to their base ball team, they could not cope with the first class team. As the next game will probably be an exciting one, they did not desire to play under unfavorable circumstances, and the matter was settled by choosing sides and playing a "scrub" game. It is reported that there have been some dissensions in the base ball team, but the cadets are practising steadily and will probably present a good team before long.

A very handsome pleasure yacht, owned by Mr. Slater, of Providence, R. I., anchored off the Academy sea wall on Saturday and Sunday last. Mr. Slater called upon friends in the yard, and several cadets went aboard the yacht.

The buoytender Holly, commanded by Commander Casey, lay at the Santee's wharf over Saturday and Sunday. Superintendent Sampson and Mrs. Sampson took tea on board on Sunday evening.

Miss Casey and Miss Green, daughter of Dana Green, late commander, U. S. N., were the guests of the Misses Sampson on Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Thom, of Washington, has been visiting Mrs. Lieut. Woods, M. C.

Mrs. Lieut. Tilley gave a tea to numerous friends on Friday evening last.

Mrs. Barnette and Mrs. Bartlett gave a tea on Saturday evening after the hop.

The cadets of the first class have sent in requests to the Navy Department, expressing their desires in regard to the stations and ships they may be ordered to.

The present second and fourth classes have each been divided in three parts, to go on leave during the summer months by divisions.

The present third class will remain in the yard all summer and will all go on leave about the last of August. All cadets will return to the Academy before Oct. 1 and the work will be resumed.

Many friends in the yard regret the departure of Captain Huntington, M. C.

Mrs. Lieut. Todd gave a very pleasant tea on Friday afternoon to the ladies of the yard.

Capt. and Mrs. Farquhar spent Saturday and Sunday as the guests of Comdr. and Mrs. Huntington.

Asst. Engr. Schell has gone to Richmond, Va. He will marry Miss Miller, of that city. Miss Miller is well known in Annapolis society, and Mr. Schell is to be congratulated. He was accompanied by Ensign Knapp, who will act as his best man.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

TO ARMY OFFICERS.

The undersigned having represented the Penn Mutual Life Ins. Co., of Philadelphia, as its General Agent for Northern Ohio, during the past year, with the experience thus gained feels himself to be competent to give Army Officers advice on many matters pertaining to Life Insurance, which may be to their advantage. To this end, therefore, he gratuitously offers his services to the Army, and respectfully invites correspondence from such as desire information on this subject.

While the Company he represents has no superior in the country for security or for liberality in its policies to officers in the Military Service, yet he will be pleased to advise and assist officers who may prefer to place their insurance in other reputable companies. Information as to the standing of the various companies and their relative profitableness for investment he will gladly communicate to those who desire it; also advice as to kind of policy best suited and most profitable to those of different ages.

By this announcement the undersigned hopes that he may serve the interests of his brother officers, enabling them to place their insurance in the most substantial and profitable companies, in a form of policy most advantageous to themselves.

Proposals for Quartermaster's Stores.

JEFFERSONVILLE DEPOT, Q. M. DEPARTMENT,
JEFFERSONVILLE, IND., April 27, 1887.

SEALED PROPOSALS in triplicate, subject to usual conditions, will be received at this office, until 11 o'clock, A. M., (Central Standard time,) on Friday, the 27th day of May, 1887, at which time and place they will be opened in presence of attending bidders, for furnishing this Depot various Quartermaster's Stores, including stationery, horse and mule shoes, horse shoe-nails and toe-calks.

The Government reserves the right to reject any or all proposals, and to accept the whole or any portion of the articles bid for.

Preference given to articles of domestic production and manufacture, conditions of price and quality being equal, and such preference given to articles of American production and manufacture, produced on the Pacific coast, to the extent of the consumption required by the public service there.

Blanks and full information as to bidding, etc., will be furnished on application to this office.

Envelopes containing proposals should be plainly marked "Proposals for Quartermaster's Stores at Jeffersonville Depot, Indiana," and addressed to the undersigned.

RUFUS SAXTON,
Assistant Quartermaster General, U. S. Army.

NOTWITHSTANDING the assertions to the contrary, the battery of the Atlanta is not yet ready for service, and from what can be learned on this interesting subject, it promises to be some time before this fine ship can be regarded as ready for squadron duty. From the mistakes discovered, and presumably rectified, in experimenting with the guns of the Atlanta, it is fair to assume that when the Boston's battery shall be mounted in place, the trial of the guns at sea will be coincident with the experiments with engines and auxiliary machinery. In view of the speed and efficiency developed by the Atlanta during the recent trial trip in the Sound, it was a reasonable expectation by the well-wishers of the Navy, that the end of the troubles and tribulations of the ship had been reached, but now, viewing the defects in the 8-inch gun-carriages with the utmost leniency, it is feared that the debatable ground has been but shifted from steam engineering to ordnance, and bearing in mind the pertinacity with which the average mind adheres to error, it is much to be feared that the outcome of the difficulties environing our naval gun experts is too far off to be easily recognized by an unbiassed observer. It is certain that so long as one man, or one bureau, assumes to have reached the ultimate frontier of knowledge in the science and mechanics of gun construction, so long will a constant source of errors and disasters continue to exist. In claiming for guns which have not been tested beyond a few rounds under exceptionally favorable circumstances a superiority over the long tested products of other and more experienced manufacturers, it is well to bear in mind a homely but decidedly pertinent old saw to the effect that "The proof of the pudding is in the eating."

A SENSIBLE OPINION OF THE REPEATER.

THE adoption of the magazine gun for the German Army has naturally led to much discussion among the studious German soldiers as to the probable influence of this change upon the tactics of the battle field. Our contemporary of Berlin, the Militär-Wochenblatt, has published this year thus far five articles discussing this subject. The first, which appeared in its issue of January 9, took the optimistic view of the introduction of the repeating gun, and in a second, which appeared January 26, the pessimist had his opportunity for reply. A third article, published February 5, was entitled a "Netherland Study of the Question of Repeating Arms." A fourth, which appeared February 16, 1887, was "A Frenchman's Opinion upon the Repeating Gun Question in France."

In the Wochenblatt of March 22, these articles are summed up by a fifth writer who does not fully agree with any of them, and presents his own conclusions. In the first place he thinks it necessary to correct the impression that the Germans have adopted a new gun; they have simply accepted a modification of the good old single loader, "M. 71," with which they have accomplished such important results, and which they had such good reason to trust. Again, he shows that the influence upon tactics of the change from the single loader to the repeater will not compare in importance with that which resulted from the adoption of the breech-loader. The repeating arm is not to be considered with reference to its influence upon tactics, but solely with reference to its effect upon the increased rapidity of fire. And, indeed, its importance generally has been grossly exaggerated in the opinion of this writer. Quoting the remark that that army has the greatest chance of victory which is five months in advance of its enemy in the adoption of improved armament this writer says that accidents aside the victory will be with the army which, although it may be five months behind in the matter of armament, has learned most in time of peace. Mistakes are inevitable in war and victory goes with him who makes the fewest mistakes, who is most perfect in tactics and has the most thorough command of his weapons. Intelligent discipline and mastery of tactics have far more to do with success than perfection in weapons. The magazine gun is a double-edged tool. An effective weapon in the hands of well trained and seasoned soldiers, it is a source of weakness to men whose fire cannot be kept well under control. It renders the proper handling of troops much more difficult, as the rapidity of fire is itself a source of demoralization to the individual soldier when not kept well in hand. The sole influence, then, of the magazine gun upon tactics is to create a still greater demand for exact training of the individual soldier, and ability in the officers even down to those of the lowest grade. Let us, says this writer in conclusion, maintain our confidence in the ancient and well-tested Prussian principles of warfare: the thorough preparation for war by the careful training of officers and men. The sentiment of duty, united to energy in action and zeal for perfection in ourselves and our troops, are the qualities which will ensure success when repeaters meet repeaters upon the battlefield.

This is a very sensible view of the question and if there is any army which has reason to accept it as conclusive it is the German Army. While the French were experimenting in secret with new weapons, and hugging to themselves the conceit that their improved Chassepot and their Mitrailleuse were certain to give them superiority in battle, the plodding Germans were occupied in the thorough organization and training of their troops in preparation for mobilization, and in the study of the frontier and the roads leading across it and into France. The lesson to be learned from this teaching is not that improvement in the weapons of war should be neglected, for, other things being equal, the best armed troops will have the decided advantage on the battle field—but that armies are likely to be called upon to try conclusions are so careful to watch each other and quick to adopt any suggestions of change, that it is impracticable to secure any great advantage in this respect. This is assumed by the German writer from whom we quote, and his whole argument goes to show that while the adoption of improved weapons should be encouraged, it should offer no excuse for neglect of individual training and study. Another thing his reasoning shows, and that is that those who argue against the adoption of the magazine gun on the ground that with it it will be impossible to properly control the fire of troops are simply reflecting upon their own ability as officers. Granting that the magazine gun will be an ineffective weapon in the hands of raw troops, will the ordinary breechloader be any more effective, and are they not destined to defeat in any case in the event of an encounter with well-trained troops armed with an improved weapon? It is certain that the adoption of a magazine gun will be forced on us in the case of emergency. Is it not better to secure it while there is still opportunity to associate it with such training as our troops may be able to acquire for the emergency of battle, and not in that event add to their other embarrassments that of unfamiliarity with the gun they carry?

TWENTY-NINE of the 126 pages in "Scribner's Magazine" for May are occupied with Commander CHADWICK'S valuable article on the "Development of the Steamship." In it we have illustrations of the "Great Western," with a cross section; the "Great Britain," the "City of Rome," "Persia," "Britannic," "Impérieuse," "Esmeralda," "Etruria," the belted cruiser "Orlando" and the "Giovanni Bausan," of the Italian Navy. Also, the engines of the original "Comet," built by HENRY BELL at Glasgow in 1812; a plan of the "Hibernia" and "Cambria," cross sections of the "Oregon" and "Servia," longitudinal sections of the "Gallia" and the "Champagne," and a drawing of the fine triple-expansion engines of the "Aller," "Trave," and "Saale," of the North German Lloyd. The advance of steam navigation is strikingly shown by a comparison of this magnificent triumph of engineering skill with the little engines of the "Comet." Diagrams are published showing a decrease in expenditure of coal per indicated horse power per hour, based on good average practice, from 9 lbs. in 1830 to 1¼ lbs. in 1886. Another diagram shows an increase in steam pressures for the same period from 2-3 lbs. to 150-160 lbs. The following comparison between the first ship of the Cunard Line, the "Britannia," and one of their later ships, the "Persia," shows the advance made in fifteen years, from 1840 to 1855, in the economies of steam navigation:

	Britannia.	Persia.
Cargo carried	224 "	750 "
Passengers	90	250
Indicated power	710	3,600
Pressure per square inch	9 lbs.	33 lbs.
Coal per indicated h. p. per hr.	5.1 "	3.8 "
Speed	8.5 knots	13.1 knots

Thus, for two and a half times the quantity of coal nearly three and a half times the cargo was carried, and nearly three times the number of passengers; a result due partially to increased engine efficiency, and partially to increased size of ship.

Since the year 1879 the following great ships have been placed upon the Liverpool and New York lines. Taking them in the order of their fastest passage, out or home, they stand thus:

	Days.	Hours.	Minutes.
1. Etruria	6	5	31
2. Umbria (sister ship)	slightly	longer
3. Oregon	6	10	35
4. America	6	13	44
5. City of Rome	6	18	0
6. Alaska	6	18	37
7. Servia	6	23	55
8. Aurania	7	1	1

ITEMS giving detailed accounts of the presentation of certain gifts to military superiors by those of inferior rank—and sometimes under their immediate command in the Army—have recently found their way into the newspapers. In the description of one of these affairs the statement occurs that the donation "to a lieutenant" was made by a "sergeant" (mentioning name, etc.), "on behalf of the members of" (specifying command) "as a mark of respect and esteem, and in consideration of the kind treatment they" (the enlisted men) "have received at his" (the lieutenant's) "hands since he has commanded the organization mentioned." This public mention suggests the inquiry whether Section 1784, R. S., is not applicable to cases of the kind described in the military as well as the civil service? However this may be, it is plain that donations to military superiors on the part of their inferiors, the result of contributions or collections, are in decidedly bad taste and wrong on general principles. We think it is plain, however, that the section of the Revised Statutes does apply, and clearly makes such transactions violations of law, rendering all the parties, the giver as well as the receiver of the gift, amenable to the prescribed punishment. The section reads as follows:

Sec. 1784. No officer, clerk, or employee in the the U. S. Government employ shall at any time solicit contributions from other officers, clerks, or employees in the Government service for a gift or present to those in a superior official position; nor shall any such officials or clerical superiors receive any gift or present offered or presented to them as a contribution from persons in Government employ receiving a less salary than themselves; nor shall any officer or clerk make any donation as a gift or present to any official superior. Every person who violates this section shall be summarily discharged from the Government employ.

Closely related to the provisions of the law quoted would seem to be the restrictions imposed by A. R. 5; and it requires no strained construction to show that the donations in question are violations of that regulation. What else is meant? We call attention to this matter, for it seems to us that officers cannot be too particular to keep well within the law in such matters as this. The gift blindeth the eyes of the receiver, and it is because the principle of giving and receiving gifts between superiors and subordinates is destructive of impartial discipline that it is so strictly and so justly prohibited.

THE Board of Officers, Assistant Adjutant-General KELTON, President, recently appointed to prepare rules and regulations for the government of the new Hospital Stewards Corps of the Army, convened at the War Department, in the office of General KELTON, April 28, and will continue to meet daily until all the papers which have been submitted in the form of suggestions have been carefully examined and a set of regulations decided upon. It is estimated that at least three weeks will be required to complete the work. Suggestions have been received from all the leading surgeons of the Army on the subject, and, as there is a wide diversity of opinion, it will require considerable thought and discussion before a conclusion can be reached. Some of the surgeons have recommended that the Hospital Stewards now in the Service be required to pass the proposed new examination and be given new appointments; while others think they should be exempted from another examination and allowed to serve under their present appointments. There is also a wide difference of opinion in regard to the manner of appointment to the corps. Some advocate appointments direct from civil life; others favor two or three years' service in the ranks before appointment. The project of training cooks and nurses before regular assignment to the corps has many advocates, and the Board will therefore probably devote some time to devising a system by which the object can be accomplished. It will also be necessary to formulate rules carefully defining the duties of the members of the corps, and in such a way as not to interfere with employees of the Quartermaster's Department who have charge of ambulances and other equipments that would seem to form part of a hospital corps.

THE list of captains of the line found incapacitated by Army retiring boards having nearly run out, the War Department has determined to order new boards for the examination of those captains who have been on sick leave for some time. Three captains—Wm. B. Pease, 9th Inf.; T. J. Gregg, 2d Cav., and James Kennington, 14th Inf.—have lately been ordered for examination, the former two before a board at San Francisco, and the latter before a board which convened in the office of Quartermaster General Holabird this week. This board found Capt. Kennington, who has been an inmate for some time of the Government Insane Asylum, incapacitated, and that his disability, which was brought about by a severe blow in the back of the head some years ago, was "incident to the Service." Several other officers, now on prolonged sick leave, and whose condition is such as to warrant the belief that they will never be able to perform active duty again, will soon be given an opportunity to have the state of their health formally reported upon by boards. Their cases will be considered as their applications come in for an extension of sick leaves. There are two vacancies on the retired list at the present time.

THERE has been quite a noticeable increase in the number of vacant second lieutenancies in the Army since our last statement. The list now numbers 45, as follows: Infantry 31, Cavalry 9, and Artillery 5. There are two vacancies in the disability retired list and several Court-martial cases pending which are liable to make vacancies, so that the outlook for the graduates is not so gloomy after all. "Hope springs eternal in the youthful breast."

COLONEL CHARLES W. MOULTON, of New York, a brother-in-law of General Sherman, was a quartermaster in the Army in 1864, and, for reasons personal to himself, resigned. His resignation was accepted by Secretary Stanton and another man put in his place, who failed to give satisfaction. About four months afterward Mr. Stanton revoked the special order accepting Moulton's resignation, and ordered the latter to resume his post. Colonel Moulton now claims that he was not legally out of the Army and is entitled to his salary for the interim. The principle to be settled by a hearing of the claim involves the authority of the Secretary of War to revoke his acceptance of Moulton's resignation, and will incidentally bring up the whole question now in dispute, as to the relative powers of the Secretary of War and Commanding General of the Army.

THE Paymaster-General says that he has not sufficient force to order another officer to the Dept. of Dakota to succeed the late Major Blaine; the four Majors—Bates, Eckels, Roche, and Whipple—will therefore make all the payments to troops stationed in that Department. Major Eckels has been ordered to make the April payments to the troops hitherto paid by Major Blaine. The death of Major Blaine does not create a vacancy in the Corps as the list of paymasters is still eleven in excess of the limit authorized.

LIEUTENANT W. T. CHAMBERS, U. S. N., sent us last week a letter which we received too late for publication, answering the insinuation which has appeared in some papers that he was to be unduly favored in the matter of adopting the designs for a new cruiser submitted by him. He repels this suggestion with just indignation. As to the further suggestion that his engine is a copy of No. 27, now building by the Cramps for the Baltimore, he says: "During the preparation of these plans I negotiated with one of the best designers and builders of steam machinery of this progressive age, and the designs of engines and boilers which I procured from him are specially adapted to this ship, and are not copied from those of the Baltimore, building by Cramp and Sons. This machinery is vastly superior to that of the Baltimore, although it weighs 10 tons less. It is of 10,800 I. H. P., and is specially designed for continuous working at high speeds, not simply to run the gauntlet of a measured mile trial, and then break down the first time it is used at full speed for any length of time at sea."

WE find that our judgment of "Semmes's Service Afloat in the Confederate Cruisers Sumter and Alabama," produces upon a critic that cannot be accused of prejudice the same impression that it did upon us. The Army and Navy Gazette, noticing the recent republication of the volume which originally appeared in 1849, says of it: "Declining years and matured reflection seem in Semmes's case only to have added bitterness to his temper, and to have lessened his conception of self-respect. Judged by these pages, he is written down a soured, garrulous boaster, and a spiteful, abusive critic. Undoubtedly he underwent at the hands of his enemies indignities and persecution which would go far to distort and discolor his view of accomplished facts; but nothing he suffered can excuse his open commendation of Mr. Lincoln's murderer, and his misrepresentation and abuse of those whom he characterizes as 'Northern savages.' The unbiassed historian of the future, while giving the Confederate captain credit for the thorough manner in which he accomplished his wholesale destruction of the enemy's private property, will hardly class him in the same category with those officers and men of both sides who on sea and land battled, often against overwhelming odds, in fair fight."

JAMES H. WILSON, formerly Lieut.-Colonel, 35th Infantry, and Brevet Major-General, in a notice of McClellan's biography which appears in the New York Sun says: "The phrases we have quoted were taken from the private letters as published, and these are evidently but extracts selected from the mass he had written. They constitute the most curious collection that was ever published for the support of a soldier's reputation. If they show anything, they show an overweening egotism and self esteem, and a blind persistent contempt for his lawful superiors. When read in connection with the rest of his story they produce but one impression, and that is that the man who wrote them, from the time he arrived at Washington, labored under the delusion that he had a higher commission for the salvation of the country than any he held from those in authority over him; that he was wiser and better than they; that whoever differed in opinion from him should be held as his bitter and unscrupulous enemy; and finally that he had an imprescriptible title to the Army of the Potomac, like that of Cæsar to the Tenth Legion or of Napoleon to the Old Guard."

ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL KELTON, while waiting for the Ordnance Department to test the improvement he has invented for the Springfield rifle, mention of which has previously been made in the JOURNAL, is devoting his spare moments to perfecting an ingenious and inexpensive device for loading all the six barrels of an Army revolver at once. By this device six cartridges are held together by a band of brass or paper with a grooved wooden centre piece, so carefully constructed as to enable each cartridge to slip into its chamber. By a blow of the hand the band is broken, the cheap centre piece falls to the ground and the cartridges are firmly inserted in their respective chambers. The cartridge shells are thrown from the chambers by the movement, which throws up the barrel, so that by the movement required to insert a single cartridge six chambers can be loaded. The invention, which promises to be of value to the military service, will be submitted to the Ordnance Department for trial.

NEAR Harper's Ferry is a hill known as "Bolivar Heights," famous during the war as one of the three heights—Loudon, Bolivar, and Maryland—which control the valley in which Harper's Ferry is situated. Bolivar Heights is now a favorite resort of the residents of the neighborhood. On Sundays especially many people congregate there, and one of the favorite amusements has been to hunt for war relics. On April 24 some men or boys investigated the contents of an old shell which has been imbedded for twenty-three years in the hillside. With a long iron rod they opened the mouth of the shell and loosened the powder within. All went well until the friction of the rod set fire to the powder, when an explosion took place which was heard for miles away. Several dwellings near by were almost demolished, and six persons were severely injured. One poor girl of fourteen had her right leg blown off below the knee; she and a boy who was wounded are not expected to recover.

SEVERAL casualties occurred during the Easter Volunteer manœuvres in England. One man had his ear blown off, another had his face scorched by a comrade's rifle, and still a third was brought to ground by a bayonet thrust, from which last it would appear that the bayonets which doubled up when they struck the breech-clouts of the Arabs at Abu-Klea are more effective against Englishmen. Even in the case mentioned the victim was only brought to the ground and not spitted as he should have been under the circumstances.

THERE seems to be danger that General Parke will not be appointed Superintendent of the Military Academy after all. Captain George A. Armes, retired, has made formal application to the Secretary of War for the position, and it is difficult to see how the Secretary can refuse to grant this modest application.

THE Omaha Herald puts in a good word for Major F. W. Benteen, 9th U. S. Cavalry, saying "he served with the gallant 7th Cavalry in every Indian campaign which made Custer's name great as an Indian fighter. The good judgment, hearty support and energy of Major Benteen contributed no little to the success Custer attained; and it was due to his good judgment that the remnant of the 7th Cavalry was saved when Custer was massacred." A Washington special, commenting on the case, says: "It was supposed that his long and faithful service, his exemplary life at the post and the reputation he had acquired as an officer and a gentleman would be taken into consideration as mitigating his offence, but the court imposed the severest penalty known—dismissal from the service. The same week a lieutenant was convicted of dragging one of his men across a parade ground tied to the heels of a mule. This officer was sentenced to suspension for one year. Benteen was sentenced to dismissal. Military courts, like civil courts, are eccentric. The youngster who had committed an act of barbarism on one of his men was the subject of mercy; the old officer, with twenty-six years of gallant service, was not."

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL HENRY M. LAZELLE, 23d Infantry, was last week tendered the detail as successor to Colonel Scott in charge of the war records, but he has written declining it. Assistant Adjutant General Vincent is the next on the list of officers that the Department considers qualified, but it is understood that he is also averse to taking the place. Among others that the Department now has in view for the place are Lieut.-Colonel Henry W. Closson, 5th Art.; Major R. H. Hall, 22d Inf.; Major Geo. W. Baird, Pay Dept., and Captain George W. Davis. Each of them has been mentioned to the Secretary as possessing some particular qualification for the work. Major Baird has had some practical experience with the work, having served some time with Colonel Scott upon it prior to his transfer from the line of the Army to the Pay Corps. Colonel Scott, it is said, remarked only a short while before his death, that he could give up the work and rest easy if he could be assured that Major Baird would succeed him.

FROM a report recently received at the Navy Department from the U. S. S. Alliance, it appears that the system of forced draft introduced into the boilers of that vessel is, in so far as a single experiment will justify generalization, a success and compares favorably as regards economic results, with the best English practice. During a full power trial lasting ten hours, the engines of the Alliance developed an average of 668 horse-power, the maximum reaching 774. During this trial but one-half of the boilers were in use, the combustion being urged by the introduction of a cold blast into the ash pits beneath the furnace grates. If further experiment shall demonstrate the value of the forced draft system as applied to the Alliance, it is likely that one of the two vessels now refitting at New York, the Enterprise and Nipsic, will be furnished with a similar addition to their efficiency. We give elsewhere a fuller statement of the results obtained with the Alliance.

SOME of the daily papers have, we observed, contained incorrect accounts of the torpedo explosion at Annapolis, a correct account of which was given by our correspondent at that place. There was, as we are informed, no premature explosion. Every precaution was taken, spar fully rigged out and submerged, then connections were made, and the torpedo exploded at the intended moment. After submersion, the spar was broken, either by the resistance of the water or by striking some unknown obstruction, and, as it was 10 feet below the surface, of course, there were no means of knowing this fact. It did not touch bottom, as there was a depth of at least 14 or 15 feet of water. By this accident the torpedo came sufficiently close to spring a leak in the Hull's bow by concussion. None of the crew were injured and no further damage done. The injury was so slight as not to interfere with the daily routine of torpedo exercises. No blame whatever has been attached to the officers in charge. The accident is regarded as unavoidable.

THE British authorities are trying, with some success, the experiment of a volunteer cycle company. This week at Aldershot is to be tested a new vehicle, shaped like a long racing boat, on which a dozen soldiers can sit in single file and propel it easily at the rate of 16 miles an hour, and can draw eight baggage wagons after them. This multicycle is steered easily by one man, is affected little by rough roads, and turns in less space than an ordinary hansom.

Engineering News publishes some logarithms of past population of New York City, from which it ciphers out that the future population will be: 1890, 1,599,400; 1900, 2,108,600; 1910, 2,779,300; 1920, 3,664,000.

THE Kansas City Times says: "The Chicago Tribune prints a list of staff officers who have served longer than four years at this station, and anxiously asks whether the Secretary will change them after July 1, when the new mileage funds will be available and if he will not find them too solidly imbedded to be removed. There is entirely too much buncombe written in reference to the change in stations, every four years among staff officers. The rule was made to apply more strictly to line officers, who in many cases have been away from their regiments for years, while some had never joined them. It makes but little difference how long a staff officer is stationed at any one place."

L'Avenir Militaire thinks that as soon as the bullets begin to whistle the best shots will become no better than the bad ones firing at random. It goes on to say that, although in France and Germany the return to a belief in the bayonet and to close order which recalls the tactique linéaire of Frederick the Great indicates a loss of faith in the omnipotence of musketry, nevertheless musketry instruction is held to be of the greatest importance. In this it contradicts itself and it offers no evidence of the alleged change of opinion in France and Germany.

THE difference of the conditions surrounding the office of Assistant Surgeon of the Army and that of the Navy is again forcibly illustrated through the appointment, on April 21, of Charles E. Woodruff to an assistant surgeonship in the Army, he having resigned from the Naval Medical Corps to accept the appointment. Mr. Woodruff was one of the brightest of the late additions to the Navy, and it was with much regret that the Secretary of the Navy accepted his resignation. Mr. Woodruff is now in Washington, but will proceed in a few days to his new station at Fort Wayne, Mich.

IN the absence of mileage and transportation funds, it is hardly possible that any changes in Department commands will be ordered until after the 1st of July. General Terry will therefore probably remain in command of the Department of the Missouri until General Merritt has been relieved from the Military Academy.

THE Prince of Wales, in memory of his election in 1860, when he visited this country, as an honorary member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Boston, has recently sent over his portrait to adorn the armory of that distinguished organization.

LATE ARMY ORDERS.

Maj. R. H. Jackson, 5th Art., will attend the encampment of the 1st Brigade, New Hamp. National Guard at Concord, commencing May 31. (S. O., H. Q. A., April 29.)

GENERAL W. T. SHERMAN, Maj.-Gen. Schofield, Gens. Slocum, Whipple, and Jackson, Col. Hamilton, Commo. Gherardi and many other notable personages attended the reception given by the Lincoln Club of Brooklyn, on Thursday evening, the occasion of its tenth anniversary.

SINCE the statement to the contrary was made in the JOURNAL of last week, Secretary Whitney has decided upon the recommendation of the engineers who managed the machinery of the Atlanta during her recent trial trip, to provide the Boston machinery with a "separator." This will occasion the postponement of her trial for several weeks.

THE following circular letter was sent out from the Navy Department to the commandants of the different navy-yards this week:

On and after the 1st day of May, 1887, the captain of the yard under your command will assume the same relations to the Bureau of Yards and Docks that is now held by the officers in other bureau departments of the yard. The civil engineer of the yard will be regarded as the assistant of the captain of the yard in all duties under control of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, and in his absence will have charge of the department. Respectfully,

W. C. WHITNEY, Secretary of the Navy.

LIEUTENANT DANENHOWER.

THE remains of the late Lieutenant J. W. Danenhower, U. S. N., arrived at Oswego April 24, accompanied by the father, mother, three brothers, and other gentlemen. The Hon. George B. Sloan, father-in-law of the deceased, and several prominent citizens, received the remains, which were escorted to the residence of Mr. Sloan by a detail of men from the 29th and 38th Separate Companies, N. G. S. N. Y. Six members of the life saving crew acted as bearers. The funeral was held in the afternoon. The remains were escorted from the residence to Christ Church, and from the church through the streets of the city by two companies of militia, with appropriate music. The honorary bearers were Lieut. Ayer, 12th U. S. Infantry; H. C. Tower, of Washington; F. E. Hamilton, E. B. Powell, J. F. Johnson, and J. B. Lathrop, of Oswego city. The Episcopal service was read at the church by the Rev. W. L. Parker, rector, who officiated when Lieut. Danenhower was married to Miss Sloan three years ago. Large crowds of people assembled on the streets as the procession passed. The remains were interred at Riverside Cemetery.

"I knew Danenhower well. I was introduced to him in 1879 or 1880, if I remember, by John Russell Young, who had a warm regard for Danenhower, and through whose interest the young officer was selected to accompany the Jeannette expedition. He was rather tall, with a frank, ingenuous countenance, of more than ordinary athletic acquirements and developments; calm, serious, and as I have noted in men famous for their bravery, as modest as a girl. A fine blush would sweep over his face if any suggestions of a personal character were made concerning himself. I judged him to be of deeply affectionate nature, sensitive, with a morbid sense of duty. There was an air of determination in his slow, mild, measured tones. A man of indomitable will, to whom danger would be a joy. He was apparently sad, shy, and seemed to labor under a mental stress, as though he was constantly absorbed. The story of his assignment to the Jeannette was told me at the time by Mr. John Russell Young, and I noted it, as full of interest in showing by what small incidents in human affairs events are controlled.

"'I was walking with Gen. Grant,' said Mr. Young, 'on the Plazzi di Spagni, in Rome, and we had been looking up the place were Keats died. We had just returned from a visit to Asia Minor, on the Vandalia, and were talking of the trip and of our pleasant experiences with the officers especially, who were an unusually clever and capable company of gentlemen. Grant, who was given to analyzing men's characters, drawing them, as it were, in silhouettes or cameo sketches, was speaking of the officers, running down the list, saying what he would do with one or the other or what special fitness of capacity lay in this man or that, when he came to Danenhower. He had not known Danenhower personally, very well, as he was the youngest officer in the ward room, and being extremely modest, kept away from the General, whose associates were naturally the commanding officers.'

"He dwelt on the impression Danenhower had made upon him in the Vandalia, by his quiet, steady, prompt performance of duty, always coming on deck before the bells had ceased striking which summoned him to his watch, and notably his fearlessness, coolness and modesty. I left Grant and went to Paris, and afterwards to Gotha, to see Peterman, the eminent German geographer, by order of Mr. Bennett, in reference to the route the Jeannette would take.

"On returning to Paris I met Danenhower on a leave from the Vandalia, then in port, at Ville Franche. Danenhower was dining with me, and remembering Grant's words regarding him, I suggested that he should apply for assignment to duty on the Jeannette. He said he had not thought of it; that he knew nothing of the Arctic service, had no fitness for it, but wished to end his cruise, go home and be examined for promotion to a lieutenancy. I was anxious to have Danenhower on the Jeannette, and repeated as an encouragement Grant's commendatory words, again urging him to volunteer for the Service. He blushed like a girl, seemed very much embarrassed, said again he had no wish to go to the North Pole, but added with a fine burst of enthusiasm, the tears coming into his eyes, 'I would go to the North Pole, I would go anywhere, I would give my life to justify such an opinion from a man I revere as I do Gen. Grant.'

"I wrote Grant, then in Florence, recalling his words to me in Rome about Danenhower, and saying that if he were to write to Mr. Bennett, in the same vein, I would give the letter to him. Grant sent me the letter, a very earnest endorsement of Danenhower. The original I sent Danenhower, to Ville Franche, giving Mr. Bennett a copy. Mr. Bennett asked De Long what he thought of Danenhower. De Long said he did not know him, would like May, but the letter of Grant was all that he needed to assure him that Danenhower was the man he wanted. Mr. Bennett cabled to Washington and Danenhower was transferred to the Jeannette, then at Havre."

SURGEON FREDERICK M. DEARBORNE, U. S. Navy, retired, died at his home, in Malden, Mass., April 23, of pneumonia. He entered the Navy as Asst. Surgeon September, 1864, was promoted P. A. Surg. in 1867, Surgeon in 1875, and retired Dec. 10, 1883. During the period of his active career he rendered efficient service, and was highly esteemed as an officer and a gentleman. The funeral took place on Tuesday.

FORDYCE L. LAFLIN, one of the most widely known citizens of Ulster County, New York, died at his home in Saugerties, April 27, after an illness of several weeks. Mr. Laflin was a native of Blandford, Hampden County, Massachusetts, where he was born in 1824. He removed with his father to Saugerties fifty years ago, which place has since been his home. For many years Mr. Laflin was engaged in the manufacture of gunpowder. He was treasurer of the Laflin Powder Company, which had several mills in Ulster County, for a long time, and later on, when that company was consolidated with the Smith and Rand Powder Company, under the name of the Laflin and Rand Powder Company, he was vice President of the new corporation. He was also for many years vice president of the Saugerties National Bank. Mr. Laflin was supervisor of the town of Saugerties in 1853, 1857, 1860, 1865 and 1866, and represented Ulster in the Assembly of 1858. He was State Prison Inspector for three years. He was also a member of the New York Democratic State Committee for a long time and was repeatedly chosen as a delegate to district, county, State and national conventions of his party, always taking a prominent part in the deliberations of such gatherings. Mr. Laflin was a man of the highest character, respected and trustworthy. He was faithful to every trust reposed in him and a delightful companion socially. His reputation extended beyond the county and the State, and few men had a wider circle of political and social friends.

A FEW weeks ago we announced the death at Chicago, March 13, of the mother of Colonel George F. Towle, U. S. A., on the staff of Major-Gen. Terry. That officer is now called upon to mourn the death of his father, Captain George William Towle, of Portsmouth, N. H., which occurred at Chicago, April 20. The deceased gentleman was born in 1810, and was the eldest son of Gen. Joseph Towle, a soldier of 1812. He served with distinction during the war in a New Hampshire regiment. The Portsmouth Post in referring to his death, says: "Of late years Capt. Towle has resided in New Castle, which he selected chiefly for the benefit of his wife's health. Probably his death will be more deeply felt there than anywhere else. He had always borne a great part in public affairs and under his management the financial affairs of the town, which had been in great confusion since the war, were put into orderly and intelligible shape. Besides this he interested himself in the public schools, in the improvement of public buildings, roads, etc. In short he was that best product of our free institutions, a good citizen. In private relations he was friendly and liberal, encouraged younger men, and generously assisted those who needed help. He was a very agreeable companion, intelligent and quick to respond, and in the latter years of his life, when he had withdrawn from active business, a great reader of books and magazines."

ALBERT S. NONES, a gallant officer during the late war, and a brother of Chief Engineer Henry B. Nones, U. S. Navy, died April 24 at Wilmington, Del. He was the son of Capt. Henry B. Nones, U. S. Revenue Marine, and was born at Eastport, Me., in 1840. During the war he served as an aide on the staff of Gen. Thomas A. Smyth, and at its close was appointed 2d Lieutenant, 8th U. S. Inf., but resigned after a few months' service. Since then he has held several public positions and was prominent in G. A. R. circles. It is but recently, April 15, that his mother died, so that Chief Engineer Nones is doubly afflicted in the loss of a mother and a brother.

MRS. HENRY S. HUMPHREY, who died at Springfield, Mass., April 22, was, when she married Mr. Humphrey in 1866, the widow of Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Bainbridge, 1st U. S. Infantry, a Mexican veteran who was drowned May 31, 1857. Her oldest sister married Major General James Barnes, who served in the Army of the Potomac. The third child married Major John P. Clark, who lost his life in the Mexican war.

CAROLINE PATTERSON, aged ninety-two, an Indian squaw, who died last week near Red House, on the Allegheny Reservation, had been for many years a pensioner on account of valuable services rendered by her husband, William Patterson, during the War of 1812, as one of the band of Indian scouts and warriors who, under Captain Black Snake, did service along the Niagara frontier, after the burning of Buffalo.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL TUNOZ, of the 8th Battalion, Mexican Army, and M. M. Savalla, musical director attached to the command, quarrelled at San Luis Potosi, April 24. The two officers, accompanied only by a captain of the regiment, were driven to the Lodrillera, and at the word both shot at once and both fell dead.

MR. WARREN CHIPP, father of the late Ensign Chas. W. Chipp, U. S. N., of the ill-fated Jeannette, died at Kingston, N. Y., April 22, aged seventy-two. He was for many years Supervisor of Kingston and for eight years was Worshipful Grand Master of the Kingston Masonic Lodge.

PATRICK H. REDMOND, who entered the Military Academy at West Point in 1863, but left before graduation, died April 22 at Philadelphia. For some years past he had been a successful journalist.

MRS. LOWRY, wife of Captain Francis Lowry, U. S. Navy, died at her home in Burlington, Vt., April 21. The deceased lady was a daughter of the late Isaac Nichols, Esq., of Brooklyn.

ORDNANCE SERGEANT ROBERT HUNT, U. S. Army, retired, a faithful soldier and veteran of two wars, died of paralysis at Charlestown, Mass., April 18, aged sixty-seven.

DR. EDWARD T. CASWELL, of Providence, R. I., a brother of Pay Inspector Thos. T. Caswell, U. S. N., died at Providence, R. I., April 17.

MRS. BURBANK, widow of Gen. Sidney Burbank and mother of Lieut. C. S. Burbank, U. S. A., died at Newport, Ky., April 27.

GENERAL J. C. ROBIE, the venerable father of Chief Engr. E. D. Robie, U. S. N., died at Binghamton, N. Y., April 15.

THE AMERICAN PLAN OF FORCED DRAFT.

A TRIAL of the Alliance, which was recently fitted by the Bureau of Steam Engineering with forced draft on the system invented by Passed Asst. Engineer J. C. Kafer, U. S. N., has conclusively demonstrated the superiority of the American plan of forced draft over the standard English system.

On Feb. 22 the Alliance made a ten-hours run, using only two out of her four boilers. The maximum horse power developed was 744, while the average for the entire ten hours was 668. The best performance of this vessel with her original eight boilers was 774 horse power, which, it will be seen, is but little greater than her present performance with only two boilers, and less than one-third of her former grate surface. The steam was kept at almost constant pressure, and it was as great at the end as at the beginning. The maximum horse power per square foot of grate surface was 12.4, while for the whole run the average was over 11. This is a most excellent result, as the boilers were originally intended for natural draft only, and the forced draft was introduced for purely experimental purposes. The vessel carries 45 tons less boiler and 27 tons more coal than formerly, while she has greater power. The coal used was that ordinarily used for cruising, and was used as it came out of the bunkers, without selection. The Alliance's engines are over ten years old, and so, of course, do not make the performance show as high as could be made with new engines of latest type.

It is to be regretted that no full-power trial of the Alliance has been made since the firemen have become accustomed to working the fires under forced draft, but the performance under half boiler power indicates a probability of very good power and speed. The endurance of the men and machinery could not be determined, as the trial was unfortunately cut short by the arrival of the Alliance at her destination, Zanzibar, but the trial proved that the new system of forced draft could be worked more than twice as long as any foreign man-of-war has yet succeeded in running with air-tight fire rooms. Comparing the Alliance with the New York City, which is fitted with Howden's (English) system of forced draft on similar boilers it is found that the Alliance makes 0.46 horse power per square foot of heating surface and 0.69 horse power per cubic foot of boiler, while the New York City only made 0.25 horse power per square foot of heating surface and only 0.37 horse power per cubic foot of boiler. Comparing the Alliance with the best performance of the English cruiser Mersey, the horse power developed per square foot of grate was almost identical in both cases, being slightly in favor of the Alliance, while the Mersey's trial was for only three hours. As to economy, the Alliance made her horse power at the rate of 2.68 lbs. of coal per horse power per hour with her old engines and with ordinary coal, while the Scout, with the latest improvements in engines and boilers, used 2.6 lbs. of picked Nixon Navigation coal, and the Mersey used 2.48 lbs.

The principal advantage of the system of forced draft, as applied by the Bureau of Steam Engineering over the air-tight fire room system, is in the ability to clean any fire without interfering with the draft of the other fires. With air-tight fire rooms, whenever a furnace door is opened there is a rush of cold air through the furnace, which decreases the draft of the other furnaces and is injurious to the boilers. This is obviated in the Alliance by very simple means, while the fire room is made much cooler than under natural draft, and the cumbersome air locks made necessary by air-tight fire rooms are dispensed with.

Now that the advantage of the system has been practically demonstrated, the bureau has decided to add the improvement to the plans for the Newark and the 6,000-ton armored ship. The contractors for the No. 1 gunboat are also considering the advisability of asking for a modification of their contract, so as to allow the adoption of the forced draft system.

In connection with the Alliance's trial it may be remembered that when she was fitted out last year an experimental screw of a type, which had not previously been used in the Navy, was applied to her, in order to determine some doubtful points about it. It was not quite as successful as should have been expected from the reports of trials of similar screws elsewhere; and there was so much adverse criticism about the Alliance in certain quarters, that, in order to show that her defect of speed was not due to the forced draft system, the screw was removed and her former screw replaced, and the desired experimental data was in a great measure lost. To show how difficult it is for the very best designers to always get the best screw for a vessel at the first trial, the case may be mentioned of the Destructor, the torpedo cruiser recently built for the Spanish Government by J. and G. Thompson, the eminent shipbuilders of Clydebank.

The screw as designed and made was 7 ft. 6 in. diameter, 8 ft. 6 in. pitch, with an area of 14 sq. ft., and with it a speed of 21 knots was obtained. A series of progressive trials showed that the screw should have more pitch and less area; consequently another screw was made and tried. This was followed by a third and fourth; and finally the "seventh screw," 7 ft. 3 in. diameter, 9 ft. 2 in. pitch, with 11¼ sq. ft. of area, giving a speed of 22.68 knots, was accepted as satisfactory by the builders, and the official trials were made with it. What would be said if the Navy Department spent as much money on screws for a single ship as a private firm did on the screws of the Destructor?

LIEUTENANT S. C. MILLS, 12th U. S. Infantry, was married in New York City, April 28, to Miss Marie Louise Willcox, daughter of Gen. O. B. Willcox, U. S. A. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Brewster, at the residence of the bride's aunt Mrs. J. B. Harrison, 34 Gramercy Place.

THE STATE TROOPS.

THE 12TH N. Y. AND THE TRANSFER OF ARMORIES.

THE 12th N. Y. is certainly entitled to much credit for the manner in which they executed their manœuvres on the drill floor on the evening of the inauguration of the armory, reported in JOURNAL of April 23. The introduction of the three battalion organization was a fortunate idea, not only because it was a departure from the well-worn routine in which affairs of this kind are usually conducted, but particularly because it gave to many a practical illustration of a formation seldom witnessed, and yet forming one of the most important topics of military discussion at the present time. On the other hand, the management of the crowd outside was most incompetent. The indiscriminate issue of tickets in every direction followed by the wholesale refusal of admittance to those who held them (of all grades and all classes) was an awkward blunder and the regiment will require long time before it regains its former popularity. If the 12th gets excited in managing a crowd of invited guests, what will they do when a mob of rioters makes a move on the armory? Think about this, gentlemen.

Another almost incredible blunder is that while all this moving from one armory to the other and all this feasting was going on, the brigade commander had never been officially informed of the fact that any movement of the kind was intended or taking place. The keys of the armory had not been turned over, and it is asserted that it was left in a condition unfit for occupation. Of the latter fact, however, we have not been able to satisfy ourselves by ocular demonstration. It is, however, only a natural consequence that the brigade commander issued orders directing the regiment to march back on Friday, April 29, to formally turn over the building to the 71st, who succeed the 12th, and his firmness in refusing to allow the colonel of the 12th to turn the keys over individually, was as commendable as the indignation of certain officers of that regiment when ordered to do what was right on general as well as on military principles was improper and out of place.

The situation is briefly this: The armory has even now not yet been finally accepted by the Armory Board, as will appear from the resolutions adopted by that body at their session on Friday, April 12, (a day after the celebration of the 12th,) to the effect that assignments of armories and instructions relating thereto, shall be made through the commanding officer of the National Guard in New York City, "and that he be notified that the armory at 62d street and 9th avenue be accepted by the regiment assigned to it, provided that the occupancy shall not be considered as the final acceptance of said armory from the contractors."

Upon this notification Brig.-Gen. Louis Fitzgerald, commanding the brigade, issued orders, April 23, at about 3 P. M., directing transfers of regiments to take place at 8.30 P. M., April 29, to the following effect: The 8th Regiment to assemble at its armory and proceed to the corner of 35th street and Broadway and take possession of the armory now occupied by the 71st, the latter to assemble at that armory and after turning over the same to the 8th, to proceed to the corner of 45th street and Broadway and take possession of the armory now occupied by the 12th, and the commander of the 12th to assemble his command at the last mentioned armory to turn it over to the 71st, upon which the 12th was to proceed to the new armory at 62d street and 9th avenue. Each commander before turning over his quarters to his successor was to see that they were thoroughly policed and in proper condition, was charged with the necessary details as to transportation of public property, and directed upon taking possession of the new quarters to establish, by regimental orders, his headquarters at their new armories.

We learn that the commander of the 12th sent a telegram direct to the Albany authorities asking to be relieved from the operation of the orders directing his regiment to parade again, but the whole matter was from Albany referred to Brigade Headquarters, and when we go to press the parade will doubtless have taken place. The action taken at Brigade Headquarters seems to us to be dignified and the only correct one under the circumstances.

NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION.

FOLLOWING is the programme of the fifteenth annual meeting of the National Rifle Association of America, to be held at Creedmoor, commencing Sept. 12, 1887, and continuing six days:

No. 1.—Directors' Match.—200 yards. Championship Gold Badge.

No. 6.—Tiffany Continuous Match.—All-Comers' Continuous Match. Distance, 200 yards. Position, standing. Number of shots, 7, on the American Standard target. Any rifle within the rules. Cleaning will be allowed between shots for rifles other than military, or special military. The aggregate of three scores to count for all prizes. Entries unlimited; fee $1 each ticket or three for $2 if taken at one time. Allowance, special military rifles, 3 points; other military rifles, 4 points; Remington State model, .50 calibre, 5 points, on each score. The allowance for military and special military rifles will be added to the total scores made. Prizes.—First prize, a silver cup, presented by Messrs. Tiffany and Co., Union Square, New York City; 31 other cash prizes, viz.: $30, $25, $20, $15, five of $10, seven of $7, and fifteen of $5, each; total, $264. Extra prizes of $5, $3, and $2 will be awarded each day to the competitors making the highest single scores in order of merit.

No. 7. Governor's Match.—Seven shots at 500 yards; position, any. Rifle, any military, including specials. Open to all comers. Entrance fee, $1 each, or three for $2 if taken at one time. Re-entries allowed. The aggregate of three scores to count for all prizes. Allowance, Rem. Rifle, State model, .50 calibre, 4 points, and other military rifles, 2 points, on three scores, and in same proportion for single scores. $200 divided into 25 prizes, viz.: $25, $20, $15, $10, six of $8, seven of $6, and eight of $5 each.

No. 8, All-comers, and Marksmen's Badge Match.—Open to everybody. Distances, 200 and 500 yards. Position, standing at 200, prone at 500. Five shots at each distance. Entrance fee, $1, or three for $2 if taken at one time. Re-entries allowed. Rifle, Remington, .50 cal., State model. Thirty-one prizes, $240, viz.: $25, $20, $15, eight of $10, and $5 each. The firing at both ranges must be done on the same day or the score will be considered void.

No. 9, Hilton Trophy Match.—Open to the military world. Distances, 200, 500, and 600 yards. Rounds, 7 at each distance. Position, standing, at 200 yards; any at 500 and 600 yards. Weapons, any military rifle which has been adopted, authorized, or issued, as an official arm by any State or government. Ammunition, any. Entrance fee, $2 each man. Prize, a trophy, presented by Hon. Henry Hilton, of New York, to be shot for annually. Value, $3,000. Also a medal to each member of the winning team.

No. 10, Short Range Team Match.—Open to teams of 4 from any regularly organized rifle club or association or military organization. Ten shots at 200 yards; position, standing. Rifles, any within the rules. Target, the Standard American. Teams using the Remington rifle, State model, .50 calibre, will be allowed 28 points, and 16 points will be allowed to team, using other military or special military rifles. Entrance fee, $5 per team; re-entries allowed, but only the highest score to count. Four prizes viz.: $40, $30, $20, and $10. Cleaning will be allowed between shots for rifles other than military, or special military. Members of teams will be allowed to use any rifle within the rules. The allowance for the Remington rifle, State model, will be 7 points; for other military or special military rifle 4 points each. The allowance for military and special military rifles will be added to the total scores made. In case of ties the tie in each case will be decided in favor of the competitor having the fewest shots of low value, according to the principle on which sections 2 and 3 of Article XII. are based.

No. 11, Inter-State Military Match.—Open to one team from each State or Territory in the United States, consisting of 12 members of the regularly organized and uniformed National Guard or military of such State or Territory. Distances, 200 and 500 yards. Position, at 200 yards, standing, at 500 yards, prone. Weapon, any military rifle which has been adopted, authorized, or issued as an official arm by any State or government. Prize, to the team making the highest aggregate score a large bronze "Soldier of Marathon." Value, $350. Also a medal to each member of the winning Team.

No. 12. Inter-State Long-Range Match.—Open to teams of 4 from all rifle associations or clubs in any State or Territory in the United States. Distances, 800, 900, and 1,000 yards; 15 shots at each distance. Weapon, any rifle within the rules. Entrance fee, $10 each team. Prize, a trophy to be held for the year by the successful team, which shall be deposited in some central place in the State whose team may win it. Also a medal to each member of the winning team. Cleaning will be allowed between shots for all rifles.

No. 13, New York State National Guard Match.—Distances, 200 and 500 yards. Position, standing at 200, prone at 500 yards. Weapon, the Remington rifle, State medal, or such others as may be authorized or issued by the State. Rounds, 5 at each distance. Prize, a trophy. Value, $300.

Nos. 14 and 15, First and Second Brigades National Guard Match.—Distances 200 and 500 yards. Five shots at each distance. Position, standing at 200, prone at 500 yards.

No. 16, General Sheridan's Skirmishers' Match.—Open to teams of 6 from the Regular Army, Navy, Marine Corps, National Guard, Volunteers, or militia of any country, State or Territory. Distances, 600 to 200 yards and return. Second-class targets. Weapon, the military rifle with which the organization has been regularly armed, unless such be a magazine gun, in which case any military rifle which has been adopted as an official arm by any State or Government. Entrance fee, $5 for each team. The first prize in this match is a trophy presented by S. D. Schuyler, Esq. Value, $150. Also a bronze medal to each member of the winning team. Won in 1884 and 1885 by the 4th Artillery, U. S. A. Won in 1886 by Engineer Corps, U. S. A.

No. 17, Steward Match.—Open to all comers. Distance, 200 yards; Creedmoor targets. Number of shots, 5. Position, sitting, kneeling or standing. Weapon, any military or special military rifle; an allowance of 2 points will be given to competitors who use the Remington rifle, State model, the allowance to be added to the aggregate of three scores, prizes to be won on the aggregate of the three scores. Entries, 50 cents each, or three for $1 if taken at one time. Entries unlimited. Match open every day. Prizes for this match will be announced later. Ties in totals to be decided by the next best score or scores.

No. 18, Revolver Match.—Open to all comers. Distance, 30 yards. Number of shots, 5 on the American standing target. Position, standing, off-hand, the use of one arm only allowed. Revolver not to exceed 2¾ pounds in weight; maximum length of barrel (exclusive of chamber), 7½ inches. Minimum trigger pull, 3 pounds. Plain, open sights sufficiently strong for service purposes. Cleaning allowed between scores only. Ammunition, any. The aggregate of three scores to count for all prizes. Entrance fee, 50 cents each, or three for $1 when taken at one time. Prizes—$75 divided into 11 prizes, viz.: $15, $10, $8, $7, and seven of $5 each. Revolvers must not be loaded until the competitor has taken his position at the firing point; the muzzle must always be kept vertical or pointed towards the target. In case of a miss-fire, the cartridge that fails to explode must be extracted before another one is inserted.

NATIONAL GUARD ANNIVERSARIES.

ON Monday last, April 25, that gallant old regiment, the 69th New York, celebrated the 25th anniversary of their departure for the seat of war. We remember them well as they lay in camp across the Potomac opposite Washington, and the generous Irish hospitality which was always to be found in their tents—or huts, rather—and again when we accompanied them down the Potomac as they changed quarters to Yorktown. Their gallant Colonel, Nugent, still continues in the Military Service as an officer on the retired list of the Army. It was part of the so-called Irish Brigade which, as General Walker says in his history, "was to remain to the close of the war one of the most picturesque features of the 2d Corps, whether in fight, on the march, or in camp." Foremost in every fight, it was the dead of the 69th who lay nearest to the stone wall which marked the furthest advance in Humphrey's desperate charge at Fredericksburg that virtually closed the record of that bloody day. It was their dead again who lay mingled with the growing grain on the wheat field at Gettysburg, their regiment once so strong in numbers having ere this been reduced by gallant service to such meagre dimensions that it could furnish but two companies of the battalion of six companies into which the Irish Brigade had previously been consolidated. The exercises of their anniversary celebration on Monday were opened by the Rev. Father Dougherty, of St. Monica's Church, the chaplain of the regiment. He was followed by Mr. Edwin L. Abbett, brother of Leon Abbett, ex-Governor of New Jersey, and Assistant District Attorney Fitzgerald. The Eureka Quartet then gave a selection of popular songs. Colonel Conklin was the next speaker. He was followed by Coroner Levy and several other gentleman, who spoke on the glories of the regiment. Among the gentlemen on the platform was a delegation from the Veteran Corps of the regiment, Major Edward Duffy, Capt. J. T. Morris, Adjt. James Moran, Lawrence G. Goulding, James Rogers, E. J. McCarthy, Capt. Breslin, Rev. Father O'Keefe, Col. J. J. O'Donoghue, Capt. P. J. Brady, Col. Coonan, the commander of the veterans, Capt. M. C. Murphy, Col. Thomas Lynch, and Surg. William O'Meagher, M. D. After the exercises the veterans and their friends adjourned to the officers' room, on the floor below, where a collation was served. Dancing came later.

The 13th Regiment celebrated the 26th anniversary of its going to the front in the late Civil War at the armory, April 24, 1887, by a dress parade and review by his Honor, Mayor Whitney. Major Ackerman was in command of the regiment. The programme of the evening, as originally arranged, was to have a street parade, and a review and dress parade at the armory. Owing to the inclemency of the weather the street parade was omitted, and Mayor Whitney reviewed the regiment in the armory. Five hundred men answered the roll call. In addition to these were sixty uniformed veterans and the Cadet Corps numbering fifty more. The programme of the evening concluded with dancing.

The Old Guard celebrated their 65th anniversary on Friday last by attending service at the Church of the Holy Trinity, where a service was conducted by the chaplain, the Rev. Dr. Wilbur F. Watkins, rector of the church. At the conclusion of the church services the battalion was reassembled on Madison avenue and marched down to Delmonico's, at 5th avenue and 26th street, where the annual dinner was served. There were no set speeches, and everybody talked. The guests included Adjt. Gen. Dalton, of Massachusetts, and Cols. C. W. Stevens, Geo. S. Merrill, Dexter H. Follett, A. A. Folsom, Brig. Gen. Louis Fitzgerald, Gen. E. B. Grabb, of Philadelphia; Maj. John C. Kinney, of Hartford; Capt. J. C. Cusac, of the Troy Citizens Corps; District Attorney Martine, Chas. S. Higgins, Rev. Dr. G. C. Wildes and the Rev. Dr. Geo. C. Tiffany.

RIFLE PRACTICE FOR THE GUARD.

ADJT.-GEN. STRIVER publishes to the New Jersey Guard in G. O. No. 4, April 11, extracts from the Military Code of that State relating to Rifle Practice, recommended by the Inspector General of Rifle Practice, adopted by the State Military Board and approved by the Governor.

G. O. No. 13, A. G. O., Albany, N. Y., contains the instructions on the same subject for the New York troops.

FOURTH SEPARATE COMPANY.

ON Friday, April 15, this company formally entered its new armory, an imposing structure of an appropriate architectural design built of brick and bluestone, on Waverly street, Yonkers. It celebrated the event by an afternoon parade through the streets of Yonkers, and in the evening by a drill, which was highly creditable to the organization, and a review by Capt. Morris, Co. K, 14th Regt., N. G., S. N. Y., who also presented the State marksman badges, after which the company gave a reception. On the ground floor of the armory are the armorer's apartments, and the rifle range; on the second floor are the company parlor and billiard room, the former handsomely furnished; back of these is the drill room, 78x126 ft. The rifle range was constructed under the supervision of Brig.-Gen. Charles F. Robbins, G. I. R. P., S. N. Y., and is so arranged that by means of trap doors in the drill floor, directly over the targets, the markers can mark shots in perfect safety and comfort. On the third floor are the company locker room and quartermaster's room. The building is heated by steam and lighted by electricity.

The officers of the company gave a supper at the Getty House to about fifty representatives of other military organizations. Toasts were responded to by Capt. Cobb, Capt. Morris, 14th Regt.; Supervisor Reed, Mr. Belknap, 1st Sergt. Murray, 22d Regt.; Mr. Schott, G. A. R.; ex Lieut. Mott, Lieut. Whitney, Asst. Surgeon, 4th Sep. Co., Lieut. McVicar, 4th Sep. Co.; Lieut. Watson, 3d Regt., N. J., and Adjt. Campbell, 14th Regt.

Ninth New York.—Col. W. Seward, Jr.

THE 9th has been very quiet during the season now drawing to a close. The armory is becoming so dilapidated that it is scarcely fit for anything but company drills. Recently a few battalion drills took place, in order to keep the command from being eaten up by rust completely, but they had to be of an extremely mild character, because there is no room for a respectable battalion drill, nor is it safe to go through any lively movement. The only occasion of ceremony was the presentation of marksman's badges on Tuesday evening, April 26, for which the command assembled in fair shape. It is, however, a fact not to be disguised that the regiment is slowly, but surely, diminishing in membership. This is a matter of deep regret, especially in the case of an organization with a war record second to none in the State, and which only a decade or so ago rivalled in splendor and size the most celebrated regiments in New York City. The 9th since the transfer of the 12th, 71st and 8th Regiment, has the distinction of occupying the most wretchedly equipped and most unfavorably situated quarters among all the city regiments, and the difficulty of retaining old and attracting new members is therefore no matter of surprise. Steps should be taken to put it on a footing similar to that of its sister organizations.

The ceremonies attending the presentation were well performed, the men were steady and their evolutions well executed. Capt. G. Henry Witthaus, formerly Inspector of Rifle Practice, performed the presentation, and went through his part in a very creditable manner. The whole was executed as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

The fund for the erection of the monument of the regiment on the battle field of Gettysburg, where it performed meritorious service, is steadily increasing, over $4,000 having been raised so far by private contributions.

Ex-Capt. Geo. A. Hussey is rapidly completing the history of the 9th on which he is engaged. It promises to be a very interesting book.

COL. CAMP has issued an order congratulating his regiment on the prospect of soon having a new armory. Everything is now provided for, and the foundation will be laid in a few weeks. He says:

"While just cause of congratulation is to be found in these encouraging facts, a corresponding duty and resulting responsibility to itself and to the city and State undeniably rests upon the regiment, and to these manifest obligations the colonel commanding would call the particular and personal attention of every officer and member of the regiment. The high official standing of the regiment, its excellence in drill, its superiority in discipline, its numerical strength and the general character of its membership must all be fully maintained, and if possible improved and increased; and to these ends the strenuous efforts of every one must be put forth in that united and harmonious spirit to which so much of the prosperity of the regiment is attributable." He concludes by urging the promotion of recruiting parties in each company.

Second Battery.—Captain F. P. Earle.

THE non-commissioned officers of the 2d Battery gave their closing drill, followed by a reception, on Tuesday evening, April 26. The affair, as usual, was brilliant and well attended. The drill was a model of precision only to be acquired by the zealous attention to duty which is the chief characteristic of this battery. The use of the large drill-room formerly occupied by the 12th Regiment, gave them a handsome opportunity to show off to their best advantage.

STATE OF CONNECTICUT.

IN G. O. 8 an Examining Board is convened to meet at the A. G. O., Hartford, May 11, for the examination of officers. The Board will consist of Brig.-Gen. Frederick E. Camp, Adjt.-General; Col. Wm. H. Tubbs, Majors T. Atwater Barnes and Wm. H. Stowe, of New Haven. Major Alex. Allen, Brigade Inspector, and a large number of line officers have been ordered before the Board.

MILITIA ITEMS.

An officer of the Regular Army writes us with reference to the disturbance on the occasion of the opening of the 12th Regiment armory as follows: "I was caught in that crowd and had my trimmings torn off. I saw the beginning of the riot—stood right alongside of the soldier who started the business. The man was not at all to blame. He was struck in the face by a civilian, and the latter tried to gouge his eyes. Under the circumstances, the soldier showed forbearance in not using his gun more freely. The policemen present did not make any efforts to preserve order, but made fun of the militiamen. If the crowd had not been composed of the better class of people, there would have been serious trouble. The regimental authorities should not have issued so many invitations."

The athletic games to be held at the 12th Regt. armory on Monday evening, May 2, will be very interesting and exciting. Among the numerous entries received are many celebrated athletes, and the competitions will be very keen. The following tug of war teams will compete: Knights of the Brush, Cowboy Team, Park Athletic Club, Co. K, 13th Regt., Co. B, 22d Regt., Hillside Boat Club, Union Circle, Co. K, 71st Regt., N. Y., and West Side Athletic Club. These competitions, together with the Walk, Runs, and Bicycle races, cannot fail to ensure fine sport. The comfort of guests will be well looked after. The programmes to be presented will be exceptionally handsome.

We publish under our Army heading the new regulations concerning the distribution of the annual appropriation for arms and equipments for the militia.

Col. J. H. Jones, 12th Regt., N. Y., in G. O. 21, April 26, directs in compliance with orders from Hdqrs., 1st Brigade, N. G., S. N. Y., that the regiment parade in undress uniform, Field and Staff dismounted, on Friday, April 29.

G. O. No. 11, Albany, April 14, approve the proceedings, etc., in the case of Pvt. Theo. Wood, 14th Regt., N. G., S. N. Y., who was tried on Feb. 8, before a Court-martial of which Col. Harry W. Mitchell, of the 14th Regt., N. G., was President, on two charges: Drunkenness on duty, and disrespect to his superiors. Found guilty and sentenced to be dishonorably discharged with loss of time served.

The 1st Brigade Examining Board met on Wednesday evening, April 27, for the first time under the new system, according to which only six candidates are brought before it at one session by order of the Brig.-General, instead of being summoned by the President of the Board, as was the case heretofore.

Elections: 11th N. Y., 1st Lieut. Geo. W. Mooney, to be Captain, Co. B; 1st Lieut. Richard A. Denahan, to be Captain, Co. F, 7th N. Y., Sergt. Wallace F. Peck, to be 2d Lieut. vice Bradish J. Smith, resigned April 26. 9th N. Y. Sergt. James H. MacConnell, to be 2d Lieut., Co. H. 8th N. Y., Qm. Sergt. Frank Hollahan, 2d Lieut., Co. G, April 20.

There is opposition to the choice of Lieutenant Colonel Alex. S. Bacon to succeed Colonel Fincke in command of the Twenty-third Regiment. The politicians have opened an attack upon him because of his energetic investigation into their crooked ways, as chairman of a legislative committee, and there is opposition in the regiment. He is a native of Michigan and a graduate of the Military Academy, class of 1878. He was appointed 2d lieut. 1st U. S. Artillery, June 15, 1876; resigned March 15, 1878; captain Co. A, 23d Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., Sept. 10, 1884; major Nov. 16, 1885; lieutenant colonel March 22, 1886.

Aquila Rich has begun suit in the Supreme Court to enjoin Col. Clark and Capt. Conover, of the 7th Regiment, from expelling from the regiment his son Seton H., who is a member of Co. A, on the ground that he is a minor. Judge Donohue has granted a preliminary injunction restraining the officers from expelling the youth. Rich is 17 years old. He enlisted with his father's consent in November, 1886. He is full sized and able bodied. Much interest is manifested in the result, as many young men under 18 years are in the National Guard. The order is made returnable on Monday next at Supreme Court, Chambers.

Owing to some misinformation we erroneously reported Capt. Chas. A. Hess as elected major of the 71st N. Y. in our last week's issue. While Capt. Hess is certainly deserving of the good things said about him, and would have made an excellent major, it was nevertheless not he who was elected, and in fact he was not even a candidate for the position. The new major is Wallace A. Downs, heretofore the adjutant of the 71st, who was appointed to that position by Col. McAlpin, Sept. 28, 1886. Maj. Downs previously held the position of adjutant of the 16th Battalion from Dec. 28, 1874, to Aug. 8, 1879, when he was elected major of the same organization, which position he held until discharged, April 28, 1880.

The last quarterly returns of the 1st Brigade, N. Y., show the following strength: 7th Regt., 1,019; 8th, 452; 9th, 558; 11th, 488; 12th, 716; 22d, 574; 69th, 928; 71st, 530; 1st Battery, 100; 2d Battery 97; aggregate, 5,462, a gain of 46 over last returns.

G. O. No. 14, A. G. O., N. Y., directs as to how boards of examination are to be appointed to secure unformity in the action of such boards. Gen. Porter says: "A military body cannot reach the proficiency it owes to itself, or the efficiency it owes to the State, without competent officers, commissioned and non-commissioned; that the boards of examination should perform their duties solely with the interests of the service before them, is therefore so apparent and necessary, that further directions on this subject seem not to be required."

ILLINOIS NATIONAL GUARD.

THE Chicago Tribune, of April 16, has a long article urging the importance of Rifle Practice upon the National Guard of Illinois. The Tribune says: "There are scores of men borne upon the rolls of the Illinois National Guard who have never fired the service rifle. This, perhaps, is because they have never been called upon to do so. They can execute the manual of arms, all but the firings, using real cartridges; they can carry their weapons in the prescribed positions; they can drill with their rifles, but when it comes to shooting with them they truly say that orders don't require it. It is not their fault that for offensive or defensive purposes they might as well be armed with gaspipe closed at one end."

VERMONT NATIONAL GUARD.

THE commissioners from Vermont who visited the Gettysburg battlefield last week for the purpose of locating monuments in memory of Vermont troops, was composed of the following gentlemen: Gov. E. J. Ormsbee, ex-officio chairman; Gen. Thos. O. Seaver, 3d Vt.; Mr. Frank T. Carrick, 4th Vt.; Col. G. Grenville Benedict, 12th Vt.; Col. Albert Clarke, 13th Vt.; Col. Noble F. Dunshee, 14th Vt.; Ex-Gov. Redfield Proctor, 15th Vt.; Judge Wheelock G. Veazey, 16th Vt.; Gen. Wm. Wells, 1st Vt. Cavalry; Sergt. Cassius Peck, Co. F, 1st U. S. Sharpshooters; Sergt. Curtis Abbott, Co. H, 2d U. S. Sharpshooters; Col. F. Stewart Stranahan, 1st Vt. Cavalry. The following gentlemen accompanied the party: Adjutant and Inspector General T. S. Peck; Gen. Wm. W. Ripley, 1st U. S. Sharpshooters; Col. Henry C. Parsons, 1st Vt. Cavalry; Gen. Wm. W. Grout, M. C., 15th Vt.; Col. John R. Thompson, 15th Vt.; Surgeon Gates B. Bullard, 15th Vt.; Col. U. A. Woodbury, 2d Vt.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

G. O. 3 announces changes by discharge, appointment, etc., during the first quarter of 1887. In G. O. 4 it is announced that the annual encampment of the 1st Brigade for 1887 is fixed for May 31, the encampment to continue for five days. The 1st Brigade will therefore go into camp at Concord, May 31, for five days. Brig.-Gen. Elbert Wheeler, inspector-general, will inspect the brigade during the encampment.

The New Hampshire militia will encamp for five days commencing May 31 next.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

AFTER considerable correspondence and several conferences between the President, Lieut. General, Adjutant General, and Chief of Ordnance, with regard to the organization of the Militia forces of the District of Columbia, the President determined to appoint General Albert Ordway to be a Brigadier General of Militia in command of all the militia organizations of the District. This action was taken under the law of 1803, which authorizes the President to appoint and commission militia officers of the District as Governors do in the various States. Under the same law which it is proposed to appoint General Ordway, Mr. Peter Bacon, now an old citizen of Washington, was appointed a Major General to command the District militia. Col. Webster was appointed Adjutant General, and other citizens were commissioned to high positions under the same law. None of these commissions have been revoked, and although the organization of the District forces has been broken and the old laws considered obsolete, these persons are, strictly speaking, still officers. Of course none of these officers expect or care to serve, but in order to comply with the letter of the law, it will probably be necessary to revoke these appointments before the proposed organization can go into effect. This the President will probably accomplish by a general order revoking all commissions of officers of the District militia. The way will then be clear to the appointment of General Ordway and such other officers as may be considered necessary for the proper organization of the forces. All the commissions will be signed by the President, and a record of them kept at the Adjutant General's Office. Blank forms on parchment paper are now being printed.

MASSACHUSETTS MILITIA.

THERE is dissatisfaction in the Massachusetts militia in regard to the raising of the rank of brigade Inspectors of Rifle Practice from captain to major, as contemplated by the new militia bill. The objection seems reasonable. There is too much staff rank all through the State troops.

The 100th anniversary of the Boston Fusileers will take place on May 11 next.

OHIO NATIONAL GUARD.

THE farmers in the vicinity of Defiance, O., are up in arms against an obnoxious reservoir which they have endeavored to destroy with dynamite. Gov. Foraker at once telegraphed Adjt.-Gen. Axline to report for duty with a company of militia from Henry county. They were ordered by telegraph to proceed at once to the seat of trouble. Telegrams were also sent to all northwestern Ohio troops, ordering them to be in readiness. This action was accompanied by a proclamation warning the rioters of the consequences of their action and an order to begin repairs on the reservoir at once, military protection being promised if needed. One of the militiamen killed himself by the accidental discharge of his rifle and three others were disabled by a midnight march through a desolate country over a road almost knee deep in mud, and harassed all the way by shots in the rear from rioters lying in ambush. This march was one that never will be forgotten by the citizen soldiers of Ohio. Some of the leading citizens are involved in this mischief, and it is told, with some surprise, in Defiance, that Gordon, an ex-member of the Legislature, was at the reservoir on Monday night, holding a lantern to assist the work.

MISSOURI.

ADJT.-GEN. JAMISON has issued, April 19, an order in which he says: "Cos. A, C, D and H, of the 5th Regiment, N. G. M., Col. C. C. Allen commanding, having declared their purpose not to remain in the military service of the State, or be subject to military discipline, or the military authority of the State, and Co. C of the same regiment having requested to be disbanded and being officially informed by the colonel commanding that Cos. E, F, and G, also of the same regiment, would disband, said 5th Regiment composed of the above-named companies is hereby disbanded from the above date, and the commissions of the field, staff and company officers of the same vacated from the date mentioned. The Adjt.-General regrets exceedingly the causes which have led to the disbandment of this excellent regiment, but in the face of the discouragements which present themselves he can only tender his acknowledgments to the officers and men for duty both faithfully and patriotically performed."

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Anxious.—The next line retirement for age is that of Col. John Hamilton, 5th U. S. Art., Aug. 10, 1887.

D. G.—The 21st Infantry went to Vancouver Barracks in July, 1872, remained there until July, 1884, and then relieved by the 14th Infantry.

Citizen.—There are now 40 paymasters with the rank of major. This leaves 11 majors still to drop out before the limit of that grade, 29, is reached.

D. B. G.—The author of "Exterior Ballistics," referred to in the JOURNAL of April 16, is Captain J. M. Ingalls, 1st U. S. Artillery, Fort Monroe, Va.

R. C. W.—The revised "Retirement List," recently issued by us, gives some retirements after 1910, going as high as 1919. It includes all officers except lieutenants, and some of them.

M. L.—As there will be no new appointments of Hospital Stewards until the new Hospital Corps is organized the list of applicants now on file at the Surgeon-General's Office may be considered obsolete.

J. O. C. asks: Where can I get a copy of the Itinerary of the Army of the Potomac? ANS.—It was printed by the Adjt.-General of the Army, but the demand has exhausted the supply. Only 100 copies were printed.

Xerxes.—There is no school in Indiana supported by the Government for the education of soldiers' orphans. For information as to State military schools, write to the Bureau of Education, Interior Department, Washington, D. C.

A. C. W.—The cadet from the 9th Indiana district is Daniel E. Storms. An alternate must report and be examined with the principal. If he does not, then his appointment lapses. He cannot come at a subsequent examination and a new appointment has to be made out.

Nemo.—The act establishing the Hospital Corps was published in G. O. 29, A. G. O., of April 11, 1887. A Board is now sitting in Washington to formulate regulations for the Corps. The increased pay for Hospital Stewards commences from March 1, the date of the passage of the act.

C. W. (retired soldier) asks: 1. Am I entitled to vote in State and county elections? ANS.—Yes.

2. Can I hold civil office in the country? ANS.—Yes.

3. Am I subject to poll-tax? ANS.—Yes.

4. Am I subject to road-work? ANS.—Yes.

5. Am I subject to jury duty? ANS.—No.

Commissary.—"Bisvigum" is a new word and a new article of food which General Boulanger has contributed to the French language and the French Army. It is composed of three articles—biscuit, viande, legume (biscuit, meat, vegetables)—and can be converted into soup or stew. It is compressed like the vegetable soup used during the Rebellion, easily carried, and considered an important improvement.

H. asks: After an oblique fire the instructor commands "Recover, Arms," the recruit being in the position of "ready," with the empty cartridge case still in the chamber. Is the instructor correct in following par. 99, page 43, Upton's Inf. Tactics? ANS.—The command recover arms, according to par. 100, is to accustom the recruit, in the position of aim, to wait for the command fire. After executing the fire it is, therefore, not applicable. In order to cause the men to remove the empty shells the rule laid down in par. 99 should be followed, and the command carry arms given.

Senex.—The act approved August 3, 1861, authorized the appointment of an Assistant Secretary of War. The act of Jan. 22, 1862, authorized the appointment of two additional Secretaries of War for one year. The act of Jan. 19, 1864, authorized the appointment of a Second Assistant Secretary of War for one year. This was re-enacted by the act of Feb. 20, 1865, and in due process expired by limitation. By the act approved March 2, 1867, the act approved August 3, 1861, providing for an Assistant Secretary of War was repealed. By act of August 5, 1882, provision was made for an Assistant Secretary of War and an Assistant Secretary of the Navy, but neither office has so far been filled.

R. W. L. says: The cavalry tactics were intended to conform to the infantry movements. When the infantry wheel into column of fours, for instance, they preserve wheeling distance. When cavalry wheel into column of fours they immediately close to one yard. When the following order is fours left—there is not wheeling distance, there is about distance for two to wheel into line. Following the tactics has been found impracticable in this instance. What provision has been made to surmount this difficulty? ANS.—The front of a horse is one yard, his length is three yards. The front of a set of fours is four yards, and is equal to the distance from the fore feet of the horse of any pivot file to the fore feet of the horse of the pivot file in front of him. If the first files handle their horses properly and turn them on their fore feet, there will be sufficient distance for the other three files of each set of four to come into line.

THE CANNES INCIDENT.

THE failure of the Duke of Edinburgh to return a salute tendered him when he entered the harbor at Cannes continues to be the subject of irritating discussion between the French and English papers. The Army and Navy Gazette is especially disturbed by an explanation of the incident which appears in a letter from Cannes addressed to La France Militaire. Of it the Gazette says:

The explanation given by this gentlemanly and chivalrous journal of the incident connected with the entry of the British fleet into the roadstead is that "the Duke of Edinburgh was asleep. That is certain. But that which was not explained was the cause of his sleep. It was—it is whispered about here—that the Prince Admiral was in the same condition as Noah was when Cham showed himself wanting in respect." Then, assuming that slander to be an absolute fact, the France Militaire goes on to show its ignorance is equal to its malice and coarseness: "This is not the first time that 'the Prince Alfred, Duke of Edinburgh, youngest son of Queen Victoria and English Vice-Admiral,' forgot, dans le doux sommeil de l'ivresse, the duties of mundane courtesy and of international politeness." After such an exhibition of these qualities on the part of our contemporary, La France Militaire, as an illustration of what occurred in forgetfulness of devours, etc., owing to the sweet sleep of ivresse, proceeds: "The affair of the little cannon, now historical, has recalled the story of a shot from a revolver fired at the Prince in Australia at the end of a ball, where he evinced an exuberant gallantry to a young lady after supper." This must refer to the attempt to assassinate the Duke made by a Fenian in broad daylight, but the inaccuracy of French journalists is so gross and incorrigible that it is almost wonderful there was even that thin substratum excited for the gross figment of La France Militaire. However, the climax of the grossness and bad taste, as well as of the silly mendacity of the paper, is reached in the statement that, as a result of that and of other accidents, d'ordre plus intime, there was a prolonged sojourn of the Duchess at the Court of her father, Alexander II., at St. Petersburg.

We know nothing as to the facts and therefore have no opinion to express, except that a dignified denial of the statement would have been quite as effective as abuse which lacks the essential element of contradiction. The incident was one which would seem to have reasonably called for an authoritative explanation, and none has been given, so far as we have seen.

A NEW FORM OF ARMOR.

A SUCCESS has been scored at Portsmouth, in favor of the defence against the gun. The English Service has uniformly confessed a preference for compound, or steel-faced, armor as compared with solid steel plates, for while steel armor possesses great rigidity, it stars under the attack of guns of light natures, and cracks through beneath heavier impacts, being only held in place by the bolts. Compound armor, on the other hand, though it seldom cracks under the service test beyond the weld, and pulverizes the shot as effectually as solid steel armor, is not quite so rigid. It bends slightly under repeated impacts, or, as it is technically termed, "dishes." In order to surmount this defect various expedients have been tried. Mild steel has been used as a backing, while in another instance two steel plates have been sandwiched by a strake of iron. But in these experiments, while bulging has been reduced, the liability to cracking has been perilously increased, and up to the present time nothing has been found to give such satisfactory results as ordinary iron backing. The plate which has lately been tested was made specially, not only for the purpose of securing rigidity under attack and resisting penetration under the ordinary attack of chilled projectiles, but of resisting steel shot. This was the first experiment of the kind delivered against compound armor, and great interest was manifested in the result. The plate was constructed in accordance with a new patent which has been taken out by Mr. Alexander Wilson, of Cammell's firm. It measured 8 ft. by 6 ft., and was of the total diameter of 10½ in.—a thickness which has hitherto been able to resist the heaviest gun in the Nettle with ordinary charges. The face was specially hardened to withstand penetration, and in addition to the customary iron backing it was further strengthened by a third strake of ingot iron. The plate was also subjected to peculiar treatment known only to the manufacturers. The target was first attacked with three rounds from the 10 in. 18-ton gun at a range of 30 ft., the charge being 70 lb., and the projectile, a chilled shot, weighing 400 lb. This, which is the usual Admiralty test for armor-plates of the same thickness, represents a muzzle velocity of 1,364 ft. per second, a muzzle energy of 5,288 foot-tons, and a penetration of iron of 12.7 in. at 500 yards. The three impacts, which were disposed triangularly, produced no penetration, the projectiles being broken up into small fragments; and no damage was inflicted beyond some lamination of the steel face. The ordinary test having thus resulted in favor of the defence, the plate was next attacked near the edges by a steel-forged shell, a steel-cast shell, and a cast-iron shell, all of foreign manufacture. But, though the armor was taken at a manifest disadvantage, none of the projectiles managed to penetrate, the steel shells being completely broken up, while the cast-iron projectile was almost reduced to powder.—Admiralty Gazette.

THE ITALIAN MANŒUVRES.

THE Italian manœuvres this year provide for the formation of the divisions of Piacenza and Milan and a cavalry division of two brigades into one corps, which will manœuvre against another corps formed of the Padua and Bologna divisions and a similar cavalry division. The scene of the manœuvres will be between Rome and Naples, a country full of the most diversified positions—mountains, valleys, rivers, great plains, and towns and villages. In July there will be exercises in attack and defence of fortified places around Verona—one division of infantry, one regiment of cavalry (five squadrons), and many detachments of field and siege artillery, engineers, for attack: one brigade of infantry, one squadron of cavalry, siege artillery, and engineers for defence. There will also be mountain manœuvres on the Appenines, between Lucca and Modena, in June.

FRENCH PREPARATION FOR WAR.

IN a letter to the New York Times, dated Paris, March 22, that soldier of fortune, Carroll Tevis, after describing the increase of the German Army says:

"What corresponding preparations have been made here I say frankly that I do not know, and if I did I should keep my information to myself, having had the honor to wear a French uniform, and expecting to have the same honor should there be war any time within the next five years. But this much I may say: The situation is infinitely more favorable now than on February 1; not a moment has been lost. I may mention that the public of France is vastly exercised over the question of repeating rifles, and asks how it happens that while 75,000 German reservists are being drilled in their use, not even the French infantry of the first line have been armed with this weapon and a portion know nothing about its use. It is a serious and instructive circumstance that any big scare about war has happened of late years, just when the French war material was undergoing transformation. In 1875, to go no further back, the Reffys artillery system, which had so fascinated M. Thiers in 1872, in the experiments then made at Trionville, and found inadequate to the defensive necessities of the first line, was being substituted for the system of Col. Bangs, and this was not ready; the five and seven millimetre guns had gone out of date, and the new guns were still at the foundries. Precisely at this moment came German threats of invasion, and only the intervention of the Czar to whom the French Ambassador appealed for help spared France its horrors—according to the memoirs of Duke Decagio, Gen. Flô, a remarkable grata persona at St. Petersburg, forced his way into the imperial bedchamber and obtained from the generous sovereign that promise to intercede personally at Berlin, which was fulfilled the same day by his departure for Berlin, where he arrived in time to prevent the declaration of war which had been voted by the Military Council, but had not yet been signed by the German Emperor. Since that memorable occasion the French artillery has not been modified, and is now admitted to be superior to that of any other continental army. It having been proved by experiments made at Chaviguon against the Malmaison fort that no defensive works now existing could resist a week's bombardment with guns of the new model and shells loaded with mélinite if the batteries can be established within effective range. Not so, however, is it for small arms. Now the French Army is undoubtedly in a position of moral inferiority to that of Germany, and I say moral because experiment has demonstrated that the arm now used by the French infantry—the Gras-Lebel rifle model of 1874—is very little inferior in practical results to the German repeating Mauser rifle. But the morale of troops would surely be affected if brought face to face with an enemy which they had been led to believe could fire with greater rapidity, and it is against this fear, all unfounded though it be, that the French military authorities are now endeavoring to react.

THE FASTEST TORPEDO BOAT YET.

WE have already given an account of the trial on Tuesday, March 22d, of one of two twin-screw torpedo boats built by Messrs. Yarrow and Co. for the Italian Government, when a speed of 24.96 knots was obtained, this speed being the best result hitherto obtained by any vessel afloat. The boat in question has the following dimensions: Length on water line, 140 ft; beam, extreme, 14 ft; draft, 5 ft. 4 in.; displacement, 100 tons. Steam is supplied by two locomotive boilers, one forward and one abaft the engine room. Either boiler can supply either engine or both. The screws are driven by two pairs of compound engines, indicating over 1,400-horse power combined. Condensing water is supplied by centrifugal pumping engines, arranged to pump out of any compartment in case of leakage, while ejectors and hand pumps are fitted to each of the main compartments. This boat is fitted with no less than ten water-tight bulkheads, and Yarrow's patent water-tight ashpan arrangement to both boilers, by which the fire is prevented being put out in case of water entering the stokeholes, and the boat can run 50 or 60 knots after the stokehole is flooded, an advantage the importance of which cannot be over-estimated. Double steering gear is fitted to work either rudder quite independent of the other. The armament consists of two bow tubes and two at a very small angle with each other on a turntable aft for side discharge simultaneously, to insure at least one torpedo hitting. She also carries two quick-firing Nordenfeldt guns. Cabins are fitted for the crew forward, petty officers right aft, and a saloon, lavatories, etc., are provided for officers further amidships. A dynamo electrical machine, driven by a Brotherhood engine, is fitted in the galley compartment for producing the electric light, and also the air compressing machinery for charging and expelling the whitehead torpedoes.

FRENCH TORPEDO BOATS.

M. JULES ROCHE, in La Republique Française, attacks the torpedo programme of the French Minister of Marine, Admiral Aube. He considers that owing to the increase in the length of the automatic torpedo boat to 40 metres it becomes a leviathan rather than a microbe, and its invisibility disappears. Of the dangers and fatigue attending the voyage of these boats from the French northern ports to Toulon he says: "One torpedo boat was nearly swamped by water coming down the chimney; another, whose machine got out of order, was saved from perdition with the greatest difficulty by using an awning for a sail." That No. 67 was lost in consequence of a mistake with regard to lights M. Jules Roche denies—there was a collision. Instead of large sums of money being squandered in grand manœuvres, M. Jules Roche would like to witness some torpedo practice at night against a ship under steam by torpedo boats having been for several days at sea. This, he thinks, would be a practical test. He concludes his remarks by quoting authorities in favor of torpedo-boat operations being confined to defensive purposes, and to short and sudden raids on the enemy.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

THE King of Portugal has sent as a birthday present to the Emperor of Germany a sword of honor, with a blade specially made at the Lisbon arsenal, and exquisitely chiselled. The hilt is of solid gold incrusted in every part with diamonds, sapphires, rubies and emeralds.

THE new Austrian ironclad Stephanie was launched at Trieste on Thursday. It is a steel armor-plated turret-ship, with a central citadel. The maximum thickness of the plating is 9 in., the displacement is of 5,100 tons, and the engines are of 8,000 indicated horse-power.

THE Australian Times and Anglo-New Zealander says that Mr. F. Y. Wolseley is making as much stir among the flock-masters of Australia as did his brother at Tel-el-Kebir. He has patented an invention by which he can shear a sheep clean in three minutes and forty-five seconds.

GENERAL BOULANGER had a newly invented telephone apparatus arranged in his cabinet this week at the Ministry of War, by which he can give his verbal orders to twelve different persons at twelve different points of Paris at the same moment. The General has ordered its immediate adoption throughout the French Army.

Broad Arrow says: "Trials which the public is jealously prevented from observing are being made daily at Lille with artillery upon an entirely novel system. The guns are known to be of extraordinary size, and are said to possess exceptional powers of destruction. Steam supersedes powder in the agency of discharge, and the delivery of the missiles is continuous."

THE Registrar-General's "Annual Summary of Births and Deaths in London and other Great Towns," recently issued, shows that London is not only one of the healthiest towns in England, but that it is by far the healthiest capital in the world. The following table shows the death rate per thousand in a number of the great capitals of the world:

London	19.9	Calcutta	26.0
Christiania	21.4	New York
Stockholm	21.9	Vienna	26.5
Geneva	22.5	Rome
Brussels	23.1	Warsaw	28.1

Coal has been discovered on Fraser's Island.

The two rail heads from Sibi and Quetta, of the Sind-Peshin State Railway, have met and joined, thus completing this important Indian railway enterprise.

At the request of General Boulanger a committee of musical composers and professors of the Conservatoire of Paris, under the Presidency of M. Ambroise Thomas, have adopted an arrangement of the national hymn, the "Marsellaise," which offers the great advantage of respecting the primitive text while it gives greater fulness. From May 15 next all the French military bands are to adopt the arrangement.

An English paper gives the following as the figures furnished to the German War Office as to the regulation pace in European Armies. The length of the Russian pace is 71 centimetres; of the German, 80; French, Austrian, Italian, Belgian, Swedish, and Swiss, 75 centimetres. An Italian soldier takes 120 steps in a minute; the French from 112 to 116; the German, 115; the Austrian, 118; and the Belgian, 110 steps. An Italian regiment marches at the rate of 90 metres in the minute, a German regiment at 89, an English at 88, and a French regiment at 86. The Italians march 98 yards per minute; the Germans, 96; the English, 95; the French, 93. By the music in each army we may judge generally of the marching pace as an average. The Russian troops march to the sound of their national songs.

Two English naval apprentices who made an effort to be turned out of the service received instead of the dishonorable discharge 24 strokes of the birch and a week's imprisonment. One of the boys in question, during an interval in divine service on Sunday, on board one of the training ships, deliberately threw his prayer book at (but fortunately missed) the chaplain's head; the other threw his cap, with better aim.

The Voltaire asserts that detectives are set to watch the French War Office clerks, who are in a fever of suspense besides, owing to the proclaimed intention of General Boulanger to make a clean sweep, by degrees, of all the civilian element in his department, and fill the vacant appointments with military officers of all grades on active service, who will be equally amenable to discipline and the Mutiny Act as understood in France.

The Austrian military authorities have already taken steps to imitate Germany in the reduction of the weight carried by infantry soldiers. A commission is being named which will decide on the merits of the various plans laid before the War Ministry. One system has already been tested, and it appears to be both simple and economical, as a great many of the articles of equipment at present used can still be utilized.

At the approaching manœuvres of the French war fleet at Toulon the display of torpedo craft and tactics will be particularly interesting, as nearly all of the numerous torpedo fleet have been ordered to participate in the evolutions.

In connection with Chinese railway building, a Belgian journal claims that a strong syndicate of Belgian and English capitalists has been formed for building 1,500 miles of railway. They propose to place in the hands of the Chinese Government the sum of $160,000,000 to be repaid in ten annual installments, and doubt not but what "the proposal will be accepted." The line contemplated includes one of 800 miles from Nanking along the great canal to Pekin, and another of 700 miles from Canton to Hanoi.

THE GATLING GUN.

The Accles' feed magazine allows the gun to be fired at all angles of elevation or depression, at the rate of over 1,200 shots per minute.

ARMY NAVY JOURNAL.

GAZETTE OF THE REGULAR AND VOLUNTEER FORCES.

VOLUME XXIV.—NUMBER 41.
WHOLE NUMBER 1237.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 7, 1887.

SIX DOLLARS PER YEAR.
SINGLE COPIES, FIFTEEN CENTS.

Publication Office, 240 Broadway, N. Y.

THE allotment of the $200,000 appropriation for barracks and quarters contained in the Sundry Civil bill will be made by the Secretary of War in a few days. The Lieutenant-General has already made his recommendation on the subject.

A SOLDIER was recently tried at Fort Du Chesne for drunkenness and for striking violently two sergeants while they were conveying him to the guard house. We again venture the opinion that it was not the province of sergeants to be in such immediate contact with the soldier. There should have been a detail of privates to do the heavy work with a non-commissioned officer in charge.

A LATER report as to the vacant second lieutenancies in the Army shows the number to be 32, as follows: Infantry 17, cavalry 9, and artillery 6. One each in the 1st, 2d, 9th and 10th Cavalry; two in the 4th, and three in the 10th; one in the 1st, 3d, 4th and 5th Artillery, and two in the 2d; one in the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 10th, 13th, 14th, 16th, 18th, 21st and 22d Infantry, and two in the 11th, 19th and 25th.

SEVERAL changes of stations, etc., of officers have been ordered this week, and there are more to follow, but all are made to take effect on or after July 1 next, the mileage fund for the current fiscal year being now almost completely exhausted. The Secretary in speaking to the head of one of the staff departments the other day said, that it was his desire to have the four-year rule applied as far as possible when the new fund became available.

THE War Department has called a halt upon extened sick leaves in the Army. In making application for an extension of leave officers are now required to give some reasonably conclusive evidence that they will be fit for duty again within a few months, to escape being ordered before a Retiring Board. Two officers—Major B. E. FRYER, Medical Department, and Captain CASS DURHAM, 18th, were this week ordered for examination, the Department being convinced that they will not be fit for active duty again.

THE Board appointed to select designs for the two 6,000-ton vessels after spending two days in the examination of the plans submitted adjourned to meet again May 14. In the meantime Captain RAMSAY, the president, will be engaged in arranging matters incident to the command of the Boston, while the other members of the Board will figure on the complicated calculations necessary to determine the weights and tonnage of the vessels. It is said that considerable diversity of opinion was developed during the first two meetings and a long and lively discussion is looked for before a conclusion is reached.

THE St. Petersburg sea canal has increased the exports of St. Petersburg from 280,000 tons in 1883 to 950,000 tons in 1886, and decreased those ot Cronstadt from 1,500,000 to a beggarly 70,000 tons. The aggregate of the two ports has, at the same time, decreased from 1,780,000 to 1,020,000 tons. The present tendency of Russian boats is to abandon the Baltic ports and seek new outlets through the Black Sea. The first sod of the Holstein Canal between the North Sea and the Baltic will be turned on June 18 next in the presence of the German Crown Prince and a number of high officials. The work will commence at Holtenau.

THE Army Board on Regulations for the New Hospital Stewards Corps is now holding its session in the library of the Army Medical Museum Building, the office of Assistant Adjutant General KELTON having been found too small for the purpose. The work thus far has consisted principally in reading the large mass of literature which has been collected since the project first took shape. In addition to the papers submitted by the surgeons of the Army, considerable data has been collected from foreign reports and periodicals. The Board determined to thoroughly discuss the subject in all its bearings before beginning the preparation of the rules and regulations, which it is desired to have as perfect as possible before putting them into operation.

THE Naval Retiring Board, consisting of Commodores GREER and WEAVER, Medical Directors BROWN and GREENE and Commander SIGSBY, convened at the Navy Department on May 5 for the examination of Lieutenant-Commanders HUBBARD, AMORY and THOMAS and Lieutenants BRIDGE and TOWNLEY. As soon as these officers have been disposed of the following engineer officers will be ordered before the Board: Chief Engineer LAMDIN, P. A. Engineers BROWN and WOOSTER and Assistant Engineer CHRISMAN. Should the five officers now undergoing examination be placed on the retired list, and it is confidently expected that the majority of them will be, at least twenty vacancies in the Line of the Navy can be safely calculated upon for the naval cadets whose final graduation takes place next month. There are several Court-martial and one or two other retirement cases pending, which, if acted upon in season, may increase the number to twenty-four or twenty-five.

PROPOSALS were this week invited by Commodore HARMONY, Chief of Bureau of Yards and Docks, for the construction of the two timber dry docks, to be located at the New York and Norfolk Navy yards respectively. The bids are to be opened June 29 next, and formal contracts entered into within ten days from date of acceptance. The general dimensions of the docks are not less than 480 feet in length from the inside of the coping stone at the head of the dock to the outer caisson abutment at the entrance, and not less than 125 feet in width, between the coping, from side to side, measured across the length of the dock midway from the ends; draft on sill not less than 25 feet 6 inches; width on floor not less than 40 feet; entrance 80 feet wide. The pumps for the docks to have a discharge capacity equal to 40,000 gallons per minute each. The location of the Norfolk dock, as recommended by the Board and approved by Commodore HARMONY, we announced last week. The Board on the New York dock, Commodore GHERARDI, president, has since reported. The site selected for this dock is located on the Wallabout Channel, just beyond the saw mill, near where the old sewer emptied, and facing the entrance to the channel.

GENERAL GEORGE CROOK, U. S. A., has had published in pamphlet form his report of operations against Apache Indians from May, 1885, to April, 1886, together with a resumé of the operations from 1882 to 1886. Much of the matter covered by the report and resumé has already appeared in the JOURNAL. In speaking of the difficulties of the campaign General CROOK says: "It is impossible to estimate the discouraging effort of the obstacles against which it was necessary to contend in following out these methods to a finally successful issue; the unfriendly criticism of the territorial press, the more or less open and always covert opposition of the Indian Department, up to the time of the outbreak in 1885; the undisguised hostility of the numerous contractors and speculators, whose success depended upon their ability to defraud the Indians; all these adverse elements had to be overcome, and against such odds success would have been impossible, except for the zealous co-operation of such men as Captain CRAWFORD, Lieutenant GATEWOOD, Lieutenant BRITTON DAVIS, and others associated with them in the management of Indian affairs on the White Mountain reservation. The officers constantly carried their lives in their hands; the service in which they were engaged was one of the greatest possible delicacy and danger, where the slightest indiscretion would have proved fatal to them. But it seemed, in my judgment, the only way in which the Indians could be reached and taught that subordination to authority which is an essential requirement to any degree of advancement, however slight, towards a state of civilization. For this reason I allowed officers, the value of whose lives was inestimable, to engage in the most desperate duty it ever falls to the lot of soldiers to perform."

A COMMISSIONED officer in our Army who wishes to marry is quite at liberty to do so, and the War Department has always been very liberal in the matter of assignment of quarters to married officers. As a consequence the bachelors are largely in the minority. It is held by some, we believe, that there ought to be a little restriction, especially upon the younger officers, but up to the present no steps nave been taken in that direction, and, indeed, we incline to the opinion that the matter can well be left where it now is. In the French Army when an officer decides to marry he informs his colonel of his intentions. The colonel passes the request on to the War Office and at length it is put before the Minister. The first thing then done is to find out if the young lady concerned fulfils the requirements of the law, which provides that she must have an irreproachable moral character and a dot worth a yearly revenue of 10,000f. The unfortunate young man's application begins to descend the ladder of officialism until it reaches the officer commanding the gendarmerie in the district where the officer's fiancée resides. It is then passed to a gendarme, who is commissioned to inquire into the young lady's moral character. He proceeds as cautiously as a detective. Should he happen to know the father of the demoiselle indicated, he goes and sees him; if not, he culls his information from the neighbors. He will even follow her when she goes to the theatres or entertainments. Having finished his investigations, he draws up a report on strictly police court lines, wherein he talks of the young lady not as mademoiselle, but as fille. Off goes the document on its way upwards through the bureaus and red tape until it gets to the War Minister. Should the conditions be fulfilled the officer is permitted to marry. If not he must renounce his intentions. If the fiancée has morality, but not money, the money must be secured before a union is sanctioned. Officers with means frequently provide the dot secretly themselves.

CAPTAIN C. W. WHIPPLE, Ordnance Corps, U. S. A., much to the regret of his many friends in New York and vicinity, will leave early in July for Fort Leavenworth, to take charge of the ordnance depot there and enter upon duty on the staff of the Department Commander.

GENERAL TROCHU is said to be seriously ill. After the siege of Paris he was offered a Marshal's baton by M. Thiers, but this he had the good sense to decline. He sat for a while in the Versailles Parliament; but directly the bill on the reorganization of the army had been voted, he retired from public life and quietly settled down in his native Brittany. When acting as head of the Government during the siege of Paris, he much astonished Jules Favre and the other lawyers by whom he was surrounded by his wonderful loquacity. His Ministers seldom had a chance of speaking when he was present. For the last 14 years, however, he has preserved an almost unbroken silence which is not without dignity.—Army and Navy Gazette.

ASSISTANT SURGEON C. B. EWING, U. S. A., has gone to Fort Lewis, Col., for temporary duty.

LIEUTENANT JOHN CONKLIN, JR., 2d U. S. Artillery, returned to St. Augustine, Fla., this week, from a trip to Fort Pickens and Mount Vernon Barracks, Ala., and will shortly start for the north on a few months' leave.

THE marriage of Miss Agnes Royall, only daughter of Col. W. B. Royall, 4th U. S Cav., to Arthur Jeffrey Parsons, of Boston, will take place at St. John's Church, Washington, June 1. They go abroad for their wedding tour.

GENERAL R. B. AYRES, Colonel, 2d U. S. Artillery, expects to leave St. Augustine this week to spend the summer on leave. Lieut.-Col. L. L. Langdon will command the regiment during his absence from Fort Barrancas. The headquarters, band, etc., will, however, remain at St. Augustine.

LIEUTENANT S. C. MILLS, 12th U. S. Infantry, who married Miss Willcox last week will, after a short tour, join for duty, at Madison Barracks, Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., his detail with the Indian prisoners at Fort Marion having ceased by reason of their transfer to Mount Vernon Barracks.

THE death of Captain R. G. Howell, 2d U. S. Art., May 2, promotes 1st Lieut. J. C. Scantling to a captaincy. Capt. Scantling was until his promotion 1st lieutenant of Howell's battery, so that his promotion involves neither change of station nor battery. 2d Lieutenant E. St. J. Greble, of Major General Howard's staff, becomes first lieutenant.

REV. HUGH O. PENTECOST, of Newark, N. J., who has just been blackballed by a social club composed of clergymen, for his adoption of Henry George's theories, is a brother of George H. Pentecost, the famous revivalist. Hugh Pentecost married Ida Gatling, the handsome and fascinating daughter of Dr. Gatling, inventor of the famous revolving gun.

LIEUTENANT CHARLES C. TEAR, of the 25th U. S. Infantry, now on leave of absence from his station at Fort Snelling, Minn., has received an extension until August next. It is reported that Lieut. Tear will leave the Service at the expiration of his leave, and intends engaging in business. Lieut. Tear was appointed from Illinois in July, 1879, graduating June 13, 1883.

"PRESIDENT GARFIELD'S widow," says the Critic, "is coming to Washington and will attend the ceremonies when her husband's statue is unveiled on May 12. Mrs. Garfield will be the fifth ex-lady of the White House who has visited Washington since February 1, the others being Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Tyler, Miss Rose Cleveland and Mrs. Dandridge, President Taylor's daughter, who, as Mrs. Bliss, presided for her father during his life in the Executive Mansion."

GENERAL T. NAGAYAMY and staff, of the Japanese Army, sailed for England on Wednesday.

CAPTAIN H. P. PERRING, 6th Cavalry, on sick leave at Trenton, N. J., will remain East during the summer.

LIEUTENANT E. S. AVIS, 5th U. S. Infantry, lately visiting in Washington, will return to Fort Keogh early in June.

LIEUTENANT CHAS. H. GRIERSON, 10th U. S. Cav., now at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., will go to Santa Fe, N. M., early in July.

LIEUT. ADAM SLAKER, 1st U. S. Artillery, and Mrs. Slaker, now on the Pacific Coast, will spend June and July with relatives in the East.

LIEUTENANT W. F. BLAUVELT, 15th Infantry, and Mrs. Blauvelt were in Paris, France, this week, with apartments at No. 10 Rue Stanislas.

CAPTAIN W. S. SCHUYLER, 5th U. S. Cavalry, was expected at Fort Riley, Kansas, this week, to assume command of Troop H of his regiment.

LIEUTENANTS E. L. ZALINSKI and S. E. Allen, 5th U. S. Artillery, have resigned from the Board of Directors of the National Rifle Association.

SECRETARY OF WAR ENDICOTT received on Tuesday from the Paris Geographical Society the gold medal presented by that association to Gen. A. W. Greely, U. S. A.

1ST LIEUT. IRVING HALE, Corps of Engineers, has succeeded Lieut. Townsend as Quartermaster of the Battalion at Willet's Point, and as A. A. Q. M. and A. C. S. of that post.

MAJOR E. V. SUMNER, 5th Cavalry, says the Kansas City Times, has won the blue ribbon. He is the first in the Department of the Missouri to qualify as marksman for the season of 1886.

CAPTAIN A. E. WOODSON, 5th U. S. Cavalry, was the guest of Gen. McCook at Fort Leavenworth early in the week, on his return to Fort Reno from leave. Mrs. Woodson, now in St. Louis, will go to Reno later on.

ACTING SECOND COMPTROLLER MCMAHAN holds that it would not only be idle but manifestly unjust to commence suit to recover from Capt. W. H. Nash, U. S. A., $3,433.50, being the value of 63 head of work oxen lost while being transferred from Cheyenne, Wyo., to Sioux Agencies, in January, 1878.

"WE don't miss Congress at all," said a Washington society lady this week. "We have two queens of song, Mme. Patti and Miss Abbott; the Queen of the world's geographical centre, Kapiolani, and a railroad king, kings of the turf at the National Jockey Club's course, and the pick of the Boston Common Council."

COLONEL B. J. IRWIN, Med. Dept., U. S. Army, is enjoying the hospitality of "mine host," Major Hooper, of the Occidental, in San Francisco, where Army and Navy people serving in those regions most do congregate. 36 Montgomery street, which was incorrectly given as his residence, is the location of the Army Department offices.

THE Vancouver Independent of April 27 says: Lieut. J. L. Sebon, 4th Infantry, from Fort Sherman, has been at headquarters this week....Lieuts. Allyn Capron and M. F. Harmon, 1st Artillery, came up from Canby last week for Court martial duty....A few days since Gen. John Gibbon, accompanied by his aid, Lieut. McClernand, and Capt. C. A. Woodruff, chief commissary, went east as far as Helena.

MRS. MADELINE VINTON DAHLGREN, speaking of her forthcoming novel, "Divorced," says: "The book is a plea for the sanctity of the marriage tie and intended to show the various evils consequent upon our present system of easy divorce. It also touches upon the inadequacy of our laws for the protection of those who may maliciously be declared insane. The characters are only types, and in no instance of real life."

QUEEN KAPIOLANI and suite arrived in Washington early in the week and were taken in charge by the Hawaiian Minister and by Mr. S. A. Brown; Lieut. Rodgers, U. S. N., and Capt. D. M. Taylor, U. S. A., representing the State, War and Navy Departments respectively. They took apartments at the Arlington Hotel. On Thursday the Queen visited Washington Barracks, and was received with a royal salute, and a drill and review held, with which she appeared much pleased. On Friday a trip to Mount Vernon was made, followed by a dinner at the White House, and on Saturday the party were expected to leave Washington for Boston, thence to New York and then to London.

THE Kansas City Times, referring to an article in the Staats Zeitung, of Chicago, criticizing the President for appointing General Wesley Merritt to succeed General Willcox, and ignoring the claims of Colonel A. V. Kautz, says: "Whatever honor and fame Colonel Kautz has obtained in the Service, was won by his own individual efforts, which is attested by the high position he now holds. Good soldiers never complain, and Colonel Kautz, no doubt, deplores more than any one else that a lunatic should have been given the permission to use the editorial columns of the Chicago paper to abuse and lie about the President, and thus bring him (Colonel Kautz) into a controversy distasteful to him."

LATE developments indicate that Gen. Merritt will be assigned to the command of the Department of the Missouri when relieved from the Military Academy.

CAPTAIN J. M. INGALLS, U. S. A., is the author of a valuable "Note on Meteorological Instruments for Rifle Ranges," recently issued from the Artillery School press.

SECRETARY WHITNEY returned to Washington Tuesday afternoon.

PAYMASTER GEO. W. BEAMAN, U. S. N., registered at the Murray Hill Hotel on Monday.

COMMANDER ALLAN D. BROWN, U. S. N., is a recent guest at the Perry House, Newport, R. I.

THE death of Surgeon Beaumont promotes to that grade P. A. Surg. Thomas H. Streets, U. S. Navy.

LIEUTENANT J. B. MILTON, U. S. N., has returned to San Francisco from a brief sojourn at San Diego.

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY WHITNEY was in New York on Monday, and called upon the Collector of the Port.

NAVAL CADET A. C. DIEFFENBACH, U. S. Navy, registered at the Hotel de l'Orient, Paris, France, on Thursday.

CAPTAIN G. H. PERKINS, U. S. N., lately at Concord, N. H., was to occupy his cottage at Newport, R. I., this week.

LIEUTENANT E. K. MOORE, U. S. N., Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Frank Courtis are at 54 Washington street, Newport, R. I., for the season.

LIEUT. J. M. HAWLEY, U. S. N., for some time past on duty at Baltimore, Md., goes to Norfolk, Va., early next week for duty on the Trenton.

COMMANDER SCHLEY, Chief of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting, goes from Newport to visit the Boston Equipment Yard, and personally attend to its organization.

CHIEF ENGINEER GEO. W. MAGEE, U. S. N., who has returned from the Hot Springs much improved in health, was present at the meeting of the Military Order at Delmonico's on Wednesday evening last.

P. A. SURGEON M. H. SIMONS, U. S. N., now on duty at the Naval Academy, will be the next officer to receive a promotion by due process of law, which will occur on Sept. 17, on the retirement of Medical Director S. F. Cous.

THE following officers registered at the Navy Department this week: Lieut. C. E. Vreeland, Naval Cadet G. Tarbox, Naval Constructor J. P. McGuinness, Lieut. Comdr. Geo. C. Reiter, Ensign Harry Kimmell, Paymr. G. A. Lyon, Surg. A. F. Magruder, Comdr. G. L. Wadleigh, Lieut. Comdr. S. Hubbard and Lieut. Theodoric Porter.

COLONEL THOS. SCHARF has written a "History of the Confederate Navy from its organization to the surrender of the last vessel, its stupendous struggle with the great Navy of the United States, the engagements fought on the rivers and harbors of the South and upon the high seas; blockade running, first use of ironclads and torpedoes, and privateer history."

NOW THAT the health of Lieut.-Comdr. W. H. Webb, U. S. N., has been restored, he has been assigned to the receiving ship St. Louis, as the relief of Lieut. C. K. Curtis, detached and ordered to the Franklin, at Norfolk. Lieut. Curtis is well known at Norfolk, the native place of his wife, Miss Vaughn. Lieut. Curtis made his last cruise in China, attached to the Alert.

FOLLOWING the sad death of Lieut. Danenhower, by which the Secretaryship of the Naval Institute became vacant, Lieut. C. R. Miles, U. S. N., has been selected for that important position. The papers issued from the press of this Naval literary society are of great and increasing value, and although such is the case now, their work will be even greater as time goes on, and the theories of to-day become the events and practice of to-morrow.

MR. MCDONALD, of Buffalo, proposes a monument to the late Henry B. Rumsey, formerly of the Navy, the hero of the hotel fire, and says: "Silver and gold I have little of, but it would please me to add my mite to a fund for the erection of a permanent memorial to that brave man who gave his life to save a little child and whose last gasp was an appeal to others to assist burned and mangled women in preference to himself. The world should be made better by the moral heroism of such men. Is Henry B. Rumsey soon to be forgotten, or will a grateful city fitly recognize an act of such sublime courage?"

PASSED ASSISTANT ENGINEER HENRY HERWIG, U. S. N., for some time past on duty in the Bureau of Steam Engineering, has been assigned to the Asiatic Station, and will leave San Francisco by the steamer of the 21st of the present month. He will report to Rear Admiral Chandler for duty in the squadron, so it is not known to what vessel he will be ordered for duty. Mrs. Herwig (born Wheat, of Alexandria,) will not accompany her husband, but it is quite probable that she will join him on the station later. The situation on the China station is quite agreeable in these days for the wives of naval officers, as there is usually quite a colony in one or more of the Japanese ports. Mrs. Herwig will be a loss to Washington society, where her agreeable manners and pleasant ways have made many and warm friends. Mr. Herwig's last cruise was on the U. S. S. Galena, from which vessel he was detached in September, 1883.

LIEUTENANT M. K. SCHWENCK, attached to the Alert, accidentally shot himself in the arm at Punta Renas, April 30. The wound is not dangerous.

ASST. PAYMR. G. W. SIMPSON, U. S. N., much to the regret of his many friends at Newport, R. I., left there early in the week to join the Constellation.

MR. ROBERT G. MASON, who committed suicide recently in San Francisco, was the paymaster's yeoman of the Alert during a three-years' cruise in Asiatic waters.

MR. R. MEADE BACHE, of the U. S. Coast Survey, a nephew of the late Major-Gen. Meade, is the inventor of a new railway car stove which has recently been tried on the Pennsylvania Railroad. It is self-extinguishing in case of accident.

THE President will announce in the next few weeks the appointments of the seven members of the Board of Visitors to the Naval Academy, the naming of whom is one of his prerogatives. The Senate will be represented on the Board by Senators Aldrich and Gray, and the House of Representatives, Herbert, Sayers and Goff. The Board house in the Academy grounds will be ready for the reception of the Board on June 3, and the formal reception of the Board is set for 10 o'clock on the morning of June 4.

RECENT DEATHS.

IT IS with much sorrow we announce the death of Brevet Brigadier General Andrew J. Alexander, lieutenant colonel U. S. Army, retired, which occurred May 4, near Utica, N. Y., on a train of the New York Central Railroad, while en route to his home at Willowbrook, near Auburn. The deceased officer was born in Kentucky, and was appointed 2d lieutenant Mounted Rifles July 26, 1861, and the same day 1st lieutenant 3d U. S. Cavalry. He served with much distinction throughout the war, was assistant adjutant general of the 17th Army Corps, and engaged in several battles. At the battle of Ebenezer Church he captured three pieces of artillery from Gen. Forrest. He commanded the 2d Brigade, 4th Division Cavalry Corps, and was engaged at the assault and capture of Selma and Columbus, Ga. At Selma he captured five pieces of artillery. In 1866 he rejoined the 3d U. S. Cavalry, having been promoted captain in 1863. He held the appointment of lieutenant colonel and A. A. G. of volunteers from January to August, 1863, and from April 23, 1864. He received numerous brevets in the Regular Army —of capt. for gallantly during the Peninsular campaign, major for the Gettysburg campaign, lieutenant colonel for the Atlanta campaign, colonel for gallantry at Selma, and brig. gen. for "distinguished skill and gallantry in the cavalry engagement at Ebenezer Church, Ala., and Columbus, Ga., and for steadfast devotion to duty during the war. He also received the brevets of colonel and brigadier general of volunteers. After the war he served actively for many years and rose to the grade of lieutenant colonel, 2d U. S. Cavalry, in 1879. A few years ago his health became poor, and he was retired July 3, 1885, for disability incurred in the line of duty. He and the late General Upton, U. S. A., married sisters, and his wife survives him. General Alexander was a gentleman of refined and dignified demeanor and of literary tastes, and for some years past had been a frequent contributor to the JOURNAL. He will be much missed at Auburn, N. Y., in the vicinity of which his home has been since his retirement, and where many relatives are left to mourn his loss.

SURGEON H. N. BEAUMONT, U. S. N., died at New Hope, Bucks County, Pennsylvania, Saturday, April 30, and was buried there Tuesday, May 3. Of him a friend, Chief Engineer Henry D. McEwan, U. S. Navy, writes: "The doctor was first taken sick while serving on board the U. S. S. Minnesota, and although placed on sick leave, he remained for some time in New York under medical treatment, but his disease (heart trouble) made rapid strides, and his father had him conveyed to the old homestead, Great Spring Farm, where, amidst the scenes of his boyhood and surrounded by all the members of his family, he lingered for five weeks, calmly and resignedly awaiting the great change. The funeral was largely attended by the county families, and the following named naval officers were present in uniform and acted as pallbearers: Medical Director W. T. Hord, Lieutenant Commanders Forsyth and Marthon, Chief Engineers Able, McEwan and Robinson, P. A. Paymr. McGowan, P. A. Engineers Entwistle and Habighurst, and Assistant Surgeons Berryhill and Shafer. Surgeon Beaumont takes his last sleep in the cemetery at New Hope, in a spot selected by himself, and which commands a view of the beautiful surrounding country the doctor so loved to talk about. The monument to the late Dr. George Beaumont, his uncle and medical preceptor, is near by, and others of his kindred sleep in the same enclosure. In the death of Dr. Beaumont, the Naval Service loses one of its most efficient and faithful officers, his mess mates one of the most gentlemanly and companionable of men and his parents a loyal and devoted son. 'Come up next May and see what a beautiful home I have.' I went up there in May, but it was to help carry my dear friend to his grave."

CAPTAIN REZIN G. HOWELL, 2d U. S. Artillery, died at his post of duty, Mount Vernon Barracks, Ala., May 2, of disease of the stomach. Captain Howell was born in Kentucky, entered the Military Academy from this State in 1860, was graduated in 1864, and promoted 2d lieutenant 2d Artillery in time to see a good deal of war service, in which he proved himself a valuable officer. He was promoted 1st lieutenant in 1865 and captain Nov. 8, 1882. Capt. Howell was highly esteemed as an officer and a gentleman, and his death will be sincerely mourned by many friends. He married a daughter of Gen. R. B. Ayres, U. S. A., a few years ago. The remains were interred, with due honors, in the National Cemetery at Mobile, Ala.

LAST week we referred to the death at Newport, Ky., April 27, of Mrs. Isabella Burbank, widow of Gen. Sidney Burbank. The Cincinnati Gazette, referring to the event, says: "Mrs. Burbank was a daughter of Col. Slaughter, of Virginia, who was connected with the Engineer Department of the Army. Her husband, Gen. Sidney Burbank, was a gallant officer of the U. S. Army, and died at Newport several years ago at the age of 75 years. In 1870, the General was placed on the retired list, and their elegant mansion on Front street in that city was the scene of many brilliant social events and gatherings, especially among military notables. Mrs. Burbank was possessed of rare literary attainments, and being a brilliant conversationalist her acquaintance was eagerly sought after, and cultivated. The deceased leaves an only son, Capt. Clayton S. Burbank, 10th Inf. He was telegraphed the sad news and is on his way to attend the obsequies. Colonel Merrill, a nephew of the deceased, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., now in Washington, was also telegraphed for." The funeral took place April 30. Capt. Burbank arrived with his family from Fort Lyon Friday, and Col. Merrill also arrived from Pennsylvania. The services were conducted by the Rev. Reverdy Estill, rector of St. Paul's P. E. Church, after which the remains were taken to Spring Grove Cemetery for interment. Col. Van Voast, Dr. Gardiner, Col. P. B. Spence, Col. Joseph Arnold, Capt. Tiernon, Walter Overton, Major McClure and Dr. Thornton acted as pall-bearers.

MAJOR INNES RANDOLPH, one of the most versatile literary men in Maryland, who died last week at Baltimore, was the son of James Innes Randolph and Susan Armistead, niece of Col. Geo. Armistead, who gained his brevet "for gallant defence of Fort McHenry, Md., till the morning of Sept. 14, 1814." Major Randolph served during the war as A. D. C. on the staff of Gen. Ewell, of the Confederate Army.

MRS. ERMINA G. PENNY, wife of Mr. George W. Penny, and mother of Capt. C. G. Penny, 6th U. S. Inf., of Fort Douglas, died, April 23, at Newark, O., aged 68. A correspondent says: "During the half century in which Newark has been her home her Christian character and especially her constant charity in deed and speech, endeared her to all her acquaintances."

FRANK T. WHITE, only son of Trueman B. White sailmaker, U. S. Navy, died, May 13, at 158 Washington avenue, Brooklyn.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

IN a paper read before the Civil and Mechanical Engineers Society, London, March 30, 1887, R. Nelson Boyd, M. Inst. C. E., said: The deviation of the Chagres is a difficulty apparently not foreseen, and an expense not provided for by the early surveyors. It is in reality a necessity for the preservation of the canal, as the new bed will act as a huge ditch, and receive the surface drainage during the rains, which otherwise would rush into the canal—to say nothing of the trees, rocks and silt brought down by these floods. The new bed of the river is to be 40 metres wide by 5 metres deep. In order to deal more effectually with these excessive floods, it had been proposed to dam up the valley at the head of the Chagres, and thus form an immense reservoir. This project is for the time abandoned. It would involve a dam about 1,445 metres long by 45 metres in height, with a cube of about 10,000,000 metres; and this would have to be constructed in the face of the floods rushing down the upper valley of the Chagres, unless the whole dam were constructed during one dry season, which is scarcely possible. Although the work has been commenced all along the line, not one length of the canal is anything like near completion. I had the opportunity of visiting most of the sections, and with the exception of the Colon end and a short length at Gorgona, where the canal follows the present bed of the river Chagres, not one of the cuttings is down even to water level, and many have merely had the surface removed. At Colon the entrance to the canal has been constructed by making an embankment which protects it from the north winds, and has reclaimed ground, formerly a swamp, on which the pleasant little settlement called "Cristophe Colomb" has been built. From the entrance the canal has been dredged to a depth of 6 metres for a length of 4½ kilom., and is open for small steamers. Three very powerful dredges are now at work deepening the canal down to 9 metres. After this comes a length of ground almost untouched, owing to disputes with the contractors. Then comes a length of 6 kilom. on the old bed of the Chagres, where dredges are at work deepening. These dredges have a power of 180-H. P., and raise about 3,000 cubic metres in the 24 hours. This seemed to me to be the best conducted work on the canal.

COLONEL J. SUMNER ROGERS, of the Orchard Lake Military Academy, has received the following from General Sherman:

DEAR COLONEL: I congratulate you upon the prosperity and success of the institution over which you preside. Every college adds to the honor and strength of our country. Especially such as yours, which engrafts on the usual course the military features of obedience, promptness, and that high sense of honor which has characterized the soldier since the days of Knight Errantry.

It requires no prophet to foretell that with perseverance in the course you have so well begun the Michigan Military Academy will become famous and honored throughout the land. With great respect, your friend,

W. T. SHERMAN, General.

THE BAILEY MEDAL.

COMMANDER W. S. SCHLEY, Chief of the Bureau of Equipment, left for Newport on Wednesday, to inspect the training squadron and present the Bailey medal to William Guerin, seaman apprentice, 2d class serving on board of the U. S. S. Jamestown. There were three contestants and Guerin obtained 421 out of a maximum of 550, viz.: 38 for knotting and splicing; 24 for sailmaking; 47 heaving lead; 45 for signals and 17 for small arms and target firing, out of a maximum of 50 each; 70 for exercise as captain of gun, and 60 for school of soldier, out of a maximum of 75 each; 20 for heaving log; 21 for sword exercise; 24 for swimming; 20 for sewing; 13 for knowledge of his accounts with paymaster; 22 for condition of clothing, out of a possible 25 each. The presentation took place Thursday afternoon, before a brilliant assemblage. Several hundred naval apprentices were formed in three sides of a hollow square and Guerin was called. He was greeted with loud applause. Commander Schley addressed a few words to the lad and, after pinning the medal on his breast, shook him warmly by the hand. The standing of the other two candidates in these several branches was as follows:

Thomas Allen, seaman apprentice, 2d class, U.S.S. Saratoga, 42, 41, 43, 20, 50, 53, 48, 20, 15, 21, 20, 15, 21—Total, 409. Thomas S. Aveson, seaman apprentice, 2d class, U. S. S. Portsmouth, 33, 18, 44, 35, 22, 48, 38, 15, 12 13 12, 13, 21—Total, 324.

Thursday all the apprentice boys and their friends gathered at the gymnasium, where there were howitzer and silent drills and a grand concert, the talent being furnished by the boys attached to the squadron. Commander Schley, as well as all the officers attached to the squadron, were present. Commander Schley dined at the Torpedo Station Thursday evening with Capt. C. F. Goodrich.

TRAINING NAVAL ENGINEERS.

A MEETING of the Newport branch of the U. S. Naval Institute was held, April 27, in the museum at the Torpedo Station, to discuss a paper by P. A. Engineer Wm. M. Parks, U. S. N., on "Training of Enlisted Men on the Engineer's Force." Capt. A. R. Yates, Comdr. Higginson, Lieuts. Karl Rohrer, Moore, Daniels, Howard, J. B. Murdock, Duncan Kennedy, Wakenshaw, Ensign G. W. Denfeld, Prof. Charles F. Munroe, were present. The author held that it would be far better for the boys when they enlisted on board the Minnesota to be placed at once in the engine and fireroom on that ship and trained to be first-class firemen and machinists, and if this was done the rank of second-class firemen could be abolished. In the discussion on the paper Capt. Arthur R. Yates said: "A great deal is involved, especially of time and expense, in training people for the engineer's department, either as firemen or machinists, and I think it would be of great benefit to the service if they could be trained on board our training squadron, as they will then get a certain amount of military training before going aboard cruising ships."

Lt. Edwin K. Moore thought a better plan would be to have the apprentices sent aboard the training ships and, when qualified for transfer, sent to some school for their apprenticeship as firemen, machinist or whatever capacity they may get in the future in the engineer corps. The boy should receive some training on board a ship before he is capable of doing anything on that ship. To take proper care of himself, his clothes, his hammock, his bag and a certain amount of seamanship. He would require no more instruction, except in the one profession which he might select for the future. Then if he could be sent to a steamship and serve a term of apprentic ship he thought it would be better than to take him as a green boy from the street or farm, or whatever place he may come from.

Lieut. Joseph B. Murdock said that, in the abstract, he fully approved of this paper. He thought that the great necessity of the Service to day is for a higher technical training. Take our new ships. We require something more than ordinary steamships in handling them.

Ensign Geo. W. Denfeld said that according to his recollection the system of training boys for the engineers force has been tried and has been given up, one reason for which was that it had a tendency to ruin them physically. He did not think any man should be taken into the engineroom or fireroom until he had reached full growth. The hardships there, which men must endure, cannot be undertaken by boys. If you know what kind of a man you want, an examination will soon show whether he is qualified for the duties he is intended to perform. He was in favor of men being trained on ship-board, but thought they should have a certain amount of knowledge and training which men get on shore. He did not believe in training apprentices, but did believe in training men, in giving them some general idea of what is required of them before going on seagoing ships.

Commander F. J. Higginson said he could not help approving this system of educating. Let the apprentices go into the fireroom on the new cruisers and let them be taught their duties there, and then go into the machine shops and learn the duties of the machinist.

Lieut. Karl Rohrer thought the better educated the firemen and shovellers are, the less coal will be burned for the given amount of power. It was a question in his mind whether the fireroom offers sufficient attraction to draw a number of these boys into it after they have almost qualified themselves as seamen. He would take people between 18 and 23 years of age. He did not see why a system of apprenticeship could not be inaugurated to embrace all our naval stations, where boilers and machinery are in constant use, and there train these men in the manipulating of machinery, boilers, tools, etc., and then after three months, draft them on board our seagoing vessels.

THE TERRITORY OF ALASKA.

THE President issued an executive order May 4, concerning the importation of intoxicating liquors and breechloading rifles and ammunition into the Territory of Alaska. The importation of intoxicating liquors is forbidden, except upon permit from a customs officer at the port of destination, who shall first be satisfied that the liquors are needed for sacramental, medical and scientific purposes. The importation of breechloading rifles is also prohibited, except where intended for the personal use of white settlers and temporary visitors not traders.

THE OMAHA ACCIDENT.

THE following letter addressed to Governor Hubbard, United States Minister to Japan, gives a more detailed account of the disaster resulting from the target firing on the Omaha and the action which preceded it:

U. S. S. OMAHA, AT SEA,
March 14, 1887.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR: Permit me to draw upon your time to lay before you a plain, unvarnished account of the target firing by the Omaha on March 4, whose sequel ended in the accident that caused the death of four Japanese and the wounding of seven. Quarterly practice with great guns at a target is required of every cruising ship, time and place left to the discretion of the commander. On the morning of March 4, on our voyage from Kobe to Nagasaki, I determined that it would be a suitable day for this purpose, and the place I selected as most convenient was in the open sea between the small, high island of Iki Sima and Nagasaki, the former say twelve miles from the latter place. It was a pleasant morning and the sea in every direction was covered with fishing boats. Passing the island of Iki Sima I noticed that the south side was barren and uninhabited, and toward the western end there was a bold, precipitous cliff, marked on the English chart as 396 feet high. The thought at once struck me, if I anchored the target in front of this cliff, the latter will stop all the shots in their rebound and will be perfectly safe. No shots were fired at the island. It was my intention to anchor the target there or 400 yards from the foot of the cliff, but the water was so deep that no bottom was found with the anchor (which was 150 feet long) to within fifty yards of the shore, and here the target (a small, triangular piece of canvas on a float) was placed. My sole motive in seeking this place was one of safety, and in this opinion I am supported by every line officer of the Omaha. It is customary in target practice to have one observer at the mast head and the other in a boat abreast the target to note the fall and explosion of the shell. I steamed to within 600 yards of the cliff, scanned it carefully with my glasses, and saw neither human being, habitation or cultivated field in sight. The target anchored, the observer close to the island, and at about 300 yards distant from and abreast of the target, the Omaha steamed out to a position at about 1,100 yards distant from and her starboard broadside bearing upon it. The engines were stopped and the ship did not move during the firing. The range was first obtained by firing three or four shots from the Hotchkiss machine gun, and when found a careful, deliberate fire was begun with the battery. After some twenty shots had been fired the ship had drifted towards the target so as to reduce the distance to 900 yards. I then ceased firing, steamed out on a circle and back to the same relative position as before, but now some 1,300 yards distant. The engines were stopped and the firing resumed. Forty-two shells were fired in all. As these shells struck the water near the target they would rebound and strike the cliff (none higher than half way up) and would bring down a quantity of rock and dirt that making a cloud of dust would easily give the impression that they had exploded. The position of each shot as it struck near the target was noted by two observers, and none during the practice were greater than fifty yards from it. Having expended the regulation quantity, I picked up the target and steamed away for Nagasaki, the observer having reported that all the shells had exploded. During the firing my glasses were constantly on the island, I saw every shot strike except a half dozen obscured by smoke, and as before remarked there was neither human being, habitation or cultivated field in sight.

The following day, March 5, I received word from the Governor of Nagasaki that after the ship had left some inhabitants of the island had gone to the spot, dug out six unexploded shells, and carried them to their village. At this time in the afternoon the deputy police inspector of the district visited the village. He was told of the facts, and he directed the chief of the village to take charge of them. After he had left, the Japanese do not say how (but as some of the other shells show that efforts had been made to extract their fuses) probably while it was being tampered with, a 60-pound percussion shell burst, and killed four of the bystanders and wounded seven. No damage during target practice was done to the island or its inhabitants, and no impartial person could hold me responsible for what occurred afterward. I say reverently it was the act of God, and impossible for any human being to have foreseen.

Since this deplorable accident it has transpired that in 1881 the Japanese issued a circular decree prohibiting target firing or torpedo practice within three miles of their coast. Through the negligence of the United States, or that of some former commander-in-chief of our squadron, this decree is not known of in the present squadron, nor had I ever heard of its existence at any time. I ask your careful and patient reading of this narrative that you may be acquainted with all the facts, and I shall do myself the honor of calling upon you at the earliest possible moment after arriving at Yokohama. If you deem it proper, I would like to call upon such member of the Japanese Cabinet, to whose cognizance this matter would be referred, and express my deep regret for the accident. Very respectfully, your obedient servant.

THOMAS O. SELFRIDGE, Captain, United States Navy.

SECRETARY ENDICOTT AND GEN. SHERIDAN.

THE Boston Herald sent a reporter out to Salem to ask Secretary Endicott about the flying gossip alleging his strained relations with Gen. Sheridan. Judge Endicott made a statement that ought to set a lot of people right in this matter. Here it is:

Now I must positively decline to be interviewed upon my relations with the Lieutenant-General. There is no trouble between us, and our relations are most pleasant. General Sheridan himself has publicly said so within a week. I do not know where the report started that our relations are strained. Some newspaper men seem quite unable to distinguish between a difference of opinion between officials or departments and a quarrel between those officials or departments. I have been a lawyer for many years, and have constantly differed with my professional associates, but I have never quarrelled with them, and should no more think of quarrelling with them because of these differences than I should think of quarrelling with my best friend or my wife if we should happen to differ in opinion. There was an absurd report in the paper a short time ago that I had quarrelled with the Second Comptroller. Entirely wrong. We had a difference of opinion concerning a certain account, which I said I should refer to the Court of Claims, and he agreed with me that it would be the best thing to do. That was all. A rumor equally difficult to account for was one which appeared in the Herald, to the effect that I was to resign or had conferred with the President about my resignation. There was no basis whatever for such a story. As I have said, I cannot and must not be interviewed, but, as for the story that there is any conflict of authority between General Sheridan and myself, or that our relations are strained, I wish to say that it is not so. We have differed on some points, but never quarrelled, and our relations are cordial. I do not know where the story that they are otherwise came from. I see no room for any conflict of authority between the Lieutenant-General and myself in the control of the Army. The President is Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy. The Constitution declares him to be such. The Secretary simply represents the President. Of course, it is a matter of history that the relations between the commanding general and Secretary of War have not always been harmonious, and that the conflict of authority has been somewhat serious. But I am speaking of my own experience as Secretary, and reiterate that there is no conflict of authority, and there are and have been no serious differences between General Sheridan and myself.

A SOLDIER'S FORGERIES.

A Sackett's Harbor despatch says: "Julius Feuerbach, sergeant of Co. C, 12th Inf., Madison Barracks, has swindled the Jefferson County National Bank, of Watertown, out of over $2,000 by a number of clever forgeries. Feuerbach was the trusted and confidential clerk of Lieut. W. W. Wotherspoon late Quartermaster at Madison Barracks, and, while employed in that capacity, abstracted checks made out in favor of George Hall and Co., of Ogdensburg, in payment for coal, to which he forged Hall's signature. Feuerbach was honorably discharged from the Service about six weeks ago and received letters of commendation from the officers of his regiment. So cleverly had he covered up his forgeries that they were not discovered until long after he had left for New York. The forger is thirty years of age, and is finely educated and of gentlemanly deportment. He has travelled extensively through European countries, is a German, and speaks five languages. The Sheriff of Jefferson County and New York detectives have been at work on the case. It is believed that Feuerbach has sailed for Europe." He succeeded in securing the confidence of all who knew him. He was the clerk of the Post Quartermaster, and was appointed post trader at Madison Barracks at about the date of his discharge. He was also recommended in the most flattering terms for a commission, and had exhibited his testimonials on that point during the last weeks of his stay at Madison Barracks. His application for the tradership, as well as his apparent studies of international law, etc., to fit him for the examination for a commission, all occurring after the forgeries, were, of course, part of a well-laid plan to evade suspicions of crime until after his discharge, when the forgeries perforce would come to light! So strong was his hold on the esteem and confidence of those who knew him, that he had no difficulty in securing admission to the Sackett's Harbor Lodge of F. and A. M., and later into the Royal Arch Chapter! This, while he was an enlisted man. Since the forgeries have been published, Feuerbach has been expelled from the Order. He drank only moderately, never visited saloons, and never gambled, but had a great fondness for books and music, so that his rise was less a matter of mystery and surprise than his disgraceful fall.

GENERAL JOSEPH WHEELER.

REFERRING to the letter in the JOURNAL of a recent date relative to the appointment of Gen. Jos. Wheeler, of Alabama, to the Chairmanship of the Committee of Military Affairs, House of Representatives, it would not be proper, perhaps, to petition the Speaker to make the appointment, but it would certainly be within the privileges of an officer of the Army to represent to the Speaker that such appointment would give great satisfaction to the Army.

During the War Gen. Wheeler proved himself a splendid soldier, and since his election to Congress he has shown that he is in full accord with the best interests of the Service.

No member of the next Congress is so entirely fitted for the position as Gen. Wheeler. Let the JOURNAL—which has only the good of the Army at heart—use its influence in securing the appointment and unquestionably success, and thanks also, will follow. 1860.

MR. STANTON AND GEN. LORENZO THOMAS.

IN a letter to the N. Y. Times Ex-Congressman Luke P. Poland describes the contest between Mr. Stanton and Gen. Lorenzo Thomas for the control of the War Office. In order to test the legal question it was arranged that Thomas should be arrested under the legal tenure act, refuse to give bail and then be brought up on habeas corpus. Mr. Poland says: "On the announcement by Thomas's counsel that he would decline to furnish bail and he could order him committed, Judge Cartter, with his peculiar twinkle of the eye and his inimitable stammer, said: 'Oh, I know Gen. Thomas; he is my neighbor. There is not the slightest danger he will leave the country and not be here when wanted, and so no need of any bail or commitment, and I shan't make any order for any.' So far as I know, this was the end of the prosecution against Gen. Thomas. How rapidly things went on from this night to the impeachment and trial of President Johnson are matters of public history."

AN ATTACK UPON GENERAL SHERIDAN.

A LETTER published in The Winchester (Va.) Times May 4, over the signature of Gen. Thomas L. Rosser, was the subject of a good deal of amusement at the War Department. General Rosser, it seems, doesn't like General Sheridan. He writes to Major Conrad, of Winchester, apropos of the suggestion that Gen. Sheridan proposed to visit the Shenandoah Valley, among other things as follows:

I had hoped that our beautiful valley should never again be desecrated by his (General Sheridan's) footprints. Cold, cruel and brutal must be the character of this soldier, who fondly cherishes memories of the wild, wanton waste and desolation which his barbarous torch spread through the valley, laying in ashes the beautiful homes of innocent women, young and helpless children and aged men, and who over these ruins boasted that "Now a crow cannot fly over this valley without carrying its rations." I have forgiven the brave men of the Union armies whom I met in honorable battle, and who finally triumphed over us in the great struggle. Among them I can now name many of my warmest and truest and most prized friends. They are good and true men, and think none the less of us for having fought them. Indeed they esteem him the highest among us who fought them the hardest. Sheridan is not one of this kind and he has never accorded us that peace which Grant proclaimed. I now say to you, my dear Mayor, and to our gallant comrades who are now in the Valley, that I hope you will allow this man to make his triumphant ride up the Valley in peace, but have him go like a miserable crow, "carrying his rations with him."

Such talk as this only reflects upon its author and, as General Sheridan explains, is to be excused in view of the uncommonly uncomfortable treatment Rosser received at the hands of Sheridan when the two encountered each other in the Valley, and then Tom Rosser is a candidate for Congress now, and something must be allowed to politics. As Gen. Sheridan does not intend to make the trip ascribed to him; Rosser can have his beautiful Valley all to himself this time.

A MONUMENT TO A HERO.

HENRY B. RUMSEY.

IT is proposed to erect in this city a monument to the memory of Henry B. Rumsey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., the heroic ex-Naval officer, who, after succeeding in making his escape from the Richmond Hotel fire of March 18, deliberately turned back and rescued a little ten-year old girl, Jennie Mann, daughter of one of the proprietors of the hotel.

It has been suggested that instead of the ordinary monument a memorial tablet be placed in the splendid hotel which the Buffalo Library will erect on the site of the burned building. If it be thought that this tablet, placed on the inside of the building, will too vividly recall to the future guests of the hotel the horrors of that night, the tablet might be inserted in a niche on the outer walls of the hotel with possible a bust of the brave man.

This incident of the fire in which the life of the rescuer was sacrificed unavailingly for another, brings to mind some of the many noble deeds of men disciplined by Naval training—of officers and crew of a sinking ship after seeing the women and children put in the boats, calmly standing at their posts with folded hands, silently to sink to death with their vessel.

Surely the heroic deed of this man, whose death was as his life had been, should not be unremembered. EXTREM.

With this letter our correspondent sends an electrotype copy of a photograph of Mr. Rumsey, which we reproduce here.

FORT BAYARD, N. M.

SINCE last Fort Bayard turned up in the columns of the JOURNAL, nearly three years ago, two sets of officers' quarters, two barracks, a commissary storehouse, and a large hospital, all handsomely constructed of brick, have been added to the post, besides substantial cavalry stables, a quartermaster's corral, and a gymnasium, which are wooden structures; and every building at the post is abundantly supplied with water from a reservoir filled by steam works that also relieve the garrison prisoners from the uncongenial labor of cutting wood.

For most of these improvements the post is indebted to the energy and foresight of our late quartermaster, Lieut. W. H. Carter, 6th Cavalry, than whom there is not a more hardworking and capable quartermaster in the Army. During the campaigns of 1885 and 1886 he was probably the most burdened officer in this portion of the country, with the usual small thanks for his pains. He is one of the victims of the order limiting staff service of regimental officers: victim, however, only in the sense that no one is glad to be removed from work to which he has conscientiously and earnestly devoted himself, and which is approaching completion. The highly complimentary order of Gen. Carr, his regimental and post commander, will have been received by the JOURNAL before this letter reaches it. No eulogy was ever more deserved.

A creation of Lieut. Carter's is the handsome and massive gymnasium building, erected to provide the enlisted men with opportunity for physical culture. Dr. Dietz, post surgeon, in his sanitary report for February, 1887, says of it: "The gymnasium recently built at this post, under the direction of Lieut. Carter, post quartermaster, is a credit to its designer. It is well provided with gymnastic apparatus of various kinds, and two bowling alleys. The enlisted man, unfortunately, is not inclined to take advantage of the facilities afforded him for physical culture." It was built of material obtained from the post saw-mill, and almost entirely by the labor of enlisted men. It has two bowling alleys and a good assortment of gymnastic apparatus, but is ill-patronized by the men, who prefer amusements requiring little bodily exertion. It is understood that the conversion of the building into a canteen, or something similar, is contemplated, and this would be a step in the right direction, for nothing is more needed at military posts than a well ordered place of resort and recreation for the soldier.

The officer has a home, a comfortable club room, and abundant opportunity for social intercourse. The soldier has nothing of the kind. And while it would be absurd to make comparisons, yet no human being can be expected to learn to love a mode of life which deprives it of all social pleasures and advantages. To a man possessed of the least refinement of feeling, nothing is so well calculated to beget homesickness as a visit to the soldiers' barroom, where, usually, with a minimum of courteous attendance, he pays a maximum price for inferior beverages and cigars. No chair to sit down in; no ornament on the walls; a filthy floor, and a general air of: "Don't hang around here, you fellows; drink, pay, and go, the sooner the better." And what other places of resort are there for the soldier at a frontier post? None, except the low dives that can be found on the limits of every military reservation, that do more to fill the guardhouse and the hospital than all other causes combined.

Is there anything so difficult in the canteen project, which is in successful operation at one or two posts, that the scheme should be adopted so slowly? Is there, permit me to ask, anything impracticable or objectionable in the following picture?

A large hall, with a stage and a good floor: well warmed and lighted. Its object; a dance hall, a theatre, and a concert room at night; a canteen, or club room, for enlisted men during the day and on such evenings when not in use for dancing, theatricals, or concert purposes. To be under the immediate charge of a non commissioned officer of courteous bearing, yet sufficient vim to keep in order the various elements likely to frequent the establishment, and compel the observance of the gentlemanly demeanor necessary in such a place. This N. C. officer to account for all receipts and expenditures under a well devised system of bookkeeping. A large number of small tables and chairs at which to play cards and other games.

For amusement: Tenpins, billiards, cards, chess, checkers, and dominoes; newspapers and periodicals. For refreshment: A lunch counter always provided with hot coffee and sandwiches; native wines, beer, sodawater and segars. The fixed price for any of these articles of refreshment to be five cents; a game of billiards five cents; a game of tenpins five cents.

To provide the soldier with the means to enjoy the privileges of the canteen between pay days, a number of five cent tickets to be issued to, and accounted for by, the company authorities; the canteen to bear, of course, all losses, such as from men deserting before pay day; men dishonorably discharged between pay days, etc. The profit of about twenty per cent. that would accrue from sale of refreshments to be used in meeting expenses and purchasing billiard tables, furniture, etc.

The officer, or N. C. officer, in charge, should act as censor in the case of proposed dramatic or minstrel troupes, and none such should be permitted to use the hall except upon approval of their leader, as well as their programme by the proper authority, etc. This is but a short sketch of the programme to be instituted, and by no means exhausts the subject.

Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

The New York Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion held its annual meeting at Delmonico's on Wednesday evening, May 4. Nearly 200 members were present, 171 votes being cast for the officers, the following being elected for the ensuing year, 1887-8: Commander, Major-General John M. Schofield, U. S. A.; Senior Vice Commander, Captain Henry Erben, U. S. N.; Junior Vice Commander, Brevet Lieut.-Colonel Wm. C. Church, U. S. V.; Recorder, Captain Edgar B. Van Winkle, U. S. V.; Registrar, 2d Lieut. Loyall Farragut, late U. S. A.; Treasurer, Paymaster George DeForest Barton, late U. S. N.; Chancellor, Brevet Lieut.-Col. Floyd Clarkson, U. S. V.; Chaplain, Rev. Edward Anderson, Colonel, U. S. V.; Council, Brevet Major-Gen. Wager Swayne, U. S. A. (retired); Brevet Brig.-Gen. Frederick T. Locke, U. S. V.; Brevet Lieut.-Colonel Robert W. Leonard, U. S. V.; Brevet Major Joseph P. Sanger, U. S. A.; Acting Asst. Paymr. Allen S. Apgar, late U. S. N. After the business meeting came the monthly dinner, and when this was disposed of an interesting paper was read by Dr. Edw. Holden on the "Attempt to Run Down an Ironclad with a Wooden Ship." General Hatch, of the Army; Gen. Horace Porter and Chaplain Sanderson, of the Wisconsin Commandery, narrated personal experiences of the war, and, in the absence of General Schofield and Capt. Erben, Colonel Church responded to a toast in honor of the officers elect. A new song, written by Rossiter Raymond, Ph. D., and set to music by General Horatio King, and also several quartettes were sung. The new song is as follows:

MARCH OF THE LOYAL LEGION.

Look where our starry banner floats above,
And listen to our bugles as they blow!
Once more we rally to the cause we love,
As we rallied when they rang long ago.

Refrain.

Nought we care, although our numbers be few,
And feeble be each veteran's hand;
The Loyal Legion still is true
To the Fatherland.
To the Banner of the Fatherland.

Proudly in youth we march'd the foe to meet,
And joyously we braved the battle storm;
Danger we counted not, nor feared defeat
With the current in our hearts leaping warm!
Refrain—Nought we care, etc.

Comrades who slumber in the glorious grave,
Forever we will cherish your renown;
Priceless the treasure you have died to save;
We will guard it till our arms we lay down!
Refrain—Nought we care, etc.

At a meeting of the District of Columbia Commandery, held May 4, the following were balloted for: Lt. A. Berger, U. S. V.; Capt. W. T. Brayton, U. S. V.; Gen. Allan Rutherford, U. S. V.; Col. S. E. Blunt, U. S. A., and Major N. H. Camp, U. S. V. The total membership is now 380. At this meeting the annual election for officers took place.

The Minnesota Commandery held its annual meeting at St. Paul, May 4. The tickets for officers placed in nomination was as follows: Commander, Gen. Wm. R. Marshall, U. S. V.; Senior-Vice, Col. Chas. D. Kerr, U. S. V.; Junior-Vice, Major John P. Rea, U. S. V.; Recorder, Major George Q. White, U. S. A.; Registrar, Gen. R. M. Newport, U. S. V.; Treasurer, Lieut. Albert Scheffer, U. S. Groesbeck, U. S. A., and Capt. Edward C. Barr, U. S. V. An interesting paper on "The Old Vermont Brigade at Petersburg," was read by Gen. Lewis A. Grant.

A new Commandery (the 17th) is in process of organization in Colorado, with headquarters at Denver.

The Wisconsin Commandery held a meeting at Milwaukee, May 2, at which Capt. Mason Jackson, U. S. Army, retired, and Surgeon A. M. Helmer, U. S. V., were balloted for. After the business meeting Capt. Chas. King, U. S. Army, read a paper on "Warren at Gettysburg."

The Kansas Commandery held a meeting at Leavenworth, May 5, at which the following were balloted for: Capt. C. T. Hilton, U. S. V.; Lieut.-Col. E. C. Culp, U. S. V.; Maj. E. J. Peck, U. S. V.; Major J. M. Limbocker, U. S. V., and Col. W. C. Webb, U. S. V. The Commander, Col. A. J. Smith, says: "The first anniversary of the organization of this Commandery is approaching and arrangements are being perfected to make a reunion worthy of our Order, but to give it a crowning success we should have for that meeting many applicants for membership, and to this end Companions are earnestly requested to use every effort to secure desirable and eligible candidates. Every descendant to whom the precious right of membership in the Order will fall, should be taught to look forward with pride to the time when he will reach the age at which he may ask the privilege of companionship in the Order with the honored defenders of the Union. By this association these young men will surely be better prepared to take up the mantle as it falls and maintain the Union which their fathers saved.

There was a distinguished gathering at the fourth annual dinner and reunion of the Ohio Commandery on Wednesday evening, May 4, at the Burnet House, Cincinnati. Among them were Major-General Schofield, U. S. A., and his aides, Major Sanger and Captain Sawyer, Colonel Elmer Otis, U. S. Army, etc. The occasion was a memorable as well as an enjoyable one. General W. T. Sherman, U. S. A., was unanimously elected commander in succession to General R. B. Hayes, who declined a further term.

The annual meeting of the California Commandery will be held at San Francisco, May 28.

THE ARMY.

CIR., WAR DEPARTMENT, April 15, 1887.

Hereafter heads of bureaus of the War Department in making requisitions for articles of stationery and miscellaneous supplies for the use of their respective offices will, as a rule, in order to insure complete delivery on each requisition, call for such articles only as are named in the annual schedules. DEPARTMENT NEWS.

A San Antonio despatch says: "Sam Reed, alias Jim Reed, the U. S. soldier arrested here April 27, enlisted in the Army at Brownsville, Tex., and was stationed at Fort Brown, where he concocted and executed the murder of Mr. Block, a wealthy Jewish jeweller, at Matamoros. After his trial and sentence to be hung, influence was brought to bear to save him without success. Before execution he bribed Mexican officials with $1,000, furnished by his mother, and escaped.

The following telegram, concerning the Western earthquake, was received at Army Headquarters from Gen. O. O. Howard on April 5: "Gen. Miles forwards following from Forsyth at Huachuca, Los Angelos, Cal., May 4, to Assistant Adjutant General, Division of Pacific, San Francisco, Cal.:"

"FORT HUACHUCA, May 3.

Quite a severe earthquake shock passed through the Huachuca range at ten minutes past three o'clock this afternoon, followed by two much lighter shocks at intervals of about 40 minutes each. The direction seemed to be from southeast to northwest. No particular damage done to the post. At 4.30 P. M. a heavy pall of smoke hung over the San Jose Mountains, about 30 miles southeast, the places seeming to indicate volcanos. At 5 P. M. a heavy column of smoke began to ascend from the Whetstone range, directly north of the post and about 17 miles distant. It is now 8 P. M. and the top of the cone is aflame. As there is no timber in this range and the hills in the vicinity are covered with lava, I think that there is no doubt of its being an active volcano. Will send an exploring party out in the morning. (Signed),

G. A. FORSYTH, Lieut. Col., comdg."

CHANGES IN THE REGIMENTAL STAFF.

The following are the changes made in the regimental staff since the order limiting the tour of duty to four years went into effect. WEST POINT, N. Y.

MAY 5, 1887.

THE absorbing topic of conversation for several weeks has been the musicale, which we awaited and looked for on tip toes of expectation. It took place on last Thursday evening in Schofield Hall with the following programme:

Duet, Scherzo, "Midsummer Night's Dream," Mendelssohn, Mrs. Bass and Mrs. Mercur; Bedouin Love Song, Pinsuti, Lieut. Totten; Trio, from "Attila," Verdi, Mrs. Mercur, Capt. Augur and Lieut. Homer; Rhapsodie Hongroise, No. 2, Liszt, Mrs. Reed; Il Sogno, Mercadante, Mrs. Totten; Io Vivo e T'amo, Campana, Lts. Totten and Alexander; La Fileuse, Raff, Miss Hattie Woodcock; Farewell, Graham, Capt. Augur; The Stirrup Cup, Arditi, Lt. Homer; Sonata for Piano and Violin—Allegro Agitato, Scherzo, Andante Con Moto—Louis Wolf, Mrs. Larned; Septettes—a, "Silent Night," Barnby, b. "Hark, the Lark," Cook—Capt. Augur, Lieuts. Homer, Gordon, Stuart, Totten, Alexander and Gibson; Kinder Symphony, C. Von Holten, Conducted by Prof. Larned, piano, Mrs. Larned; Cornets—Soprana, Mrs. Reed; Altos, Mrs. Mercur and Mrs. Metcalfe; Tenor, Lt. Alexander; Cuckoo, Lt. Townsley; Quail, Mrs. Simpson; Nightingales, Mrs. Totten and Lieut. Gibson; Violin, Capt. Augur; Violoncello, Lieut. Stuart; Bassos, Lieut. Homer and Lieut. Totten; Trumpets, Mrs. Edgerton and Lieut Landis; Castanets, Mrs. Edgerton; Flute, Lieut. Reed; Triangle, Lieut. Edgerton; Drum, Lieut. Warren.

All of the parts were well rendered and received more than cordial applause and frequent recalls. Mrs. Totten was the recipient of unbounded enthusiasm, as also Miss Hattie Woodcock, the latter receiving a bouquet of magnificent roses. The Rhapsodie Hongroise, No. 2, by Mrs. Reed, was played in graceful style and received a large share of admiration. Capt. Augur, Lieuts. Homer and Totten could not but know that they had achieved a delightful success. They aroused a volume of enthusiasm and, indeed, surprised their friends. The "Septettes," judging from the expressions of praise and pleasure from the audience on all sides, made a fine impression. The "Kinder Symphony," a vast musical organization, was unique. The size of the orchestra and instruments used produced Wagnerian effects, there were many themes and rythms in it. On the whole, our musicale will long remain a charming recollection and many thanks are due the ladies who helped to make it an artistic and happy success.

On Saturday evening the cadet mess hall was thrown open for the first time since it has received its new and handsome decorations. Exclamations of surprise and pleasure greeted these changes, which are certainly fine. An unusually large and brilliant audience welcomed with a storm of applause the arrival of "Mark Twain." He entered the room with Professor Postlethwaite and was escorted to the platform. The reading this time was on the article that appeared in the April "Century" "English as She is Taught"—which aroused simply roars of laughter, but the cream of the fun was the remark, "There were donkeys in the Theological Seminary," and his immediately turning round to explain to the chaplain that nothing personal was intended, was so indescribably funny that the audience continued to laugh and applaud for fully five minutes.

On Saturday afternoon the corps of cadets was reviewed by Gen. Merritt. Mr. Clemens was invited to accompany the reviewing party. He committed a court-martial offence by forgetting to throw away his cigar before taking his place in line with the staff.

Among those visiting the post have been Mr. and Mrs. Clemens, guests of Mrs. Merritt; Miss Sherman, daughter of Senator Sherman, at Mrs. Rockwell's; Miss Bell, Gen. Bell's daughter, at Mrs. Williams; Mr. and Mrs. Otis, at Mrs. Bass's; Miss Mahan, at Mrs. Michie's.

On Friday afternoon we had the last artillery drill and the Point wore a warlike aspect. There was firing from four batteries, besides the small arms and Gatling gun practice. There were a number of distinguished visitors present, including Gen. Sherman, Senator Sherman and Dr. Gatling, the gun inventor. The wind was blowing a gale from the North and interfered with the accuracy of the firing and comfort of the spectators.

The following-named persons were designated for examination for admission to the West Point Military Academy this week:

Edward D. Anderson, Jasper, Tenn.
E. J. Rhoades, Kingman, Kansas.
Douglas S. Harrown, Sante Fé, N. M.
Joseph T. Crabbe, Gibson City, Ills.
John H. Smith (alt.), Dwight, Ills.
Douglas Settle, Greensboro, N. C.
John Jensbury Bradley, Lake View, Ills.

WASHINGTON BARRACKS, D. C.

MAY 2, 1887.

A FAITHFUL soldier and veteran of the late war, Sergeant Daniel Gorman, late of Battery E, 3d Art., died at the Soldiers' Home, Washington, D. C. The deceased was under treatment at the Post Hospital of this post for several months with bronchitis, merging into phthisis, with valvular insufficiency and enlargement of the heart, contracted in the line of duty. He was born in Tipperary, Ireland, and was about 42 years of age. Served in the Light Battery of the Massachusetts Volunteers, and also in the Navy, throughout the war. He was a gifted, genial and generous Irishman; in youth the idol of his native place, and in the years of his manhood the admired and beloved of a large circle of friends in the land of the stranger. He was greatly esteemed by his fellow comrades in arms, who loved him for his admirable qualities and steadfast patriotism, and his death creates a large gap in the ranks of the veterans. The guard of honor was furnished from his old comrades and battery, E, 3d Art., and the members of that command presented some splendid floral decorations.

Major-General Schofield, commanding the Division of the Atlantic, made a visit of inspection on Saturday, April 30, at 12 M., accompanied by his aide, Major Sanger. The usual salute was fired by the Light Battery on the East Campus grounds, close to gate.

The bi-monthly inspection and muster of the troops of this command took place on Saturday last, at 9.30 M., in full dress uniform, under the command of General Horatio G. Gibson. AULD LANG SYNE.

FORT SULLY, DAKOTA.

APRIL 29, 1887.

MISS IDA YOUNG, of Pierre, is visiting Mrs. Russell. Mrs. Sage and Miss Edith Reed, of Fort Bennett, have been spending a few days with Mrs. Quinby.

The College Base Ball Nine is expected to cross bats with our Nine next Friday and Saturday.

Monday evening Lieut. and Mrs. Macklin gave a progressive euchre party in honor of their son Charles's birthday. Lieut. Irvine and Miss Collier carried off the honors and Dr. and Mrs. De Witt carried off the booby prizes.

Dr. and Mrs. De Witt celebrated the tenth anniversary of their marriage Tuesday evening with a progressive euchre party. It was said to have been a most enjoyable affair. The first prizes were carried off by Capt. Quinby and Miss Collier—Lieut. Philbrick and Mrs. Marklin the booby.

The concert given Thursday evening for the benefit of the new musicians, just from Italy, was a grand success, and all were very much pleased and every piece was loudly encored. A very pleasant dance took place after the concert. MARS.

FORT LEWIS, COLORADO.

A foot race occurred here on Sunday, April 24, for a private purse. The contestants were Sam E. Davidson and D. B. Hollinger. The distance run was 400 yards; time, 59 seconds. The race was a dead heat.

Work on the target range is going on energetically under the instruction of Capt. J. B. Irvine, 22d Inf., range officer.

The weather is cool, high winds being predominant.

The Signal Class, under the supervision of Lieut. Mosher, 22d Inf., is rapidly approaching a high standard. Officers' school began on April 25, and continues every day.

I learn that Mr. Reichardt has made application for the leadership of the West Point band, receiving favorable endorsements. While all his friends wish him success yet they will be sorry to lose him. He is an exceptionally fine musician and a perfect gentleman. He has, by his untiring and unceasing efforts, raised this band to a splendid standard. Should he be successful in his present project, West Point can congratulate herself, while we will reluctantly submit.

Capt. Ketchum's son, Frank, who had been very sick, is convalescent.

Drill continues every day. ENIGMA.

CARLISLE BARRACKS, PA.

CAPTAIN R. H. PRATT, U. S. A., arrived May 1 from Fort Marion, Fla., with 62 Apache pupils. On arrival they were taken into the dining room and treated to a good breakfast. When they were done eating they were taken outside and grouped, while a photographer took their picture. They were next taken in charge by the matron and superintendent and walked off to the bathrooms, and they will go into the school room on Monday.

MORE MARCHING.

IT is thought that there will be an exchange of stations between the 8th, 6th and 24th Regiments of Infantry. Why cannot one or more of these regiments make the change by marching? Would it not be better for the Service if infantry in changing station were always, except in emergencies, required to march, and the company officers required to march with their men, instead of riding on horseback or in ambulances? I have an idea that a fair majority of the company officers of, at least, one of the regiments mentioned would be able and willing to make the change by marching.

WALKER.

FORT CUSTER, M. T.

THE fine band of the 1st U. S. Cavalry, under Conductor E. M. Walker, gave a select concert at the chapel on the evening of April 7, and rendered the following programme: Overture, "Tannhauser," Wagner; the Traumerei (string band), Schumann; Scherzo, fr "Scotch Symphony," Mendelssohn; Air Vari, fr "Trout Quintette," Schubert; Waltzes, "Blue Danube," Strauss; Caprice Heroique, (Op. 115), Kontski. We are very proud of our band. The music furnished by it at guard mountings, dress parades and concerts is almost our only source of amusement. Our post commander, Gen. Dudley, has done everything in his power to remove the monotony of our dull garrison life. We have an excellent library and a canteen and billiard room; we also have hops and theatrical performances, but we are denied the great source of amusement of most frontier posts—hunting and fishing, with any prospect of success. A few catfish and eels are caught in the muddy Big Horn, but to secure game we must go a long distance from the post. We should be allowed twenty-four men in our bands. Were such the case in the 1st Cavalry, it is certain that our band leader, Mr. Walker, would in a short time show as fine a military band as could be found in the United States.

FIRST CAVALRY.

Easter was observed at this post as follows: At 11 A. M. Post Chaplain Macomber preached an appropriate sermon, which was followed by the administration of the Lord's Supper. In the evening the stage of the Post Hall, which had previously been decorated with flowers and potted plants, furnished by ladies of the garrison, was brilliantly lighted, and an appropriate programme of responsive Scripture readings and recitations, Easter cards and anthems were presented. The opening piece was a beautiful anthem, rendered by a quartette composed of Adjutant Wainwright and wife, Surgeon Price, and Mrs. Capt. Wilkinson. The singing and music through the service was led by the efficient and popular leader of the 1st Cavalry band, accompanied by several instruments of the band. The recitations were given by pupils of the school in a very creditable manner. One item in the exercise was the representation of the three graces, Faith, Hope and Love, by three misses dressed in white, bearing each her appropriate emblem, the cross, the anchor, and the heart, and each reciting an appropriate verse.

The closing exercise presented a beautiful and impressive picture. A large white cross, with flowers on either side and at the base. An acrostic was then brought out, as follows: A class of thirteen children were arranged on the stage back of the footlights and in front of the flowers and cross, each having in hand an appropriate letter, and after reciting a verse passed the letter to the teacher, who placed it on the cross, and when completed the words "Christ is Risen," could be distinctly seen by the large audience; all the children present were then arranged in front of stage and altogether repeated the Saviour's words: "Suffer the little children and forbid them not to come unto Me," etc., and then sang the Sunday school hymn, "When He cometh to make up his jewels," etc. Another anthem by the quartette, the doxology and benediction, and we returned to our quarters, all feeling that we had passed another profitable and enjoyable Easter at Fort Custer. The Post Chaplain was assisted in the exercises as well as the preparations for the occasion and the training of the children by J. H. Ware, Troop D, 1st Cav., our efficient Post School teacher, and also his excellent wife, who has spent the winter here on a visit to her husband. She is the daughter of Chaplain Gillmore, U. S. Army, (retired.) The parents of the children in the garrison feel that they are favored in the way of school, as the teacher is a man of excellent character and a professional teacher. He has taught the school for the past three years.

We are also favored with a commanding officer in General

Our post, usually so healthful, especially for children, has been visited by the measles, brought in by a citizen passing through. We have been obliged to close the school, but under the skilful treatment and wise direction of our efficient Post Surgeons, Price and Pilcher, all are doing well.

Our spring is backward, for this country. The parade ground, however, begins to show a little verdure and drills and dress parades are in order. J.

FORT NIOBRARA, NEB.

THE Excelsior of April 30 says:

Mrs. Col. Bryant is dangerously ill....Prairie fires are raging all around us. ....The 8th Infantry was greatly excited recently over the news that the 8th might go, next July, to Camp Douglas, Utah. The arrival of the military JOURNAL knocked our "Castles in Spain" into a three-cocked hat.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, KAS.

THE secretary of the Army Co-operative Fire Association reports a membership of 65 at the end of April. This brings the amount of assessment on all the members to $253.50. There are 41 members at Fort Leavenworth, and 24 have joined from other posts. The success of the association is assured.—Kansas City Times.

FORT OMAHA, NEB.

THE Excelsior of April 30 says:

Mrs. Dr. Brown had her sister, Mrs. Crawford, with her last week.....The garrison was alarmed this week by the burning of grass on the hill just west of the fort. Nearly the entire garrison turned out, but the wind carried the flames to the south and the danger was averted ...Dr. J. M. Cabell, recently commissioned, will be assigned to duty with the troops at Bellevue Rifle range.....Dr. Brown, U. S. A., delivered the third lecture of the series on Friday evening. He treated in an intelligent and interesting manner the subject of sanitary arrangements of camps, and the best means of preserving the health of the men.

FORT SHERMAN.

THE Kansas City Times, referring to our recent remark that a complete vindication of the officers of the 2d Inft., recently before a Court of Inquiry at Fort Sherman, is expected, says: "It is frequently the rule at posts located at far western points, away from civilization, that Army officers are compelled to deviate from the rules of Army regulations for the best interests of the command under them, and while such transactions may on the face seem irregular, yet there is nothing lost to the Government, and certainly no such officer as Colonel Wheaton could be charged with attempting to defraud the Government. To make and compile Army regulations in a handsomely decorated room of the War Department, with fine upholstered furniture to lounge upon, is one thing, and to enforce them in a frontier post, which is a community unto itself, is quite another thing. In 99 cases out of 100 Army officers can be depended upon as always carefully guarding and protecting the interests of the Service and their Government, and it is getting pretty tough when irresponsible men, such as formulated the charges against these officers, can obtain a hearing by the President through some Senator or Congressman because they may have a vote or two stowed away under the lapels of their coats, provided they are possessed of such a garment.

Heman.—We note that since you inquired as to your standing you have been appointed Post Q. M. Sergeant with station at Fort D. A. Russell.

S.—A complete compilation of the Navy General Orders and Circulars from 1876 is now in the hands of the Government Printer and will be ready for issue soon.

Veteran.—A claimant need not employ an attorney to obtain a pension. If the applicant applies by letter direct to the Commissioner of Pensions he will be furnished with blanks and instructions.

B. O. B.—Sergeants Madigan, 17th Infantry, and Daly, 23d Infantry, were appointed Ordnance Sergeants in March last and assigned, the former to Fort Clinch, Fla., and the latter to Fort Livingston, La.

Delta.—There is no General Order that we are aware of forbidding the creation of company "slush funds," but the practice is discountenanced at the A. G. O., and has been forbidden, we believe, in one or more cases which came into prominence.

Musician.—It was decided in 1883 that "persons between the ages of 16 and 18 years can only be enlisted as musicians, and when so enlisted cannot be reduced to the ranks except with their consent." Persons over 18 are enlisted as "soldiers."

New Hampshire.—Jesse Lull was born in Vermont, appointed Ensign and 2d Lieutenant 16th Infantry, January 8, 1799, 1st Lieutenant Artillerists and Engineers February, 1801, and was "disbanded" June, 1802, under the Act of March 16, 1802, reorganizing the Army.

E A. G. asks: What countries of Europe have volunteer military organizations? ANS.—England recruits its regular army by voluntary enlistments and also has a military organization known as V lunteers. The Swedish and Dutch armies are partially recruited by volunteer enlistments. In the other armies of Europe service is compulsory.

Henry asks: Can you give me a decision relative to the opening of the cartridge box when cartridges are not used? ANS.—The Lieutenant-General commanding the Army has decided as follows: In executing the load it is customary simply to carry the hand to the cartridge-box without opening it, when cartridges are not used. This is a "decision," which is generally regarded as final, and it should govern at the Washington drill.

Fort Concho, Texas, asks: When the post commander and the officer of the day together are approaching the guardhouse, is it right for the sentinel on number one to call out: "Turn out the guard for the commanding officer and officer of the day?" ANS.—No. The following decision by Lieut.-Gen. Sheridan governs the case: "When the officer of the guard and the officer of the day approach the guardhouse from different directions, at the same time, the officer of the day should be advanced first and should not be made to wait for his junior." The ranking officer is the one entitled to the compliment.

CAUSE FOR SORROW.—"Did the great chief of the Wang-Wangs see any evidence of the decadence of our race in the East?" asked a Western Indian of the chief who had been on a mission to Washington. "Yes," replied the doughty warrior. "We are fast disappearing. Figures of baseball men now stand in front of cigar stores—places that our ancestors have occupied for centuries. Alas, my brother, our name is Dennis.'

THE NAVY.

WHEN AND WHERE LAST HEARD FROM.

All mail must be addressed to the Galena, care of Navy Pay Office, 29 State St., N. Y.

RICHMOND, 2d rate, 14 guns (f. s. n. a. s.), Capt. Robt. Boyd. Arrived at Key West on Thursday, May 5.

YANTIC, 3d rate, 4 guns, Comdr. Francis M. Green. Arrived at Norfolk Navy-yard May 4.

S. Atlantic Station—A. R. Adml. D. L. Braine.

Mails should be addressed to care of U. S. Consul, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, unless otherwise noted, or care of B. F. Stevens, 4 Trafalgar Square, London.

LANCASTER, 2d rate, 10 guns, (f. s. a. s.) Capt. S. L. Breese. Reported by cable to have arrived at Montevideo, Uruguay, March 16. All well. Expects to reach Rio about June 1, 1887.

European Station—R.-Adml. Sam. R. Franklin.

Mails should be addressed to care B. F. Stevens, 4 Trafalgar Square, London, England, unless otherwise noted.

PENSACOLA, 2d rate, 16 guns (f. s. e. s.), Captain George Dewey. Arrived at Leghorn, Italy, April 7. Intends to go to Villefranche after receiving her stores.

QUINNEBAUG, 3d rate, 8 guns, Comdr. Geo. W. Coffin. Comdr. W. M. Folger was ordered to command. Was at Leghorn, Italy, April 9—to leave there about middle of May for Constantinople.

Pacific Station—Captain H. L. Howison (in temporary command).

ALERT, 3d rate, 4 guns, Comdr. J. D. Graham, Arrived at San Jose de Guatemala March 29.

ADAMS, 3d rate, 6 guns, Comdr. Louis Kempff. Left Guaymas for Acapulco to take in stores.

The Adams has been ordered to the Sandwich Islands. Mail matter for the vessel should be sent to care U. S. Navy Pay Office, San Francisco, Cal.

JUNIATA, 3d rate, 8 guns, Comdr. G. T. Davis. Arrived at Coquimbo, Chile, March 18. To leave April 10 for the North. It is very probable that the Juniata will be ordered to the Asiatic Squadron.

IROQUOIS, 3d rate, 7 guns, Comdr. J. Crittenden Watson. At Talcahuano, Chili, March 31. Commander Richard P. Leary was ordered to command this vessel per steamer of April 1.

PINTA, 4th rate, screw, 2 guns, Lieut. Comdr. John S Newell. At Sitka, where she will winter. Mail matter will reach this vessel quickest by sending it direct to Sitka, Alaska.

THETIS, 4th rate, Lieutenant W. H. Emory, Jr. At Norfolk, Va., from which place she will finally leave for her station in Alaskan waters. Will sail from Norfolk on Saturday.

VANDALIA, 2d rate, 8 guns, (f. s. p. s.), Capt. Henry L. Howison. Arrived at Taboquilla, in Panama Bay, March 28. After a short stay intends to sail northward.

Asiatic Station—Rear-Adml. Ralph Chandler.

A correspondent, writing from Yokohama, Japan, April 4, says: The Brooklyn arrived at Yokohama from Nagasaki, completing a trip of nearly 20,000 miles since she left New York. To-day Rear Admiral Ralph Chandler arrived on board, accompanied by his secretary and flag lieutenant, and was received with appropriate honors by the officers and crew of this vessel. His broad pennant was hoisted at the mizzen, and the old Brooklyn became the flagship of the Asiatic station. The following officers are on the admiral's staff: Personal Staff—Chief of staff, Captain E. O. Mathews, U. S. N.; fleet secretary, Lieutenant C. H. West; flag lieutenant, Lieutenant T. B. M. Mason. General Staff—Fleet surgeon, Medical Inspector G. S. Beardsley; fleet paymaster, Pay Inspector J. E. Tolfree; fleet engineer, Chief Engineer S. L. P. Ayres; fleet marine officer, Captain D. P. Mannix, U. S. M. C. This vessel will remain here about six weeks in order to receive necessary repairs to hull and boilers, and then go on a cruise to Vladivostock, Hakodate and several of the northern ports of China. It seems very probable that the entire fleet will meet at Chefoo during the summer for extensive drills, both afloat and ashore.

MARION,† 3d rate, 8 guns, Commander Merrill Miller. At Yokohama April 5.

MONOCACY,† 3d rate, 6 guns, Comdr. Henry Glass. Left Canton, April 1, for Yokohama.

OMAHA,† 2d rate, 12 guns, Lieut. Commander Frank Courtis in temporary command. Comdr. F. V. McNair has been ordered to command. At Chemulpo, Corea, April 5.

PALOS,† 4th rate, 6 howitzers. At Nagasaki, Japan, April 5. Commander Nelson was detached and ordered home March 9, and Lieut. Comdr. J. E. Craig ordered to command.

Apprentice Training Squadron.

Commander Charles H. Davis senior officer.

Mail matter for the Jamestown, Saratoga, and Portsmouth, should be sent after March 24, to Newport, R. I.

On Special Service.

ATLANTA, 2d rate, 8 rifled cannon and 12 machine guns, Captain Francis M. Bunce. At New York Navy-yard.

BOSTON, Captain F. M. Ramsay. At New York, fitting out preparatory to trial trip. Her officers are now being detailed.

DOLPHIN, despatch boat, 7 guns. Comd. George F. F. Wilde. At New York.

OSSIPEE, 3d rate, 8 guns, Comdr. W. B. Hoff. At Norfolk, Va. Will be refitted for service.

RANGER, 3d rate, 4 guns, Comdr. F. A. Cook. Surveying on Coast of Lower California. At San Diego, Cal., Feb. 10. Mail address, San Diego, Cal.

ST. MARY'S, sails, 8 guns, Comdr. A S. Crowninshield. N. Y. School ship. Alongside of dock, foot of East 31st Street, New York City. She is being fitted for her annual Summer cruise. Will leave New York May 10, arrive at Glen Cove May 16, reach New London May 26, leave for Fayal, Azores, a few days later, arrive at that port June 10, reach Cadiz June 21, leave Gibraltar July 6, and reach Madeira July 13. From the latter port she will leave for New London about July 20, and arrive there about August 14.

Swatara—At Portsmouth, N. H. Is to have new boilers. It is not known at present when she will be ready for sea. The construction work will be completed about the middle of June. When ready she will be assigned to duty on the North Atlantic Station.

Enterprise and Nipsic—Undergoing repairs at New York. Will be ready in a few months, and in all probability be assigned to the North Atlantic Squadron.

Trenton—Undergoing repairs at Norfolk, Va. Expects to be ready for commission about May 25, and to sail May 26 with new crew for the Lancaster, and later will probably be assigned to the North Atlantic Station, Comdr. N. H. Farquhar.

Chicago—Will be finished at New York. The engines are practically completed, and but little construction work remains to be done. (Report of March 19.)

Boston—At New York. Capt. F. M. Ramsay has been ordered to command. Expects to go on a trial trip this month.

Ossipee—At Norfolk. Ready for commission about May 15.

Constellation—Cadet Practice Ship. Ready for sea in about a week.

VARIOUS NAVAL ITEMS.

THE BOARD of Inspection and Survey will inspect the ironclads at City Point, Va., on Monday, to ascertain what repairs they require.

THE Easter Island idol was removed from the Galena to the Smithsonian Institute on Wednesday. The Galena will leave for Hampton Roads on Monday.

SECRETARY WHITNEY has fixed upon May 24 as the date for the auction sale at the Norfolk Navy-yard of a large stock of naval supplies condemned by the Inventory Board.

THE Springfield Union wants to know why Secretary Whitney doesn't introduce the centreboard in the United States Navy. The English seem to be more afraid of the centreboard than of our big guns and torpedoes.

THE contract to furnish 100,000 pounds of tobacco for the use of the Navy during the next fiscal year has been awarded to Meyers Bros. and Co., of Richmond, at 22 90-100 cents per pound.

WE learn that the statement that the steering gear of the Chicago has been found utterly useless, and is to be replaced, is an exaggeration. It has been found necessary to alter the connection leading from the handwheel to steering engines by the addition of a small wire rope, but this change is of small consequence.

THE total tonnage of ships removed from the register of the United Kingdom during 1886 is given by Lloyd's Register at 325,560 tons. This is 62,893 tons less than the tonnage built in the United Kingdom during the same year. It is, however, remarkable that while the tonnage added was so much greater than that removed, the number of vessels lost was 618 more than the number added.

VICE-ADMIRAL Duperre, Maritime Prefect of the first Naval Arrondissement of France (La Manche) has submitted for the approval of the Minister of Marine a project of making another torpedo refuge or station at Calais. The Admiral proposes to utilize the tidal basin at that port, immediately contiguous to England, similar to the stations already established at the Lezardrieux River and at Tankarville in the Seine.

THE flagship Richmond, Capt. Robert Boyd, arrived at Fort de France, Martinique, French West Indies, on the morning of April 19, from St. Thomas, the Italian corvette Flavio Gioia entering the harbor at the same time. On the evening of April 21, the Richmond put to sea again bound for Curacoa, Dutch West Indies, where she arrived on April 24. After a short stay in port the flagship will continue on her cruise and proceed next to Aspinwall, from there to Key West, Fla., and Hampton Roads, Va., where the other ships of the fleet will meet the Commander-in-Chief, Rear Admiral S. B. Luce, United States Navy, whose flag flies on board the Richmond. It is expected that the Richmond will then proceed to New York in order to participate in the ceremonies on Decoration Day. The following-named Naval Cadets have been detached from the

THE recommendation for promotion by Examining Board in the case of Lieut. C. C. Todd, U. S. N., has been approved.

ORDERS have been issued for the construction of four 6-inch gun carriages at the Washington Navy-yard. Plans are being made for six others.

SECRETARY WHITNEY has approved the report of the Board of Survey on the Hartford and will order repairs at once; estimated cost $166,000. The Secretary proposes that the cost shall be kept within the 20 per cent. limit.

THE Dépêche of Brest publishes an interesting letter from the Mayor of Plozévet (Finistère) stating that three guns which belonged to the English frigate Amazon, which went down before Plozévet in 1797, during her fight with the French ship Les Droits de l'Homme, have just been dug out of a bed of sand 1 m. 60 c. deep. The guns are to be put at the foot of the record of the Les Droits de l'Homme, in commemoration not only of the valor shown by the English and French sailors during the battle, but also as a record of the humanity and Christian devotion shown by the English after the fight in trying to save the sinking Droits de l'Homme, for which all the English prisoners on board the Amazon were liberated and sent back to England.

A TORPEDO boat for the Imperial Chinese Navy, by Messrs. Yarrow and Co., had her official trial on March 31, and attained the remarkable speed of nearly 24 knots per hour, as a mean of six runs over the measured mile in the Lower Hope, three with and three against the tide. The speed was 23.882 knots, and a subsequent run of two hours' duration gave a mean speed of 22.94 knots, with the engines running easy. She had on board her torpedo armament complete and ballast to represent four torpedoes; also a fair quantity of coal and twenty-four persons. This boat is 128 feet long, constructed on Messrs. Yarrow and Co.'s rapid steering principle, which enabled her afterwards to make circles to both sides having diameters of about 230 feet.

NAVY GAZETTE.

Acting Gunner John Westfall from the Washington Navy-yard and ordered to the Boston.

MAY 4.—Commander Charles L. Huntington from the Naval Academy, May 14, and ordered to command the Constellation.

Lieutenants Eugene H. C. Leutze, Jesse M. Roper, and Richard Mitchell. Ensigns Harry McL. P. Huse, James H. Glennon, Stokely Morgan, and John B. Blish, P. A. Surgeon Manly H. Simons and Chaplain Edwin K. Rawson from the Naval Academy, May 14, and ordered to the Practice Ship Constellation.

P. A. Surgeon Oliver Diehl from the Naval Hospital, New York, and ordered to the Naval Hospital, Philadelphia.

MARINE CORPS.

APRIL 30.—Captain R. W. Huntington ordered to proceed to Norfolk, Va., and report May 10 next for duty as the officer detailed to command the Marine Guard of the U. S. S. Trenton, and of the U. S. Lancaster when transferred.

2d Lieutenant H. K. White detached from the Marine Barracks, Boston, Mass., and ordered to proceed to Brooklyn, N. Y., and report to the Commandant of the Navy-yard there for the purpose of conducting a detachment of marines by steamer to Norfolk, Va., for the guard of the U. S. S. Trenton. Having arrived there he will report for duty with that guard and that of the U. S. S. Lancaster when transferred.

LIFE BOATS.

NAVY DEPARTMENT, April 28, 1887.

SIR: The Board appointed by the Department's order of Jan. 24, 1887, to consider the question of life boats for the naval service, has examined all life boats, specifications, plans and models of life boats, life rafts, life buoys, boat detaching and boat lowering apparatus submitted to it, and has the honor to report that the specifications for wooden life boat, specifications for galvanized iron surf boat for Florida coast, specifications for a surf boat, specifications of Nathaniel Hamblin, Jr.'s, life boats, specifications of J. R. Hodgson, contractor of life boats, etc., letter of J. H. Raymond in regard to metallic life boat, plans of the Timmins-Hodgson reversable life boat, plans of Chas. Koetzner's life boat, plans of Copeman's patent seat raft, letter and plans of Calkins's metallic life raft, plans of Cressy's life saving raft, plan of Columbia life raft, models of Ingersoll's life boat, model of Dickenson's life boat, model of W. G. Hitching's life boat, model of the Eclipse (C. J. Leach) life boat, model of Ingersoll's life raft, model and plans of Rust's reel life buoy, model and specifications of Brun's boat detaching apparatus, and model and plans of Barry's combined davits and chocks for carrying and lowering ships' boats exhibit qualities which are valuable as means of saving life, but which are not adaptable for use in the naval service.

The Berthon portable life boat as described in paper No. 1078 of the Naval Intelligence, exhibited by Mr. S. A. Read of New York, cannot be classed as "life boats," but such boats would be a valuable addition to the naval service, and would assist in saving the crews of vessels of war in case of disaster. The boats are buoyant, light, durable, easily handled, easily repaired, can be carried in comparatively small spaces, and are rapidly and easily made ready for service.

The Norton life boats, exhibited by the inventor, Capt. F. L. Norton, of Philadelphia, possess valuable qualities as life boats, but are not adapted for use in the naval service.

We are, sir, very respectfully, etc.,
F. M. RAMSAY, Captain, U. S. N.
T. H. FARQUHAR, Captain, U. S. N.
PHILIP HICHBORN, Naval Constructor, U. S. N.

NAVAL ACADEMY.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., May 4, 1887.

ON Saturday morning last, the Wyoming with the cadets on board again went down the bay on a gunnery cruise. Rear Admiral Ammen was on board, and watched the cadets at their drill. The wind was strong, but the target practice was very creditable.

On Saturday afternoon the cadets' base ball team appeared on their new grounds for the first time this season. The team has not had any recent practice together, owing to some internal troubles, and they showed this in the first few innings. The members comprising this year's team are Anderson and Hubbard, of '88, as the battery; Snow, Allen and Bryan, of '87, on the bases; Long, '89, at short; Robison, '88, in left; Churchill and Stone, of '87, in centre and right. Their opponents on Saturday were clerks in the Patent Office at Washington. Among these was Barr, the noted pitcher of last year's Nationals, who holds a Government position in this department. Barr is a great favorite with the cadets, and comes down with some team every year.

The game was uninteresting after the first innings, as the cadets pounded the ball all over the field. It is needless to say that Barr did not pitch or the score would have been different. Bryan, last year's pitcher, was put in the box for three innings, but withdrew to let Anderson become accustomed to the new grounds.

The Patent Office team was tired out after the seventh inning and the game closed. Score 39 to 7.

The game was marked by terrific hitting, and by several brilliant plays. Robison and Snow batted hard, and the fielding of Churchill and Anderson was excellent. A large crowd witnessed the game; many of these were citizens of Annapolis, but nearly all the officers, their families and visiting friends were present. Games will be played on every Saturday afternoon and probably on Wednesdays. The next game will be with a club from the Maryland Agricultural College. Practice games will be played with the officers from time to time.

The officers gave a pleasant hop on Saturday evening. A large number of visitors attended. Among these were Miss Washburne, of New York, the guest of Lieut. and Mrs. Wise; Miss Woods, of Baltimore, the guest of Lieut. and Mrs. Miles; Miss Cornelius, of Connecticut, the guest of Ensign and Mrs. Haeseler; the Misses Theobold, visiting Ensign and Mrs. Fullam; the Misses Clayton, of West River, Md., and Miss Fowle, of Alexandria, Va.

The battalion drills have commenced with two weeks of infantry. On Tuesday the first dress parade was given and was very creditable, taking this into consideration. These parades will be held on Tuesdays and Fridays during the month.

The 1st class will have drill on Wednesday afternoons during the month, one division at a time. They will be given further instruction in the firing of torpedoes. It will be remembered that it was at one of these drills that a launch was blown up, by the unexpected breaking of the torpedo-spar and the explosion of the torpedo.

The detail for the summer practice cruise, referred to some weeks ago, has been published, as has also the detail for duty in the Yard during the summer months.

The many friends of Dr. Biddle regret his departure from the Yard.

Miss Woods, of Baltimore, spent Saturday and Sunday with Lieut. and Mrs. Miles and returned to her home on Monday.

Lieut. Miles will take the office of Secretary to the Naval Institute.

Cadet Leonard, of the 4th Class, has returned from sick leave.

"DO YOU know, my friend," said a very solemn political individual, "that when you silently drop that snow-white ballot from your fingers, it floats down in rhythmic grace and settles the destinies of a nation?" "No, sir, I don't," replied the impecunious voter; "but I know when I drop it into the box it settles my bargain with the boss o' this 'ere ward."—Hartford Post.

REVENUE MARINE.

2d Asst. Engr. E. A. Jack, from Hamilton and granted leave. Chief Engr. Eugene Vallat, from waiting orders to Fessenden. Chief Engr. J. E. Jefferis, to the Perry. 2d Asst. Engr. C. F. Nash, to Bibb. 2d Asst. Engr. D. T. Cross, from Crawford to Johnson. 2d Asst. Engr. Paul Barnes, from Rush to Bear. 2d Lieut. Jas. B. Butt, from Forward to Hamilton. 1st Lieut. A. D. Littlefield, from Chase to special duty at Wood's Holl, Mass. Capt. J. A. Henriques, from special duty to Perry.

An examination of candidates for appointment as cadets of the Revenue Marine Service will be held at the Treasury Department May 10. The Board will consist of Capt. G. W. Moore, president; Capts. T. W. Lay and J. C. Mitchell, members.

INFORMERS' SHARES AWARDED REVENUE MARINE OFFICERS.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 29, 1887.

2d Lieut. Geo. A. Yorke, United States Revenue Marine, New Bedford, Mass.:

SIR: The Department is in receipt of your letter of the 23d instant, in which you ask a decision in the matter of the title to an informer's share accruing under sections 4443 and 4500, Revised Statutes, upon a fine incurred by the steamer "Ivanhoe." This fine was imposed on the information of Capt. J. G. Baker, of the revenue steamer "Johnson," and was by the terms of the law $500, which penalty, on the 21st of September last, was mitigated to $50. Under the terms of section 4500, Revised Statutes, one-half of the proceeds of this fine, to wit, $25, is vested in the informer.

In this class of cases, arising from infractions of Title 52, Revised Statutes, when fines are voluntarily paid, the Department can recognize as informer only such persons as shall be certified as such by a collector of customs or his deputy. It cannot undertake to decide that a boarding officer is the informer, unless he be specified as such to the collector by the master of the revenue cutter under whose authority such boarding officer acts. Nor can the Department lay down the rule for the distribution of the proceeds of these fines, which is embraced in section 3090, Revised Statutes, by which the distributive share of these proceeds is divided among the officers of a revenue cutter in proportion to their pay. That rule was abolished by the act of June 22, 1874, repealing moieties; and even if it were in force, it cannot apply to informers' shares accruing under Title 52, Revised Statutes. The law vests those shares absolutely in informers, and the Department cannot divide or allot them without the assent of the persons recognized as informers.

In the case of the "Ivanhoe" it must stand by the record and recognize Captain Baker as informer.

Respectfully yours,
C. S. FAIRCHILD, Acting Secretary.

CAPTAIN SELFRIDGE.

"Much has been published regarding the circumstances connected with the target practice from United States steamship Omaha on the coast of Japan, which was attended with a fatal accident to some natives. The ship was in command of Captain Thomas O. Selfridge, one of the gallantest, most experienced and intelligent officers in the Service. Captain Selfridge is a son of a very distinguished officer of the Navy, and is well known here, having, at one time, been a resident of Brookline. His reputation as a gentleman of rare culture and refinement, and his record as a brilliant, sagacious and successful officer are proudly cherished by a large circle of influential friends throughout New England. During the war his record was conspicuous for bravery and ability, and since then he has illustrated the highest and best type of noble and true manhood in our Navy. The present creditable position of the Torpedo Station at Newport is chiefly due to the untiring zeal and study there during the long time he was commandant. His wife, the daughter of the late Judge Shepley, of Maine, is very highly esteemed by our best families. She is at Newport, about to occupy a beautiful villa there which has been erected for them, while the Captain has been serving in command of the Omaha. Captain Selfridge's friends are watching developments in this case with intense interest, confident that, when fair opportunity is offered, he will be wholly and completely vindicated."

THE MAXIM GUN.

THE Horse Guards Gazette says: "If the Maxim gun is ever adopted in warfare, and we see no reason why it should not be, it must cause a complete revolution. The great principle of the gun is the utilization of the recoil, by the use of which the weapon becomes a self-feeding and self-firing gun. The end of a canvas belt holding 333 cartridges (each about a quarter of an inch apart) having been inserted by hand into the breech from a box immediately below, the gun is started by pressing a button in front of the gunner or holding down a brass trigger immediately below the button. One shot having been fired, the recoil force cocks the hammer, draws the next cartridge into the barrel, locks the breech, pulls the trigger, and ejects the bullet out of the muzzle and the empty cartridge case out of an orifice below the breech; and the gun goes on disposing of cartridge after cartridge in like manner as long as the gunner pleases to supply it with ammunition. With the rifle calibre gun, the gunner at his pleasure can fire one shot or any number of shots up to 666 per minute (two belts of 333 cartridges being joined together in the latter case). Although when fired at the rate of 666 per minute, the bullets appear to leave the gun in a ceaseless stream, as a matter of fact each bullet departs for its billet with 150 feet start of its successor. Another interesting fact is that if the bullets were fired aloft at an angle of 45 degrees there would be 400 in the air before the first struck the ground. So perfectly is the gun under control, that Mr. Maxim can write his name with bullets upon a plank in the dark.

ONE of the female clerks in the Navy Department has a queer case to settle with the Government. Intending to get married, she applied for a thirty days leave of absence, which the law allows to all departmental employees. She was married before her leave expired, and in coming for her pay at the end of the month, the question was raised as to whether she could sign a voucher in her maiden name, after having changed it legally. The Department officials were of the opinion that the marriage ceremony had made it impossible for the clerk concerned to receive her money under her old name, and there is no record of her employment by any other.

TO ARMY OFFICERS.

The undersigned having represented the Penn Mutual Life Ins. Co., of Philadelphia, as its General Agent for Northern Ohio, during the past year, with the experience thus gained feels himself to be competent to give Army Officers advice on many matters pertaining to Life Insurance, which may be to their advantage. To this end, therefore, he gratuitously offers his services to the Army, and respectfully invites correspondence from such as desire information on this subject.

While the Company he represents has no superior in the country for security or for liberality in its policies to officers in the Military Service, yet he will be pleased to advise and assist officers who may prefer to place their insurance in other reputable companies. Information as to the standing of the various companies and their relative profitableness for investment he will gladly communicate to those who desire it; also advice as to kind of policy best suited and most profitable to those of different ages.

By this announcement the undersigned hopes that he may serve the interests of his brother officers, enabling them to place their insurance in the most substantial and profitable companies, in a form of policy most advantageous to themselves.

PROPOSALS FOR PURCHASE OF VESSELS.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, April 25, 1887.

IN accordance with the provisions of the fifth section of an act of Congress, approved March 3, 1883 (Statutes at Large, vol. 22, p. 599), sealed proposals will be received at the Navy Department until noon on Saturday, July 30, 1887, at which time and place they will be opened for the purchase of the following-named vessels, which have been stricken from the Navy Register, viz:

Tennessee, appraised at $35,000, Powhatan at $17,000, and Ticonderoga at $15,000, at the Navy Yard, Brooklyn, New York; Shenandoah at $12,000, Lackawanna at $12,000, Wachusett at $10,000, and Cyane at $3,000, at the Navy Yard, Mare Island, California.

The vessels will be sold, for cash, to the person or persons, or corporation or corporations offering the highest prices therefor above the appraised value thereof. Each bid or proposal must be accompanied by a deposit of cash (or satisfactory certified check, payable to the order of the Secretary of the Navy) of not less than 20 per cent. of the amount of the offer or proposal, and also a bond with a penal sum equal to one-half the amount of the offer, with two or more sureties, whose ability is certified to by a U. S. Judge, District Attorney, Postmaster, or Collector of Internal Revenue, in the district in which the sureties reside, conditioned for the payment of the remaining 80 per cent. of the amount of such offer or proposal within thirty days from the date of its acceptance. In case default is made in the payment of the remaining 80 per cent., or any part thereof, within that time, said cash deposit of 20 per cent. shall be considered as forfeited to the Government, and shall be applied as directed in the act of March 3, 1883. A bond need not be furnished, provided the cash deposit or certified check accompanying the proposal covers the whole amount of the proposal. All deposits and bonds of bidders, whose proposals shall not be accepted, will be returned to them within seven days after the opening of the proposals.

Proposals must be submitted in a sealed envelope, addressed to the Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D. C. and endorsed "Proposals for the purchase of vessels," so as to distinguish them from other communications. No offer for more than one vessel must be included within one proposal. In the case of tie bids, the award will be made by the Secretary of the Navy by lot.

On application to the Department, a printed list will be furnished giving general information concerning the vessels; also forms of bids and bonds which must be used by bidders. The vessels can be examined at any time by applying to the Commandant of the Navy Yard where they are.

The purchasers must remove the vessels purchased from the limits of the Yard within such reasonable time as may be fixed by the Department.

WILLIAM C. WHITNEY,
Secretary of the Navy.

THE TEDIUM OF TARGET PRACTICE.

WHERE there is indifference or stagnation there is death; hence we regard the active interest taken in the subject of rifle practice in the Army as a healthy sign. How active this interest is is shown by the discussion which goes on continually. True, the argument is not all one way, but this again is an encouraging sign, for where there is no conflict or contention there is no life. It is the meeting of contending currents that produce the cyclone, one of the strongest forces in nature, and the principle of which it is now proposed to introduce into mechanics. Still, we hope the contention on the subject of rifle practice is not to expand to the fury of the cyclone, and it certainly has been wholly good-natured thus far. The suggestion of unfairness in dealing with scores is, it is true, a serious charge; one that impeaches the honor of officers, and which ought not to be brought without definite knowledge on the subject and equally definite specifications as to the facts. The officers who are most active in rifle practice, and whose men are credited with the best record, are some of the most zealous and capable in the Service. The complaints that target practice interferes with other instruction of troops is one that we are not disposed to treat with much consideration. It may interfere with the instruction which officers who complain think might be given, but does it interfere with that which would actually be given in the absence of rifle practice or which was given before this most important branch of military training had established itself in the chief place? Each officer's whole time is or should be at the disposal of the Government; is there any officer who can honestly say that the time he individually gives to rifle practice leaves him too little space for the proper instruction of his men in the other necessary branches of the art military? As a matter of fact, do the troops who are best instructed in the use of the weapon they carry fall behind others in drill or discipline? On this point General TERRY says most pertinently in his last annual report: "I would not be understood as undervaluing the utility of other training. The very perfection of the new arm and the effectiveness of its fire demand increased mobility and the most thorough training in the movements prescribed by the tactics. I do contend for the paramount importance of this part of the soldier's instruction. Fortunately, there is no conflict between the two. Our target season covers but four months of the year. With the preliminary theoretical instruction it occupies but five or six months, and even in these five or six months there is some time that may be devoted to other instruction. And if recruits at the beginning of their service are thoroughly set up and taught the elementary drill—and for the failure to so teach them there is absolutely no excuse—the remaining six months of the year give ample time and opportunity for teaching them all that a soldier should know."

General GIBBON says: "I do not agree with the views set forth in the report of the Inspector of Rifle Practice regarding the presence of officers as competitors. The efficient use of the rifle is of the highest importance to the soldier, and one of the best methods to instruct the soldier is for his officer to show him that with care and attention he can beat him shooting. No danger to discipline lurks in the fact that the soldier can make himself a superior marksman to his officer."

"Unfortunately," General TERRY further says, "there are still some few officers who do not appreciate the transcendent importance of this instruction, and who permit themselves to discourage the efforts of those who do appreciate it by the expressions of opinion adverse to its absolute or comparative utility. These officers fail to understand that during the last twenty years a revolution has taken place in the art of war, second in time but not second in importance to that produced by the invention of gunpowder—a revolution which is, in some sense, a counter-revolution to that which followed the introduction of firearms. . . . The invention, however, of the breechloading rifle—the unexpected development of its powers—and the still less expected demonstration of a fact that experience has already taught us, the fact that all men, with but very few exceptions, if properly and systematically instructed, will become effective shots, has effected a counter-revolution, and once again the most important factor in computing the strength of an army must be the individual skill of the men who compose it. This counter-revolution seems to have been recognized by all nations. Its recognition is shown by the strenuous efforts made everywhere to train soldiers in the use of their arms, and by the efforts made by every nation to increase the ranges, the accuracy and the rapidity of its military weapons. In the present condition of the art of war it is an undeniable fact that untrained men are an encumbrance rather than a power on the battlefield." . . .

We commend these wise utterances to the attention of officers who are disposed to complain of the exactions of target service, reminding them that while they should not fail in these things neither should they leave the other undone.

GARRISON COURTS-MARTIAL.

MAJOR GUY HENRY, U. S. A., in charge of the Judge-Advocate's office, Department Platte, has prepared a table showing the number of cases tried by general and garrison courts at the posts in that Department from Oct. 1, 1886, to March 31, 1887. The number is large, which occasions General CROOK in making public the table to say: "The number of trials in a command cannot always be taken as an accurate indication of its state of discipline, but it is found that discipline is usually best in commands where trials are fewest. Post and company commanders are cautioned to use with care and judgment the discretion placed in their hands in the matter of confining and bringing to trial the men under them. "A good soldier," says General CROOK, "is sometimes spoiled by the contamination of the guard house, and special care should be exercised in confining men but a short time in the service. A frequent and indiscriminate use of confinements and trials by Courts-martial will not only bring this means to discipline into contempt, but will remove the odium which a self-respecting soldier should attach to such punishment, and true discipline will suffer accordingly." These are wise words and accord with our own ideas. We have discussed the subject often and are still forced to the conclusion that the garrison Court-martial system is overdone and that it is often used as a disciplinary measure merely to save the trouble of personal examination and personal effort to get at the root of evils and by a firm, judicious, and vigilant action lessen petty crime. The system needs overhauling. Of General CROOK'S order a post commander writes: "The order is a move in the right direction. There are too many trials of soldiers. At half the posts in the Army confinement of men is so common that no moral degradation is attached to it. A few such orders as this last one from the Department of the Platte would wake post and company commanders to a realization of their duty and responsibility in the matter of confining and trying men."

General CROOK'S statistics show that there were 880 cases tried in the Department of the Platte for the six months from Oct. 1, 1886, to March 31, 1887, the average enlisted strengths of the commands being 3,154. This shows an average of 27.90 per cent. of cases tried to the strength of the command distributed as follows: Fort Robinson, 52.07; D. A. Russell, 43.08; Douglas, 31.53; Omaha, 27.87; Niobrara, 23.83; Laramie, 22.87; Bridger, 21.62; McKinney, 20.65; Pilot Butte, 20.21; Medicine Butte (4 months only), 18.60; Washakie, 17.65; Du Chesne, 17.61; Sidney, 17.20.

We can see no reason why posts should vary so much, one having 52 per cent. and another 17 per cent. in the number of trials. This, as Gen. CROOK says, cannot be attributed to surroundings, and it is found that discipline is best referring to his own Department) where trials are fewest. The Omaha Herald in discussing the circular in question says: "The whole trouble, however, grows out of the fact that the regulations authorizing courts-martial, as well as the code of discipline, are a conglomeration, upon which every officer puts his own interpretation, to a great degree, and either disciplines his men himself, or persistently invokes the aid of courts-martial. And when it comes to trials by courts, the courts are given too great a discretion in the imposition of punishment. One court will make the punishment for an offence inordinately severe, while another court, for a similar breach of discipline, will pass a sentence scarcely worth the secrecy that formulates it. The uncertain administration of the law by courts and by officers begets an uncertainty conducive to the promotion of refractory conduct among the enlisted men, of which complaint is made, and which the figures demonstrate. A clause in the military code, defining individual authority and fitting the punishment to the crime, when the court-martial is invoked to discipline, would be highly conducive to the good order and military discipline of the Army."

IF the recent order from the Ordnance Bureau of the Navy Department is to be taken in its obvious sense, it would appear that "two more 10-inch breech-loading steel guns" are to be assembled without delay at the Ordnance Factory, situated at Washington, D. C. It is easy to issue the order, and we hope that its execution will be found within the present resources of the Government. But the time for the completion of the guns, as well as their cost, is still an indefinite quantity. In all of this so-called new gun construction, we see no hint of a change of type, of practice, or of ideas, and as a natural sequence no improvement in result can be looked for from 10-inch guns designed and constructed on the same lines as the 6-inch and 8-inch pieces, whose behavior under the conditions of actual practice on ship board has yet to be demonstrated. In these days of rapidly advancing science in its physical applications, it will not do for an important branch of the public service to carry out its ideas as though the time for discussion had passed, and absolute results could be predicated upon purely theoretical hypotheses. The important question for our naval ordnance officers is not so much the employment of English material as the assemblage of this material strictly on the lines and proportions of the guns they copy, so that it becomes in the highest degree hazardous to assume a superiority for American guns in the present stage of gun construction.

THE non-commissioned staff of the Army are, we understand, to make a concerted effort to induce Congress at its next session to increase their pay, so that it may correspond to some extent at least with their responsibilities and duties. The movement has our heartiest sympathy and our voice at all times.

MR. MONCURE D. CONWAY, M. A., will read a paper, entitled "The General and the Journalist in Time of War," before the Military Service Institution, at Governor's Island, N. Y. H., on Monday, May 9, 1887, at 8 P. M. The lecture will be followed by discussion.

WE learn from the annual report for 1886 of the Ladies' Union Mission School Association, that the organization is in a flourishing condition, and that its good work in the Army and Navy continues. The report quotes many letters from chaplains and others at military posts and on vessels interested in Christian work. During 1886 an organ was sent to each of the following posts: McDermot, Bridger, Grant, Whipple, Maginnis, Fort Poplar River and Leavenworth, and to several of our men-of-war. Bibles, prayer books and hymnals have also been liberally distributed by the Christian ladies of the association. For Sabbath school libraries and other literature, also for books for post libraries, application should be made to Miss D. M. Douw, 125 State street, Albany, N. Y., President of the Society; for bibles and testaments and articles for industrial schools at Military Posts, to Mrs. Frederick Townsend, 3 Elk Street, Albany, corresponding secretary, and for organs to Mrs. A. J. Alexander, Willowbrook, Auburn, P. O., New York. The latter lady is the widow of General A. J. Alexander, U. S. Army, and sister-in-law of the late General Upton.

CAPTAIN E. S. GODFREY, 7th Cavalry, and Captain J. A. Augur, 5th Cavalry, have rendered valuable service to the mounted troops by preparing in pamphlet form "A System of Exercises and Gymnastics for Use in the School of the Soldier Mounted." The authors express the belief, and with them we heartily coincide, that the system, thoroughly and properly taught, together with the aids prescribed for the Riding Hall (see Cavalry Tactics), will bring forth better results, and make better horsemen and cavalry soldiers. It is one well calculated to beget confidence, an essential and important element, and to give ease, grace and the proper balance, all aids in producing a class of men fit for our mounted service. To the manual is appended a "Method of teaching a horse to lie down" (with notes), by Lieutenant-Colonel A. K. Arnold, 1st U. S. Cavalry. To Colonel Arnold's skill in this direction we have heretofore adverted. His methods are simple and his exposition of them well worth careful study and attention.

"ONE who would have to hoof it," suggests that if the 8th Infantry is so unfortunate as to make its third change of station inside of one year, as talked of in the newspapers, he for one proposes that the whole regiment march from the stations in Nebraska to Salt Lake. To give the full benefit of such a trip, he says: "Every officer not entitled to be mounted should be made to march with his company, unless excused by competent medical authority. The trip would have the advantage of economy, and would break down and weed out the poor material in the ranks."

A CORRESPONDENT calls attention to what he considers to be errors in our published list of retirements in the Army. The date of Captain Edward Hunter, 1st Cavalry, is, he says, 1904, and not 1903; Captain John C. Thompson, 3d Cavalry, and Captain Wm. A. Thompson, 4th Cavalry, are brothers, and the dates of their retirements are only seven months apart. Our authority for the dates we gave is the report made by the officers themselves to the War Department, and the dates should be corrected there if any error has been made.

IT seems impossible, says a correspondent of the Boston Advertiser, "to maintain the German Army much longer in the state in which it is now. Neither the finances of the State, the progress of parliamentary rule nor the democratic idea will permit it. The officers who have contributed to make the Prussian Army what it has been the past twenty-five years are growing very old, and must soon disappear from the scene of action. Who will take their places? This is certainly a serious question, for it involves, in a large measure, the future of that army, and consequently the fortunes of Germany itself." We do not ourselves take quite so gloomy a view of the situation.

THE cyclorama painting of the Battle of Gettysburg, the fourth one made by Paul Philippoteaux, will be on exhibition at City Hall Square, Brooklyn, N. Y., for only a short time longer. The painting covers 20,000 square feet of canvas and, it is stated, cost $400,000 to properly place it. It is a wonderful work of art, worth visiting and revisiting, and will vividly recall to all veterans their experiences of war.

THE Omaha Herald, referring to the recent disturbances among the Kiowa Indians, says: "The Kiowas have, or seem to have, grown fat and saucy under Government protection. The moral of the whole story, is, that Indian Territory should be a part of the United States, and not an independent or dependent territory where Indians can be fed to the degree of being bellicose, without any responsibility for individual obstreperousness."

THE surviving members of the "Old Sixth Corps" of the Army of the Potomac will dedicate a tablet to their old commander, Gen. John Sedgwick, at Spottsylvania, Va., May 12. The members and their friends will leave New York May 10, and a special train leaving Philadelphia the next afternoon will convey them to their destination.

SECRETARY ENDICOTT, Senator Hoar and Architect Clark, the committee to select a design for the proposed Lafayette statue, held a meeting Friday and examined the several designs submitted nearly a year ago. They have not yet announced their decision, but it is very probable that the model submitted by Bartholdi will be the choice.

IN a letter dated April 25, Colonel Austin C. Wellington, 1st Regt., Mass. V. M., requests of the Adjutant-General of Massachusetts, permission to have the six days' encampment of his regiment the present year at Fort Independence, Boston Harbor. The purpose is to train the militia in heavy artillery practice in anticipation of the possibility that they may be required to garrison the forts.

1ST LIEUTENANT THOMAS C. DAVENPORT, 4th U. S. Art., died at St. Elizabeth's insane asylum, Friday morning, May 6.

THE Departments will close next Thursday for unveiling of the Garfield statue.

GENERAL SHERMAN V. LORD WOLSELEY.

THE North American Review for May contains Gen. Sherman's paper on Grant, Thomas, and Lee and is called out by Lord Wolseley's recent adulatory paper on Lee in Macmillan's Magazine. He closes with a suggestion that "when the time comes to award monuments for service in the Civil War the American people will be fully prepared to select the subjects without hint or advice from abroad."

Of Lee, Gen. Sherman says: "His sphere of action was local. He never rose to the grand problem which involved a continent and future generations. His Virginia was to him the world. He stood at the front porch battling with the flames while the kitchen and house were burning, sure in the end to consume the whole. Only twice, at Antietam and Gettysburg, did he venture outside on the 'offensive defensive.' In the first instance he knew personally his antagonist, and that a large fraction of his force would be held in reserve; in the last he assumed the bold 'offensive,' was badly beaten by Meade, and forced to retreat back to Virginia. As an aggressive soldier Lee was not a success, and in war that is the true and proper test. 'Nothing succeeds like success.' In defending Virginia and Richmond he did all a man could, but to him Virginia seemed the 'Confederacy,' and he staved there while the Northern armies at the West were gaining the Mississippi, the Tennessee, the Cumberland, Georgia, South and North Carolina, yea, the Roanoke, after which his military acumen taught him that further tarrying in Richmond was absolute suicide. * * *

"Many of us believe that, had Lee stood firm in 1861, and used his personal influence, he could have stayed the Civil War, and thereby saved the lives of hundreds of thousands of the fairest youth of the land, and thousands of millions of dollars in cost and destruction."

Of Grant, General Sherman says: "At Chattanooga he attacked his enemy in the strongest position possible; so strong indeed, that Bragg, a most thorough and intelligent soldier, regarded it as unassailable, and had detached Longstreet's corps to Knoxville, of which mistake Grant took prompt advantage, and I never heard before that Bragg thought the pursuit after his defeat was not quick and good enough to suit him; and, finally, when Lee was forced to flee from his intrenchments at Richmond and Petersburg by Sheridan's bold and skillful action at Five Forks, I believe it is conceded that the pursuit by Sheridan and Grant was so rapid that Lee was compelled to surrender his whole army."

Another native Virginian, General George H. Thomas, is referred to as resembling Lee in his personal characteristics. "In personal appearance he resembled George Washington, the father of our country, and in all the attributes of manhood he was the peer of General Lee, as good, if not a better, soldier, of equal intelligence, the same kind heart, beloved to idolatry by his Army of the Cumberland, exercising a gentle, but strict, discipline, never disturbed by false rumors or real danger, not naturally aggressive, but magnificent on the defensive; almost the very counterpart of his friend, General Lee, but far excelling him in the moral and patriotic line of action at the beginning of the war. Lee resigned his commission when civil war was certain, but Thomas remained true to his oath and his duty, always, to the very last minute of his life."

THE English papers tell a story of "a well-known American lady"—who was told that the proper way of addressing royal personages was by the monosyllable which is the proper style of baronets and knights—paying much court to H. R. H. Prince George of Wales, amused him and all who heard her by constantly saying, "Yes, 'Sir' George!" "No, 'Sir' George!" "Don't you think so, 'Sir' George?" etc.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARTILLERY.

DATE of retirement under the 64 year act, and promotions consequent thereupon, of field officers and Captains of Artillery, arranged according to lineal rank. The numbers preceding the names show the order of retirement. The highest promotion is given first, the rank last named being that held at present.

5. Ayres, R. B., retires Dec. 20, 1889.
1. Hamilton, J., retires, Aug. 10, 1887.
2. Best, C. L., retires April 25, 1888.
6. Gibson, H. G., ret. May 22, 1891,
3. Tidball, J. C., ret. Jan. 25, 1889.
8. Piper, A., Col. 5th, Aug. 10, 1887; Lt.-Col., 1st Regt., ret. May 11, 1892.

THE THIRD ARMY CORPS UNION.

THE Third Army Corps Union held its twenty-fourth meeting in the Windsor Hotel, New York, May 5, with Col. Clark, of New Jersey, presiding. Gen. Sickles proposed and Col. McMichael seconded a motion that a committee be appointed to take steps looking to a reunion of the Army of the Potomac and the Army of the Union, of Virginia, at Gettysburg, on July 1, 2, and 3, 1888. This resolution was adopted. Gen. Sickles also made another proposition, which was unanimously carried, viz.: The admission of privates and non-commissioned officers to the Union. Gen. Sickles stated "that some of the privates and non-commissioned officers had become men of standing now."

The election resulted as follows: Major A. Judson Clark, of New Jersey, president; Gen. C. H. T. Collis, of Pennsylvania, vice-president; Major E. L. Welling, of New Jersey, secretary; and Directors—Gen. Wm. J. Sewell, Gen. Geo. H. Sharpe, Col. Clayton McMichael, Gen. J. B. Carr, Major T. B. Fausitt, Col. T. F. Tobias, Major W. Plimley, Capt. John G. Noonan, and Capt. C. W. Wilson. A banquet was held at the Windsor in the evening.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME HAMILTON.

FOR the following account of the origin of the name of Alexander Hamilton, taken from "Wide Awake," we are indebted to a correspondent, "S.:"

"Finding the story not long since in an old volume of antiquities printed about the year 1670, and believing it to be of interest give it briefly: Many hundred years ago there was, in a certain rural part of England, a small river which, for quite a distance along its course, was bordered by a thick growth of hawthorn bushes or trees, which gave to that portion of the stream and its immediate surroundings, the local title of 'The Hawthorns.' This name, by a custom of abbreviation by no means obsolete to-day, became, from much use, at length worn down into 'The Haws.' As the years passed the country side thickened its population, and some adventurous soul, noting the fact, and the unused power of the rushing stream in the midst, braved the conservatism of the times and erected a small grist-mill among the hawthorn trees, where all day long the dripping wheel turned with busy clang and the farmers brought their grain to be ground, and the mill, naturally enough, came in due time to be known as the 'The Haw's Mill.' And when, after a half century, the little settlement of clustering cottages that had gathered, one by one, about the mill grew at last into sufficient importance to win and wear a name, the hamlet was called 'Hawsmilltown.' So came the earlier title, and when John or Tom of Haw'smilltown, cut loose from home moorings and drifted out into the wide world he became, to distinguish him from the scores of other Toms and Johns all about, 'Thomas or John, of Haw'smilltown,' and the generation that came after dropped the 'of' and called the man 'Tom Haw'smilltown,' until by short and easy stages that at last changed into 'Tom Hamilton.' So says the ancient volume; and if the tale be true, the noble name of to-day may well be proud of its birth away back among the red berries of the hawthorn trees by the side of the rushing stream in Merrie Old England, five centuries ago."

A LESSON IN TARGET PRACTICE.

"Oh dear," sighed she, "how nice 'twould be
To win a marksman's button,
There's nothing hard that I can see
For all the airs you put on."

"The only thing that's hard," said he,
"Is to know when one's quite ready,
Be sure the sight is fixed all right,
Then hold one's rifle steady.

"Now when a man first tries to shoot
He gets some friend to steady him,
For often the rifle will kick a trifle,
Which would fluster a raw recruit."

"Why," she exclaimed, "what a very odd thing,
That a gun should be up to such tricks;
But I'll take your advice, for 'twould be very nice
For a friend to receive all the kicks."

"I wish I could say there was some other way
In which you might first learn to shoot;
But the advice of a friend is to closely attend
And practise just like the recruit.

"You can easily believe," as a dark blue sleeve
Slipped slyly around her waist,
"This will hold you steady; now if you're ready Take aim; you'll miss if you fire in haste."

Further than this they never got.
Such is fate, and the facts I relate,
As a truthful chronicler should:
He asked her, "Would"—she said she "Could."

What he meant, to which she gave her assent,
Is quite outside my range.
She wanted a button and captured a man,
Which I think was a fair exchange. F. T. SIDNEY.

AT THE TEXAS UNIVERSITY.

PROFESSOR—Your composition, Mr. Anjerry, is simply disgraceful.

Mr. Anjerry—What is there so disgraceful about it?

"Your ignorance, sir. You state that Hannibal and his army, in his invasion of Italy, passed through the St. Gothard tunnel."

"How do you know, professor, that he didn't go through the tunnel with his army? You were not there, were you?"

"No, sir, I was not there; but I have sense enough to know that Hannibal could not have afforded to have bought tickets for all his army."

"Yes, professor, but you forget that it happened before Reagan's interstate commerce bill became a law. There were free passes in those days."

"That's a fact young man; I had forgotten all about that. I'll mark you as 'proficient' in ancient history."—Texas Siftings.

A CLOT ON THE BRAIN.

IN totally ignoring the military necessities of our country we indicate to the world at large that we are suffering from a clot on the brain. Now, every reasoning being knows that the mechanism of the brain is so delicate and so complex that the slightest clot produces an abnormal condition not remote from insanity, or carries the patient within the confines of death.

We have quietly submitted to a gradual growth of this clot until our condition has become such that by a single stroke from a foreign arm, we could be despoiled of many millions of dollars—a sum far in excess of the amount necessary to fortify our seaports, and keep them properly garrisoned for years.

Are we to leave our harbors without protection? Are we to trust to chance to keep our ports from being invaded and laid under contribution? Do the interior States feel that they are in no wise interested? Is it not the farmer—the producer—who feels the fluctuations in prices most keenly? If our rich seaports were robbed of millions of dollars, would there not be a tightness in the money market that would be felt throughout the country? The inhabitants of the cities despoiled would not be alone in their sorrow. The producers—where living far from the seacoast—would experience corresponding loss, just as the heart throb is felt throughout the physical system.

Now, are we to leave our harbors without protection? Are we to rest easy with a system of artillery only on paper? Louis Napoleon had a magnificent army, completely equipped, with storehouses overflowing, and fully prepared for the struggle with the Germans—on paper.

Should the lesson taught France be lost on any reasoning nation of the world? That we require a large standing army, such as is kept by every European power, is absurd. But we do require a thoroughly efficient one: with forts that will deter the approach of an enemy, and the very best arms and equipments for both Regulars and the National Militia. That the Regular Army of the United States is, as an army, efficient, we deny. It is not a fact.

That it is a thoroughly efficient body of infantry and cavalry cannot be questioned; but it is absolutely without artillery—and no machine with a part lost or broken can be considered serviceable.

We have plenty of men in the country for infantry. The National Guardsman is skilled in the use of his rifle; and an inspection of any State encampment will convince the skeptic that we need have no fears as regards that arm of the Service. It is true it requires the three battalion organization and improvements in the tactics, but those questions are entirely beyond the province of this notice. The necessity for modern seacoast defences, with skilled officers and men to garrison and fight them must be patent even to the most clotted brain.

The clots on the brain of the artillery, which are rapidly making of that arm an object most pitiable to behold, arise from total lack of modern implements of warfare, skeleton batteries, the absence of a corps organization with a chief at its head, and utter stagnation in promotion of officers.

To be an efficient artillerist one must be skilled, by practice, in the use of the weapons one is to use. Would a pair of boxing gloves prove a safeguard against an expert adversary armed with a foil?

If not, is there any more reason in arming artillery troops with the Springfield rifle, perfecting them in the manœuvres of the various schools for infantry, and having them, for months at a time, pop away at paper targets, trying to be sharpshooters? Does such service fit them for protecting New York Harbor from a foreign ship-of-war? What interest can any man take in perfecting himself as an infantry man when he knows that in actual service his talents, if he be possessed of any, should be given to the artillery?

It is simply nonsense and contrary to human nature. And yet, as matters now stand, the artillery is engaged in infantry duties, with an occasional drill at some obsolete cannon, mounted on a carriage long out of date, with implements that have been forgotten years ago in foreign services.

Do you say an officer is expected to read and keep himself posted regarding the work of foreign nations in the department of artillery?

We will defy any man to do so, and extract therefrom the actual skill required for the proper service of heavy ordnance in time of war. The lesson cannot be learned that way. You might, with equal propriety, give a man who has merely read about the construction of a locomotive the position of engineer and put him in charge of a train. Would any member of Congress be willing to travel on the "Congressional Express," with such an engineer?

The first step towards promoting the efficiency of the artillery should be a consolidation of the five regiments into a corps with a chief at its head, holding the rank of brigadier-general—one skilled in the various branches of artillery service, and whose entire time and attention could be given to bringing the units of his command to the highest state of efficiency in their particular arm of service. As matters now stand the artillery is without representation at the seat of Government, colonels have no voice in the control of their regiments, and the batteries are worse off than waifs at a foundling hospital.

Officers feel that no one is interested in their perfecting themselves in their profession, even were an opportunity offered, and are utterly hopeless regarding promotion. Tottering captains hope that Divine Providence will give them strength to last until they obtain majorities, while lieutenants of from 12 to 20 years' service know that they cannot obtain a higher grade in less than from 10 to 18 years. As matters now stand many lieutenants will have served 30 years as such before they receive promotion to captaincies. If you doubt it look over the Army Register and you will soon be convinced. In the Army Register recently issued we find only two cavalrymen and nine infantrymen among the first fifty names of lieutenants—all the others are artillerymen who have served (excluding volunteer service) as subalterns, on an average nearly 21 years—and the end is not yet. Not one of them entered the Service subsequent to 1867, and there are many other lieutenants of artillery in exactly the same position. In order to obtain a higher grade they will have to live on like the Struldbrugs of Laputa.

Will not the Legislature of this country look into this matter and place our artillery, both as regards material and personnel, on the highest plane of efficiency?

TARGET PRACTICE IN THE ARMY.

IN your issue of April 16 appears a letter from Col. Henry, Inspector of Rifle Practice, Dept. of the Platte, purporting to be a reply to my letter published in your issue of April 2.

The Colonel proceeds to make me say what I did not say and then applies the lash accordingly. If I said anything about falsifying reports at Fort Niobrara, vilified any officer, or referred in any manner to Capts. Thompson, Rogers, or Freeman, then I will meekly bow and submit to the chastisement which he takes upon himself to administer; but as I said nothing of the kind, such an attempt on his part is utterly absurd.

I made a plain statement of my views in regard to target practice in general as it exists in the Army to-day, and explained my position by reference to the great discrepancy between percentages actually made in competition and those reported to have been made in company practice. It was very far from my purpose to vilify any officer, or deal in personalities in the least degree.

Col. Henry's attempt to account for the low per cent. of hits made by the Army team by placing their targets on a high parapet and saying they were not allowed the advantages of ricochet shots, is as remarkable for a man of his experience as is the opinion that 100 per cent. can be made in company skirmish firing. If he will take the trouble to compare the record of the Army team with that of the different Department and Division teams—whose targets were not on high parapets, and whose ricochet shots were allowed to count—he will find very little discrepancy in the percentage of hits. He will also find by questioning the men who have participated in the competitions during the past three years, that it is generally considered quite as difficult to make a hit on the figure targets now in use as to make a bull's-eye on target "B," formerly used in skirmish practice.

No one will hesitate to agree with Col. Henry with reference to the great advancement made by the Army in target practice, and his great energy and good work in that direction are duly appreciated; but it is never well to overdo anything, and that is just what is now being done in the matter of figure of merit.

The figure of merit for 1886 is entirely too high, and the truthfulness of that fact should not be ignored for the sake of giving the Army a standing which it cannot maintain whenever brought to the test.

To further strengthen my position on this subject I will state that the men selected to represent this post in the competitions last year were placed under my charge for preliminary practice in skirmish firing. Before leaving Vancouver they had two weeks' practice, or in all, about 25 runs. The ordinary target range was used, as no other suitable ground could be obtained; consequently the men became more and more familiar with the ground at each run, and the halts were necessarily made in nearly the same places. Two of these men were considered among the best shots in the Army, and went successfully through the Department and Division competitions and to places of the Army team, and yet the highest number of hits made by either of them in any run out of the 25 did not reach 67 per cent., and it is safe to say that they would not have made within 15 per cent. of that figure had they been run over different ground every time as required in company skirmish practice.

Now, then, how can we account for the discrepancy between the record made by such men as these, and that reported to have been made in company practice.

Let the figure of merit be decided by a fair competition as suggested before, and we shall then have an idea of what the Army can do, and all doubting of records will cease.

LEWIS MERRIAM, 1st Lieut., 4th Infantry.
FORT SPOKANE, W. T., April 24, 1867.

THE CONFEDERATE WAR OFFICE.

IN your paper of April 16, on page 750, 3d column, you have a paragraph purporting to give the cabinet officers of Jefferson Davis as President of the Southern Confederacy, in which an omission occurs in the Secretaries of War. These are stated to have been L. Pope Walker, Judah P. Benjamin, James A. Seddon and John C. Breckenridge. The omission is of General George Wythe Randolph, who was the first Secretary of War under the regular government, which went into operation in March, 1862.

General Walker and Mr. Benjamin had charge of the War Department under the "Provisional Government." When the regular government went into operation in March, 1862, Mr. Benjamin was appointed Secretary of State, and General Randolph, then in command at Suffolk, Va., was appointed Secretary of War.

I was his Assistant Adjutant-General in the field, and when he took charge of the War Department was, on his application, appointed "Chief of the Bureau of War," an office corresponding somewhat with that of Chief Clerk of the War Department in Washington.

General Randolph remained in office until November 15, 1862. He had a large share in the shaping of the measures, including the Conscription Act, which gave coherency to the military organizations. At the date last mentioned he resigned peremptorily in consequence of a difference with Mr. Davis upon the principles of administration, growing out of the instructions given to one of the Department Commanders. On Randolph's resignation, Major-General Gustavus W. Smith was assigned as Secretary ad interim, until Mr. Seddon took charge about November 25, 1862.

He had much of his great ancestor's fondness for study and clearness of perception, was a learned and accurate lawyer, and able administrator. He died of pulmonary disease in 1867, contracted in the field, as the result of cold following measles. Those who knew him believe that had he remained in the field only death would have prevented him from making a high record as a general officer.

Respectfully,
R. G. H. KEAN.

STEEL AND STEEL FACED ARMOR.

THE London Engineer, of April 15, says: "In the American ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, of March 12, is an article dealing with the question of steel and steel faced armor in its present aspect, and also a leading article on the principal features brought out. The article is unquestionably written as an answer to all that has recently been published in America in favor of steel armor. It is no doubt contributed by the advocates of steel-faced armor, and must be regarded as putting that side of the question forward. We may be glad to get this, however, after the course of articles we had written on the opposite side. The main value, however, of all such contributions depends on the facts brought to our notice—facts such as can be definitely contradicted or made good on further investigation."

"We have given in the above the main facts in the article referred to. It will be seen that what we have stated as to the cracking of solid steel plates is here repeated in much more detail, and figures are given which are much worse for the steel. These we only give on the authority of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL. It may be added, however, that we have recently received information as to a striking success just achieved at Shoeburyness by an experimental steel-faced plate of Brown's when attacked by the best steel projectile that can be obtained abroad, which promises great things for steel-faced armor. The fact is, that a very hard face and a very soft back appear to be absolutely necessary. The former is necessary to break up the projectile, the latter is necessary to enable the plate to resist 'through fracture.' The combination of these two appears to us to be impossible in solid steel of uniform character throughout, because no hardening and tempering processes can set up the required difference in front and back."

Doctors will differ, and Engineering of April 22 says: "The decision in favor of steel armor plates is a brilliant indorsement of all we have advanced as to their superiority. In commencing this industry in the United States, the Navy Department has again shown its intelligence and good judgment in stating emphatically that only such armor shall be provided as has shown its superiority in competitive trials. Again, in this matter we find our Government still in the rear, and before the recommendations of the Ordnance Committee, to which we have already frequently referred, are acted upon, we must be again humiliated by seeing even the United States take the lead. Must we wait for the most efficient armor as long as we were forced to dally for breechloading and forged steel ordnance? We were tardy in accepting the latter, and now will the Admiralty and War Office persist in permitting themselves to be forced to continue the use of compound armor until we are compelled, as in the case of breechloading, and the adoption of steel for guns, to abandon it in sheer shame as a relic of the past? Of this action of the United States Navy Department, therefore, in demanding steel armor instead of compound, we should take especial warning."

It says further, speaking of the proposals for steel: "Probably the most important conclusions that have been reached by the proposals above referred to, and those which ought to have the most influence upon us here at home, are the facts that the United States Government has decided emphatically that forged, homogeneous steel shall be employed for high-power guns and especially for armor-plates. While everyone on this side of the Atlantic has accepted the forged built-up steel gun as the best type—Woolwich last of all—a great many schemes for the employment of cast-iron, cast steel and composite guns have been pressed upon the Congress of the United States by a lobby of unsuccessful inventors with such success, as to defeat, two years in succession, all votes of credit for fortifications and coast defence. The Chief of Naval Ordnance, Commodore Sicard, has steadily opposed their influence, and by his persistent application of very small votes of credit for the supply of heavy ordnance has already provided the Navy with a few 6 in. and 8-in. high-power steel rifles.

"The proposals of the steel manufacturers will assure an early and adequate supply of material for high-power steel guns, and the advocates of iron and hybrid guns will be probably now relegated to the shades of oblivion, and the United States House of Representatives can no longer oppose votes for defence because 'steel guns cannot be produced in the United States within five years.'"

Engineering finds it necessary, however, to administer this warning: "While we heartily approve the most rigid requirements that experience can suggest, the American officers may find themselves on very uncertain ground if they attempt to prescribe tests which are purely theoretical and untried."

"SHOULD a white company salute a colored company when passing it on the march?" has been one of the questions propounded by military tacticians recently. This reminds us of an old story. General Washington was walking down Pennsylvania Ave. in the city of Washington one day when he was met by a negro, who bowed to him. The General bowed politely in return. "What, Mr. President," said an acquaintance, "do you bow to a negro?" "Sir," replied Washington, "do you think I would allow a negro to outdo me in politeness?" And the negroes were then slaves, and Washington owned a good many of them.—Mobile Register.

A CORRESPONDENT sends us the following: "Pat was walking post, having received among other orders this one: to challenge after taps only the officer of the day and suspicious characters. Capt. N. was passing this post about 11.30 P. M. and halted with 'Who comes there?' After his identity had been established, Capt. N. asks: 'What do you challenge me for?' Pat—'I've orders to challenge the officer of the day and all suspicious characters.'"

THE STATE TROOPS.

NATIONAL MILITIA ENCAMPMENT.

THE arrangements for the National militia encampment and drill to be held in Washington, May 23-30, seems to be progressing satisfactorily and everything points to a very interesting and successful affair. About 100 companies from various sections of the country have formally announced their intention of entering the drill and the board of management is now making provision for that number. The War Department is in sympathy with them and although no Regular troops will compete a number of officers will be formally detailed as judges, and to inspect and report upon the encampment and operations. Gen. Christopher C. Augur, retired, has been allowed by the War Department to accept the position of Commandant of the Camp. Six infantry and three artillery officers will be detailed by the Lieut.-General to officially report upon the operations, some of which will serve as judges. Col. Henry M. Black, 23d Inf., will be made president of the Board of Award. The three artillery officers will be selected from the Washington Barracks. Lieut.-Col. S. E. Blunt, A. D. C., has been selected by the Encampment Committee and his detail authorized by the Lieut.-General, to conduct the rifle contest to be held in connection with the drill and encampment.

This promises to be one of the most interesting features of encampment. There have been nearly 100 entries, among them Captain J. P. Frost, Insp. Rifle Practice 2d Mass. Brigade; Frank W. Rawles, Co. B, 2d Ind.; Captain John Gaebelein, Co. D, 1st Mich.; Capt. Wm. V. McMaken, Toledo Cadets, and Col. W. S. Spotswood, comdg. 1st Virginia.

The following are the conditions of the rifle contest: Competition open to any regularly enlisted man or commissioned officer of the volunteer militia, not, however, to exceed two from any one company; to be governed by the rules regulating the annual competitions in the Regular Army, as detailed in chapter 3, part 5, "Blunt's Rifle and Carbine Firing." Ten shots each at 200, 300, 500 and 600 yards. Prizes to be awarded on best aggregate scores. Competitors restricted to use of the Service Springfield breechloader, used by the Regular Army, or to the rifle officially issued to the militia by the State to which the competitor belongs. Eight prizes—1st prize, gold medal and $100; 3 prizes, silver medal and $75; 4 prizes, bronze medal and $50.

A TRIUMPH FOR THE VETERANS.

THE veterans of Elizabeth, N. J., are in high feather over the results of a competitive march between representatives of their body and a selected body of militiamen. The contest was a midnight march over a six miles' course from Elizabeth to Rahway, with the marching experts of Co. E, 3d N. J. Regt., representating the militia. The N. Y. Sun says:

The militiamen went off to the roll of drums in fine style, 110 steps to the minute. They took the old road by the Pennsylvania Railroad track. Lieut. Harry Zimmerman of the Zouaves went along to see that there was no running, or double time.

Fifteen minutes later exactly, amid a roar from hundreds of throats, Gen. Drake and his regiment started off with a drum corps of their sons to inspire them. The veterans wore Zouave costumes, red-tasselled caps, bagged trousers, and buff leggings, and the blue jackets they wore when they went to the war. There were 26 of them all told, with veteran Nathan C. Tucker, aged 72, as lively as a cricket, carrying his musket in the front rank. Townspeople gathered in all sorts of conveyances to follow the veterans on the march. The big band named after Gen. Drake spun on to Rahway by train ahead to awake that town up to the importance of the event. The town didn't need it. Everybody there was already on tiptoe of expectation, and everybody was out in the street. Ex-Fire Chief Pfyfe's house was a blaze of lighted lanterns. The lanterns were hung in the shape of a Grand Army star. The sidewalks were fringed with fire everywhere. The fringe consisted of tin cans filled with oakum saturated with turpentine and set ablaze.

Rockets shot into the air by residents along the line of march traced the advance of the contestants against the hazy moonlit sky. At 9.30¼ a burst of rockets in Chamberlin square announced the arrival of the militiamen.

Then couriers on horseback dashed up with the news that the veterans had gained a minute upon the young fellows at the half-way house. Just a little later the echoes of the veteran drum corps made the air tremble. An instant afterward all the pretty girls in Rahway and the matrons, too, waved their handkerchiefs, and the Rahway men gave one great shout of welcome to the veterans. They had reached Chamberlin square at 9.44, in just a minute and a quarter less time than the young fellows of the militia had used. Gen. Drake sank into the arms of City Treasurer Whelan, faint with the joy of triumph.

Then Rahway let all her pent-up enthusiasm loose. Countless fireworks painted the sky with rainbow hues. The volunteer band came out and played, with torches aglow on their caps, the Rahway Fire Department parading in a blaze of glory, and Co. F, of the 3d Regiment, corralled the veterans and the militiamen on the square and led them off captive to their armory over the Reform Club rooms and gave them a grand banquet. Lieut. Scholer of the young militiamen then publicly conceded that the veterans had fairly and honorably beaten the young fellows. Seventy-two-year old Veteran Tucker said he felt as if he wanted to march straight back to Elizabeth without stopping to rest.

Jeweller M. M. Thiesse presented the veterans with a handsome silver challenge cup in honor of their victory.

THE CHANGE OF THE NEW YORK ARMORIES.

THE change of armories by the 8th, 12th and 71st Regiments was accomplished on Friday evening, April 29, in a most effective and imposing manner. The matter may not look very important on the surface, but it was one which, nevertheless, had considerable effect on the National Guard. It was the transformation from an old system to a new one. The old New York armories might do well for a village, but for a great city they are a disgrace. It is only to be regretted that the movement was not a general one, and that the 22d and 9th had to remain where they are. With the former, however, it is only a question of time when the old quarters can be left, because the only cause for delay is the building of new ones. The 9th has a hard fight before it in order to secure a new armory. The 11th, although it clamors for better accommodations, is satisfied where it is situated at present.

The [illegible] 8th, which has done service in every disturbance, from [illegible]etty riot up to the great rebellion, for almost a century, and which, on account of neglect of an ungrateful city, almost dwindled down to nothing, turned out in full force, and almost 450 men were in line when the stable at 9th avenue and 27th street was bid farewell forever. The men naturally did not show any of the sentimentality usual upon leaving pleasant surroundings, and neither "Auld Lang Syne" nor "The Girl I Left Behind Me" were heard in the repertoire of the music. The 71st armory, at Broadway and 35th street, was reached in brief time, and here was found the latter regiment ready to receive their successors. While this armory is by no means a palace nor a convenient place in which to quarter a regiment, the difference between it and the former residence of the 8th was marked, and the men apparently enjoyed the change. The new quarters are certainly cramped and close, but they are in a decent location, in a decent-looking building, and the new armory is only a question of a little time.

The 71st was drawn up along the curb; when the 8th arrived it presented arms, then the latter formed line, the colonels exchanged salutes and keys, the 8th marched up stairs, and the 71st forever left a place where they could never do well, to take temporary possession of a place, small, but in decent repair, well-looking, and worthy, at least, of the name of an armory.

The 12th had turned out in good style and in large numbers, showing the same enthusiasm to which we referred in our report of the occupation of their armory, and the necessary ceremonies with the 71st having been gone through, they marched up town, while the 71st deposited their goods and chattels up stairs at 45th street and Broadway. Thus the 8th and the 71st are temporarily satisfied, and the 12th have at last acquired the right to legally and properly occupy an armory for which they have been working ardently for years, and in which they have recently made such a brilliant display.

Everything now being settled satisfactorily, the regiments concerned should settle down to business and do the best in their power.

COMPANY B, SEVENTH N. Y.

IN announcing an election held at the armory on Monday' May 2, to fill the vacancy caused by the honorable discharge of Corporal Buckman, Capt. Henry S. Steele, Co. B, 7th regt., says: "It is with great regret the commandant announces the retirement of our senior corporal, who has been with us for twelve years, and whose first ten years of service passed without missing a drill. His valuable service as a soldier and his conscientious performance of his duties call for special mention and are commended as an example for all to follow."

A circular issued by Capt. Steele comments on and calls attention to the fact that 56 members of the company have made all drills during the season; 88 all drills during the past two seasons; 27 all drills for three successive seasons; 15 for four successive seasons. The following members have made all drills for five successive seasons, a clear record for the legal term of enlistment: Sergts. Merritt and J. E. Schuyler, Corpl. Jenkins, Privates J. H. Clark, Emmons Clark, Jr., Cochran, Happy, R. F. Morrison, and Shepherd, also the commandant.

Sergt. J. E. Schuyler has made all drills for six successive seasons; Sergt. Merritt for seven, and Private Happy for eight. Lieut. Ware has missed two drills in 23 years. The commandant has missed one drill in 25 years. Largest drill, 117. In numbers this company maintains, as it has uninterruptedly for the past eight years, the full number allowed by law, 103 officers and men, with an average "members elect" list of fifteen, drilling with us and awaiting enlistment in case of vacancy.

In conclusion Capt. Steele says: "In view of the excellent results of the past year's work it is very proper and exceedingly important that we should celebrate the 81st anniversary of the organization of the company with a spirit and enthusiasm both from the veteran and active members that is commensurate with the success of the company. The commandant hopes to see every active and many veteran members with us on May 6 at Delmonico's. The commandant cannot close this circular without extending his sincere thanks to those who have worked so hard, so faithfully, so loyally and unselfishly to maintain the high position which the Old Second occupies. To mention names would almost be, to call the roll of the company, as each and every one has done what he could, no matter whether as private or officer."

NEW YORK BATTERIES.

THE 1st Battery, Capt. Louis Wendel, closed one of the most prosperous drill seasons of its history on Friday, April 29 last, with a final battery drill. The command now numbers 105 men, and could readily be increased to the maximum of 120. A mounted drill was held at the Central Park Riding Academy on Wednesday, April 27. Forty-two men were instructed. The 2d Battery, Capt. F. P. Earle, held its closing drill on April 26 last at their armory. The battery was armed with sabres for dismounted drill. This was followed by standing gun drill. A reception was given after the drill. The 3d Gatling Battery, 2d Brigade, entertained a large company of invited guests on April 28, with a drill, followed by a reception, at the armory on Dean street, Brooklyn. At the conclusion of the drill Capt. Henry S. Rasquin, on behalf of the battery, presented Lieut. W. W. Hanold with a gold mounted sabre and sheath. As the 3d Battery will not go to the State Camp at Peekskill this summer, the regular drills have been discontinued. The members will be given instruction in horsemanship at the Bedford Avenue Riding Academy on Thursday evenings in this month. Drills by platoons will also be held under command of Capt. Rasquin.

TARGET SHOOTING AT CREEDMOOR.

THE members of the National Guard of the cities of New York and Brooklyn are very much indebted to Brig.-Gen. Charles F. Robbins for the sound and practical views he has adopted for this year in relation to the facilities for rifle practice offered to each individual member of the respective companies of the different regiments. Any member of a company who wishes to go to Creedmoor to study and prepare himself for qualification can do so by practising for two weeks, commencing on May 2 until the 14th of the same month, without expense, by applying to the Captain of I. R. P. or company commandant. I also learn that if this opportunity is appreciated other and later dates will be named for like practice. As a constant reader of your valuable journal, I wish to call your attention to it, in order that you may state more clearly the advantages to be derived from such an opportunity by urging each respective company commandant to impress well on the minds of their members this golden opportunity. I would suggest that any member who may qualify as marksman on those days his qualification should hold good, provided he will go to Creedmoor once or twice with his regiment for practicing and volley firing and skirmishing during the season. This would be a great incentive and inducement held out to him to go on such occasions, for if he did not go he would not be entitled to the marksman's badge, and rather than lose it he would go; but if he made a higher score with his regiment, he would be entitled to that score in preference to the first one.

MILES CIVITALIS.

COL. CHAS. L. FINCKE has sent a letter to the Council of Officers of the 23d Regiment, notifying them of his resignation, in which he says:

"In thus severing the relations which have bound us so closely together I can conceive of no harder duty, and did I not know that my remaining in command of the regiment would certainly shorten what perhaps will not, in any event, and with the closest watchfulness, be a very long life, nothing could induce me to take this step. But justice to you and to the regiment demand my instant resignation, for even if I recover sufficiently to be out again I shall be compelled to go away, for at least a considerable time, in search of strength and improvement. In bidding you good-bye, both as fellow-officers and friends, I cannot express the feelings which overcome me; I can only thank you with all the emotion and sincerity of which I am capable, and assure you in giving you up I am giving up that which is sweet to my very life. Be very sure that wherever I may go or wherever I may be I can never forget you, and that in the warmest spot in my heart will be enfolded the matchless Twenty-third!"

The Council of Officers held a meeting to make some arrangements for a demonstration prior to the departure of Col. Chas. L. Fincke for Europe on May 11.

TWELFTH REGIMENT ATHLETIC GAMES.

THE opening games of the 12th Regiment Athletic Club, at their new armory, 62d street and 9th avenue, New York, took place on Monday evening, May 2, 1887. The management of the affair was excellent, the comfort of guests well looked after, and ample seat room provided for all. The inner ring and track was kept clear, so that the audience had an uninterrupted view of the competitions, and there wasn't a single transgressor of these rules. Mr. F. Byrne, a young man of stentorian voice, announced the different winners and their time in fine style. The track was 12 laps to the mile, the turns being protected by a raised curb, thus preventing any "corner clipping," which some gentlemen occasionally indulge in. The following is a summary of the events:

220 yards Hurdle—First heat: S. D. Sco, B. A. C., first; time 0.37. Second heat: A. F. Remsen, M. A. C., first; time 0.29. Third heat: G. S. Schuyler, A. A. C; time 0:29 1-5. Fourth heat: C. T. Weigand, B. A. C., first, in 0.30 2-5. Final heat: Remsen, first; time 0.28 2-5; Schuyler, second.

One Mile Walk—W. R. Burkhard, P. A. C., first; time 7.04; W. A. Berrian, B. A. C., second.

Half Mile Run—First heat: W. Sanford, Bklyn. N. Y., first; time 2.16 4-5. Second heat: F. A. Ware, M. A. C., first; time 2.11 4 5. Final heat: Ware, first; time 2.09 3-5; P. Hay, Bklyn. N. Y., second.

440 Yard Run (open to 12th Regt. only).—J. H. Bell, Co. D, first, time 1.04 3-5; J. H. Paxton, Co. H, second.

The Five Mile Bicycle Race was one of the prettiest events of the evening, and after an exciting contest was won by J. W. Powers, N. Y. City, time 18.24; E. C. Parker, of the Harlem Wheelmen, being second winner.

Potato Race (open only to 12th Regt.)—J. H. Paxton, Co. H, winner. There were 10 potatoes, two yards apart.

One Mile Run.—P. D. Skillman, M. A. C., first, time 4.45 1-5; H. A. Smith, second.

440 Yard Run, Final Heat (open).—G. W. O'Reilly, P. A. C., first, time 0.59; J. N. Norton, B. A. C., second.

The Obstacle Race (open only to 12th Regt.) created much amusement. After diving through barrrels, climbing ladders, and jumping hurdles, the race was finally won by J. H. Bell, Co. D; F. M. Tyson, Co. B, second.

The Tug-of War (open to teams of four men each, weight limited to 650 lbs.), brought out quartets from the West Side Athletic Club, Union Circle, Co. K, 13th Regt., Co. K, 71st Regt., Hillside Boat Club, "Knights of the Brush," 12th Regiment, and the "Cow Boys." All pulled manfully against each other. In the final matches the Hillsides beat the Union Circles and the 13th Regt. team, and finally defeated the 22d Regt. team, thus winning the tug.

The Individual Tug-of-War (open to all members of the National Guard) was easily won by L. B. Chenoweth, Co. A, 4th N. J., the second winner being B. F. Munday, Co. A, 12th Regt. At the conclusion of the games handsome gold and silver medals were presented to the various winners. Among the valuable officials of the games were: C. C. Hughes, referee; timekeepers, G. A. Avery, C. F. Burnham, and W. Halpin; judges at finish, Wm. Wood, G. M. L. Sachs, and W. O. Eschwege; starter, C. S. Busse; scorers, C. H. Liebert, G. A. Bright, C. C. Carter, and F. A. Cammancho. Mr. F. A. Ware was the judge of walking; C. F. Bostwick, clerk of the course, and C. J. Leach, chairman of a very efficient executive committee. The handicapper was Mr. W. G. Hegeman. The programmes given out were universally acknowledged to be the finest of the kind yet issued. A reception followed the games, and the whole affair reflects great credit on the regiment and on all concerned, and will be an entertainment pleasantly remembered.

PROSPECTS AT CREEDMOOR.

AT the meeting of the National Rifle Association, May 2, Gen. C. F. Robbins reported that the butts at the 500-yard range had been repaired and two new ones erected for offhand shooting. At the Fall meeting, beginning on Sept. 12, a feature would be made of the revolver match. Last year the match was not suggested until the meeting began, but so much interest was manifested in it that special preparations for it will now be made. The distance will be 30 yards, at a 4-inch bull's eye. The Secretary was directed to ask the Governors of this and neighboring States for contributions for the Governor's match. A handsome silver watch is offered as one of the prizes.

Lieut. E. L. Zalinski sent in his resignation as a Director, pleading lack of time. It was accepted. Major H. C. Brown, formerly Inspector of Rifle Practice of the Third Brigade, was chosen, to succeed him. Capt. G. H. Whitthaus, late Inspector of Rifle Practice of the Ninth Regiment, was elected a Director to succeed Lieut. S. E. Allen, Fifth Artillery, resigned.

Reports from Creedmoor show an uncommon interest in the coming militia matches. Many men are availing themselves of the free transportation and ammunition, and the prospects are good for fine competition at the qualification and marksman's badge matches, which will take place on May 28, June 11 and 18, and July 4.

G. O. from Headquarters, 1st Brigade, fixed the following dates for rifle practice at Creedmoor: 7th Regt., May 16, 17, 19; 8th Regt., May 26; 9th Regt., June 6; 11th Regt., June 13; 12th Regt., Aug. 1 and 5; 23d Regt., June 17; 69th Regt., June 20 and 28; 71st Regt., June 23.

The 7th Regiment will assemble for rifle practice, in fatigue uniform, one day's rations, and proceed to Creedmoor, in detachments, as follows: Cos. A, B and F, staff and non-commissioned staff, Monday, May 16; Cos. C, D, E and G, Tuesday, May 17; and Cos. H, I and K, Thursday, May 19. Assembly at 7.05 o'clock A. M. Train leaves Long Island City at 8.05 A. M.

MILITIA ITEMS.

Capt Hugh Coleman, of the 69th Regt., has forwarded to Adjt. Gen. Porter a report of the case of Martin P. Dwyer of the 69th, who was elected a 1st Lieutenant on Dec. 28, 1886, and to whom the Examining Board refused to grant a commission on the ground that he is not a citizen of the United States. It appears that Dwyer arrived in this country on June 4, 1883, and was enlisted in Co. H, 69th Regt., on Oct. 18, 1883. He declared his intentions on Jan. 29, 1884. In September, 1886, he was elected 1st Lieutenant. Capt. Coleman, who is a lawyer, holds that the Examining Board had no right to refuse Dwyer a commission after he had passed the examination, whether he was a citizen or not.

The adoption of white leggings as part of the bill of dress of the 47th N. Y. having been approved by the Commander-in-Chief, members will be required to procure them at once, as they will be worn on parade, Decoration Day, May 30, 1887.

The 12th Regiment will occupy Creedmoor on May 16, 17, 19 and 20. Before going to camp this year the regiment will be instructed in the bugle call.

The Brooklyn Eagle says: "It is ten years since the long range riflemen of America successfully defended the Palma at Creedmoor against the most noted smallbore experts of all England, captained by Sir Henry Halford. It is suggested that the anniversary of the great two days' match be celebrated by a competition between a team made up of Brooklyn shooting men and a six composed of New Yorkers or Massachusetts marksmen. The idea is a good one, and if carried to a conclusion it would undoubtedly exert a beneficial influence in reviving public interest in the manly sport of target practice."

The 2d Battery Artillery, Capt. Ferdinand P. Earle, attended Divine service last Sunday night. The annual sermon was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Newland Maynard, chaplain of the 47th Regiment and of the National Guard Association, S. N. Y. The battery drills have been discontinued, and the recruits are instructed twice a week during the current month. Notwithstanding there have been two discharged this week, the battery now numbers 108. The success which has attended the labors of the faithful in this organization deserves commendation. It bears the reputation of being the best artillery organization in the State.

SPRING INSPECTIONS IN PHILADELPHIA.

THE semi-annual inspection of the arms, accoutrements, appearance and drill of the infantry of the 1st Brigade, N. G. Pa., was begun last Monday evening, May 2, by Major A. L. Wetherill, Brigade Inspector. Five companies of the 1st Infantry reported to Col. T. E. Wiedersheim. The order in line was Co. C, Captain Orme; Co. D, Captain Hastings; Co. A, Lieutenant Deakyn; Co. K, Captain Bringhurst, and Co. F, Captain Eiler. The orders called for formation at 8 P. M., but it was 8.30 when the "adjutant's call" sounded. The companies paraded 12 files—a slim turnout. The formation was spoiled by Co. A halting in rear of the second company, necessitating the adjutant to hunt them up and show the commander where the company belonged. The companies were wheeled to the right in perfect style. During the inspection of clothing the men were remarkably steady, and presented a very handsome appearance. After the color guard's appearance had been inspected the adjutant ordered fix bayonets. He also—to gain ground forward, being too close to the leading company—gave the command, "Color guard, three paces to the front, march," while the guard was at an order arms with ranks opened. Knapsacks, etc., were removed and the battalion drill commenced with a march in column of fours to the right. The step too short and quick. Column of companies was formed by first company, fours left, causing loss of distance, especially between third and fourth companies. Both the above movements were repeated, and showed little improvement. A column of fours and "On right into line" was finely executed. "Right of companies rear into column" was only fair. Column of fours was again formed, and several ployments into close column, "On the left," "To the left," "On the right," and "To the right," from both right and left in front, were very well done except that the distance between companies was too great and the file closers did not close to one yard. A march in line of battle, repeated several times by wheeling the fours about, was very handsome, only being marred by the color bearer not advancing six yards. The line was halted and dressed and ployed into close column on first company, right in front, was nicely finished. A march of the column of masses by the left flank was almost perfect, but "By the left flank" resulted disastrously for the third company. The battalion was halted and straightened out, and then deployed on fifth company to the right. Nearly all the companies marched too far before forming line to the left, causing the first company to move by the left flank to get into proper position. Several repetitions of the close column to the right and left were only fair.

A march in column of fours and then by the right flank; the latter movement was poor, the files being too open. A change of front on fifth company was almost perfect. A repetition on the first company was likewise good. After several marches in line of battle the line was halted and exercised in the manual. This regiment, while executing the manual in a first-class manner, does not follow the Tactics; too many motions are used in the various changes. The firings by battalion, rank, company and file were all good. The fifth company at the command cease firing incorrectly remained at a ready until the captain commanded carry arms.

On Tuesday evening the remaining five companies reported to Col. Wiedersheim. It was fully 8 30 before the adjutant's call sounded. The formation was very slow, company commanders appearing to be uncertain as to their position in line. The companies were posted from right to left as follows: Co. E, Capt. Muldoon; Co. G, Capt. Williams; Co. I, Lieut. Yardley; Co. H, Capt. Kensil, and Co. B, Capt. Good. The fronts were uneven, ranging from ten files in Co. I to twenty files in Co. B. In wheeling the companies to the right for inspection the commander of the third company incorrectly moved his company to the left to allow his left guide to cover. The men were equal in steadiness and appearance to the battalion of the previous evening. The inspecting officer, Major Wetherill, excited criticism by attempting to look at the interior of the Springfield breech-loaders by holding the butt elevated with the barrel down. At the close of the inspection the companies severally stacked arms, the execution being exceedingly poor—except in Co. B. Some of the men evidently had never drilled the "stack," they were so clumsy in the handling of their pieces.

The battalion was prepared for drill by being equalized into six commands of twelve files, Co. B being divided into two companies. The extra company was fifth in line, and under Lieut. Ewing.

The drill commenced with a march in column of fours from the right step and cadence uneven. After several circuits of the drill floor the men settled into an even though slow and short step. On the right, close column of division, was marred by the second company attempting to execute the movement by company. A column of fours formed from the 3d division, and "On the left, close column of division" was well done. A column of fours from the left caused loss of distance through division commanders not moving promptly. "On left into line" was faultless. A "Double column fours left and right," and a deployment to the right and left, were both well done. "Right of companies rear into column" was only fair, company commandants not cautioning their men properly, and the second, third and fourth companies getting too far to the right. A march in column of companies was excellent, wheels and alignments almost perfect. Column of fours was again formed and several ployments into close column of company and deployments were well done. Centre forward fours left and right was well done, the battalion was marched to the rear by a fours left about, and again to the front by fours right about. In these movements the captain of the 4th company (Kensil) neglected to place himself alongside his leading guide, but marched at the rear of his company. The line was then reformed to the left, and several very fine marches in line of battle were executed. The command was halted and exercised in the manual, the same defects existing as on the previous evening. The fire by company was very poor, company commandants not paying much attention to par. 388. At command cease firing, second, third and fourth companies came to the "Ready" and resumed the carry by command of their captains, a violation of par. 108. This terminated the drill. The field return as made up by the adjutant shows the following strength: Field and staff, 12; Co. A, 35; B, 52; C, 37; D, 33; E, 34; F, 36; G, 38; H, 43; I, 34; K, 32. Total, 386.

On May 16 the regiment will be paraded for final inspection.

MASSACHUSETTS MILITIA.

THE fiftieth anniversary of the National Lancers will be held at Faneuil Hall, Boston, June 14, at 4 P. M. Our thanks are due for a courteous invitation to the annual dinner on the occasion.

A CORPORAL'S BEQUEST.

BY a codicil to his will, just admitted to probate in Philadelphia, Corporal Joshua C. Lawrence, of the City Troop, sets apart $3,000 to be held in trust by the troop and to be invested until principal and interest amounted to $6,000. The income on this amount, which is to be known as the "Lawrence Horse and Equipment Fund, No. 560," must be applied to purchasing, equipping and caring for a horse. The equipments shall be those of the troop. When the horse shall die a new one shall be bought, and when the equipments shall be changed or worn out they shall be replaced. Corporal Lawrence's number on the active roll of the troop was 560, and he uses that number to designate his fund. One of the provisions of the codicil is that the horse shall be called "Josh Lawrence," "Second Sergeant Lawrence," or "Corporal Lawrence." The equipments shall also bear his name, and the name shall be plainly printed on his stall, and the desire of the dead member is plainly stated to be to have "always and forever a horse thoroughly equipped and ready for duty in the troop."

OREGON.

CO. K, 1st REGIMENT, 2d Brigade, O. S. M., celebrated on the evening of April 19 the first anniversary of its formation by an exhibition drill, promenade concert, and dance, at the Pavilion, in Portland. The company turned out 24 files front, balance being detailed on guard and committee duties. The manual of arms, and all movements executed, were done with almost the precision of a veteran organization, especially the formation of single rank from double rank, and the change back to double rank. Too much praise cannot be given to Captain Beebe and Lieutenants Ladd and Cranston for the wonderful work done in the last year, particularly as only 10 or 12 of the 93 men composing the company had ever handled a rifle before entering the company. After about 40 minutes of drill, the company was dismissed and the guests took possession of the floor. The entertainment was an entire success, and called forth continual praise for both officers and men of the company.

In the 1st Regiment, 2d Brigade, Captain Southworth and 1st Lieutenant Olds, Co. E, and 2d Lieutenant Thomes, Co. H, have tendered their resignations. 2d Lieutenant E. D. Curtis, Co. A, has received his commission.

Two new companies have lately been mustered into service, one at Albany and the other at Eugene City, while still another is being organized at Prineville, also a cavalry troop at Albina.

The County Court of Multnomah County have decided to build an armory for the 1st Regiment, 2d Brigade. An architect is now busy on the plans. LIGGOC.

RHODE ISLAND.

"Cannoneer propounds the following: The Boston Light Artillery of Boston was organized Nov. 17, 1853. Are we not the oldest light battery in the militia force of the United States? If not, what battery is older?"

Let me enlighten Cannoneer on the subject: The Providence Marine Corps of Artillery of Providence, R. I., was organized in October, 1801, and incorporated by the General Assembly of Rhode Island "for the purpose of improving in the use of cannon and in the tactics employed in the attack and defence of ships and batteries," and were chartered as military command with a Lieut.-Colonel as commandant and allowed 200 men.

The sixth article of their charter says: "The commissioned officers of said company shall be elected from the members of the Providence Marine Society of the town of Providence; and if any of said officers shall be disapproved of by the Governor and Senate, or shall die, then, and in either of these cases the superior officer of said company for the time being, shall call said company together as soon as conveniently may be, to choose another officer in the room of the officer so disapproved of, or dead, in the manner before described."

The company was composed of sailors and seafaring men mostly, and for many years wore a sailor's uniform, and had for a battery two iron guns, the men marching and carrying sabres or short swords.

In June, 1830, the charter was amended so as to allow two of the six commissioned officers to be chosen from its members, whether they were members of the Providence Marine Society or not.

In May, 1842, the charter was again amended to allow any member to be elected a commissioned officer. At this time the Dorr Rebellion broke out and the company took muskets in place of swords and swelled the ranks to about 150 men, a part of whom were cannoneers, and manned the two iron guns.

In 1847 the company received four brass guns with carriages and caissons, and changed the character of their organization from a foot battery to a light battery or flying artillery, as it was called at the time. On Oct. 16, 1847, under command of Lieut. Col. Walter C. Simmons (just deceased), they made their first outdoor drill as a 4-gun light battery. On May 12, 1848, they paraded as a light battery at the funeral of Maj. John R. Vinton, U. S. A. In Sept., 1848, Lieut. Col. Simmons in command, they marched fully equipped, with horses, etc., to New Bedford, Mass., for an excursion and drill. In the summer of 1852, under command of Lieut. Col. Jos. P. Balch, they marched to Boston and encamped upon Boston Common, and were absent one week. During their stay the battery was reveiwed by the Governor, and fired a salute of 100 guns in the then unprecedented time of six minutes and some seconds during a rain. This organization at that time, the only volunteer or militia light battery known in the United States, created such a sensation that hundreds from other cities came to see it, and among them was a delegation from Boston who came expressly to have an exhibition of its drill given them, and Col. Balch gave the officers of the Boston battery their first instruction in battery drill.

This battery was commanded by Wm. Sprague (afterwards Governor) in 1858-9 and '60, and was then a 6-gun battery.

This battery is now known as Battery A, Light Artillery, R. I. M., and is also known as the mother of batteries, having been attached to the 1st R. I. Regiment, under Col. A. E. Burnside, in April, 1861, with six guns, and from its armory 10 light batteries were recruited for the War of the Rebellion. P. R. D.

CALIFORNIA NATIONAL GUARD.

IN G. O. 12, the Commander-in-Chief directs that the 2d Brigade, N. G. C., will encamp for not less than seven days, under the command of Brig.-Gen. W. H. Dimond. The Alta, referring to the encampment, says: "Many prominent military men are of the opinion that a camp, not a picnic at a watering place, should be the aim and object of our National Guard, but the difficulty lies in the failure of our legislative bodies to provide suitable funds for the purpose. The State assists so little in these yearly encampments that a hippodrome is made of them in the belief of leading officers. The men usually consider the time thus employed as a greater part of their summer vacation, and as most of them are absent from their avocations without pay, and oftentimes, it is alleged, without the concurrence of their employers, a strictly military camp, remote from the attractions of fashionable society, cannot be effected. General Dimond is undoubtedly the very man to do this and if accomplished, it is said that large numbers of the State organizations would cheerfully respond to any demand upon them to enter a camp having for its object the proper training every member of the National Guard should possess."

The Military Commission appointed to select a new service uniform have decided to adhere closely to the uniform now in use in the National Guard. No change is made in the fatigue uniform. For artillery and cavalry no departure has been made in the present uniform, nor for the Signal Service, except to substitute a soft hat of the Kossuth pattern for the helmet, and to add a despatch box to the equipment of the corps.

The troubles at the opening of the new armory of the 12th Regiment of New York leads the San Francisco Report to say: "The most important portion of a soldier's instruction is to accustom himself to the circumstances in which he would probably find himself in active service. The militia's service is usually upon the streets of a great city in time of excitement. Therefore, every effort should be made to accustom the men to manœuvring steadily and coolly in crowds and mid the noise and bustle of the streets. Instead of that, our militia, and we suppose those of New York, do their drilling and manœuvring in rooms, or, if out of doors, in areas kept clear for them. Neither our own 2d Brigade nor one of its regiments has done any outdoor work, except in camp, for over a year. It has never been on the streets."

DELAWARE.

THE New York Star is disposed to be satirical on the subject of the military resources of Delaware, of which it says: "We have before us the biennial report of the Adjutant General of Delaware. It is a warlike document. It bristles with facts and figures, bayonets and breech-loaders, and hums with martial music. As a result of inspection and general observation, the accomplished officer is convinced that for 'general effectiveness, so far as drill, discipline, and morals are concerned, the Delaware militia was never better.'

"As we are mainly dependent upon Delaware for our supply of peaches and canvas back ducks, it is gratifying to know that the sturdy little State is prepared to defend those industries vi et armis. We find that the home of Bayard and Gray maintains a standing army of 32 commissioned officers, including the grizzled veteran who writes the report, 282 enlisted men, and two musicians.

"Formidable as it is, however, this force by no means satisfies the heroic soul of the Adjutant General, for, as he very sensibly puts it, 'until our people come to regard our State military force as something more than an idle toy, a thing for dress parade and vain show, it cannot attain that degree of solidity and military efficiency which all would desire should an emergency arise.' May that emergency never arise!"

MINNESOTA.

IN G. O. 2, Col. Bobleter, commanding 2d Regiment, urges the troops to prepare thoroughly for the annual encampment, soon to take place, and says: "The modern weapons of warfare are such that in future all engagements between organized troops must necessarily be in open ranks, and the colonel deems it of great importance that more time and attention be given to skirmish evolutions. Therefore, the time allotted at previous encampments for company drills, will, at the next encampment, be devoted to battalion skirmish drills. Previous to the encampment, where the nature of the ground permits, captains will exercise their companies in skirmish drill as often as practicable."

MONTANA.

THERE will shortly be at least five companies of militia in Montana. There are now two at Butte and another is being organized. There is one at Helena and another is being formed. One is shortly to be mustered in at Dillon, and Bozeman will add another to the quota, making seven in all.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

BRIG.-GEN. ORDWAY is taking active steps looking to the reorganization of the District militia into battalions of four companies each, three battalions forming a regiment. The number of men required to a company will be 32 men and 5 sergeants, a captain and 2 lieutenants. The reorganization will probably be effected in this way: The Washington Light Infantry having four full companies, will be made the 1st Battalion; the National Rifles and the Corcoran Cadets will be consolidated into the 2d Battalion, and the Union Veteran Corps and the Washington Continentals (Old Guard) will be consolidated into the 3d Battalion, thus making the 1st Regiment. The 2d Regiment will be made up of the colored soldiers of the District. The Capital City Guards, it is expected, will muster the few additional men required to form the 1st Battalion, as will the Washington Cadet Corps for the 2d Battalion, and the Emmet Guards will be given all the new recruits in order to make up the 3d Battalion and the 2d Regiment.

WISCONSIN.

THE annual ball of the Light Horse Squadron at Milwaukee, April 27, was a great success. It was not till late that the military guests of the evening, who were to be the especially honored guests arrived. Only a comparatively small party arrived, as the postponement of the ball made it impossible for Maj.-Gen. Terry and several members of his staff who had accepted invitations to attend, to be present. Those who came were Col. Lee and Lieut. Reade and Mrs. Reade. As soon as they arrived, they were received by the reception committee and escorted to the dressing room, after which they took a position in the centre of the reception room and were introduced to many of the guests.

KENTUCKY MILITIA.

MILITIA circles in Louisville, Ky., are arranging for a grand military encampment, similar to the one in Washington, and to come off shortly after that is concluded. The proposition is to have a general encampment at the Fair Grounds from June 20 to 25. On June 21 a parade, on June 22, 23 and 24 competitive drilling, and on June 25 the distribution of prizes and exhibition drills by the successful companies.

OHIO NATIONAL GUARD.

ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL WICKHAM, April 29, accepted the following resignations of officers of the Ohio National Guard: Geo. E. Canning, Captain Co. C, 17th Regt., Mt. Vernon; John R. Callahan, 1st Lieut. and Adjutant, 13th Regt., Hillsboro; Clement C. Shaw, 2d Lieut. Co. G, 13th Regt., Georgetown. The following commissions were issued April 29: John H. Bellair, 1st Lieut. and Quartermaster, 9th Battalion, Columbus; Jas. H. Hysell, 1st Lieut., and Wm. A. Giles, 2d Lieut., Co. I, 6th Regt., Middleport.

A correspondent says: Our board in the matter of regulations on the uniform, answers the question I asked for some time since. That is, 1st. Commanding officers shall decide the uniform to be worn—fatigue or full dress. 2d. There must be no mixture of full dress and fatigue. 3d. The dress for officers must conform to the dress ordered for the troops. 4th. The sword and sword-belt to be worn on all occasions of duty, as now required. 5th. When in undress the Service belt shall be worn.

These are sensible regulations and there ought to be no obstacles raised against their adoption. That is all we can say about it.

NATIONAL DEBT AND WAR EXPENDITURE.

THE Financial Reformer for April contains some interesting statistics in regard to the debt of Europe and its war expenditure. In 1865-66, the debt of Europe was estimated at £2,640,000,000, and the amount requisite for interest on it was $97,520,000. At present the debt is £4,684,480,000, and the amount requisite for interest on it is £213,640,000. Now take the United States. In 1866 the debt was £600,000,000, entailing a charge for interest of £29,200,000. For 1886, the debt was £289,000,000, and the annual charge was £10,200,000. The amount annually spent by the European countries to keep up their armies and navies is $905,600,000. The amount spent by the United States is about $40,000,000. Adding, therefore, the costs for war debts and for armaments together, it will be seen that Europe pays $1,973,500,000, and the United States $90,000,000 per annum! The country that spends the most on armaments is Russia. Her annual expenditure on them is $197,600,000, and the interest on her debt is $208,800,000.

THE Italia Militare (Rome) publishes a list of the troops destined to take part in the Italian manœuvres of the present year during the latter end of August and the first fortnight of September.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

GENERAL BOULANGER, the French Minister for War, has decided to despatch detachments amounting to 5,000 men to Tonquin, in order to relieve the troops who have completed two years' colonial service.

GEN. BLUMENTHAL is expected to shortly retire from active service in the German Army. Although advanced in years, he was considered as the successor of Gen. von Moltke, but his health has recently become enfeebled.

A LETTER from Italy states that the engineering works at Genoa are very busy, and have a great deal of work in hand for the Government. Besides the ironclads Sicilia, Re Umberto, and Sardinia, all with engines of 20,000 horse-power, the Government are having a number of first-class torpedo-boats built and engined in different parts of the country similar to those which have been purchased at Elbing, in Germany; and there are not wanting indications that Italy, like the other chief European Powers, will go in for fast cruisers. Their first-class torpedo-boats are said to be much superior to those of the English Admiralty, both as regards seagoing qualities, speed, and armament.

THE pay of the English soldier is 1s. a day, varying up to 21d. a day for men in the household cavalry. But when the prescribed stoppages have been made toward the cost of his "keep" very little indeed is left to him in the way of pocket money. He may, of course, advance to be a Corporal, a Sergeant, or even a Sergeant-Major, receiving as much as 5s., or in the Royal Engineers, 6s. a day; but, it is now possible for him to be promoted altogether out of the ranks and to become "an officer and a gentleman." But these latter promotions are very rare. The Russian receives a mess allowance which is calculated to give each man one third of a pound of meat on 196 days of the year. The remaining 169 days are observed as fasts according to the rules of the Greek Church! In addition about 2 pounds of flour, which the men bake into bread for themselves, or 1 pound 13 ounces, of biscuits is issued per man, and to this is added 4 4-5 ounces of groats, 4-5 ounces salt, and for every 100 men 11 7-10 ounces tea and 2 pounds 3 3-10 ounces of sugar. The daily field ration of the British soldier is 1 pound of meat, 1½ pounds bread or 1 pound biscuit, ⅛ ounce coffee, 1-6 ounce tea, 2 ounces sugar, and ⅓ ounce salt, and when hard work is being done another ⅛ pound meat is added if possible, and it is also usual to serve out 2 ounces compressed vegetables and 4 ounces preserved potatoes.

THE Mittheilungen über Gegenstande des Artillerie- und Genie Wesens (Vienna) devotes a long article in its April number to the consideration of the question of revolving turrets, and especially to a comparison between the Schumann and Mougin systems.

THE present strength of the German Navy is returned as follows: Thirteen ironclads, fourteen armored vessels, nine cruiser frigates, eight cruiser corvettes, five cruisers, four gunboats, five avisos, eleven schoolships, and thirty-one vessels for other purposes. In addition there are about 150 torpedo-boats.

THE Militär Wochenblatt has recently published some strictures upon the regulation that each officer shall be provided with a whistle to direct attention to his instructions. In the heat and excitement of the battle, our contemporary believes that the piping signal will be neglected or inaudible. Nevertheless, the use of the whistle has been officially prescribed, and the Wochenblatt bids German officers make the most of it.

THE Deutches Heeres-Zeitung reports that there has been submitted to the technical and administrative committee in Vienna the model of a newly invented repeating rifle, which, it is claimed, greatly, excels in principle all systems at present in use. The War Ministry has taken steps to settle the apparent advantages of the new rifle, and the practical testing of it will presently take place. The constructors of the gun are Captain Hermann Schmitz and the engineer Bela Schratzenthalier.

GEN. BOULANGER has taken the necessary measures to prevent, in the event of a declaration of war between France and Germany, the troops in Alsace-Lorraine from damaging the French railroads and telegraphs, and thus seriously interfere with mobilization.

THE Belgians have apparently adopted a modified Mannlicher repeating arm. The modification is in its calibre, which will be one of eight millimetres. One hundred thousand of these rifles are at present ordered at the Lüttich Small Arms Factory.

IT is suggested (by "one who knows"), for the benefit of future explorers of the North Pole, that a much better route is by way of Edmonton and the Mackenzie River. There is now stage or steamboat communication almost all the way from Calgary to the mouth of the Mackenzie, on the Arctic Ocean, in lat. 70 deg. north, and a traveller leaving Winnipeg in the early summer months could reach the latter point with all needful supplies after a comfortable journey of not more than two months.

THE Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia has had under consideration for some time the question of increasing the facilities for issuing policies upon the lives of women and as family physicians' certificates are not received as medical examination, it has been determined to select two women physicians of reputation to represent it in Philadelphia, and make the examinations on all women risks who desire to enjoy the advantages of life insurance.

"A Place for everything, and everything in its place," is a wise old proverb, the observance of which will save money and trouble. The place for PHENOL SODIQUE is in every one's house, as it will save money, pain and trouble. Before the Doctor reaches the injured, PHENOL SODIQUE is the dressing which will afford prompt relief from pain, the checking of bleeding, and a rapid healing to the injured parts. The physician—should he be familiar with the remedy—will praise the happy thought which suggested its use.

BLECHER.—At a meeting held in the reading room of Co. C, 10th Infantry, at Fort Union, N. M., on the evening of April 26, 1887, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted in commemoration of our late comrade, Artificer CHRISTIAN BLECHER: "Whereas, it has pleased an all wise Providence to remove suddenly from our midst, while absent on temporary duty at District Headquarters, Artificer Christian Blecher, Co. C, 10th Infantry; and while humbly bowing to the divine will of Him who does all things for the best, still we deeply deplore his loss, and desire to bear testimony to his sterling worth as a man and soldier; therefore, be it Resolved, That in the death of Artificer Blecher the company loses one of its brightest ornaments, whose equal in zeal, ambition, and devotion to his profession as a soldier is seldom found. In every sense a gentleman, his strict integrity and assiduous devotion to duty commanded our highest respect, while his social disposition, courtesy of manner and kindness of feeling endeared him to all his comrades, who will ever gratefully cherish his memory; and be it further Resolved, That our sincere and heartfelt thanks be extended to the members of Company E, 22d Infantry, and Band 10th Cavalry, stationed at Fort Marcy, N. M., for their noble and generous action in arranging for, and taking part in, the obsequies of our late comrade, and that a copy of these resolutions be prepared and forwarded to their respective organizations and also to the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, Army and Navy Register, Buffalo Courier, and New Mexican, for publication."—HARRY GRADY, Sergt.; HARRY WELLS, Corpl.; HARRY J. MEMORIES OF THE MEN WHO SAVED THE UNION.

BY DONN PIATT. Extra Cloth, gilt top, $1.50. Ready March 1st. With photogravures and other engravings of Lincoln, Gen. Thomas, Stanton, Seward, and Chase.

Donn Piatt, who was on terms of the closest intimacy with these great men during the rebellion, and with most of them before and after, had superior advantages for obtaining the materials for such a work as the present, which his natural gifts of insight into character and honesty of heart, coupled to a strong and clear style, have turned to the best account. He has thus presented his countrymen with the clearest, most truthful, and fascinating pictures of the true heroes of the war. He found them men—noble men—and such he paints them.

"And above all he tells of the one great hero of the war—Gen. Geo. H. Thomas—who never lost a battle, and won victories which crushed the enemy out of existence as an organized force."—Scioto Gazette, Chillicothe, O.

LIFE OF

General John A. Logan,

THE MATCHLESS CITIZEN-SOLDIER,
THE EVER-VICTORIOUS GENERAL,
THE ILLUSTRIOUS STATESMAN,

BY GEORGE FRANCIS DAWSON,

Ex-Librarian of the Senate, His Chosen Biographer.

Every Page Full of Absorbing Interest!

With an Introduction in Fac simile by

MRS. JOHN A. LOGAN.

It Contains Sixteen Superb Full-page Illustrations

This is a book which has absolutely no equal among the publications of the year, and will take rank among the great literary works of the century. It is a splendidly written narrative of one of the most remarkable lives in our history. Gen. Logan's career, even if described in the tamest commonplaces, is a story more fascinating than any that ever flowed from the pen of Dickens or Dumas. The author of this work—Mr. George Francis Dawson—was thoroughly in love with his subject, and he has made of it a magnificent recital, with not a dull line or chapter from first to last. Everywhere it stirs the blood and rouses the sympathies.

It is, at one and the same time, Romantic, Dramatic, Panoramic, and Historic.

THE GATLING GUN.

The Accles' feed magazine allows the gun to be fired at all angles of elevation or depression, at the rate of over 1,200 shots per minute.

NEW EQUIPMENTS FOR THE GERMAN ARMY.

We give here two illustrations of the new accoutrements adopted for the German Army with a view to lessening fatigue by balancing the weights carried and distributing them over the body, greatly increasing freedom of movement on the march and in action, and also securing an actual decrease in weight sufficient to admit the addition of 20 rounds of ammunition without increasing the total burden borne by the soldier. The Militär Zeitung of April 9, 1887, from which we copy these illustrations, tells us that with slight changes the accoutrements which are now discarded have been in use for eighty years, having been copied in 1810-12 by Germany and nearly all European armies from that adopted for the French Army by Napoleon I. in 1804. They narrowed the chest and by their vicious arrangement of breast straps impeded free movement of the lungs while marching. In 1877 the old arrangement of knapsacks was condemned in a handbook upon the care of the health of soldiers by Dr. Roth and Dr. Lex, and many army officers added their condemnation of the prevailing system. In 1884 prizes were offered for models, in 1886 these prizes were awarded, and in 1887 official orders were issued for the adoption of a set of new equipments. A full description of the details of this new system was given in the Zeitung of September 19, 1885.

The equipments include what is described as a "carrying-harness," formed by the various supporting straps fitted into each other. The straps end in brass hooks which are fastened behind into the cartridge belt. The two carrying straps unite in a button, as shown in the cut, and on this button hangs also the back piece, ending in a hook which catches under the belt. Thus, the weight of the accoutrements is distributed between the shoulders and the hips. The knapsack is provided with a waterproof linen bag which can in case of need be filled with provisions and attached to the carrying harness, or the knapsack itself can be left behind and this light "siege equipment," as it is called, carried in its place. The waist buttons give place to hooks firmly set between the cloth and lining to support the belt. In place of the old cartridge pouches two cartridge pockets, each holding 30 rounds, in three rows of 10 each, are carried in front. These pockets are strapped firmly to the belt so that they do not flap about and interfere with rapid movements, as the pouches did. A third pocket is provided behind for a reserve of 40 rounds. In addition, the non-commissioned officers carry a further supply of 30 cartridges in two front pockets holding 15 rounds each. The haversack is made of waterproof brown linen and has two divisions, one for food and the other for tobacco. Ordinarily, this is attached to the belt by two straps, but it has also an additional strap so that it can be carried independently of the other accoutrements. This strap is thrown around the neck, the ends hooking into the cartridge belt and supporting it. A ring is attached to one corner of the haversack to carry the canteen. Leather straps replace the chains upon the helmet, perceptibly reducing the weight but detracting somewhat from its ornamental effect. Three holes for ventilation are added to the top plate of the helmet, making five holes in all. The Guard and Grenadier regiments retain the old helmet. Slight changes have been made in the cooking utensils and also in the carriage of the entrenching tools so as to lessen their weight and make them more readily available in case of urgent need. Light waterproof laced shoes are added as a relief from the heavy boots.

The average strength of the British Army for the year 1886 was 203,805, of which 7,218 were officers. The Home Army numbered 98,057, and 105,748 were in India, Egypt and the Colonies. 38,943 men were recruited, 1,864 rejoined from desertion, and 5,421 deserted. The deaths were 2,721, and of the 41,799 recruits offering themselves nearly six per cent. (2,410) were rejected, and 370 deserted. Of the men accepted 11,109 were under 5 ft. 5 in., and 8,293 under 5 ft. 6 in. in height. 13,774 were under 34 in. chest measurement, and 7,358 weighed less than 120 pounds.

The critics of our new Navy may perhaps derive some comfort from the report that the Agamemnon, a brand new ship of the English Navy which was commissioned as a 13½ knot vessel, had to do her best to keep up with a squadron making less than nine knots. The Army and Navy Gazette says mournfully: "Her coal swallowing powers are equally incomprehensible. She carries 960 tons of coal, and is supposed to be able to steam 4,100 miles with that quantity at 10-knot speed, which gives an average of 56½ tons per day; but now she burns more than double to go a knot and a half slower. There is something very wrong somewhere—either in the ship or the story."

The London Health has some remarks upon artillery practice which are in the line of what was recently said here by Dr. Saml. Sexton. A very disagreeable jar, it says, is imparted to the joint between the lower jaw and the skull when the individual is near a great gun which is being fired off. This is lessened, it is believed, by standing on the toes and leaning forward. Some simple precaution to be employed by officers and men during artillery practice would seem very much needed, since ear shock is not only painful and distressing, but orders cannot be well heard while the confusion lasts.

The French may well question whether the business of waiting to get even with the Germans is altogether profitable. A French writer estimates that the naval and military expenditure, and the interest on the National Debt, at the fall of the Bourbons (1830) represented $161,600,000; on the fall of Louis Philippe, $182,200,000; in 1872, after the fall of the Empire, $349,800,000; and in 1880, $447,200,000. Another Frenchman criticizes the military expenditure as wasteful, saying: "Germany, which has just manufactured at immense cost repeating rifles for her whole army, is beginning to find out their defects, and to ask herself if the old rifle was not preferable to the new one. We have just bought enormous quantities of ether and sulphuric acid for the manufacture of those new explosives about which so much noise has been made, and the practical value of which is already contested by competent persons. We French have fallen in love, turn-about, with armorclads and torpedo-boats; to-day all our enthusiasm is in favor of rapid cruisers. What will be the next hobby?" By abandoning its futile attempts at colonization and foreign conquest France might save something. The new French Army list shows that there are in Tonquin 32 battalions of infantry, five batteries of artillery, and two companies of engineers, or over 30,000 men, besides a small cavalry force of Spahis.

The Omaha Bee, judging from an article in its issue of May 4, seems to be disturbed by the idea that the retirement some time ago of certain captains of the line, and the possible retirement of others at an early date, is simply done to make places for West Point graduates. The Bee says: "Officers disabled or incapacitated should be retired on the sole basis of length of time such incapacity has existed—those longest off duty at full pay should be retired, and this, regardless of every other consideration. Any other rule leads to favoritism and such favoritism is always injurious to the Service." The Bee is, perhaps, not aware that this is exactly what is being done, with more exactness, perhaps, than during any previous administration. Besides, whether retirements are made among the higher grades or among the lower of the line, it makes no difference, so far as creating vacancies for 2d lieutenants is concerned. The retirement of a colonel creates a vacancy for a 2d lieutenant just as much as would that of a captain or a 1st lieutenant. It is a cardinal military idea that captains should always be with their companies, ready and able to lead them wherever duty calls, and this, we believe, is the idea President Cleveland has had and followed out of late when he has directed several captains, absent from their companies for long periods by reason of physical disability, to present themselves before Retiring Boards for examination

PERSONAL ITEMS.

MAJOR H. G. BROWN, U. S. A., has rejoined at Fort Niagara, N. Y., from a visit to New York.

LIEUTENANT C. E. KILBOURNE, 2d U. S. Art., has returned to St. Augustine, Fla., from a visit to Ohio.

COLONEL G. L. GILLESPIE, U. S. A., and Mrs. Gillespie are recent guests at the Aquidneck, Newport, R. I.

CAPTAIN A. C. MARKLEY, 24th U. S. Inf., has taken charge of matters on the rifle range at Fort Sill, Ind. Ty.

CAPTAIN CASS DURHAM, 18th U. S. Inf., was examined this week by the Retiring Board in session at St. Paul.

CAPTAIN W. S. EDGERLY, 7th U. S. Cav., visiting at Farmington, N. H., has had his leave extended one month.

CAPTAIN G. A. GOODALE, 23d U. S. Infantry, leaves Fort Mackinac, Mich., next week on a short visit to friends in New England.

CAPTAIN GEO. M. RANDALL, 23d U. S. Infantry, and Mrs. Randall, are expected to rejoin at Fort Wayne, Mich., in a few days from leave.

LIEUTENANTS L. H. WALKER, T. C. Patterson and C. G. Treat, U. S. A., rejoined at Fort Monroe, Va., early in the week from short leaves.

CAPTAINS A. B. MACGOWAN and D. J. Craigie, 12th U. S. Infantry, left Madison Barracks, N. Y., early in the week on short leaves of absence.

LIEUTENANT C. A. L. TOTTEN, 4th U. S. Artillery, returned to Fort Adams, R. I., this week from a pleasant visit to New York City and vicinity.

LIEUTENANT DODGE, 24th Inf., I. R. P., Dept. Mo., is carrying out the improvements on the Division rifle range at Fort Leavenworth, Kas., projected last fall.

CAPTAIN L. Y. LORING, Assistant Surgeon, U. S. Army, lately at Tucson, Ariz., is in poor health and will seek recuperation during the summer on an extended sick leave.

THE first person to qualify as a marksman in the Department of the Missouri this year is Major E. V. Sumner, 5th Cav. Major-General Terry signed the certificate on May 5.

THE death of Lieut. Thomas C. Davenport, 4th U. S. Art., promotes to 1st Lieutenant, Fred. S. Strong, at present on duty at the Military Academy at Orchard Lake, Mich.

CHAPLAIN T. W. BARRY, U. S. A., has returned to Fort Leavenworth from St. Paul where he went to attend the consecration of the newly appointed Assistant Bishop for Kansas.

CAPTAIN S. R. WHITALL, 16th Infantry, will remain at Fort Ringgold, Texas, until early in July next, when he goes to San Antonio to take command of Co. K of his regiment.

THERE is something wrong, says the Kansas City Times. A few days have passed without a telegram from Washington that Secretary Endicott and Gen. Sheridan have had another row.

COLONEL H. G. LITCHFIELD, U. S. A., assumed command of the post of St. Francis Barracks, Fla., on Saturday last, Gen. R. B. Ayres relinquishing it then, to go on a five months' leave.

LIEUTENANT R. G. PROCTER, 5th U. S. Artillery, on sick leave at Auburn, Ky., from Fort Schuyler, N. Y. H., is improving, but his health will prevent his return to duty for several weeks to come.

A REPORT comes from Fort Douglas, Utah, that Mrs. Thibaut, wife of Captain Thibaut, 6th Inf., is dangerously ill. A letter from Fort Douglas, dated May 1, says the Kansas City Times, states that the doctors have given up all hope of her recovery.

MRS. JESSIE BENTON FREMONT will spend the summer in the West for the purpose of writing an accurate Life of Kit Carson, the famous scout, pathfinder and explorer, who piloted Gen. Frémont across the Rocky Mountains on his first expedition.

THE San Francisco News Letter, referring to the recent visit there of Prince Esterhazy of Austria, irreverently says: "He completely won the reporters' hearts. He told them tiger stories until they ached, and when Col. Sweeney attempted to wedge in a grizzly bear yarn, garnished with a McCloud river salmon, the Prince headed him off with an African lion, and threw a boa constrictor addition on the anecdote market to clinch the business. Major Joe Ward pushed an earthquake, a gigantic squash and a few big trees to the front, but Esterhazy took them easily into camp with a bull elephant, shot on the banks of the Nile. On the whole, it was a disgraceful defeat of our home liars, and should teach them the danger of engaging in this sort of contest with the Austrian article."

CAPT. J. M. BELL, 7th Cavalry, is East from Fort Buford, Dak., to remain until the middle of July.

CAPTAIN C. A. STEDMAN, 9th Cavalry, of Fort Robinson, Neb., will spend the month of June in the East.

MAJOR AMOS STICKNEY, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, registered at the Gibson House, Cincinnati, early in the week.

GENERAL AND MRS. SHARPE and Hon. Ira Davenport and Mrs. Davenport, sailed for Europe this week on the Aurania.

CAPTAIN P. F. HARVEY, Assistant Surgeon, U. S. Army, now in Washington, will spend July, August and September abroad.

CAPTAIN G. K. SANDERSON, 11th Infantry, lately recuperating at Macon, Ga., has rejoined at Fort Yates, Dakota, in improved health.

CAPTAIN F. A. WHITNEY, 8th Infantry, lately visiting at Highland, Md., was expected in New York this week to accompany recruits to Nebraska.

THE handsome house and grounds at Flushing, N. Y., known as "Ismalia," belonging to the estate of the late Gen. Chas. P. Stone, has been sold to Mr. D. T. Kimball.

THE case of Lieutenant J. H. G. Willcox, 7th U. S. Cavalry, tried at Fort Snelling, for duplication of pay accounts, has been concluded, and the proceedings handed in to Gen. Ruger for action.

MAJOR JAMES JACKSON, 1st U. S. Cavalry, on recruiting duty in New York City, will read a paper on the Modoc War before the Canteen Club at Martinelli's on Saturday evening of this week.

LIEUTENANT W. Y. STAMPER, 21st U. S. Infantry, of Fort Leavenworth, was called suddenly to New York, last week, by the death, May 4, of his son, Dudley, a child of five years of age. Lieut. Stamper returns to his post this week.

GENERAL GREELY, Chief Signal Officer, U. S. A., commenced on Monday the issue of a special weekly bulletin with the view of promptly giving each Monday morning, reliable information relative to the climatic conditions in the agricultural districts of the country.

THE will of the late James W. Schaumburg, formerly of the U. S. Army, who died in Philadelphia Oct. 11, 1885, bequeaths to Melanie South-Rousseau, a niece, and James Coleman, an attorney, of Washington, D. C., each one-half of a claim of $70,000 against the U. S.

LIEUTENANT M. M. MAXON, 10th U. S. Cavalry, who recently went from Arizona to Milwaukee with the remains of his father, who died at Santa Cruz, Cal., March 19, was taken seriously ill after arriving in Milwaukee. Mrs. Maxon has gone from Fort Grant to be with him.

EIGHT models for the proposed Lafayette monument in Washington have been examined by the committee, composed of Secretary of War Endicott, Architect Clark and Senator Hoar. They are as follows: Two by Bartholdi, two by French, two by Falguiere, one by Meade, and one by Marcie.

MAJOR MORSE K. TAYLOR, surgeon, U. S. A., after a long and honorable service, and participation in two wars, the Mexican war and the war of the Rebellion, passes to the retired list on Saturday of this week, having reached the age of sixty-four. That he may enjoy his well earned rest is the universal wish.

CAPTAIN GEO. S. WILSON, 12th U. S. Infantry, will move with his company, in a few days, from Sackett's Harbor to Bedlow's Island, and guard the Statue of Liberty. Captain S. A. Day, 5th Artillery, will then take his battery to Fort Schuyler to replace Captain Rawles's battery, which goes to Fort Hamilton. Captain Rawles's tour at Fort Hamilton, however, will be short, as his promotion to Major, 4th Artillery, will ensue August 10th next.

THE Prince and Princess of Wales and their daughters, the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise and the Comtesse of Paris, accompanied by brilliant suites, visited the Wild West Show and the grounds of the American Exhibition at London last week. The special performance given in honor of the occasion was witnessed with surprise and delight. Gladstone has also honored Col. "Bill" and his show with his presence.

JEFFERSON DAVIS has written a review of General Wolseley's "Life of Gen. Lee." Mr. Davis takes exception to many of the English General's statements, and while not finding fault with the superlative opinion of Gen. Lee's military ability expressed in the book, he shows very plainly that he considers Gen. Wolseley's criticisms of other Southern leaders unjust and unwarrantable. The review is written in a very caustic style, and contains interesting matter in the way of inside estimates of the relative value of the services of the Confederate leaders.

THE death of Major A. M. Randol, 1st U. S. Art., causes the following promotions in the artillery arm: Captain Edward R. Warner, 3d, to Major, 1st Regiment; 1st Lieutenant Edward C. Knower, 3d, to Captain, and 2d Lieutenant Wilbur Loveridge to 1st Lieutenant. These promotions take Major Warner from Fort McHenry, Md., to the Pacific Coast; Capt. Knower remains at Fort McHenry, Md., but changes from Batty. I to command of Batty. D, and Lieut. Loveridge, after completing his detail at Willet's Point June 30 next, will join Myrick's battery at Fort McHenry. The death of Major Randol somewhat alters the artillery slate as recently made up in connection with the approaching retirement of Colonel John Hamilton, of the 5th. Captain W. L. Haskin is now the senior of his grade in the artillery arm.

LIEUT. M. D. PARKER, 9th Cavalry, under recent orders, changes base from Fort Washakie, Wyo., to Fort Du Chesne, Utah.

COLONEL CHAS. T. ALEXANDER, Surgeon, U. S. A., now at St. Louis, will go abroad towards the end of May to remain until September.

COLONEL ALEX. CHAMBERS, 17th Infantry, was to leave Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., this week for a month for the benefit of his health.

LIEUTENANT A. L. WAGNER, 6th U. S. Infantry, is to deliver a lecture at Fort Leavenworth on the "Six Weeks' Campaign of 1866." Lieut. Wagner is an ardent student of his profession and we recall with pleasure essays and articles heretofore written by him.

GENERAL H. G. GIBSON, Colonel 3d U. S. Artillery, has made a change in his regimental staff, by transferring Lieutenant Constantine Chase from the adjutancy to the quartermastership, and Lieutenant Satterlee from the quartermastership to the adjutancy.

WILLIAM FARRAR SMITH, who is now employed by the Government as a Civil Engineer, is reported to have engaged in a controversy with the office of the Army Chief of Engineers, as to whether he should not properly be addressed as "General" instead of "Mr."

CAPTAIN J. C. SCANTLING and Lieutenant W. P. Stone, 2d U. S. Artillery, have been placed by Major Sinclair, commandant, in immediate charge of the Indian prisoners, at Mt. Vernon Barracks. Our reports are that the Indians are settling down nicely in their new location.

LIEUTENANT LOTUS NILES, 2d U. S. Artillery, now at Jackson Barracks, La., succeeds Lieutenant Sebree Smith as regimental quartermaster of the 2d Artillery. This takes him to St. Augustine, and Lieutenant Smith, from St. Augustine, to Jackson Barracks. Both are meritorious officers.

THE engagement of Miss Laura Buchanan, a cousin of Mrs. Simpson, to Mr. Harrison, of New York, is announced. Also that of Miss Emma Wilson, a sister-in-law of Lieutenant Gale, 4th Cavalry, and Colonel Van Horn, 25th Infantry, to Mr. Burgoyne, of St. Paul Minn. The wedding will be early in June.

MR. H. MOSMAN, the sculptor, of Chicopee, Mass., has been given the commission to execute in bronze the equestrian statue of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant to be placed in Lincoln Park, Chicago. It will be the largest equestrian figure ever cast in this country, being 18¼ feet high from the base to the top of the rider's head.

GENERAL SHERMAN, says the New York Critic, is enjoying his well-earned leisure with the zest of a young man celebrating his majority. The discipline and formality of military life have failed to make him either a martinet or a prig; he is a generous, bright and sympathetic man, as well as a brave soldier and a great commander.

GENERAL BENJAMIN HARRISON, of Indianapolis, has been presented with a medal found on a farm in Morgan County, a relic of the campaign of 1840. It is made of copper, and on one side, inscribed, "The People's Choice, the Hero of Tippecanoe," and on the same side the picture of a log cabin and a barrel of cider; on the reverse side, the words, "Major General W. H. Harrison. Born Feb. 9, 1773," together with the bust of the General.

THE death of the lamented General Canby is recalled by a recent item in the Kansas City Star, which says: "There are very few of the original Modoc tribe left now. Bogus Charley, one of the fighting chiefs of this once powerful and bloodthirsty band, when asked, some years ago, how the tribe was progressing in the Territory, pointed pathetically to the Indian burying ground, and said, in broken English: 'Only a hunner now; all over there.'"

THE New York Tribune in an article on "The National Rifle Association Directors," says: "The most modest man on the board is, perhaps, Major George Shorkley, U. S. A., retired. He is a keen all-round sportsman, a crack shot with both shotgun and rifle, and has probably expended as much time and powder in testing arms and ammunition for his own satisfaction as any man in the country. While in the Army he was repeatedly called upon as an expert to testify, advise or experiment, in that line. He can draw a bead, too, with the deadly camera, and his amateur photographic outfit is a familiar sight at Creedmoor. The list of former presidents of the Association contain such names as Gens. U. S. Grant, W. S. Hancock and P. H. Sheridan, and among the life directors are ex-Judge Hilton, Judge Gildersleeve, Col. John Bodine, Col. Wm. C. Church, E. A. Buck, David W. Judd and other well-known public men."

LIEUTENANT W. W. WOTHERSPOON, 12th U. S. Inf., was married, at Grace Church, Utica, N. Y., April 27, to Miss Mary C. Adams, daughter of Counselor C. D. Adams, a prominent member of the bar in Utica. A reception followed the wedding. The bridal presents were very numerous and included much old family silver from the relatives of the groom, besides many elegant and costly articles of fine glass and silverware, bric-a-brac and China. Among those present were Captain Palfrey, of the Corps of Engineers; Major Brown, Lieut. Howard, Fort Niagara; Lieut. and Mrs. Wainwright, Mrs. Mathews, of Washington, sisters of the groom, Lieutenant Baker, Mrs. Dove, of Sackett's Harbor; Miss Egbert, Fort Niagara; Major and Mrs. Egbert, Sackett's Harbor, etc. After a short tour they will return to Utica about May 15, spend a week there and then go to Madison Barracks, where a hearty reception awaits them.

MAJOR J. J. UPHAM, 5th U. S Cavalry, after a long sojourn in Europe, was expected at Fort Leavenworth this week.

LIEUTENANT E. V. SMITH, 3d U. S. Infantry, and bride, are recent guests at the Ryan Hotel, St. Paul, on their way to Fort Missoula.

GENERAL S. K. SCHWENCK, U. S. A., retired, left New York City this week for Jamaica, Long Island, N. Y., where he intends to spend the summer.

MAJOR JAMES C. POST, Engineer Corps, who is to succeed Gen. Parke as Assistant Chief of Engineers, will arrive in Washington for duty in a few days.

No action has yet been taken by the President in the case of Maj. Warren Webster, Med. Dept., who was some time ago recommended for "wholly" retirement.

COLONEL E. F. TOWNSEND, 12th U. S. Infantry, of Sackett's Harbor, passed through New York this week en route to the meeting of the Army of the Cumberland.

GENERAL HORACE PORTER responded for "The Army and Navy" and Senator Hiscock for "Our Coast Defences," at the dinner of the Federal Club in New York, May 11.

QUEEN KAPIOLANI and Princess Liloukalani, with their suites and guests, visited Fort Warren, Boston Harbor, on Friday, and were received with due honors by Capt. J. P. Story, 4th Art., the post commander.

SECRETARY OF WAR ENDICOTT, Adjt. Gen. Drum, Maj. Gen. Terry and Col. Thos. F. Barr, composing the military prison commission, are expected at Fort Leavenworth, May 15, to make the semi-annual inspection of that institution.

THE proceedings of the San Francisco Retiring Board in the case of Capt. Wm. B. Pease, 6th Inf., have not yet reached Washington, but it is learned that his examination has been completed, and that he will be recommended for retirement.

GENERAL SIMON B. BUCKNER, a graduate of West Point, a veteran of the Mexican War, and a brave soldier "on the other side," during the Rebellion, is likely to be the next Governor of Kentucky. His middle name is Bolivar, and his young wife's Betty, and there being also a young baby, the slogan in the political campaign is "Bolivar, Betty and the Baby."

THE Fort Davis News of May 6 says: "Dr. and Mrs. L. A. Buffington left Saturday for Fort Hancock.... Lieut. W. C. McFarland's son Lennie has had a touch of rheumatic fever.....The Good Templars had a good time at their installation....Lieut. F. H. Hardie, R. Q. M., found everything relating to his department in most excellent shape, on his return, the same having been under the efficient supervision of Lieut. Geo. H. Morgan."

THE following officers are registered at the War Department this week: 2d Lieut. P. H. Clarke, 10th Cav.; Col. James Oakes, retired; 1st Lieut. W. W. Wotherspoon, 12th Inf.; 2d Lieut. G. W. S. Stevens, 5th Art.; 1st Lieut. L. H. Walker, 4th Art.; 1st Lieut. S. W. Fountain, 8th Cav.; 1st Lieut. T. C. Paterson, 1st Art.; 2d Lieut. C. G. Treat, 5th Art.; Capt. J. T. McGinniss, retired: Major H. C. Corbin, A. A. G.; Lieut.-Col. A. L. Hough, 16th Inf.; Col. E. F. Townsend, 12th Inf.; Col. W. D Whipple, A. A. G.

COL. G. N. LIEBER, Acting Judge Advocate Gen., and Major J. W. Clous, Deputy Judge Advocate Gen., U. S. A., were, upon motion of Attorney General Garland, on Monday last, admitted to practice, as counsel for the Government, before the U. S. Supreme Court. The first appearance of these officers before this high tribunal will probably be in the habeas corpus case of Privates Esmond and McGuirl, of the 3d Art., which has been appealed from the court in General Term of the District of Columbia.

SECOND LIEUTENANT JOHN J. SHAW, 6th Infantry, the young officer who disappeared from Fort Douglas, Utah, after having fraudulently sold his pay accounts a number of times, was, on May 9, by direction of the President, dropped from the rolls of the Army as a deserter, the prescribed three months having elapsed since his disapearance. Shaw when last heard from was in London, England, from which place he wrote to the Adjutant General, under date of March 7, tendering his resignation. It was, of course, not accepted.

THE Omaha Herald reports that ex-Lieut. Flipper, late of our Service, is on the high road to fortune. Since he went to Mexico he has been in the employ of a Chicago syndicate engaged in the discovery of seven mines, from which the early Spanish conquerors drew great wealth in gold and silver. Lieut. Flipper's party is reported to have discovered two or three mines, the Guaynopa and the Layonda. One is a gold and the other a silver mine, with inexhaustible supplies of metal. Lieut. Flipper, who is en route for Chicago, will have a share.

"THE recent letter of Gen. Rosser, denouncing Gen. Sheridan for the war devastations in the Shenandoah Valley, has," says the Washington Critic, "rekindled the smothered camp fires of the Grand Army of the Republic all along the line, and the veteran 'boys in blue' are firing into Rosser with red hot shot. It has also had the effect of starting a Presidential 'boom' for the Lieutenant General of the Army, which may possibly assume important proportions. The ticket talked about in Washington hotel corridors is: For President, Gen. Phil. H. Sheridan of Ohio; for Vice-President, Chauncey M. Depew of New York."

MAJOR GENERAL SCHOFIELD, U. S. A., and his Aides, Major Sanger and Captain Sawyer, returned to Governor's Island, on Friday last, much pleased with their trip to Ohio and Kentucky. While at Newport, Ky., General Schofield inspected several places deemed suitable for the site of the new military post to be built there, but an announcement of his decision has not yet been made public.

THE Washington Capital says: Whenever Secretary Endicott goes away from Washington we observe that General Sheridan also finds some business requiring his attention elsewhere. General Sheridan does not like to take suggestions from an officer whom he regards as his own subordinate, and so he has adopted the practice of going out of town whenever Mr. Endicott goes and appoints General Benét to represent him.

PRINCE FREDERICK LEOPOLD, of Prussia, with Baron Alvensleben, the German Minister; Herr M. R. Janisch, attache to the Legation; the Prince's suite—Baron Nickisch, Count Kanitz and Count Wendel and the German Consul General—visited the Military Academy May 12. Carriages sent by Gen. Merritt awaited the guests. A twelve-gun salute honored the Prince. Every department from garret to kitchen was examined, and from an expert's point of view.

CAPTAIN EDWARD T. COMEGYS, Assistant Surgeon, U. S. A., was married May 5, at Ann Arbor, Mich., to Miss Grace North Willcox, second daughter of General O. B. Willcox, U. S. A. After the ceremony the married couple left for Sackett's Harbor, the Doctor's duties at Madison Barracks preventing a long absence at this time. The military post will thus have two brides to welcome, both daughters of its old commander, the one the wife of Lieut. S. C. Mills, 12th Infantry, and the other of Dr. Comegys. A complimentary concert by the 12th Infantry band was tendered Dr. and Mrs. E. T. Comegys at Madison Barracks on Monday evening. The following appropriate selections were rendered: Wedding March, Mendelssohn; Waltz--Amorettentanse, Gung'l; Kindred Souls—Duet for cornets, Eilenberg; Selection—From the Merry War, Strauss; The Dear Home—Serenade for Saxophone, arr. by Greissinger; Anvil Polka, Parlow.

LIEUTENANT (junior grade) RICHARD H. TOWNLEY, who was before the Naval Examining Board a few days ago, has been recommended for retirement.

MISS REBECCA REYNOLDS, daughter of the late Rear Admiral William Reynolds, U. S. N., was married at Philadelphia, May 12, to Mr. Charles J. McDaniel, of New York.

LIEUTENANT S. C. LEMLY, U. S. N., lately on duty in the office of the Judge Advocate-General of the Navy, joined the Trenton this week at Norfolk, Va.

IT is understood that Lieut. Wm. H. Jaques, U. S. N., contemplates resigning from the Navy for the purpose of accepting a more lucrative position with the Bethlehem Steel Works, the contractors for furnishing the Navy with armor plates and gun forgings.

LIEUT. CHAS. A. GOVE, U. S. N., has been detached from the Hydrographic Office and granted four months' leave of absence, a portion of which he will spend in Washington it is expected. Lieut. Gove returned from the China Station on the U. S. S. Trenton.

IT is understood that the Retiring Board before which Lieut. Comdr. Socrates Hubbard, recently appeared, recommended that he be granted a further period of six months on the active list before another physical examination be had as to his fitness for sea service.

1ST LIEUT. H. G. ELLSWORTH, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Ellsworth, are stopping at the Hygeia Hotel, Fortress Monroe, enjoying a brief leave before going on duty again. Lieut. Ellsworth recently joined the U. S. S. Ossipee, and will make about a two years' cruise on that vessel.

CAPTAIN ARTHUR R. YATES, of the New Hampshire, recently went to Portsmouth, N. H., for a brief visit. As Commanders Davis and White, of the Saratoga and Portsmouth, were also away from the vessels, the command of the squadron devolved upon Commander Train, of the Jamestown.

P. A. SURG. AND MRS. FRANK ANDERSON, of the Navy, are to be congratulated on the safe arrival on May 2 of a little daughter. The stranger put in an appearance at New Brighton, Staten Island, and it is understood that mother and child are doing as well as can be expected. Dr. Anderson was married to Miss Coffin June 17, 1886.

PAYMR. W. J. THOMSON, U. S. N., having been detached from the Mohican on the Pacific Station, Paymr. Rand has been designated as his relief, and will sail from New York for Aspinwall in the P. M. S. S. of May 20. Paymr. Thomson has been attached to the Mohican a trifle less than two years, so that his detachment is out of the usual order.

THE vacancy made on board the Juniata, South Pacific Station, by the death of Chief Engr. Hunt, of that vessel, has been filled by the assignment of Chief Engr. Isaac R. McNary. Mr. McNary has, until recently, been on duty as inspector of coal for the Navy, under the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting, at the New York Navy-yard.

LIEUT. N. E. NILES, of the Hydrographic Office, Navy Department, has been, and still is, busily at work getting out the charts destined for the Ossipee. Although this vessel will be commissioned for but a short cruise, the numbers of charts to be furnished is about the same as would be the case if she were about starting out on a full three years' cruise.

REDFIELD CHANDLER, son of Rear Admiral Chandler, in command of the Asiatic Station, is said to have disappeared about two months since, or shortly after his discharge from the position he held in the New York Navy-yard, and fears are entertained for his safety. Both his father and mother are in China, and as his discharge from the Navy-yard was a very severe blow to the young man, it is suspected that some ill fortune has overtaken him.

PAYMASTER D. A. SMITH, U. S. N., left New York early in the week to join the Boston.

MR. PREBLE TUCKER, a grandson of Commodore Preble, U. S. N., was married last week in New York to Miss Katherine Waldo.

PASSED ASSISTANT ENGINEER A. B. WILLITS, U. S. N., is expected at his home in Portsmouth, Va., from California, on a three months' leave.

DURING the absence of Ensign J. J. Knapp, U.S.N., on a three years' cruise, Mrs. Knapp will reside with her parents at 800 Ellis street, San Francisco.

WE are glad to learn that Chief Engineer Henry Lee Snyder, U. S. N., has sufficiently recovered his health to return to his duties as superintendent of the State, War and Navy Building, Washington.

A PARIS correspondent writes: The American Colony has a delightful addition, Mr. and Mrs. Somerville Pinkney Tuck and Miss Tuck, of New York, are at the Hotel du Palais, cours la Reine.

CAPTAIN GEO. C. REMEY, U. S. N., was one of the judges at a tournament held May 6, at Portsmouth, Va. Six knights engaged in an animated contest for the privilege of crowning his "ladye fayre" Queen of Love and Beauty.

LIEUTENANT A. G. WINTERHALTER, U. S. N., is in Paris taking part in the conference for the purpose of forming a plan of co operation in photographing the whole sky. This conference has been called by Admiral Mouchez, director of the Paris observatory.

REAR ADMIRAL SHUFELDT, says the San Francisco Bulletin, is reported to be instituting proceedings against the Shanghai Courier in connection with certain damaging articles which appeared in that journal recently regarding his course as adviser of the King of Corea.

THE great social event of the week in Washington was the concert on Thursday in the ballroom at the residence of the Secretary of the Navy, for the benefit of the "Washington Training School for Servants." Needless to say it was a pecuniary as well as an artistic success.

CARPENTER D. M. W. NASH, U. S. N., and Mrs. Nash, of Norfolk, Va., recently celebrated the 30th anniversary of their marriage. Mr. Nash is now the oldest of 16 families, composed of 57 children, grand and great grand children, and that 14 of the 16 families, along with 52 of the 57 children alive, are residents of Portsmouth, Va. Mr. David Nash has now eight children and five grand children living, notwithstanding he is only 52 years old.

THE annual meeting of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company will be held at the end of the month. President J. B. Houston, late of the Navy, has declined a re-election, although he will remain probably in the board of directors. The N. Y. Tribune reports that a prominent director of the company, speaking of the probable changes, said: "I think Mr. Hart has been displeased at some indiscreet utterances of President Houston. It is hardly worth while to boast that an office brings in $100,000 a year through successful speculation unless you wish to resign it in a short time. I understand that Mr. Hart complains that the president has not attended the board meetings as he should have done and that he has said recently in rather vigorous language that the next president would look after the company's business and not at the tape."

RECENT DEATHS.

BREVET COLONEL ALANSON M. RANDOL, Major, 1st U. S. Artillery, a gallant officer, died at New Almaden, Cal., May 7, of Bright's disease. He had been an invalid for some time past, but his death was not expected so soon. Colonel Randol has a splendid military record. He was graduated from West Point in 1860, and appointed Brevet 2d Lieutenant of Artillery; shortly afterwards transferred to the Ordnance Corps, again to the 3d Artillery in 1861, and became 1st Lieutenant, 1st Artillery, May 14, 1861. From that time forward during the war he was constantly and actively engaged in the field and participated in many battles. For gallantry at Newmarket, Va., June 30, 1862, he received the brevet of Captain, and was promoted Captain, 1st Artillery, Oct. 11, 1862. He was Chief of Artillery of the 5th Corps in the Rappahannock Campaign, and was engaged in all the battles of the Army of the Potomac. In December, 1864, he was appointed Colonel of the 2d New York Cavalry Volunteers, and followed General Sheridan's fortunes until the surrender of General Lee. He received the brevets of Major, Lieutenant-Colonel, and Colonel in the Regular Army, and of Brigadier-General in the Volunteers, for special gallantry at Gettysburg and Five Forks and meritorious services during the war generally. On the 19th of April, 1882, he was promoted Major, 3d Artillery, and in a few weeks later was transferred to his old love, the 1st Art. Since the war he has performed a variety of responsible service in the East and on the Pacific Coast, his last station being Fort Canby. Colonel Randol was an officer of handsome presence and every inch a soldier. He had numerous friends and relatives in New York City and vicinity, and his death will be universally regretted.

BREVET MAJOR-GENERAL HENRY F. CLARKE, Colonel, U. S. Army, retired, a distinguished and worthy officer, died at Washington, D. C., May 10. General Clarke entered West Point from his native State, Pennsylvania, in 1839, was graduated in 1843, and assigned to the 2d Artillery. He rendered gallant service during the Mexican War, receiving the brevet of Captain for his conduct at the battle of Chapultepec. He was wounded at Molino del Rey. He was promoted 1st Lieutenant Sept. 8, 1847, was offered a captaincy in the 10th Infantry in 1855, but declined, and January 12, 1857, was appointed to the staff as Captain and Commissary of Subsistence, and promoted Major in August, 1861. From September, 1861, to May, 1866, he also held the positions of Colonel and A. A. D. C. His services during the War of the Rebellion were of the most meritorious character, and he received the brevets of Colonel for gallantry in the Maryland campaign, Brigadier-General for gallantry at Gettysburg, and Major-General "for faithful and meritorious services in the Subsistence Department during the Rebellion." He was promoted Colonel in the Subsistence Department May 20, 1882, and was retired from active service November 9, 1884, his sixty-fourth birthday. General Clarke was a refined, courteous and unassuming gentleman, with a charming family and beautiful home surroundings. He leaves a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his loss. The funeral took place on Thursday, a detachment of artillery from Washington Barracks being present to act as pall-bearers, etc. The large number of friends present at the ceremonies attested the general esteem in which the deceased officer was held.

INFORMATION has been received of the death May 7, on board the Iroquois at Panama, of 2d Lieut. Arthur H. Clarke, U. S. Marine Corps. A despatch from Newport, R. I., referring to the death says: "Newporters were shocked to learn of the reported suicide of Lieut. Clarke at Panama. Lieut. Clarke was the only son of Mr. Henry W. Clarke, of this city. He was a member of the class of '79, Rogers's High School, but left at the close of 1878 to enter the Naval Academy at Annapolis as cadet engineer. Graduating from the Academy in 1882 he went on a two years' cruise on the Richmond in South American waters. In 1884 he passed an examination as 2d lieutenant in the Marine Corps, and for the past two years has been on the Iroquois, near the Isthmus of Panama, serving on land during the revolution there. He was a young man of bright promise, and seemed well satisfied with his experience in the Navy, making an excellent impression on his superior officers. As far as is known here, Lieut. Clarke had no reason for committing suicide, and it is expected that later information will show his death to have been from some other cause. His father and mother are completely prostrated."

LAST week we briefly adverted to the death of 1st Lieut. Thomas C. Davenport, 4th U. S. Artillery, May 6, at the St. Elizabeth's Insane Asylum, Washington, D. C., to which he had been removed a few days previous from the Artillery School, Fort Monroe, Va. Lieutenant Davenport entered the Military Academy, July 1, 1867, was graduated June 14, 1872, and promoted 2d Lieutenant, 9th U. S. Cavalry. He served for some years on frontier service, had then a tour of signal duty, was promoted 1st Lieutenant in 1878, and in 1886 secured a transfer to the 4th U. S. Artillery. He was a genial officer and all will regret his untimely death. He was a son of the late Captain R. K. Davenport, U. S. Navy, who died in 1872. His mother was Jennie Brent Graham, the sister of Major George R. Graham, Marine Corps, and he was a nephew of Capt. Thomas Corbin, U. S. N.

JOHN MOUNTPLEASANT, chief of the Tuscarora Indian tribe, died on the reservation, near Lockport, N. Y., May 6, aged 77. He was the wealthiest and most influential man in the tribe. His widow is a sister of Gen. Eli Parker, who was Indian Commissioner under the late President Grant.

MRS. SARAH A. LUKENS, who was married in 1826 to Seth Lukens in the house in which Washington breakfasted on the morning of the battle of Trenton, and was one of the party of young ladies who met Lafayette on his arrival in New Jersey in 1824, died a few days ago at Oxford, N. J.

CAPTAIN SAMUEL FOOTE, an employee in the construction department of the Navy-yard for many years, died May 5, in the Homeopathic Hospital, Brooklyn. Capt. Foote was a brother-in-law of Senator Hawley, and his widow is a niece of Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher.

MR. L. G. DE RUSSY, Jr., who died at New Orleans May 6, was a son of Gen. L. G. De Russy, who served in the Regular Army from 1814 to 1842, and during the Mexican war as a colonel of Louisiana volunteers.

PHILIP J. LANGER, M. D., formerly second assistant engineer, U. S. Navy, died May 9 at Philadelphia. He enlisted in the Navy in 1862 and resigned in 1870. The funeral took place on Thursday.

MRS. QUIRK, wife of Major Paul Quirk, U. S. Army, retired, died at West Hoboken, N. J., May 6. The funeral took place May 10 and was attended by numerous friends and relatives.

GENERAL W. H. CHRISTIAN, who served during the Mexican War and as Colonel of the 26th New York during the War of the Rebellion, died at Utica, N. Y., May 8.

ARMY OF THE CUMBERLAND.

THE 18th annual reunion of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland commenced at Washington, D. C., May 11, Lieut.-Gen. Sheridan presiding. Many prominent officers were present, but not so many as was anticipated. The chairman of the Committee on Publications reported that the society's book had been published and was in the hands of members. The book contains a portrait of Gen. Crittenden, one of the corps commanders of the old Army. With this portrait and that of Gen. Palmer, to appear in the succeeding volume, the books will show a complete set of portraits of the department commanders and thirteen commanders of the Army of the Cumberland.

The treasurer's report showed the society to be in good financial condition. Of the various committees appointed, Gen. W. D. Whipple, U. S. A., was appointed chairman of the Committee on Oration and Col. H. C. Corbin, U. S. A., on "Time and place of next meeting." The business meeting being over, adjournment was made until the evening, when they met at the Congregational Church, which was handsomely decorated.

Gen. Sheridan was greeted with a hearty outburst of hand-clapping and cheers as he rose to respond to the address of welcome. After some preliminary remarks, he said:

I served in almost everybody's army from Pea Ridge to Apomattox. [Applause.] I was down there even under General Sherman. But there was no army that I became so much attached to as the Army of the Cumberland, and my attachment arises from the fact that we were always faithful to each other. We had our up and downs, and we had our reverses and our successes, and in all of these events—and I was there [applause]—there was nobody that I have known or heard of who was not willing to help his neighbor, and always helped.

Col. Henry M. Duffield, the orator of the meeting, was introduced by Gen. Sheridan as "one of our old Army of the Cumberland soldiers," and delivered the annual address. At the conclusion of the oration the band played a number of military calls and airs and then Gen. Sherman stepped forward at General Sheridan's invitation to indulge in a few Army reminiscences. Needless to say, his remarks were enthusiastically applauded. He was followed by Gen. Rosecrans and ex-Gov. Curtin.

On Thursday, May 12, came the great day of the reunion, the unveiling of the statue of General Garfield. The day was beautiful, and, as a consequence, the procession, under the marshalship of General Absalom Baird, U. S. A., was a fine one, both as to its military and civic features.

The 3d Artillery, a battalion of marines and a detachment of 200 sailors from the Galena with the Marine band formed the 1st Division.

The 2d Division, under command of Major Goodloe, of the Marine Corps, consisted of the District militia, G. A. Republic and civic societies.

The statue, which is a bronze, is the design of the sculptor, Quincy Ward, who also designed the equestrian statue of General Thomas. It is ten feet six inches in height, and represents Garfield facing the West, in the act of delivering an address, with his right hand resting on a column and a manuscript held in his left. It cost $56,748.

A battery of artillery fired a national salute. Gen. Sheridan introduced the orator of the day, Gen. J. Warren Keifer, who on the part of the Monument Committee, delivered an address transferring the statue to Gen. Sheridan. At its conclusion, Gen. Sheridan, in behalf of the society, transferred the statue to the President of the United States, which was accepted by him in appropriate terms.

At the business meeting of the society Col. Henry Stone, of Boston, was selected as the orator, and Col. McMichael, of Philadelphia, as alternate of the next reunion. Chicago was selected as the place, and Chickamauga week, in September, 1888, as the time for holding the next reunion. The present officers of the society were re-elected for the coming year, as follows: President, Gen. P. H. Sheridan; Corresponding Secretary, Gen. Henry M. Cist; Treasurer, Gen. J. S. Fullerton; Recording Secretary, Gen. John W. Steele, and a vice-president from each State represented in the society.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

A CORRESPONDENT of the St. Louis Globe at the City of Mexico writing of the celebration May 5 of the victory of the Mexicans over the French at Puebla 25 years ago, says: "Those Americans who, ten short months ago, were rasping their throats with war cries against Mexico, might have seen the pageant with profit. There was something instructive, to say the least, in the regiments of regular infantry, in the squadrons of cavalry, in the artillery, heavy and light, and, finally, most of all in the rurals, to compare with which there is no body of armed men on the continent. Americans are inclined to hold the Mexican Army in contempt, and there is a prevailing opinion that these soldiers are badly drilled, poorly equipped, few in numbers, and no fighters. As regards the drilling of the infantry, this is subject to criticism. The men do not march well, but they are the poorest branch of the service. The cavalry and artillery make a much better appearance, while the rurals, the pride of Mexico are superb in their movements. As for the equipment of the Mexican Army, it can be said with truth that taken as a whole it is far superior to that of the United States. The fact is that Mexico could start an army of 45,000 regular troops, fully equipped, in every respect, for the Rio Grande to-morrow, and the United States could not. It is not pretended to doubt what the final result would be in an encounter between a very big and a very small man, but in this case the small man is in a better state of preparation than the big one. Although the sentiment of the country is in favor of peace, and there is no probability of a revolutionary movement, the Mexican Army is kept in a high state of discipline, and was never in a better condition. With a regularly paid, well fed, and highly disciplined army at his command and railway facilities for the rapid movement of troops, the stability of President Diaz's Administration would be assured, even if it did not possess the loyal and patriotic support of the great majority of the Mexican people."

A despatch early in the week from Guaymas, Mex., stated that under sentence of Court-martial were shot Col. Arvizu, Lieut. Guiterez, and Louis Feneen, who brought a few weeks ago a squad of soldiers to the American side and attempted to release from the local officers a man who was not under arrest, but whom the officers were taking charge of to keep him out of trouble.

The news has been contradicted, and the latest is that the prisoners have been respited and that our State Department has expressed the wish that some lesser punishment be awarded them.

MONUMENT TO JOHN SEDGWICK.

THE members of the Old Sixth Corps who went to the battlefield of Spottsylvania this week to dedicate a monument to General John Sedgwick, were met and warmly welcomed by a large number of Virginians, including many ex-Confederates, who had gathered there to greet them and to witness the ceremonies. General H. G. Wright, as presiding officer, called the assemblage to order at the monument, and prayer was offered by the Rev. J. N. Ritner, late brevet captain of the Forty-ninth Pennsylvania volunteers. After music by the Fredricksburg band, General Wright delivered the opening address, and a letter was read from President Cleveland. The memorial tablet was then unveiled by General Wright, commander of the corps, assisted by six officers of General Getty's division. The monument is of Quincy granite, approximately pyramidal in form, nine feet in height and five feet five inches square at the base, and surrounded by a cross. General J. W. Latta, of Pennsylvania, the orator of the day, then delivered his address, which was listened to with profound attention, and was frequently interrupted by applause. At its conclusion Lieut. Col. Pingree, ex-Governor of Vermont, made an earnest and patriotic speech.

INSPECTORS OF STEEL FOR NAVAL VESSELS.

THE following is a list, corrected up to date, of naval officers connected with the inspection of the steel plates required for the new vessels now under contract:

Comdr. R. D. Evans, Navy Department.
Lieut. F. P. Gilmore, Pacific Rolling Mills, San Francisco.
Lieut. J. A. Rodgers, Linden Steel Co., Pittsburgh.
Lieut. J. H. C. Coffin, Phœnix Iron Co., Pa.
Lieut. W. C. Cowles, Carnegie, Phipps and Co., Allegheny, Pa.
Lieut. E. J. Dorn, Pacific Rolling Mills, San Francisco.
Lieut. F. J. Milligan, Navy Department.
Lieut. F. W. Coffin, Pennsylvania Steel Co., Harrisburg, Pa.

THE PRESS IN WAR TIME.

MONCURE D. CONWAY read a paper on "The General and the Journalist in time of War" before the Military Service Institution at Governor's Island on Monday night. He related his experiences as a correspondent in the Franco-German War showing the relations of the commanders to the reporters. The Germans afforded favorable opportunities; the French put obstacles in the way. One of the points Mr. Conway made was that "the commander and the private ought never to be left without some of the restraint held over them by the newspaper correspondent." The paper was discussed by Maj. James Pemberton Grund, Capt. F. V. Greene, and Wm. C. Church. Gen. James B. Fry, U. S. A., read this letter written by Gen. Washington:

CAMP OF THE GLOVE, July 19, 1777.

To a Committee of Congress on a visit to the Camp:

A small travelling press to follow headquarters would be productive of many eminent advantages. It would enable us to give speedily exact information of any military transactions that take place, with proper comments upon them, and thereby frustrate the pernicious tendency of falsehood and misrepresentation, which, in my opinion, of what complexion they may be, are in the main detrimental to our cause. If the people had a channel of intelligence that from its usual authenticity they could look up to with confidence they might often be preserved from that despondency they are apt to fall into from the exaggerated picture our enemies and their emissaries among us commonly draw of any misfortune we meet with. An ingenious man to accompany this press and be employed wholly in writing for it would render it singularly beneficial. GEO. WASHINGTON

Major-Gen. J. M. Schofield, the President of the Institution, closed the talk. Among those present were Gens. Jno. P. Hatch, T. F. Rodenbough and Gen. William D. Whipple, Gen. J. J. Milhau, Col. Charles Sutherland, Major J. P. Sanger, Major W. F. Randolph, Capt. Charles Morris, Lieut. W. B. Hamilton, Lieut. J. E. Sawyer, Lieut. E. B. Hills, Lieut. H. C. Carbaugh, Lieut. B. H. Roberts, Lieut. Frank Thorp, Lieut. W. P. Newcomb, and Lieut. John Pitcher. Col. Schermerhorn and Major Ackerman, of the National Guard.

COMMISSIONED officers might be allowed to wear on each side of the coat collar: For 5 years' service, one bar; 10 years' service, two bars; 15 years' service, gold leaf; 20 years' service, silver leaf; 25 years' service, eagle; 30 years' service, one star; 35 years' service, two stars; 40 years' service, three stars; 45 years' service, four stars. This is simple, and would show what rank an officer's service should entitle him to, if promotion was not so slow as it is. What do you think of it? GRUBA.

LATE ARMY ORDERS.

Lieutenant S. C. Mills, 12th Infantry, is granted a further extention of leave for 16 days.

Captain F. W. Elbrey, assistant surgeon, will report to General Holabird's Retiring Board for examination.

HONORS TO HAWAIIAN ROYALTY.

The New York Herald's Washington correspondent, writing up Queen Kapiolani's visit to Mt. Vernon and her reception on the Dispatch, says:

Promptly after the vessel started lunch was served in the cabin. After lunch all the ladies and gentlemen on board were presented to the Queen and the Princess, and the Queen said she enjoyed this excursion more than any other pleasure planned for her since her arrival. She was told that the launch on which she went ashore and returned to the vessel is to be named the Kapiolani, in her honor.

This is not the first instance wherein such a compliment has been tendered her by our naval folks. During the six months' sojourn of the flagship Pensacola in Honolulu harbor, after taking Kalakaua home in 1875, our after-pivot bore on either side its carriage a handsome tablet with the name "Kapiolani," placed there by direction of the gallant Admi. John J. Almy. More than once did her Majesty and the Admiral "hobnob" alongside of "Kapiolani's gun," as the afterguard boys used to call it, when the Queen and the "elite" of Hawaii's capital used to "take in" our hops.

That trip of the Pensacola's was a memorable one, not only because we took the King home, but on account of the lively shake up we gave him when about half way from 'Frisco to the Islands. In the morning watch, just about four bells, there was a crash; like, well, just like falling timber—for that's what it was—and in less time than it takes one to write it, everybody, from the King to the Jacko-the Dust, was on deck in costume de rigeur, as that term applied to Kalakaua's subjects before we missionized them. The Boatswain was piping "All hands save ship," and there certainly was a queer old mess to clear up. The ship being under all plain sail, the maintopmast had broken off just at the lower masthead and was hanging over the side with its weight of canvas, the mizzen royal and fore-topgallant having, of course, followed their leader. Colonel Steinberger stood gazing at the wreck of the neat little steam launch Uncle Sam was sending to Samoa for him, the King was wondering where his Royal Standard had disappeared (superstitious jack tars believed that it was too heavy for the mainmast and had caused the disaster), Admiral and Captain (Gherardi) looked askance at the officer of the deck, a worthy gentleman now rusticating at Asnieres France, until the Governors of Oahu and Mani philosophically broke the monotony, it is believed by a recourse to that gubernatorial chestnut, "It's a long time between drinks." At any rate, mum was the word, when assured that the ship was safe, and more than one private "log" that day referred to the "Cham." battle which followed. Never mind the cause of the disaster, we'll let that go with the flowers that bloom in Honolulu. We got the King safely home, but, oh! ye gods! what a sight for a flagship carrying royalty. Representative frigates of three foreign powers were in the harbor, ships, every one of them, decked out in holiday rig and with yards manned.

The Pensacola had a ten-foot pole projecting from the maintop and on it was hung the Hawaiian standard! The log-book said that we had a jury-mast rigged, but it was more generally dubbed the former.

Kalakaua was glad to get home. His subjects, observing an old custom in honoring a returned chief, flocked to the palace, each bringing a present of food. They overcame him with pigs, chickens, eggs, vegetables and fruits, and from the greatness of his store he made glad the heart of the American tar by "dividing the surplus," the Pensacola's share being three or four capacious boat-loads.

UMPHRA MAGOG.

SIDE BY SIDE WITH LIEUT. MERRIAM.

FORT HAYS, Kas., May 8, 1887.

THERE appeared in a recent issue of your paper a most excellent letter on the subject of Army target practice from 1st Lieut. Lewis Merriam. I have not the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with Lieut. Merriam, but I know that he has the well-earned reputation of being one of the best shots in the Army—not a lead pencil shot, nor a mere theorizer upon the flight of projectiles—and he has briefly expressed, in temperate, courteous language, some of the views held by hundreds, probably a large majority, of the officers of the Army. And I trust he will not be disturbed by the attempted sarcasms of his critics, or by their brusque demand that he shall perform an impossibility in order to prove a self-evident fact.

If a gentleman should assert that he had marched a company of infantry 100 miles in ten hours, and over a rough country, too, must I prove the incorrectness of the preposterous statement? O, but "why wash our dirty linen in public," say our horrified critics? Simply because so much foul cloth has been forced upon us that it cannot all be cleansed in private.

Abolish the "figure of merit" and the official publication of secretly made scores, and honest and better shooting will quickly follow the reform.

This has been written to defend an honest gentleman, who should need no defence for having done an honest, manly act. I shall reply to no ill-tempered personalities, but I take my stand by the side of Lieut. Merriam. E. R. KELLOGG, Capt. 18th Inf.

EXAMINING HOSPITAL STEWARDS.

I WAS much amused to see from your issue of April 30 that many medical officers of the Army in official suggestions relating to the new Hospital Corps, recommend that the first class stewards now in the Service be required to pass an examination before being permitted to draw the increased pay. Are these gentlemen aware that most of these stewards have served over ten years as such, many over twenty, and a few nearly thirty years? Are these gentleman aware that the stewards now in the Service owe it mainly to their own exertions that their pay was increased? The writer has twenty-six years of service behind him as a steward and acting steward, was Chief Steward and acting Executive Officer of some of the largest field and general hospitals during the war and has a stainless record. What would you do with him, gentlemen, suppose you found some flaw in his knowledge of chemistry?

PAYING THE ARMY.

THE writer of the article on "Pay of the Army" in your issue of April 30 fails to show wherein the arguments presented by "K" in your paper of April 2 are "very weak and improbable," and until he lets the light of his learning and experience on this subject illumine it, he must excuse the unprejudiced public from accepting his mere statements as cogent and unanswerable arguments.

The figures given by "K" showing the great advantages to the interest of the Government by the present system over that of the past are correct.

The comment is not so sad upon the officers of the Army as it is upon the system, or lack of system, under which they were working. They were more sinned against than sinning. We are taught to pray "Lead us not into temptation." But in those days every temptation incident upon a loose and imperfect system that could beset the handling of money by young and inexperienced officers lured them on.

I will admit it did not strike me that, if the expense of all the courts-martial entailed by the present system were added to the three-fourths of losses and costs referred to that the expense of the Government would be largely increased, so I took the patience to sum up what the difference would be between 7-32 per cent. and three-fourths of one per cent. on the disbursement of one year, say $12,000,000, and found it was $788,400. Rather large figures for the cost of courts-martial for the trial of enlisted men for one year. I must confess they startled me when, by reference to the last annual report of the Judge-Advocate General, I found that five-sixths of all the cases tried by general and inferior courts during the year were cases before garrison and regimental courts where no expense is incurred, except the per diem and sometimes the travel expenses of an occasional citizen witness. Therefore, the other one-sixth must be chargeable with the bulk of that extraordinary expense.

To show further the value of his statement I will say that the appropriation for expenses of courts-martial last year was $15,000, of which but a little over $8,000 was expended, and the larger portion of that was in the trial of commissioned officers. It does not strike me yet.

The writer signs himself * * *, the insignia of a general. It seems to be well chosen, for his statements are very general, and also his reforms. He would take a sponge and wipe out the corps of paymasters in toto. And what then? Abolish that curse to the Army, pay day, with all its evils. For come they many, or come they few, when the soldiers have money, those who are so inclined will strain discipline.

Now, if the present system of paying the troops is such a crying evil, as the writer of the article referred to would have us believe, I would suggest as a practical test of the question that each commanding officer, who desires a more frequent payment of his command, address a request to the Adjutant-General of the Army, through the regular channels, that it may carry with it the approval or disapproval of those in higher authority, that the troops be paid once a month at least, and state in his request wherein he believes such a change would be of benefit to the Service.

It must be borne in mind that the Pay Department is not vested with the power to make laws or change regulations. It is simply executive in its functions, and the scope of its action is limited by the laws, regulations, and decisions that hedge it in. Hence, any change in the present practices, customs, or methods that may be desired must first be effected in the laws and regulations by which the Department is governed. Then if the Pay Department fails to respond, or is not found in its present organization competent to carry out fully the reforms required, it will be time to devise some system which would eliminate the corps of paymasters in toto.

The writer of this is not an officer of the Pay Corps, but he will venture to say that if * * * was, the sponge act he is so anxious to perform would be deferred. K.

REORGANIZATION SCHEME FOR ARTILLERY.

HAVING read with great interest Prof. Michie's article on the U. S. Artillery, I am moved to offer a few suggestions touching the reorganization of that moribund arm of our Service.

No one can fail to see the soundness of Prof. M.'s idea of making the artillery a corps with a chief at its head, but almost as important is the reorganization of the arm into two distinct branches, viz.: garrison and field artillery. I beg to present to your readers a hasty outline for such a reorganization.

The artillery to be a corps commanded by a Brig.-General with the title of Chief of Artillery; such corps to consist of two branches, the garrison and the field artillery. The garrison corps to be divided into five battalions, having the present complement of officers, each battalion having ten companies of 120 men each, or on a peace footing say 100 men each.

This would give the country a force of 5,000 or 6,000 trained gunners for defence of coasts and harbors, serving siege guns, etc.

The field artillery to consist of 18 batteries, organized for administrative purposes and to foster esprit de corps, with three battalions of six batteries each, the battalion being officered by 1 colonel, 1 major, 6 captains, 12 1st lieutenants and 6 2d lieutenants. The grade of lieut. colonel would thus be abolished in 10 field artillery, and the position would seem superfluous in such an organization as the one above suggested.

This plan would give 108 guns, with their full complement of men and horses always ready for service. Taking into consideration the immense importance of light artillery in war, and the time required in training artillerists and riders, this force should always be kept on a war footing.

Promotion should be entirely separate in the two branches of the artillery. The work of directing the defence of coast forts, protecting channels, harbors, etc., is much more complicated and scientific than the handling of field guns, and may well be made over to a special corps trained for the purpose, while the operations of a field train require, in a greater degree, physical strength, youth and dash in the officers commanding it.

England and Mexico are the only two nations against whom the United States might need to employ its field artillery at short notice; consequently the light batteries should be concentrated near their frontiers, a battalion being stationed near Boston, another in North Central New York and at Niagara or Buffalo, while a couple of batteries should be at San Antonio and a few at the Artillery School. One of the battalions should consist of horse artillery.

We would suggest the detaching of the light batteries from the present regiments and the organization of eight new batteries, but should this seem too stupendous an armament to our Congressional Solons, the separation of the ten light batteries and their organization into a Field Artillery Battalion would be a step in the right direction.

We should then have 60 guns with their men and horses, the major part of which force should be advantageously posted along our Canadian border in, say, two large posts.

The plan above outlined would give us a practical and simple organization in place of the present ludicrous makeshift, would foster esprit de corps, give promotion and life where at present is stagnation and death, and would, in one word, convert the artillery into a combatant arm of the Service in place of the present dormitory for gentlemen in red-faced uniforms. A REVENUE CUTTER EPISODE.

THE following episode in the career of the late Captain William A. Howard, U. S. Revenue Cutter Service, may not be without interest to officers of that Service.

In 1824 Capt. Hoare, of His Majesty's brig Dotterel, seized nine American fishing vessels, one of which was retaken by her crew, and two others rescued by their crews, aided by an armed party from Eastport. The two latter vessels were known as the Reindeer and Ruby, and were owned principally in Eastport, where the news of their capture created great excitement and indignation.

W. A. Howard at the time was a mere stripling—a merchant's apprentice—his employer being largely interested in the two vessels. Seized by a sudden impulse, young Howard resolved to attempt the recapture of the two vessels. Hastily gathering some thirty persons, many of whom were boys, who perhaps a dozen of them armed with such weapons as could be quickly grasped, they awaited the approach of the vessels which passed in close proximity to Eastport en route to Lubec.

The party under Howard embarked in two small schooners, and, hoisting the American colors, ran alongside of the captured vessels, intimidating the prize masters and crews to such an extent that possession was given at once without a shot being fired.

The recaptured vessels were taken to Eastport amid general rejoicing, young Howard receiving great praise for his prompt action in the matter. The case was referred to Henry Clay, at that time Secretary of State, by the representatives of Great Britain, but failed to receive satisfaction and the case was finally dropped. Howard afterwards received the appointmen of a midshipman in the U. S. Navy, which he resigned for a commission in the Revenue Cutter Service and died holding position at the head of the list of Captains. S.

Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

The following were elected members of the 1st Class, Military Order, Loyal Legion, at the last meeting of the New York Commandery, May 4: Col. William d'A. Mann, U. S. V.; 1st Lieut. Gerrard I. Whitehead, U. S. V.; Lieut.-Col. Samuel J. Storrs, U. S. V.; Brevet Col. Benjamin B. Foster, U. S. V.; Brevet Major-Gen. George S. Greene, U. S. V., late 1st Lieutenant, U. S. A.; 2d Lieut. Osgood Welsh, U. S. V.; Capt. C. Frederick Betts, U. S. V.; Capt. Leffert L. Buck, U. S. V.; 1st Lieut. and R. Q. M. Butler Coles, U. S. V.; 1st Lieut. Franklin Murphy, U. S. V.; Asst. Surg. Enoch V. Stoddard, U. S. V.; Lieut.-Col. Edward H. Little, U. S. V.; 1st Lieut. and Adjt. Eliphalet Hendrickson, U. S. V.; Capt. Luis F. Emilio, U. S. V.; Capt. James R. Mullikin, U. S. V., 1st Lieutenant, U. The following were elected officers by the Commandery of the State of Wisconsin Loyal Legion, May 4: Commander, Capt. Geo. W. Burnell, U. S. V.; Senior Vice Commander, Bvt. Maj. C. H. Anson, U. S. V.; Junior Vice Commander, Bvt. Maj. Geo. W. Carter, U. S. V.; Recorder, Capt. Charles King, U. S. A.; Treasurer, Capt. Darwin R. May, U. S. V.; Registrar, Adjt.-Gen. C. P. Chapman; Chaplain, Capt. Jos. W. Sanderson, U. S. V.; Council—Bvt. Capt. James R. Saville, U. S. V.; Maj. A. J. Cheney, U. S. V.; Capt. Robert Montieth, U. S. V.; Lieut. J. B. Johnson, U. S. V.; Ensign A. S. Ludlow, U. S. N.

(From the New York Sun, May 8.)

At the annual election of the New York Commandery of the Military Order, held at Delmonico's last Wednesday night, the ticket prepared by the Nominating Committee, of which Gen. Horace Porter was Chairman, occasioned murmurings of dissatisfaction, but the only real opposition centred upon the selection of Col. E. M. L. Ehlers as Junior Vice-Commander. Before the polls were opened, and also while the balloting was going on, printed circulars were distributed opposing the election of Col. Ehlers upon the ground that he was a comparatively new member, and suggested in his place the name of Col. Wm. C. Church, one of the charter members. Col. Ehlers at once offered to withdraw, saying that if he had been consulted he would not have permitted his name to be used, but his friends restrained him, saying that the regular ticket would be chosen entire. The tellers announced the result after the companions were seated at dinner. The entire ticket was elected with the exception of Col. Ehlers, who received 64 votes against 107 for Col. Church. This action was due to no personal feeling toward the defeated candidate.

ERNEST VON DIESKELSKIE, a deserter, whose father applied for a writ of habeas corpus to have him released from the custody of the U. S. Army, was, May 9, ordered by the Court in General Term, District of Columbia, to be discharged, reversing the decision of the lower court.

THE ARMY.

G. O. 33, H. Q. A., May 5, 1887.

By direction of the Secretary of War, the blank forms for use in telegraphing, furnished by the Quartermaster's Department, as provided in paragraph 695 of the Regulations (published in G. O. 65, of 1886, and amended by G. O. 15, of 1887, both from this office), will hereafter be used by all officers of the Army in sending telegrams on official business.

By command of Lieutenant General Sheridan:
R. C. DRUM, Adjt.-Gen.

G. O. 34, H. Q. A., May 11, 1887.

By direction of the Secretary of War, the following regulations are published to the Army, and will be numbered par. 2501½ and 2501¾, respectively, of the Regulations.

2501½. Vacancies in the grade of 1st lieutenant of ordnance are filled by transfer from the line of the Army. To be eligible an officer must be less than thirty years of age, must have served at least four years as an officer in the line of the Army, and must have passed satisfactory examination before a board of ordnance officers. Applications for examination will be made to the Adjutant General.

2501¾. Should the applicant be directed to appear before the board, he will, after passing a satisfactory preliminary examination as to his physical qualifications, be examined upon the following or such other subjects as the Secretary of War may prescribe: Gun construction, present and past state of the art; ballistics and ballistic machines; types of projectiles and gun carriages; gunpowder, types and modes of manufacture; small arms and machine guns; employment of artillery, kinds of fire, etc.; armored defences; materials for ordnance construction and processes of manufacture; torpedoes for coast defence; general principles of mechanics.

By command of Lieut. Gen. Sheridan:
R. C. DRUM, Adjt.-Gen.

DEPARTMENT NEWS.

Dept. of Arizona.—Brig.-Gen. N. A. Miles.

A despatch of May 8 from Tucson says: "Another violent earthquake is reported in the San José mountains, 40 miles south of Fort Huachuca, in Sonora. Gen. Forsyth has sent an exploration party to investigate."

Cavalry have been sent from Fort Wingate, N. M., to Defiance Station, near Gallup, N. M., owing to Indian troubles there, but nothing serious is anticipated.

Division of the Pacific—Maj.-Gen O. O. Howard.

The growth of San Francisco westward leads the Report, of that city, not usually in favor of military expenditures, to express the hope that Major-Gen. Howard's previous recommendations that the harbor defences be placed in good shape, will receive the attention of Congress and of the country at large.

The effect of the recent earthquake having been severely felt at Fort Hancock, the Fort Davis News is prompted to say: "It is to be regretted that it did not level the buildings to the ground, could it have stopped at that." Fort Hancock is evidently not a popular post.

WEST POINT, N. Y.

SCHOFIELD Hall presented a very attractive picture on last Wednesday night, the occasion of the reception given to Gen. and Mrs. Merritt by the ladies and officers of the post. At half-past 9 o'clock the band played a grand march, and as Gen. and Mrs. Merritt entered the room they were greeted by the guests with hand shaking and congratulations. After this the ball opened with the lanciers, and dancing went on. The room was crowded. The ladies were beautifully costumed, the officers in full uniform. Mrs. Merritt carried a handsome bouquet of magnificent long-stemmed roses. The entertainment was unusually bright and gay. Many present felt that it might "be for years and it might be forever" ere they would dance again in Schofield Hall, and now and then a sad cadence in the voice, a shadow crossing the face indicated the passing thought of the unknown lands and posts fraught with fancies, doubts, hopes and fears, to which they were nearing. At 11 o'clock supper was served in a paradise of roses, the table just bloomed with them, all varieties, all colors, carnation lilies in profusion, etc.; salads of all kinds, game with champagne, ice cream, fruits, cake and bonbons. Ere leaving the supper room each lady received a beautiful corsage bouquet. The reception, or rather ball, continued until 1 o'clock, and then we wended homewards under a bright May moon. After the ball several officers, at this ghostly hour, went down to the wreck to see the lifting of the demolished engines, and there they remained until 3 o'clock.

Last Wednesday afternoon, about half-past five, there was a bad smash-up on the West Shore Road, just at the end of the filled-in flats under the cemetery. A gravel train was being backed to a siding and while crossing the main track was run into by an express train. The locomotive was knocked off, one car had its entire side torn out, and several others were more or less damaged. One Italian laborer had a leg broken, another was hurt internally, and the express messenger got a severe bruising.

A shocking accident happened last Saturday afternoon at Cranston's dock. One of the large boxes, weighted with chains, used as a counterpoise for the bridge of the ferry-boat, fell on the young lad, about 16 years old, who was employed on the boat. The poor boy's legs and lower part of the body were so frightfully mangled that his recovery is very doubtful.

Captain and Mrs. Price have gone to Cleveland to be present at the golden wedding of Mrs. Price's parents on the 17th of this month.

Cranston's Hotel opened for the season last Saturday. Among the first arrivals were Mrs. Irwin and two daughters.

Lieut. Waite, 5th Cav., spent several days here last week.

Prof. Tillman and bride returned from their short wedding tour last Saturday evening.

Cards are out for the wedding of Captain Sharpe and Miss Thomas, which will take place in New York June 2.

The wife of the Rev. Dr. Thomas, of Highland Falls, has been quite ill for several weeks, but is now convalescing.

The next annual meeting of the Association of Graduates will take place in the Chapel at 3 P. M., Thursday, June 9, 1887. The graduating hop will be held Friday evening, June 10. The annual dinner will be served immediately after evening parade on the day of the meeting in the Cadet Mess Hall. The executive committee earnestly desires graduates to state as early as possible whether they propose to be present at the business meeting and at the dinner. The tickets for the dinner have been limited to $3.50; it is essential that the committee should be informed as early as possible what members intend to be at the dinner in order that no extra expense be incurred. One of the vacant divisions of cadet barracks will be fitted up with a number of beds, where officers and graduates can have sleeping accommodations from Wednesday, the 8th, till Saturday, the 11th of June, in case the hotel is overcrowded. Hon. John H. B. Latrobe, a distinguished member of the Class of 1822, has written his recollections of West Point from 1818. It is proposed to print these as a supplement to this year's annual report of the Association. All who desire copies are requested to notify the Secretary, who will furnish them at cost—not over fifty cents—so that extra copies can be printed.

Orlando Kenton Morgan, Carrollton, Ohio.
Henry J. Horstman, Harrison, N. J.
William F. MacDonald (alt.), Jersey City, N. J.
Charles Zollicoffer Stevens, Augusta, Miss.
Albert B. Donworth, Machias, Maine.
Ara P. Long, Columbus, Indiana.
Bird H. Davis, Newport, Indiana.
John K. Miller, Beaver, Penn.

FORT BAYARD, N. M.

May 1, 1887.

SINCE the Apache campaign ended we have little to arouse us from the dull monotony of garrison duties. Was it not for the many new and interesting books the post treasurer has purchased, and the occasional hop, we should almost wish for another campaign. However we must look on the bright side. We have exceedingly good health, plenty to eat, and no rough duty.

Major Cook, of the 13th Infantry, has now become comfortably settled with us.

Lieut. Sands, 6th Cav., bade his wife and children adieu, a few days since. They are now on their way to visit, with friends, at Pittsburg, Pa.

Lieut. Touey has been on the sick report for a week or so, but was at his post on muster day and looked quite well.

Harry C. Benham, who started on Saturday on a 70 days' furlough to his Iowa home, is a member of the 6th Cav. Band, and the band will be one musician short.

Our efficient Q. M., 1st Lieut. W. H. Carter, 6th Cav., stepped out of his office on the 1st of April, Lieut. Dravo being appointed to take his place. He now hands the post treasury over to Lieut. Craig, adjt., 6th Cav. and post. On my own account and in behalf of the men who have served under his direction for the past three years, I take this opportunity to extend our thanks for his kindness, forbearance, and patient efforts to make our labor light and pleasant, yet filling the strictest requirements. He leaves his office with the kindest regards of officer, soldier, citizen, and children.

U. S. ARTILLERY SCHOOL.

FORT MONROE, Va., May 10, 1887.

ON the evening of the 6th inst., in the hall of the theatre building, Dr. Brook delivered his first medical lecture of the series to follow. He selected for his subject the treatment of fractures, both simple and compound, and gave many practical illustrations, by placing an enlisted man in many different positions, and showing how, in case of an emergency, shingles and cigar boxes, strips of blankets or of cotton, could be converted into splints and bandages. The Doctor showed his familiarity with the subject by instantly answering some nice questions on critical points, started by Col. Frank and others, and by making no use of written aid. He never resorted to any vain flights of fanciful eloquence, but divested his subject of all unavoidable technical terms, so that those present, from the recruit to Gen. Tidball, could derive instruction from his method of treating fractures, from the fingers to the toes. All the officers attended, and probably some of them may, in the case of sudden fractures at some future time, have to make use of blankets and bayonets.

Friday was our pay day. Some of the boys became social on Saturday, spent a wet Sunday, slept in the guardhouse on Monday, had a Court-martial on Tuesday, a blind on Wednesday, and were released on Thursday. This routine rule is as invariable to-day as it has been in the past, threats and punishments having proved but too abortive for its abolition. More frequent payments, with smaller sums of money to be disposed of, would, most certainly, not increase the habitues of the guardhouse.

Late change of weather has stopped bathing, commenced here a week ago, but after a few sunny days we can enjoy the luxury of a pleasant swim for nearly six months to come.

The late Lieut. Davenport having been a most popular officer, his early death is sincerely regretted by all here, and the utmost sympathy felt for his sorrowing friends.

Similar regret has recently been felt by the enlisted men of the garrison at a sad accident which deprived them of a good comrade and the Army of a plucky soldier. Private Miller, Battery G, 5th Artillery, on his return from a theatrical performance given at the N. S. Home, had to cross a stream on a plank bridge; the night was dark, he fell in, and was drowned. The body was recovered early next day, and with military honors and by mourning relative was consigned to its last resting place in the post cemetery. B. B.

FORT SHERMAN.

COUR D'ALENE no more. G. O. No. 30, A. G. O., renames this post Fort Sherman, in honor of Gen. Wm. T. Sherman, U. S. A., retired, and our former commander may well be proud of his distinction, for a prettier post than this cannot be found anywhere along our vast frontier. It does not resemble a frontier post at all, with its lovely lake, which, by the way, is one of the finest sheets of water in the country, and still is such, as we are only about 60 miles from the British Possessions.

Just now Sherman wears its gala uniform. Great praise is due to Capt. Coates, 4th Inf., who for the past month had a party of men under his supervision cleaning the garrison, trimming trees, planting ornamental shrubs, as well as sowing grass seed, in fact doing anything and everything to enhance the looks of the post. He also started a lawn in front of our hospital, which in course of time will no doubt afford a pleasing sight to those who may be unfortunate enough to have to occupy this sanitary asylum. I say unfortunate, still I do not intend to convey the full meaning of this word, for I am confident that there is not a post throughout the Army that can boast of better medical attendance than we have here. Capts. Corson and Bannister, U. S. A., are our Post and Asst. Post Surgeon respectively. Both are high up in their profession, gentlemen in the fullest sense of the word, and with Hospital Steward Sill, in the immediate charge of the patients, we may well say to our brother soldier that a more conscientious and efficient trio is hard to find. In saying this I voice the opinion of all my comrades composing this command.

Our hospital is a new double building—frame—with all the modern improvements, and is so situated that the finest view of the post and lake is obtained from it. I may be thought a little too enthusiastic over our Medical Department here, but having served at more than a dozen stations, this is the only one I have found where the sick receive the attention and care the Government means to give them, and therefore give vent of our appreciation through these columns.

Mrs. Gen. Carlin has returned from an extended visit and so has Mr. W. Carlin, Jr. We had a visit from our Department Commander lately, who seemed highly pleased with everybody and everything, especially with the appearance of the 4th Inf. Battalion, which he reviewed. It was regretted that we did not have the balance of the companies here which comprised the Omaha Battalion, on that occasion, to participate in this review, for then we could have given Gen. Gibbon a still better opinion of the gallant old 4th, with its one hundred battle record. P. L. Z.

WASHINGTON BARRACKS, D. C.

THE Soldiers' Temperance Union gave a most enjoyable entertainment on Tuesday evening, May 10. A grand concert was given by the 3d Artillery orchestra, and dancing followed till a late hour, about 100 couples participating in the evening's fun. This Society has in view both the mental and moral improvement of its members by a regular and proper presentation of temperance works. It proposes to further the study of good books and to foster a taste for the science and arts, but it intends more especially to exert itself in awakening and keeping alive an interest in temperance history and literature. While pursuing these ends it has in view to give its members every desirable means for proper recreation, both of mind and body.

Drill in the School of the Battalion, "Upton's Infantry Tactics," were resumed on May 9.

The following changes in the trumpet signals are announced: Recall from fatigue, 4.25 P. M.; first call for drill, 4.35 P. M.; assembly, 4.45 P. M.; recall from drill, 5.45 P. M.

The troops of this command were paid off May 6, by Major W. T. Tucker, Paymaster, U. S. A.

Mrs. General Gibson returned from a trip to New York on Monday, May 9, and was serenaded by the regimental band on the same evening.

Thursday the troops participated in the servies at the unveiling of the statue of our ex-President, Gen. J. A. Garfield.

AULD LANG SYNE.

FORT D. A. RUSSELL, WYO.

A CORRESPONDENT writes, May 1: "The troops were mustered yesterday by Lieut.-Col. Offley, the commandant. The german given by the officers and ladies on Friday evening last was a gathering of unusual elegance and brilliancy. A large number of invited guests were present. An elegant repast was served at midnight. The music, under the able leadership of Prof. Kral, was all that could be desired."

BATON ROUGE, LA.

WE are living in peace and friendship here, and all sectional feelings which formerly existed have entirely disappeared. To show this, Mr. Patrick Fallan, commander of Harney Post No. 2, G. A. R., was some time since appointed by Gov. McEnery keeper of the State House Grounds.

Charles F. Eichwurzel, Superintendent National Cemetery, was elected Captain of the Baton Rouge Fencibles, April 18, and has received his commission.

April 26 was the Confederate Memorial Day. The G. A. R. had a place in line, and evinced their respect for the dead. Their unostentatious demonstrations plainly showed that the mellowing influence of time is fast removing the harsh recollections of the conflict and that only the valor and devotion of the soldiers who fought with equal sincerity for the blue and gray is henceforth to be remembered. J.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, KAS.

THE Kansas City Times says: "The cavalry and infantry arms of the Service were engaged in sham war yesterday. It was not cavalry against infantry. Both arms of the Service were divided into two battalions. The cavalry manœuvred in the forenoon and the infantry in the afternoon. Lieut. Byrne, 6th Inf., went to Manhattan, May 5, to pay a visit to the Blue valley stock farm of Mr. Higginbotham to view some of the latter's fine horses."

FORT YATES, DAKOTA.

A CORRESPONDENT writes: "On Friday evening, April 22, the charming operetta 'Penelope' was given in the post theatre to a large audience. The cast was: 'Penelope,' Mrs. Dr. Spencer; 'Mrs. Croaker,' Mrs. Lieut. Heistand; 'Pitcher,' Lieut. Penrose; 'Tosser,' Major Page; 'Chalk,' Lieut. Lewis. Mrs. Spencer's rich soprano voice was in fine condition and her conception and rendering of the part of the pretty kitchen maid, coupled with the sweet music, made her part a genuine success. Mrs. Heistand did herself much credit. Her reputation as a musician is well established. Major Page proved himself a comedian, and Lieuts. Penrose and Lewis did well. The receipts, about one hundred dollars, were devoted to the relief of the flood sufferers."

FORT SIDNEY, NEB.

THE Omaha Excelsior of May 7 says:

The Fort Sidney Social Club gave a dance and ice cream party last evening....Capt. S. P. Jocelyn goes on two months' leave for the benefit of his health... The Twilight Socials entertained their numerous friends Wednesday.... Gen. Morrow left last Saturday for Fort Robinson to sit as a member of the Court of Inquiry convened to investigate the case of Paymaster Bash....Capt. Haughey has recovered from his illness and leaves Tuesday for Fort Du Chesne to join his company. Mrs. Haughey will leave on the same day for the East to visit relatives and friends.

SUNDAY OBSERVANCE FOR THE ARMY.

A COMMITTEE of Baltimore clergymen have addressed a letter to the President on the subject of Sunday observance in the Army. The letter was referred to Secretary Endicott, and by him to Lieut.-Gen. Sheridan, and is now before the Board on the revision of the Army Regulations. Gen. Sheridan wrote the following indorsement on the letter:

This is a subject which has been discussed at intervals for many years. My predecessor, General Sherman, made several reports, and his recommendations were uniformly sustained by the Secretary of War. In his correspondence Gen. Sherman fully expressed my views, as, I believe, those of almost all the officers of the Army.

General Sheridan then quotes as his views from a letter written by Gen. Sherman to the Rev. H. C. Cameron, of New Jersey, on the subject of Sunday observance in the Army:

"Six days shalt thou labor and do all thou hast to do, but the seventh is the Lord's," etc. Some construe the seventh day to begin with the setting of the sun on the sixth day, others at midnight, and some others on the issue of the sun of the seventh day, but all agree that one day in seven shall be secure from work; but Christ himself reproved the Jews for their too literal construction of the commandant, which had been in force thousands of years, and he came on earth as a redeemer and reformer. He bade them take the ass out of the ditch and to gather their corn on the Sabbath, and many other things which had been prohibited by their too rigid and literal construction of their religious code. Now, suppose sailors on the ocean were to refuse to trim their sails on a Sunday, how many ships would reach their ports? Suppose sailors were to refuse to act as guards and sentinels on the Sabbath, or to clean their arms, or to march to their battle lines, would not the wicked prevail over the righteous? No! Christ himself held that there were indispensable duties which we must perform on the Christian Sabbath rather than that a poor ass might perish. I admit that all military men assert that the rule of one day's rest in seven is not only wise but holy, but like all general rules, must have exceptions which prove the rule. Every Christian mother washes and dresses her children of a Sunday morning so as to attend divine service in their best clothes. So soldiers are required to wash and dress in their best for Sunday. This is all Sunday morning inspection means, and every officer who commands a garrison in any country will state that soldiers are much more moral, much better behaved, and much more disposed to practice Christian conduct when so cleaned up and dressed than if allowed to lounge about unclean Sunday morning. I assure you that, knowing the fact, that your good wife has as much of the Sunday morning inspection of her children as Gen. Schofield has at West Point, if your family comprises ten children, the Service bears about the same relation to the officers of its garrison as your wife does to her children."

RAILROAD UP LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN.

WHILE Major W. R. King, of the U. S. Engineers, was stationed at Chattanooga, he conceived the idea of a park on Lookout Mountain, to which access should be obtained by a railroad. He elaborated the scheme, and associated with himself several other gentlemen, and the road was formally opened on the 19th of March. The incline is 4,300 feet long, rising in that distance about 1,200 feet. The track is narrow gauge, with three rails, thus making a double-track road. At the place where the up and down cars pass a fourth rail becomes necessary, so as to make two independent tracks, on which the cars move alternately up and down. The propulsion is by cable operated from the foot of the incline. The speed of ascent is about seven miles per hour. The cars are fitted with a shoe-brake, designed by Major King, operating on the principle so much used in mountainous regions for braking wagons. The brakes are always "on," unless held "off" by the conductor. There is also a system of electric signaling. The total cost of the line was about $150,000.

THE British war ship Emerald, from Bermuda arrived at Halifax May 10.

THE NAVY.

NAVAL VESSELS IN COMMISSION.

WHEN AND WHERE LAST HEARD FROM.

Swatara—At Portsmouth, N. H. Is to have new boilers. It is not known at present when she will be ready for sea. The construction work will be completed about the middle of June. When ready she will be assigned to duty on the North Atlantic Station.

Enterprise and Nipsic—Undergoing repairs at New York. Will be ready in a few months, and in all probability be assigned to the North Atlantic Squadron.

Trenton—Undergoing repairs at Norfolk, Va. Expects to be ready for commission about May 25, and to sail May 28 with new crew for the Lancaster, and later will probably be assigned to the North Atlantic Station, Comdr. N. H. Farquhar.

Chicago—Will be finished at New York. The engines are practically completed, and but little construction work remains to be done. (Report of March 19.)

Kearsarge—At Portsmouth, N. H. To be repaired. Was to be placed in drydock this week.

VARIOUS NAVAL ITEMS.

THE new steam launch recently completed at the Mare Island Navy-yard for service in Alaska, has been named the Cosmos, after the club of that name in San Francisco.

THE San Francisco Bulletin April 30 reports that the officers and crew of the steamship Omaha have subscribed $1,200 for the relief of the injured and of the families of those killed by the explosion of a shell at Ike Island, near Nagasaki. A subscription list is also being sent round the other ships of the Asiatic squadron.

A RUSSIAN lieutenant has invented a liquid fuel, which was recently tested on two steamers intended for duty on the River Oxus. It is reported, as a result, that 1 lb. of petroleum-refuse performed as much work as 2¼ lb. of coal. A sheet of white paper, held over the top of the funnel remained uncolored by smoke or soot. The price of this new fuel at Baku is about 4d. a ton.

THE Newport papers report that Eugene Creighton, equipment yeoman on board the Saratoga, has been missing since Wednesday of last week, and a reward of $10 is offered for his return to the ship. He was last seen by his wife between 9 and 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, when he had on citizen's clothes. He has been attached to the Saratoga for many years and was respected by all who knew him.

A WRITER in the April number of Blackwood discusses the question whether or not ironclads are doomed. Anyone disposed to be hypercritical, says Broad Arrow, might point out that the term "armor-clad" more correctly designates the type of ship referred to, for "ironclads" have not been built during many years past. There is a necessity for greater accuracy of expression than is commonly employed when questions relating to naval construction and tactics are being discussed; and there are no greater sinners in this respect than are to be found at the British Admiralty itself.

THE commandant of the Navy-yard at New York reports that in accordance with G. O. 355, all the stores and supplies of the several bureaus of the yard have been concentrated in one building.

SIR NATHANIEL BARNABY asserts that a swift mail-steamer may be as powerful a factor in a maritime war as an ordinary naval cruiser which has cost a million and a quarter of dollars, and is manned by five or six hundred men.

THE commandant at the New York Navy-yard has reported to the Navy Department that, in accordance with General Order 355, all of the stores and supplies of the several bureaus have been concentrated in one building.

THE Ordnance Bureau has greatly reduced its force at the naval proving grounds, and only work of the utmost necessity is being done there. Nothing whatever has been done looking to the selection of a new site for the proving grounds.

THE Naval Bureau of Ordnance will in the near future issue advertisements for the steel to be used in assembling the 6-inch guns appropriated for in the Naval Appropriation act for next year. They are to be built of crucible, Bessemer, and open-hearth steel.

CHIEF NAVAL CONSTRUCTOR WILSON and Samuel Cramp, May 11, drove the first rivet in the keel of the new war cruiser Baltimore at Cramp's shipyard, Philadelphia. Others present were Naval Constructor Webb, Chief Engineer Melville and Chief Engineer Habighurst. Work will be pushed on the new cruiser.

CAPT. WALKER has written to the superintendent of the Naval Academy requesting that he be furnished with a list of the naval cadets who finish their four years' course in June, showing where each one of them would like to perform the two years' sea service, and which of them desire to be assigned to the same vessels. In making the June assignments this year the Department will comply with the wishes of the cadets as far as possible.

MR. J. W. PUGSLEY, the new superintendent of the Washington Ordnance Navy-yard, commenced preliminary operations there May 9, clearing out the anchor shop, preparatory to its extension and adaptability to the wants of the Ordnance Department. Comdr. A. H. McCormick and Civil Engr. R. E. Peary, of the yard, went to Bethlehem, Pa., to inspect the new plant for casting steel guns. Secretary Whitney, who intended to go with them, was unable to get away.

THE second annual reunion of the graduates of the Naval Academy will be held June 9, 1887. The business meeting will take place at 2.30 P. M., in the Physical Laboratory. The annual dinner will be given in the cadets' new mess hall, at 8 P. M. Those who wish to attend are requested to inform the Secretary, Lieut. B. F. Tilley, by June 1 next, on which train they will arrive, in order that the proper arrangements may be made. The graduating exercises of the class of 1887, and the annual ball will take place Friday, June 10.

A DESPATCH to the N. Y. Herald from Norfolk, May 10, says: "The report that the men brought here for the flagship Trenton from the Brooklyn Navy-yard on the U. S. S. Dolphin yesterday had no accommodations on board, and were exposed on the decks of the ship on the trip down and endured considerable suffering led the Herald correspondent to-day to interview a very intelligent seaman, who came down with the crew. He stated that there were 306 men in the draft on board the Dolphin, and, while it is true that they were exposed on the decks of the vessel during the trip, yet the weather was mild and they did not suffer by the exposure to any appreciable extent. On the contrary, the men appeared so glad to be assigned to a good ship that they were willing to endure any slight privation, and no special complaints of the discomforts of the trip has been made by any of them. The Dolphin left at noon to-day on her return to New York."

NAVAL TRAINING SQUADRON.

COMMANDER SCHLEY, who returned on Tuesday from an inspection of the training squadron, which recently returned to Newport after its regular winter cruise, speaks enthusiastically of the high state of efficiency to which the officers of the squadron brought the boys during the cruise. He says that the offer of a medal to the most capable boy has had a beneficial effect. They all strive for it, and in this way, even those who failed to get it are more advanced in their studies than would have been the case had no reward been offered. The vessels will leave on their summer cruise early in June. They will take out the relieving officers and crew of the Quinnebaug, which vessel will be met at Lisbon. The squadron will return home in October.

NAVY DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, May 7, 1887.

General Order No. 359.

THE Chief Constructor of the Navy having called the attention of the Department to the necessity of adhering to the Construction Allowance Book, except in cases of emergency, commanding officers are directed to observe the most careful and systematic economy in the purchase of materials for the repairs of vessels in commission; and they are directed to adhere to the Allowance Books, except in case of great emergency, which should at once be reported to the Department, with the estimated cost of the repairs thought actually necessary by a Board of Survey composed of competent officers.

In this connection the attention of commanding officers is called to the fact that the complement of each ship contains mechanics who should be capable of executing all repairs to hull and machinery not requiring the use of the plant of ship or engine building establishments.

It is too much the custom for commanding officers to unnecessarily require for labor which is already on board ship, and they are warned that hereafter they will be held strictly accountable for requests for the services of mechanics when the complements of the several commands are full. There has apparently often been too great a desire to throw the responsibility of work upon officers at Navy-yards when the repairs could have been carried out more economically under their own immediate supervision.

WILLIAM C. WHITNEY, Secretary of the Navy.

NAVAL ACADEMY.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., May 11, 1887.

THE cadets went out on a seamanship cruise on the Wyoming on Saturday morning last. The drill lasted throughout the entire morning, but part of the exercises were omitted on account of a threatened squall. On their return to the grounds they met cadets from the Maryland Agricultural College, comprising the base ball team of that institution. The weather although threatening was obliging enough to leave everything dry for two hours while the game could be played.

The game opened with the visiting cadets at the bat, and they retired in order. The naval cadets made runs in bunches throughout the game, a timely hit of Anderson, when the bases were full, adding considerably to the score. Notwithstanding the uneven score it was an interesting game throughout, and was watched with eagerness by a large number of spectators. The visitors were wholly unable to hit Anderson, not a ball being struck outside the diamond, and their only score was obtained on a base on balls, a wild throw to second and a passed ball. Robison, Snow and Anderson did the batting for the home team. The score was 9 to 1. The next game will be played with a team from Georgetown College. As this college always presents a good team, and there is great rivalry between the institution, a good game may be predicted.

Some of the M. A. C. cadets remained for the cadets' hop given in the evening. As usual this was largely attended by the Yard people, but not many strangers were present. The hop was decidedly short, as it closed at 10.15, and very few arrived before 8.45. The cadets seem inclined to censure the practice of coming to these hops at so late an hour. However judicious this may be, when a hop lasts until after midnight, it certainly seems a little out of place at a 10 o'clock hop. It was believed by many that the hop would last until 11, which may account for the late arrivals.

The officers give a german every Wednesday evening in the old mess hall. These, although very pleasant, are not very well attended, very few being present at the last.

A large portion of the interest of officers and cadets, at present, would seem to be wrapped up in the labors of Mr. Hart who is making an extensive collection of views of the Academy.

Mr. Hart has been photographing naval vessels, officers and crews for the last ten years and is unusually successful in this line. He proposes to make an album of Naval Academy views, one that will contain scenes from the grounds, groups of cadets, drills, etc. The battalion of cadets has been taken in all possible positions. On Friday the battalion was formed as for Articles of War, and all officers attached to the yard were present in full dress. Dress parades were held on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings.

The exercises this week will be battalion of artillery.

Miss Thom, of Washington, is the guest of Mrs. Lieut. Woods, M. C.

Mr. Aspinwall, of New York, is visiting Lieut. C. R. Miles.

Mrs. Lieut. Dillingham spent several days with Mrs. Commander Terry, in Annapolis.

Miss Taft, who has been visiting Mrs. Lieut. Miller for several weeks, has returned to her home at Providence, R. I.

AFFAIRS AT PENSACOLA.

AT last the marines are enjoying the comforts of their new barracks, than which there are none more convenient or tasteful in the southern part of the United States. So much attention has been paid to verandas and ventilation that the men will, in summer, practically live under big umbrellas by the sea side and fear of this climate cease to exist. Thanks to the assistance given by the commandant and quartermaster of the Marine Corps, Captain Cochrane has been able to get about $3,000 worth of result out of $2,000 worth of appropriation. Work is still going on and will continue until the post is complete in all its parts, a condition that seemed never to have been previously contemplated. Mrs. Emma G. Lull has recently contributed seventy volumes to the Marine Library, which will soon have a suitable building provided for it and by July 1 be supplied with games, musical instruments, newspapers, and periodicals. These provisions and a well regulated kitchen produce contentment and attract a good class of recruits.

The work of consolidating the stores of the several departments of the Navy-yard is actively progressing under the direction of P. A. Paymr. H. E. Drury, who has been allowed $1000 to pay for the necessary labor, and is making a thorough job of it. Things of a kind will hereafter be found together.

Nearly two months of dry weather has parched the grass at the Navy-yard, but at Barrancas, where the soil is better, the parade and its surroundings are yet fresh and bright and the newly planted patches of Bermuda grass are doing finely.

The Indian prisoners having cleaned up the vicinity of Fort Pickens, will now assist the soldiers at Fort Barrancas, where there is much going on.

Col. Roger Jones, during a late visit of inspection, noted very favorably the changes which have taken place, and his report will be gratifying to the commanding officer.

The many friends of the genial and accomplished Dr. Artand, who has been stationed here for about 17 years, will be glad to hear that he is again on duty after a long and critical illness. Mrs. Surg. Byrne, his charming daughter, and her children, have been here since Christmas, but expect soon to go North. The other lady visitors, who have added so much to the pleasure of the past season, have departed, leaving behind delightful memories. Mrs. Wheatley and her daughter, who were guests of Lieut. and Mrs. Lewis, 2d Art., have returned to New York; Mrs. Lawton, mother of Mrs. Paymr. Drury, has gone to Springfield, Mass., and Miss Ora Horton, who received a great deal of well-deserved attention, has left the bachelors to mourn her flight to her home at Augusta, Ga.

The last large party was given by Surg. Ross, of the Navy, and Capt. Cochrane, at their mess in the Navy-yard, and was a great success. Everyone on the station who could attend was present, and cards, music, dancing, feasting, and no end of friendly feeling made the night a merry one.

Much vexation was caused Pensacola journalists by their failure to get an interview with Commo. Harmony during his recent visit here, and they indulged in the wildest surmises as to his impressions and probable recommendations. Mr. Herbert, Chairman of the House Naval Committee, was to have met him, but failed. The newspaper reports are stamped by the Commodore as without authority, and the status quo ante will probably remain. B.

COMMANDANT OF THE MARINE CORPS.

AS THE time for the retirement, March 8, 1888, of the Commandant of the Marine Corps approaches, conjectures are rife as to his probable successor. As a matter of course, these conjectures are at present confined mainly to the officers of the corps itself. The law bearing upon the matter of succession is as follows: "The Commandant of the Marine Corps shall have the rank and pay of a colonel and shall be appointed by selection by the President, from the officers of said corps." The names most prominently mentioned by the company officers are those of Major James Forney and Capt. R. W. Huntington. Major and Bvt. Lieut.-Col. James Forney is a native of Philadelphia, and bears a well-known and distinguished name. He has been three times brevetted for gallant service in the presence of the enemy, more brevets than any other officer of the corps has ever received. In addition to the fact that his services alone should place him in the front rank of possible aspirants, his abilities as a post commander are well known. Courteous and gentlemanly as the Major is, if by good fortune he should receive the appointment, no one could better assume the reponsibilities of the commandancy. The selection of Maj. Forney would be a merited recognition of his past services and would be especially pleasing to his large circle of friends in the Navy and in civil life.

Capt. Huntington is also an officer of marked ability. He is at present three on the list of captains. Previous to his appointment as a marine he served with gallantry in the Army. His strict attention to duty and his impartiality have won for him the esteem and confidence of officers and men. Captain Huntington commanded the military district of Matachin during the late unpleasantness on the Isthmus. Without doubt, the strict discipline he maintained and the fearlessness he showed, saved the lives of his handful of men on several trying occasions, to say nothing of the vast saving in money and property to the Panama R. R. Co., and the Colombian Government, which resulted from his care.

Major Forney and Captain Huntington are both young men, and it is the universal opinion of the Marine officers with whom your correspondent has conversed that the corps needs younger blood at its head, more than it needs an increase in the number of officers or a larger appropriation. With a young, intelligent and pushing commandant, the other needed blessings are sure to follow.

TO ARMY OFFICERS.

The undersigned having represented the Penn Mutual Life Ins. Co., of Philadelphia, as its General Agent for Northern Ohio, during the past year, with the experience thus gained feels himself to be competent to give Army Officers advice on many matters pertaining to Life Insurance, which may be to their advantage. To this end, therefore, he gratuitously offers his services to the Army, and respectfully invites correspondence from such as desire information on this subject.

While the Company he represents has no superior in the country for security or for liberality in its policies to officers in the Military Service, yet he will be pleased to advise and assist officers who may prefer to place their insurance in other reputable companies. Information as to the standing of the various companies and their relative profitableness for investment he will gladly communicate to those who desire it; also advice as to kind of policy best suited and most profitable to those of different ages.

By this announcement the undersigned hopes that he may serve the interests of his brother officers, enabling them to place their insurance in the most substantial and profitable companies, in a form of policy most advantageous to themselves.

THE Engineering News says: "German and French architects do not seem to be quite happy over their experience to date in handling their new explosives, and melinite, helphonite and roburite have already developed an unfortunate trick of exerting their powers at the wrong time and place. The trouble appears to lie in the dangerous character of the compounds themselves and in the methods of ignition adopted. Lieut. Zalinski, in our own service, has been much more successful in his experiments with dynamite, and his ingenious application of a small electric battery for firing the charge is a decided advance upon foreign practice."

THE QUESTION OF A NAVAL RESERVE.

THE Secretary of the Navy has devoted some attention since the adjournment of Congress and the failure of Mr. WHITTHORNE'S bill, to considering what can be done toward organizing a Naval Reserve, and the gentlemen of the Bureau of Naval Intelligence have been busied in developing a scheme which has not yet taken form. One idea which has found favor with the Secretary is to incorporate the yachting organizations into the plan, but a careful consideration of the subject disposes us to believe that this is a pure waste of effort. The abilities of our yacht owners are more in the line of sociability than seamanship. Some of them are good sailors no doubt, but the majority do not undertake to sail their own craft, nor are they capable of doing so. Yachting is an expensive luxury, of which most men soon tire, so that there is a constant change of ownership, and few of the yachts have fixed crews, men being picked up for the summer cruise and then dismissed, the yachts being laid up for the winter in the charge of keepers. It grieves us to say this of gentlemen whose champagne we have always found most excellent, and their company most delightful, but the truth compels. Commodore GHERARDI and Commander MCCALLA, have been conferring with the yachtmen, and may perhaps have reached a different conclusion; if so we shall be glad to know upon what their conclusions are based.

What we must depend upon for recruiting our Navy in time of need are the sailors employed in our merchant marine, including those cruising along the coast and familiarizing themselves with the ins and outs of our harbors. It is estimated that from fifteen hundred to two thousand men are to be found upon the craft sailing up and down Long Island Sound and the waters of the East River alone. Not all of these are sailors in the strictest sense, but they are all accustomed to the water and furnish excellent material for instruction. Nor need that instruction wait upon the slow movements of Congress and an appropriation. It would seem to be within the possibilities to register them under the present law in some form and invite them to listen to lectures which can be more profitably addressed to them than to the gentlemen of multiple engagements and harassing social responsibilities, who are organized into various yacht clubs, and who have already arrived at the experience of captains and commodores. It might be considered as reflecting upon men of such experience to invite them to sit like school boys to receive the instruction of lieutenants and lieutenant commanders. They should be held in reserve to take immediate command of extra naval vessels in time of war without subjecting them to the humiliation of preliminary schooling.

Our efforts should also be directed to organizing the men of the Life-Saving Service, the Light-House Service and Coast Survey into a naval reserve. The Revenue Marine Service might be included in this if not actually incorporated into the Navy. In addition to this we should have what we already have taken measures to procure, and that is a list of vessels fitted for auxiliary service and a census of the seamen who might be made available in case of extremity. Courses of lectures on naval warfare and subjects akin thereto might then be established at the principal seaports, and the captains, mates and engineers of the coasting vessels and ocean craft invited to attend them when in port. Measures should be taken to enrol the best of these men under proper conditions into a naval reserve organization the members of which should be granted certain privileges, such as having their names carried on the Navy Register, being permitted to fly a naval reserve flag and wear a uniform to be designated. In this way they would become attached to the Navy, be familiarized with its method and become acquainted with its officers, who would in their turn learn more of the men they may at any time be called upon to deal with. None of these suggestions involve any considerable outlay and the further we can go in the direction of organizing a naval reserve without asking for an appropriation the easier it will be to get one, when the plan shall have approved itself to our maritime population and through them to Congress and the country.

We do not by any means say this to discourage the plan of establishing a system of bounties, such as England and France have, for the purpose of encouraging the building of mercantile vessels suitable for transformation into cruisers. That is a larger scheme and one that requires time for its development, and that time will be lessened in our judgment if the simple scheme we propose should meanwhile be adopted. We certainly need something as an auxiliary to our Navy, as the militia and volunteer forces are auxiliaries to the Army. As the people of this country will not bear the burden of a large aggressive navy, it is necessary that we should have the elements from which a powerful active fleet could be rapidly created in time of war, and that these elements should be so clearly in evidence, so prominently a part of our national life, that no foreign nation could fail to know and recognize the fact of their existence.

The simple solution of this problem is to be found in the establishment of several lines of swift, powerful ocean steamers, to do a portion of the work which is now being done by the various foreign lines who divide our ocean carrying trade. Let these ships be built either by private companies under subsidy from the Federal Government and under the supervision of naval engineers upon specifications provided by the naval authorities, or by the Government itself. Let them be commanded and officered by naval officers in the pay and on the active or retired list of the Navy. Let the whole staff of the ships, that is to say, the deck officers, the engineers and all the petty officers, be regularly commissioned as enlisted men of the United States Naval Reserve, ready to be changed bodily—ships and men—into the Regular Navy.

In order to do this effectively it is only necessary to have the ships designed in such a way that they would be at once the swiftest, finest, safest, and most luxurious passenger ships in the world, and at the same time be readily convertible into powerful and effective cruisers. That this can be easily accomplished it is easy to show.

The only objection of any weight, which was raised at the time of the discussion of this subject in the daily press, was that it would be derogatory to the dignity of regular line officers, or the Engineer Corps, of the Navy, to take positions on merchant ships. A moment's consideration will demonstrate the utter futility of this argument.

A large number of the very best officers the United States Navy has produced, have been proud at different times to take command of merchant ships, and several have been themselves bred in the Merchant Service. This is not only the case in our own Navy, but in the Navies of Great Britain and France. One of the foremost objects of ambition to English half-pay officers is to get positions on the great ocean steam lines. The Cunard line owes not a small part of its reputation for safety and thorough discipline in its ships, to the fact of its employing many of the half-pay or retired officers of the Royal Navy during the earlier years of its existence, and several officers of the active list were specially detached by the Admiralty for that service.

Of our own naval officers, Commander Schenck, when a young lieutenant, had command of the paddle-wheel steamer Ohio, on the track between New York and Aspinwall. Commander Hartstene sailed the steamers Illinois and Ohio for several years in the New York and Aspinwall trade. Admiral Shufeldt commanded the steamship Quaker City in the New York and West India trade. Commander Herndon, the father-in-law of the late President Arthur, sailed the steamer Central America, and was lost in command of that ship. Lieutenant Jeffries and a large number of junior officers of the Navy were deck officers on the Illinois under Captain Hartstene. Lieutenant Patterson, late of the Coast Survey, commanded the popular steamer Golden Gate in the Pacific trade from about '50 to '55. Lieutenant Higgins was captain of the steamer Herman, of the New York and Bremen Line, in '48 and '49. Lieutenant Commander J. D. Bulloch also had command of one of the ships of the same line. Commander Phillips, a few years since, was captain of one of the Pacific mail line to Panama. Commodore Charles Morris, one of the best officers in the Navy, father of George A. Morris, who fought the Cumberland so gallantly until the ship sunk with flying colors, was brought up by his own father in the merchant service, and it was in that service he learned the method of warping a vessel in a calm at sea, by which the Constitution was warped away from a British fleet. Morris was 1st lieutenant of the Constitution, under Hull at that time, and it was to his suggestion the manœuvre was due, which saved the ship. Admiral Porter, when he was a lieutenant in the Navy, commanded the Golden Age, and sailed her to Australia on her first voyage from San Francisco. He also sailed several other merchant vessels early in the fifties. These are only examples which might be multiplied indefinitely. The splendid service which the small American Navy achieved in the war of 1812 was due in a large measure to the fact that so many good seamen, captains and mates of merchant ships volunteered into the Navy at that time, and furnished the very best material possible for the handling of cruising and fighting ships. There can be no question that a line of first class swift ocean steamers commanded and sailed by Naval officers would be a real and most valuable Naval Reserve, and we are in full sympathy with any measures that may be taken to establish it.

THE PNEUMATIC GUN AND ELECTRIC FUSE.

OUR English contemporaries are just beginning to realize the possibilities of ZALINSKI's pneumatic dynamite gun. The Army and Navy Gazette in an article describing and giving its history says: "The defence of our home and Colonial coast towns being a question which will not longer brook delay, it is surprising so little attention has been paid to the rapid advance made in the United States towards the development of the pneumatic torpedo gun as an important adjunct to the protection of seaports and harbors. Although accounts of this invention have appeared in scientific and Service journals, neither the general public nor the authorities seem to have given it due consideration. Yet, from the constant reference which is made to this novel and ingenious arm in the American newspapers, and from the fact that the United States Government has actually voted the money to build a cruiser to carry three of these guns, it would appear that its value is taken to be well established. At all events, the invention seems to have reached a stage when it should be taken cognizance of by the authorities in Whitehall and Pall Mall."

Engineering in its issue for April 25 publishes a description of the gun with illustrations, and says of it: "The demoralizing effect which the fire of a dynamite gun against a ship would have upon the crew can be estimated by the dread with which the Whitehead torpedo has inspired. Nettings would be no protection against it, while the projectiles could follow one another at two-minute intervals, and could not be dodged by the handiest vessel afloat. The gunners would be beyond the range of machine gun fire, and would be fairly well protected against heavy shell, supposing their position could even be made out."

The crucial test to which the pneumatic gun is soon to be subjected will enable us to fix its value more exactly, but meantime there can be no question as to the value of the electric fuse which Lieut. ZALINSKI has invented and patented in different countries. Of this most valuable invention the Gazette says: "A difficulty occurred with the fuses, shells exploded by a percussion cap in front failing to produce any marked effect. This led to the invention of the electrical fuse, depending upon a small battery enclosed within the shell, so arranged that the circuit is closed by means of a sensitive plunger an instant before the projectile strikes the target. The more recently made projectiles with increased charges carry one or more of these primers, so as to explode the charge at several points simultaneously. Should the ship fired at be missed, explosion will follow a moment after the projectile enters the water, or failing this, the explosion will certainly occur on the shell reaching the bottom. And further, the circuit must remain open until the projectile leaves the gun; premature explosions are impossible, and accidents such as have too often happened in handling these sensitive fuses are entirely prevented."

WHAT CARLYLE has to say on the subject of symbols in his "Sartor Resartus" is effectively quoted by the San Francisco Report with reference to the threatened breaking up of the old war ship Hartford, which desecration has been happily averted: "Have not I myself known 500 living soldiers sabred into crows' meat for a piece of glazed cotton, which they called their flag; which, had you sold it at any market-cross, would not have brought above three groschen? Did not the whole Hungarian nation rise, like some tumultuous moon stirred Atlantic, when Kaiser Joseph pocketed their iron crown, an implement, as was sagaciously observed, in size and commercial value, little differing from a horseshoe? Under a like category, too, stand, or stood, the stupidest, heraldic coats-of-arms, military banners, everywhere; and generally all national customs and costumes; they have no intrinsic, necessary divineness, or even worth; but have acquired an extrinsic one. Nevertheless through all there glimmers something of a Divine idea; as through military banners themselves, the divine idea of duty, of heroic daring, in some instances of Freedom, of Right." The whole Navy will be gratified to learn that Secretary WHITNEY has decided to repair the Hartford and recommission her for sea service. It is believed that this action is due to the numerous expressions of public interest throughout the country, as well as to the sentiment which the Secretary holds in common with all Americans whose pulses quicken as they read of the noble deeds done by Admiral FARRAGUT when borne to victory by the old Flagship. Perhaps, too, the recent visit of a committee from the Pacific slope may have had something to do with the action of the Navy Department. Whatever the influence the country is grateful.

IN his article in the May Scribner Commander CHADWICK shows that our steam tonnage registered for foreign trades was 6,000 tons less in 1885 than in 1870, and that the percentage of our imports carried in American vessels has steadily dwindled from 75.2 per cent. in 1856 to 66.5 in 1860; to 35.6 per cent. in 1870; and 15.98 per cent. in 1886. Even during the civil war it never fell below 27.5 per cent. We must get what comfort we can in view of this showing, from the statement that the three quarters of a million steam tonnage turned out from English yards in 1883 was halved in 1884 and that again halved in 1885, when the output fell off to 221,918 tons, the average size of the vessels also falling from 724 tons to 456 tons. As an average of 173,061 tons is estimated to annually disappear from the register England would seem to be hardly more than holding her own just now. There has been, however, a sudden and unexpected development of sailing vessels in Great Britain in the last few years, due mainly to the very great depression in trade and freights, whereby it was made impossible for many steamers to continue in use without great loss; while at sea, at least, the sailing vessel is not running up a large coal bill, and if laid up there is less capital idle and less deterioration on account of machinery. The annual mortality on ships is estimated at about 30 in the 1,000, 14,878 seamen and 1,242 passengers perishing, with that disappear from the register as the result of those casualties. Though the Commander does not mention the fact, we learn from a consular report that during 1886 shipbuilding at Bordeaux, as at most other French ports, has been at a standstill. In spite of the high premiums offered by the law of 1881 the French mercantile navy experienced during 1886, compared with the preceding year, a diminution of 6,401 tons of steam shipping and 12,930 tons of sailing ships.

AFTER an unusually long and vexatious delay the President has decided to approve the findings and recommendations of the examining board in the case of Lieutenant C. C. TODD, U. S. Navy, whose promotion to Lieutenant-Commander has hung fire so long; a commission has been issued to Lieutenant-Commander TODD. This breaks the deadlock which has existed so long among a number of junior officers for whom vacancies have occurred and who have qualified to fill them. Promotions will now ensue right down the line until some other debatable case arises to exemplify the truth of the quotation that "Hope deferred maketh the heart sick."

OUR Army chaplains of sombre garb will sympathize, we do not doubt, with the feelings of a correspondent who writes to Broad Arrow of his visit to the officers' mess of an English regiment where he found one gentleman who seemed in appearance as much out of keeping with his surroundings as a crow in a nest of blue jays. Seeing, he says, "that the gentleman could not be a station master, or an inspector of tramcars, I applied for information, and learned that he was the senior chaplain, with rank of full colonel! I cannot refrain from lamentation over that uniform. On every side one heard murmured words of compassion for his luck in having to dine in that formless black coat, adorned with about fourpennyworth of big narrow binding or braid, and unrelieved even by shoulder straps or frogs. Is the wearing of this costume intended to be penal? If so, surely it might be restricted to chaplains of bad character. If not, surely something might be invented which (without obscuring the sacred character of the wearer) might be a little more suggestive of an officer of one of the departments of the Army, a little less suggestive of a ticket collector, or of a newsvendor 'retained' in the interest of one of our leading journals."

THE afflictions of our own Army and Navy are not unknown elsewhere. The Admiralty Gazette reports that the official at the Admiralty responsible for checking travelling expenses incurred by officers on duty is evidently determined to make his mark. Scarcely a claim is passed without disallowing some item for cabs or porterage or other triviality which appears to him to be excessive. It regards it as curious that the opinions of an Admiralty clerk in this respect should be deemed to be conclusive, in spite of the declaration signed on the form by the officer who incurred the expenses, and the Captain and accountant officer, who have both to certify that the claim appears to be correct and reasonable.

GENERAL ORDERS 34 issued from Headquarters of the Army this week, adds to the Army Regulations the heretofore unwritten rules in regard to the examination of officers of the line for transfer to the Ordnance Corps. According to this new order an officer to be eligible for transfer must be less than 30 years of age, must have served at least four years as an officer of the line, and must pass a satisfactory examination upon subjects prescribed in the new order. The age limit fixed by the order has heretofore been pretty generally complied with, but there are a few cases where officers over thirty have been transferred to the Corps.

THE returns from department boards in the cases of non-commissioned officers, who have lately competed for second lieutenancies in the Army, show a much larger array of successful candidates than usual. The following were successful and there are several cases yet to be heard from:

Corpl. Theo. G. A. Jokee, Bat. M, 5th Art.
Corpl. Wm. C. Neary, Co. E, Battalion of Engineers.
Sergt. J. F. Nutty, Co. B, Battalion of Engineers.
1st Sergt. George H. Guard, Troop H, 1st Cav.
Qm. Sergt. Geo. A. DeAckhmeny, 3d Inf.
Sergt. M. McManus, Troop G, 7th Cav.
Corpl. Charles Gloster, Co. K, 5th Inf.
Sergt. James Bayliss, Co. A, 5th Inf.

An examination by a board to be convened at Fort Monroe will be next in order for these young gentlemen. Having passed through its hands successfully they are then approved "candidates for promotion" and must trust to Providence for commissions. The outlook for their promotion this year is by no means bright, but with a convenient law for the assignment of graduates as additionals, it is presumed that they can and will be provided for before they become ineligible by reason of the regulation which excludes candidates from promotion after two years from date of examination.

NO ACTION has been taken by the War Department on the subject of more frequent payments in the Army. The reports recently circulated to the effect that orders were being formulated for this purpose probably arose from the announcement made in these columns some weeks ago in regard to the change that has been recommended by the Paymaster-General in the system of payments to officers. This change is for the purpose of preventing duplications of pay accounts and the order to carry it into effect has been in shape for some time, but for some unknown reason has not yet been issued. The recent agitation in regard to more frequent pay days for troops has started the officials of the War Department to thinking, and it may not be long before something is done in the matter. The officials of the Pay Department say they are not unwilling to try the experiment, but are a little apprehensive of a successful result in view of the limited number of paymasters. With the concentration of troops at large posts we have no doubt that payments can be made at least once a month.

IT is understood that Inspector General Baird favors the detail of an artillery officer to succeed Lieut. Col. Lazelle as Acting Inspector General Department of the Columbia. Capt. Henry C. Hasbrouck, 4th Art., at present commandant of cadets at West Point, is said to be his first choice for the place, but, as that officer is just completing a tour of detached service, it is possible that some one else may be selected. At any rate it is not expected that Captain Hasbrouck will be given the detail for the present, as it seems to be the purpose to continue him at the Academy until the new superintendent has taken charge and familiarized himself with his new duties. Gen. Merritt will not be relieved until after the June examinations, and Gen. Parke, the probable new superintendent, will not return from Europe until some time in August.

THE WAR RECORDS' OFFICE.

LIEUT.-COL. HENRY M. LAZELLE, 23d Infantry, has been induced by his friends at the War Department to reconsider his declination of the detail as superintendent of the office of publication of the Records of the War of the Rebellion, and is now under orders to assume charge of the work at the earliest date practicable. He is expected in Washington shortly after the 1st of July. His first work of actual compilation will be in connection with volume 38, which, according to the plan mapped out by the late Col. Scott, will contain the operations of the Atlanta campaign—May 1 to Sept. 8, 1864. The preceding volumes from 18 to 28, inclusive, are in the hands of the printer, and Lieut.-Col. Lazelle's work in connection with them will consist principally of reading and arranging proof: the manuscript for volumes 29 to 37, inclusive, with exception of volume 36, is also practically in shape and will require but little more work to get it ready for the printer. The last volume printed and issued was No. 17. It is estimated that the work when completed will comprise over a hundred books. The 17 volumes already issued comprise 25. The remaining volumes, as laid out by Col. Scott, are as follows:

Vol. 18.—North Carolina and Southeast Virginia, from Aug. 20, 1862, to June 3, 1863.
Vol. 19.—North Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, Sept. 2 to Nov. 5, 1862.
Vol. 20.—Operations in Kentucky, Middle and East Tennessee, North Alabama and Southwest Virginia, from Nov. 1, 1862, to Jan. 20, 1863.
Vol. 21.—North Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, from Nov. 15, 1862, to Jan. 26, 1863.
Vol. 22.—Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, Indian Territory and Department of Northwest, from Nov. 20, 1862, to Dec. 31, 1863.
Vol. 23.—Kentucky, Middle and East Tennessee, North Alabama and Southwest Virginia (including Middle Tennessee campaign and Morgan's raid into Indiana and Ohio), from Jan. 20 to Aug. 10, 1863.
Vol. 24.—West Tennessee and Mississippi (including Vicksburg and Jackson campaigns), Jan. 20 to Aug. 10, 1863.
Vol. 25.—North Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania (including Chancellorsville campaign), from Jan. 26 to June 2, 1863.
Vol. 26.—West Florida, South Alabama, Louisiana, Texas and New Mexico (including Port Hudson campaign), from May 14 to Dec. 31, 1863.
Vol. 27.—North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania (including Gettysburg campaign), June 3 to Aug. 3, 1863.
Vol. 28.—Coasts of South Carolina, Georgia, and Middle and East Florida, from June 12 to Dec. 31, 1863.
Vol. 29.—North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania (including Bristoe and Mine Run campaigns), from Aug. 4 to Dec. 31, 1863.
Vol. 30.—Kentucky, Northwest Virginia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia (including Chickamauga campaign), from Aug. 11 to Oct. 19, 1863.
Vol. 31.—Kentucky, Southwest Virginia, Tennessee, Mississipai, Alabama and Georgia (including Chattanooga and Knoxville campaigns) from Oct. 20 to Dec. 31, 1863.
Vol. 32.—Kentucky, Southeast Virginia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North Georgia, from Jan. 1 to April 30, 1864.
Vol. 33.—North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, from Jan. 1 to April 30, 1864.
Vol. 34.—Louisiana and the Trans-Mississippi States, etc., from Jan. 1 to June 30, 1864.
Vol. 35.—South Carolina, the Georgia Coast and Florida, from Jan. 1 to March 14, 1864.
Vol. 36.—Southeastern Virginia and North Carolina, from May 1 to June 15, 1864.
Vol. 37.—Northern Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, frym May 1 to Aug. 3, 1864.
Vol. 38.—Atlanta campaign, from May 1 to Sept. 8, 1864.
Vol. 39.—Kentucky, Southwest Virginia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North Georgia (the Atlanta campaign excepted).
Vol. 40.—June 16 to Dec. 31, 1864, operations Southwest Virginia and North Carolina.
Vol. 41.—July 1 to Dec. 31, 1864, Louisiana and the Trans-Mississippi States, etc.
Vol. 42.—Aug. 4 to Dec. 31, 1864, Northern Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania.
Vol. 43.—Nov. 15 to Dec. 31, 1864, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida (including Savannah campaign).
Vol. 44.—Nov. 15 to Jan. 14, 1865, Kentucky, Southwest Virginia Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama.

THE Court of Claims on Monday last dismissed the longevity pay cases of Major-General Daniel E. Sickles and Captain Adam Badeau, U. S. Army, retired. These cases have been pending before the Treasury Department and Court of Claims for the past several years. They came about in this way: When the decision was rendered in the well-known Tyler longevity case these officers, among several hundred others, put in their claims for back pay. In looking up the records of Generals Sickles and Badeau the accounting officers discovered that they had drawn two salaries from the Government for the same period, both having performed duty in the Consular service while holding the position of and drawing pay as retired officers of the Army. The accounting officers immediately entered a counter claim against the two officers for the amount paid them as retired officers during the time they served under the State Department. This counter claim involved not only the officers' indebtedness to the Government but the question of their right to commissions as officers in the Army. When the officers discovered this they were willing to withdraw their claims for longevity pay, but the Government was determined to prosecute and, after a delay of two years or more, the cases were finally brought up for trial in the Court of Claims, where they were argued by General Sickles last week. Only four judges were sitting at the time. Two of them decided to dismiss the claims for longevity pay and the other two to dismiss the counter claims of the Government and so the officers stand just where they did before they made application for back pay. Unless the cases should be appealed to the Supreme Court, and it is not probable that they will be, Generals Sickles and Badeau will continue to draw their pay as retired officers but, of course, they will not receive the back pay claimed under the Tyler decision.

ALTHOUGH the Board have, as yet, expressed no formal opinion, it is the impression at the Brooklyn Navy-yard, where the discussion of all models and plans submitted is carried on, the Berdan torpedo has made a very favorable impression. The daily papers are mistaken, however, in their statements as to the currency this system has obtained abroad. So far as we know, it has nowhere been adopted and is yet in the experimental stage in Europe as it is here. At the last meeting of the Torpedo Board, it was decided to experiment with the Howell torpedo as soon as practicable. This invention, by Captain John A. Howell, U. S. N., has long been under discussion, and to finally bring it the final test in its existing state of theoretical completeness, a trial in Gardiner's Bay, Long Island, has been decided upon, and it is hoped that a thorough and satisfactory test may be made of this torpedo which claims, it is believed by many, to embody a principle opposed to the laws of natural philosophy. However, as the trials will be carried out on a scale to simulate the conditions of warfare it will suffice, perhaps, to note that the claim for this invention that after deflection, during its run from its original direction and point of attack, it possesses the power to automatically resume its course to the original point is difficult to understand without an actual demonstration. The subject is an interesting one, and the doubts which exist as to the efficacy and value of torpedoes as a means of offence or defence, will no doubt be definitely refuted or confirmed, so far as the United States is concerned, by the experimentations of the Board under discussion.

THE eloquence of Lieut. Cowles, U. S. N., on the occasion of the reception of Queen Kapiolani of the Sandwich Islands, has been the subject of some criticism, but it should not be forgotten that the Lieutenant was serving in the capacity of a diplomatic agent for the Government, which is just now negotiating a new treaty with the Pacific Ocean Sovereignty, represented by the wife of our friend, King Kalakaua. Lieut. Cowles is reported as saying:

I ask your gracious Majesty's permission to speak. (The Queen bowed her head.) His Excellency, the Secretary of the Navy, begs that your Majesty will accept his respectful homage, and begs that your Majesty will accept of this vessel to convey you to Mount Vernon, the resting place of the illustrious founder of this country. The Secretary is always glad to render any service to a beautiful woman, and is doubly pleased to-day in the fact that that beautiful woman is your gracious Majesty, the wise ruler of a nation near and friendly to the United States.

We do not know precisely where authority is obtained for calling the Secretary of the Navy "His Excellency," but perhaps it was merely an expression of compliment intended as a recognition of his excellence as a Secretary.

A TELEGRAM of May 4, W. D. A. G. O., directs that in view of the condition of the mileage appropriation no further orders be issued during the balance of the current fiscal year covering the payment of mileage.

THE Lieutenant-General has not yet fully decided upon the light battery detail for Fort Riley, but it is believed that he inclines to the five additional batteries authorized in 1882 for the first tour of duty there.

SERGEANT JOHN KENNEY recently applied for a writ of mandamus to be directed to the Secretary of War, and the case will be argued Tuesday, May 24. He claims that he was a member of the 7th U. S. Cavalry and accompanied the Proteus to Lady Franklin Bay for the relief of Lieutenant Greely and his party; that by the sinking of the Proteus he lost $188.35 worth of clothing, and that he has made claim therefor upon the Department, but that the Secretary of War has declined to make a requisition therefor according to law. He asks that the mandamus of the court may issue to the Secretary of War, directing him to cause the money to be paid the plaintiff. Upon receiving this petition Judge Cox certified it to be tried in the first instance in the General Term. Secretary Endicott refuses to take action in the case on the ground that the law passed March 3, 1885, to reimburse officers and men of the Army for private property lost in service is vague and indefinite, and must be amended by Congress. There are a large number of claims under this law, all of which are ignored by the War Department.

IN the case of Pay Clerk Monat, of the Navy, the Court of Claims decided on Monday last that a Paymaster's Clerk is an officer of the Navy within the meaning of the act of 1876, allowing eight cents per mile to naval officers in lieu of travelling expenses. The court decided some time ago in the case of Hendee that a Paymaster's Clerk is an officer entitled to longevity pay the same as commissioned officers. These cases will be appealed to the Supreme Court, and should the action of the Court below be affirmed all Paymaster's Clerks will be entitled to mileage and longevity pay under the Graham and Jordan decisions respectively. The accounting officers of the Treasury declined to be governed by the decision of the Court of Claims and until the Supreme Court has acted will not consider any claims of this class that may be submitted.

THE San Antonio Times of April 29 says:

It is suggested that General Rochester contemplates asking retirement on reaching sixty-two in February next, with a view to General McClure's promotion. Gen. McClure was on duty in this city at the time of the Twiggs' surrender in 1861, and is well known to the old settlers. His promotion to the position Gen. Rochester contemplates vacating would be exceedingly gratifying to his old friends here. Gen. Rochester's application for retirement is to be commended. He steps "down and out" in the interest of his now subordinate, but for more than twenty years his superior, in rank in the Army as well as in the corps.

General McClure on being shown this statement, replied substantially as follows: "I know nothing of General Rochester's intentions in respect to retirement. His retirement will not be solicited by me with a view to my promotion. No friend has been asked by me to further in my behalf any such scheme, which it is safe to say, would hardly be regarded favorably by the President."

MAJ. LOWRY, Quartermaster of the Marine Corps, seems to have made unto himself a rule to score a point or two each year of his official life. Last year he attended to the wants of Norfolk and Pensacola Barracks by greatly improving the quarters of the enlisted men at those points, and this year he has in hand three new houses—one double and two single—for the officers at Mare Island, a much-needed addition to the officers' quarters at Boston, and an entire rearrangement of the large building used by the officers at Brooklyn. This hotel-like structure, containing 60 rooms, is to be divided into private residences at a cost of $4,000. Maj. Lowry can rest assured that his successful efforts to improve the Department is highly appreciated by those whose opinions are of value.

THE Academic year being nearly at an end, several important changes in the personnel of the Naval Academy will soon engage the attention of the Secretary of the Navy. Chief among the changes will be the head of the Department of Steam Engineering, the present incumbent, Chief Engineer Edward Farmer, having entered upon the duties of the place so long ago as July, 1881, so that it is very unlikely that he will be continued there another year. No successor has as yet been mentioned for the position, and it is quite probable that Mr. Loring, the Chief of the Engineering Bureau, may be consulted in the matter. Mr. Farmer's last tour of duty afloat was as Chief Engineer of the U. S. S. Alert on the China Station.

AT a meeting of the New York Southern Society, held on Thursday evening, it was resolved that the society mark, by some suitable monument or tablet, the spot at the Battery where, Dec. 4, 1783, Washington took boat when going to Annapolis to resign to Congress his commission as Commander-in-Chief of the Revolutionary Army.

THE Engineer Corps of the Army are finding themselves embarrassed for want of sufficient force to carry on all the work entrusted to them. Some half-a-dozen officers of high rank are temporarily unfitted for service by physical disability.

NOTHING will convince the Haytians, says a contributor to Chambers's Journal, that as a military power they are not vastly superior to any nation, either in the Old or New World. The Haytian army must present to beholders a spectacle of grotesqueness, the equal of which it would be difficult to find anywhere, either in fact or fiction. Imagine a battalion on parade consisting of thirteen privates, ten officers, and six drummers! the rest of the men thinking it unnecessary to present themselves except on pay day. The staff officers are clad in the most gorgeous uniforms procurable, while the men are habited in a motley array of tatters. Some have coats wanting one arm, the collar, or the tail: the headgear may consist of a dilapidated shako, a straw hat, wideawake, or in many cases merely a handkerchief tied round the head. The officers hold their swords in either hand as suits them, and the men march past in admirable confusion, each one carrying his musket in the position he finds most convenient. The populace look on with admiring looks and gravely ask if finer troops can anywhere be found. The Haytian black, however, thoroughly detests military service, and consequently the sentries, lest they should be overfatigued, are considerately provided with chairs!

THE result of the inspection of the work being done at the Bethlehem Steel Works to prepare for the carrying out of the Government steel contract is exceedingly gratifying to naval officers. The managers of the works are in earnest and propose to build a plant that will compare favorably with those of other countries. The building in which will be placed the steel-making plant is two thirds finished, and it is claimed the furnaces to be erected in it will turn out 100 tons of steel at one run. The building for the rough turning and boring plant is well under way. Captain Sicard will make a report expressing his gratification at the progress made by the Bethlehem people.

NOW THAT the Torpedo Board has gotten fairly to work on the task not only of determining by actual tests the relative values of the different systems presented, but also if any torpedo possesses any value whatever as an instrument of defence, it is fairly to be expected that the result of their investigations and experiments will be of greater practical value than anything yet attempted in this line. The torpedoes which may be submitted to the Board will be sure of a fair trial, and under circumstances as nearly approaching actual practice as possible.

THE Driggs-Schroder improved Hotchkiss rapid firing gun having been favorably spoken of by ordnance experts, the inventors are now having a gun built for practical experiments. Messrs. Cramp and Sons have taken the contract for building the gun. Lieut. Driggs has recently been excused from his orders to the Trenton to enable him to give his personal attention to the building of the gun.

GREAT effort is being made for the success of the reunion of the Army of the Potomac to take place at Saratoga, June 22 and 23. Many distinguished public men and soldiers have signified their intention to attend. A bill is before the New York Legislature making an appropriation to enable the Governor to send a regiment of State troops to do escort duty on the occasion.

THE observers of the Signal Corps are still anxiously awaiting the decision of the Court of Claims in the King case, which has been in the hands of the judges for nearly two months. The claim in this case is for allowances since 1880 in accordance with the act of 1870 and will affect all the enlisted men who have served as observers during the past seven years.

THE self-registering target of Lieutenant Patten is now at Fort Sidney, and promises, with some changes to be made, to be a success. The adoption of such a target will bring with it many advantages — according the labor of marking, construction of pits, and last, but not least, any question on the subject of scores made.

THE death of Lieutenant-Colonel Andrew J. Alexander, retired, makes the third vacancy on the disability retired list of the Army. Selections to fill these will probably be made from the list of captains lately ordered before retiring boards.

COURT-MARTIAL CASES.

In a case recently tried at Fort Keogh, the reviewing authority, Gen. T. H. Ruger, says: "It appears from the record that one member was not present at the organization, or during the first day's proceedings of the court, but was present at the meeting on the second day, and on his statement of absence the first day, and that he preferred the charges in the case before the court, was excused from duty in the case. In this the court erred. A Court-martial has not power, independently of a challenge, duly made and allowed, to excuse a member present at a session from the duty imposed by the order convening the court. Absence by a member during the first day's proceedings, does not necessarily disqualify him for duty in the case; and the proper course of procedure upon his appearance at a subsequent meeting of the court would be to accord the right of challenge, if, in the opinion of the court, the case had not so far proceeded as to render it inadvisable; otherwise, to report the matter for decision of the convening authority. Such course would save what rights or interest the accused might have in the matter, and also accord with the requirement of law respecting the number of and what members shall constitute a Court-martial, as determined by the order convening the court."

In the case of a soldier tried for stealing a watch and chain, "at or near Fort Leavenworth," the reviewing authority, Major-Gen. Terry, says: "The proceedings are disapproved for the reason that the court was without jurisdiction of the offence committed by the prisoner, which is shown by the evidence to have occurred in the city of Leavenworth. The provisions of the 58th Article of War giving to Courts-martial power to try crimes of this character, without reservation as to the place of their commission, are only vitalized during the period of a war. The prisoner will be turned over to the civil authorities."

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Belford, Clarke and Co., of Chicago and New York, publish the "Life and Services of John A. Logan, as Soldier and Statesman, by George Francis Dawson, ex-Librarian of the United States Senate, etc." Though interesting in itself, it is so rather as a scrap-book of information concerning Logan than as a well digested biography which properly sets forth its hero with critical yet kindly judgment. It is largely made up of extracts from official reports, public speeches, and newspaper clippings in about equal proportion. Of the 580 octavo pages only 13 are devoted to Logan's early history, that is, before the war, and only 87 to Logan during the war. Next follows 345 pages on Logan's history since the war. Thirty-seven pages are given to Logan's Last Days and Death, and the remaining 74 pages are occupied by "addenda" and an "index." The work adds nothing to what was before known of Logan, the writer's intimacy with his hero seeming to have been of little avail to carry him beyond the region accessible to all who have access to a file of public documents. In a most excellent introduction written by Mrs. Logan we are told that the volume was written ("compiled" is the more correct word) from data furnished by Gen. Logan and had his unqualified endorsement as it has her approval. In the addenda Howard's selection for the command of the Army of the Tennessee in place of Logan, is dwelt upon in terms of severe criticism. Letters from Gen. Sherman, which to the ordinary apprehension would seem to indicate nothing but a desire to soften the disappointment of a noble soldier whom he held in high esteem, are characterized as showing an "unquiet consciousness" of injustice done, and the author of this volume says: "To his dying day General Sherman will never be able to excuse himself before the Nation for his injustice to the Lion of Atlanta, nor can it ever be condoned until he can reach those heights of courage to which so few have ever ascended, by acknowledging, with the magnanimity possessed by really great men, his own error of judgment. West Point—which means the perhaps very natural desire of every West Pointer to help in advancing other West Pointers at the expense of all other persons—was mainly at the bottom of Sherman's unjust action in this matter. Had Julius Cæsar himself been in Logan's place—and Sherman has, since Logan's death, declared that 'Logan was as brave as Julius Cæsar, and a first-rate natural soldier'—Sherman would have put Howard in Julius Cæsar's place because he was a West Pointer and Julius Cæsar was not." We have hints also of a suppressed reason for the act and are told that until that is revealed "the public will settle down to the conviction that Sherman's inexcusable act of injustice to Logan was due, not alone to West Point fanaticism and West Point prejudice, but to West Point jealousy as well." However, it must be said that Mr. Dawson, while stating his own opinion without reserve, sets forth the case very fairly in letters and statements from Gen. Sherman. These will enable each reader to judge for himself of the sincerity of Gen. Sherman's assertion that, "I cannot say, even while Logan lies dead, that I did not do the best I could, in view of my situation and that of the country. It turns out well. Perhaps, if I had put Logan in command of that Army it would have turned out equally well. It could hardly have turned out any better." Of Gen. Logan his biographer says: "He was the only officer of the war, whether volunteer or Regular, commanding an Army of more than two corps, who led it to victory in every engagement in which he was in command; and further, that he was the only volunteer officer of the Union Armies who successively held command of a regiment, a brigade, a division, a corps, and an army, who never was defeated while leading them."

Arnold and Company, of Philadelphia, publish "Canning and Preserving," by Mrs. S. T. Rosser, author of the "Philadelphia Cook Book." It is a very handy little pamphlet of valuable and suggestive recipes not only for canning and preserving but for pickles, catsups, syrups, jellies and marmalades.

"Mosby's War Reminiscences and Stuart's Cavalry Campaigns," by Colonel John S. Mosby, the Confederate cavalry raider, is a book of over 250 pages soon to be issued by George A. Jones and Co., the Boston publishers.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

F.—General Duryea, 298 South Street, New York City, is the Treasurer of the Sykes Monument Fund.

Inquirer.—The War of the Rebellion officially commenced April 19, 1861, and officially ended Aug. 20, 1866.

Regular asks: Is a soldier who served five years in the Regular Army since the war, and was in engagements with hostile Indians, and now belongs to the National Guard State of New York, entitled to wear a service stripe. ANS.—No.

Quill asks: "In preparing monthly returns, etc., should men whose term of service expires, for instance, April 30, 1887 (having enlisted May 1, 1882) be dropped on the returns for April? I hold that they be dropped on the May returns, to date April 30, 1887." ANS.—There is no fixed rule in this matter, but, under the usual and, we think, the better custom, the men in question would be dropped on the returns for April.

J. C. asks: 1. Does an enlisted man sentenced by a General Court-martial to be disbonorably discharged the service of the U. S. lose citizenship? I have served one enlistment and received an honorable discharge. ANS.—No, unless discharged for desertion.

2. Will I have any difficulty in becoming a citizen, if I so desire? ANS.—Probably not.

G. R. asks: "Can a soldier deposit money with a paymaster on any other occasion than when the paymaster visits the post to make payment on stated muster rolls?" ANS.—A soldier can deposit with a paymaster at any time if he properly identifies himself, but it is preferable that deposits should be made immediately after payment of a post and in the presence of the company commander, so that the deposit can be properly attested and recorded as required by Army Regulations.

McDowell.—A man deserting from one regiment, and enlisting in another, is, of course, a deserter in fact, and liable to arrest at any time if detected. If he served his time out honorably in the second regiment and subsequently surrendered as a deserter from the first, the honorable service in the second might plead in his behalf. Under any circumstances character can be regained in the Army, first by surrender, taking the punishment awarded like a man, and then, if returned to the ranks, fulfilling the contract of enlistment faithfully and loyally.

THE STATE TROOPS.

THE NEW YORK STATE ENCAMPMENT.

THE Brooklyn Eagle has some sensible comments upon the subject of the improved methods of National Guard administration, saying: "Upon the coming into control of the military administration for which Governor Hill was personally responsible, a decided change was effected in the methods of National Guard administration. Without attempting the enforcement of Regular Army ideas the force was speedily brought to a realization of its responsibilities as a military body. In a comparatively brief interval, and without resort to revolutionary measures, the mass of the military establishment was convinced of the necessity and advantage of more immediate State control than had theretofore been experienced. The experiment of the Adjutant General assuming full commanding power at the military post was crowned with gratifying results exceeding the most sanguine expectations. Castiron rules were thrown to the winds. Commandants of organizations ordered to perform a tour of duty at the State camp were held to a rigid personal responsibility for the advancement in discipline and drill of their commands. The widest latitude of instruction was allowed, provided that the instruction should be such as could not be compassed in the armories. One-half of the National Guard was subjected to this system last year; the coming season the remainder of the force is to be called upon to submit to the requirements of the same curriculum. Beginning with the 7th, the several organizations will be afforded opportunity to disclose to what extent their membership is made up of soldierly material. The period of play soldiering at Peekskill has passed, never to return. Therefore that regiment will be accorded the first place in the National Guard which proves itself to be the most responsive to the requirements of discipline and drill, and which demonstrates that it has attained to the highest point of instruction capable to be achieved by the citizen soldiery."

LEATHER LEGGINGS FOR THE GUARD.

WE have already announced that the adoption of white leggings as a part of the uniform of the 47th Regiment having been approved by the Commander-in-chief, the leggings will be worn for the first time at the parade on Decoration Day. It is to be regretted that the command has not adopted serviceable brown leather or canvas leggings instead of these flimsy white rag deformities, which while suitable for ball rooms are wholly out of place in a street parade. Instead of adding to the appearance of a regiment, they mar it, for after a march of a few blocks the white leggings soon get covered with mud and dirt. Leather leggings are a much needed and serviceable part of a soldier's outfit, and every regiment in the Guard should be provided with them. It would save the wear of the trousers on the bottoms of the legs to a very marked degree, would be very beneficial in stormy weather and going over dusty roads, and add to the ease of a soldier in marching. In the memorable evacuation day parade of a few years ago the soldiers had a stormy day and an extremely muddy route at times, the trousers being fairly plastered with mud to the knees, many of them being utterly ruined for future wear. This serviceable leather or canvas leggings would have measurably prevented. At the funeral of Gen. Grant the 1st Pennsylvania, wearing their leather leggings, won universal comment as a soldierly looking body of men, and presented a marked contrast with their trousers tucked neatly in brown leggings, to those of the New York regiments covered with dust without them.

DEATH OF J. H. McKENNEY.

J. H. MCKENNEY, the head of the old Grand street military equipment firm, J. H. McKenney and Co. (formerly Baker and McKenney), suddenly died of apoplexy on Tuesday evening, May 10, while dining with friends. The event was entirely unexpected. Mr. McKenney being apparently in the enjoyment of excellent health and spirits. Though never a soldier himself, yet it may safely be said that few civilians were more extensively and favorably known to military men, both in the National and State service over the entire county, than he. Having been a member of this firm for nearly forty years, he had constant dealings with soldiers of all degrees, and his reputation as a business man of sterling integrity was well deserved. In his private life he was a kind, upright, genial gentleman, generous to a fault, and always ready to lend a substantial helping hand when appealed to. He was a particularly staunch friend to the National Guard.

THE NATIONAL DRILL.

At the request of the National Drill Committee, Lieut.-Gen. Sheridan has appointed the following Army officers to be judges at the drill: Col. Henry M. Black, 23d Inf.; Capt. J. T. Haskell, 23d Inf.; Capt. E. C. Woodruff, 12th Inf.; Capt. Lancaster, 3d Art.; 1st Lieut. C. Chase, 3d Art.; 1st Lieut. B. H. Rudolph, 3d Art.; 1st Lieut. F. A. Smith, 12th Inf.; 1st Lieut. R. K. Evans, 12th Inf., and 1st Lieut. W. O. Clark, 12th Inf. All of these officers have signified their acceptance of the positions. 1st Lieut. S. F. Allen, 5th Art., formerly Inspector of Rifle Practice in the Division of the Atlantic, has been selected to assist Col. S. C. Blunt in conducting the rifle competition.

The New York World says: "The big drill in Washington during the closing days of the present month has already grown to such proportions that it will take on the character of a national event. New York State will not be represented by more than a single company, since it is considered the correct thing hereabout to speak of the affair as a 'military circus.' The South and West will come up in force, however, and if there be no wrangle or scandal growing out of the gathering it cannot fail to be of great advantage to those who take part in it. No doubt there will be commands there dressed in the most outlandish uniforms, and who will go through a style of drill known to no system of tactics. If so, they will go home with the rebuke of defeat and ridicule upon them. In the South interstate drills have been popular for some years and military officers of experience say that they have been beneficial, and have more than paid in the efficiency of the men for all the expense put to. This Washington drill and encampment is but an amplification of the smaller gatherings, and it is in the hands of men well posted in getting up affairs of this sort. About 8,000 men will spend a week under canvas within shadow of the Washington Monument. Gen. Fitz Hugh Lee, of Virginia, has been invited to take command of the camp.

LIEUTENANT BENEDICT'S CASE.

LIEUT. BENEDICT, of the 13th N. Y., proposes to take an appeal to the civil courts from the judgment of the Court-martial in his case, holding that the despatch he sent to Col. Fackner was sent in his capacity as counsel. This despatch was as follows: "Unless Smith instantly released you will force me to retaliate. Such contemptible tactics to smother opposition can't succeed." When Benedict came home his commanding officer promptly put him under arrest also, and he was tried and found guilty on that specification and one other.

His legal advisers are endeavoring to establish a parallel between his case and those of Major Spahn, in New York, and that of Steinman and Hensel, in Pennsylvania. Major Spahn was an officer and a writer for an up country paper, in which he criticized his superior officer. He was brought to trial, convicted and appealed to the civil court, where a decision in his favor was rendered. The State carried the case up, but no appeal has ever been heard. The Pennsylvania case was that of two lawyers, who, being editors of a paper, were proceeded against for disbarment "for gross libel on the courts." It was decided that they could not be accountable as attorneys for what they had done as editors, but must be proceeded against by action or indictment. These cases are held by the military authorities to lack the main elements of Lieut. Benedict's case.

G. O. No. 18, A. G. O., S. N. Y., May 4, announce that the court, in the case of Lieut. Benedict, "found the accused guilty of the first charge and of all the specifications thereunder, and guilty on the second charge and on the first and third specifications thereunder, and not guilty on the second specification, and imposed a sentence which, as approved and modified, directs that the accused be cashiered. The Commander-in-Chief has approved the finding of guilty on the first and third specifications of the first charge and on the first charge. He has disapproved the finding of guilty on the second specification of the first charge and on the third specification of the second charge for the reason that such specifications and the evidence thereunder do not in law sustain such respective charges. The finding of guilty on the fourth specification of the first charge is disapproved for the reason that the same is not supported by evidence. The finding of guilty on the first specification of the second charge is disapproved for the reason that the specification is not sufficiently proved. The finding of not guilty on the second specification of the second charge is disapproved as the specification is bad in law. The finding of guilty on the second charge is disapproved, being unsupported by any approved finding. The action, in disapproving of the finding of guilty on the first specification of the second charge, is solely due to the failure to legally prove the offence charged, and must not be taken as an approval of the conduct of Lieut. Benedict, whose attitude toward his superior officer in this matter is strongly condemned. The Court-martial before which this case was tried is hereby dissolved, and the sentence of cashiering will be executed."

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE.

Under this heading the San Francisco Report says: "A deplorable accident happened in Raleigh, North Carolina, yesterday. A militia colonel fell off his horse while parading with his regiment, and was transfixed by his own sword. A similar accident nearly happened one February 22, on Van Ness-avenue two or three years ago. The horse of a gallant officer at the reviewing post, unaccustomed to the sight of troops, swerved as the head of the Second Brigade approached in martial array, and nearly threw his rider. The latter, with great presence of mind—a most valuable quality in a commander—dropped his trenchant blade and clasped his steed around the neck, losing his chapeau in the performance. The horse stepped on the sword with a hind foot and broke it, and the chapeau, falling a little farther to the rear, was subjected to still more ignominious treatment by the frightened animal, and had to be carried away on the end of an infantryman's bayonet."

Twenty-second New York—Col. John T. Camp.

THE 22d made a very creditable display on Monday evening, May 9. Assembly sounded at 8.45 and the companies fell in promptly. In spite of the conspicuous disparity in the sizes of companies, the prompt and military movements of officers, sergeants, and men made a very favorable impression from the start. The gorgeous white uniform was discarded for the occasion, but their omission to us seemed rather advantageous than otherwise. The effect of the substantial dark blue fatigue dress, capped by white summer helmets, was infinitely more practical and military. This is by far the most soldierly and serviceable fatigue dress in the State, and should certainly form the model for any contemplated alteration in the style of the present State service uniform.

In consequence of the already mentioned difference in the companies, the equalization naturally was rather tedious to those waiting for the performance to begin, but the interval was satisfactorily filled out by the execution of the manual by several companies, which was, as a rule, very lively and regular. At the completion of the equalization the battalion consisted of 10 companies of 16 files, and these, at adjutant's call, formed in astonishingly rapid manner. The first part of the performance was a dress parade under command of Lieut.-Col. W. J. Harding, and of it we can only say that the men exhibited their discipline by their admirable steadiness and effective manual alike. The precision and the regularity of the manual by the regiment as a whole was particularly conspicuous in contrast with the rather careless performance in some of the left companies on coming into line, which was probably caused by want of proper space and unfamiliarity with the ways and commands of the captain on the part of men belonging to other companies, and who had been thrown out of their legitimate sphere by the equalization. The officers marched to the front in a businesslike, tactical manner; there was no "semi-circling" and "monkeying" of any kind at the close of the parade, and taking the performance as a whole, it was a military piece of work, just as it should be. The music, under Gilmore, was elegant, and the sounding of retreat by the bugle corps, which is an excellent one, aside from its novelty, had an exceedingly military ring to it.

The dress parade being concluded and the companies having dispersed, four companies formed line for battalion drill by bugle commands, under the command of Col. John T. Camp. It was a good idea to dispense with an exhibition of the entire regiment here, and the small battalion, which had at least some chance to manœuvre, made a much better show than the whole would have done, while the regimental reputation did not suffer. For a starter, the clear tones of the trumpet rang out fours right, and the regiment, with a swinging step and good distance, circled the hall until the trumpet gave the signal fours left march, halt. The companies dressed almost instantaneously. The movement was then repeated by the left flank, but came into line on, instead of to the left with remarkable precision, and repeated the same manœuvre by the opposite flank.

The colonel then directed the command to load, and, having executed several advances in line, broke into fours, ran the regiment in double time around the hall, came on left into line, and, as soon as the companies arrived in their places, a lively series of firings commenced, the second and fourth aiming right oblique, and the first and third companies firing to the front. The promptness and precision with which the companies arrived in their places, the rapidity with which the firings were taken up, the absence of all confusion and the coolness of officers and men deserve special mention. With exception of the orders to load, aim, fire, etc., nearly all the movements had to be executed by bugle sound, which certainly required everybody concerned to keep his eyes and ears open. The stepping off during the firings, the correct positions of feet and pieces, especially during the oblique firings, were conspicuous. The next was a show movement, an advance by the flank of companies, followed by companies left front into line, fours right about, and a march in line to the rear.

The whole demonstrated good training, the alignment in battalion front was excellent and the distances and dress in the advance by subdivisions were precise. The regiment then broke into column of companies, executed a few passages across the hall, followed this up with column of companies by the flank, marched to the rear and came into line and to a halt by companies left front into line. This series of movements was somewhat tame, and, although legitimate, evidently more intended for the edification of the audience than for an exhibition of intricate tactical skill. To counteract the effect of all this, the trumpet next sounded fours right, double time, and the lively gait and the excitement created by the rapidly-following trumpet signals, put the battalion in good shape for a more difficult movement. While going at double time the signal left front into line, faced to the rear, was given, and almost instantaneously followed by the order commence firing. It was a difficult evolution, but the battalion was equal to it, the movements were rapid and precise, and the firings taken up coolly and executed in the same methodical manner as we have mentioned before in this article. The regiment now formed column of companies and circled the drill room, and here it was where the first fault of the drill became apparent. It was slight, but where everything was so well done, it could hardly fail to attract notice. The pivot guides, in changing direction, invariably failed to describe the required arc of a circle, but almost marked time on their own ground.

This was most conspicuous in the left guide of the first company, and in fact this company at one change of direction wheeled virtually with the pivot in the centre, that is, the left half of the company marched backward and the right forward, on the principle of the two wings of a skirmish line performing a wheel in two opposite directions. However, the regiment recovered itself in a series of close column formations on front and rear companies, and deployments on flank and interior companies. As a closing movement the battalion was stretched out in single rank, and put through the manual in very fine manner. It then executed fours right, broke into double time, and by the movement in double rank on right into line closed a drill which deserves to be ranked very high as an exhibition of general excellence of execution and tactical skill. With exception of a very few all the commands were given by trumpet, and the entire absence of blunders shows unrelenting attention of the battalion to the business in hand. The Colonel was very rapid in delivering his orders, and neither men nor officers had time to think over an order after it had been given. A matter which is worthy of more than a passing notice is the almost perfect training exhibited by the guides and markers, and the rapidity and regularity which characterized their movements. For this the sole credit belongs to Lieut. Col. Harding's system of instruction of non-commissioned officers.

The armory was tastefully decorated and filled to repletion with a select audience. Conspicuous among the military men were Adjt. Gen. Josiah Porter, Brig. Gen. Louis Fitzgerald, Ex-Inspector Gen. P. H. Briggs. There were a host of others. Gen. Porter expressed much satisfaction at the fine performance of his old command.

Twenty-third New York.

A circular issued to the 23d Regt. announces that the average attendance at drills during the past season was 85 per cent., about 3½ per cent. less than last year. The following members who have attended all the drills, parades and meetings, are especially commended for their zeal and faithful attention to duty: Lieut. Middleton, Sergt. J. F. Handy, Corpls. Shute, Perry, Howard, Cooke and Pvts. Benedict, J. M. Douglas, Fanning, Hockemeyer, Martin, Merrill, Penney, Pirie, Reed and Steele; also, Pvts. Boucher, Lau and Meeteer, whose record is 100 per cent. since they graduated from the recruit class. Of the above, Sergt. J. F. Handy, Corpls. Shute, Perry, Howard and Cooke, and Pvts. J. M. Douglas, Fanning, Martin and Merrill were also 100 per cent. men last year. For the careful performance of their duties, the interest shown and the work accomplished, the commandant desires to thank the non-commissioned officers. Special mention is made of 1st Sergt. Stokes.

All the officers of the 23d Regiment of Brooklyn went to 106 Montague street on Tuesday evening to bid a formal farewell to Col. Charles L. Fincke, who sailed for Liverpool, May 11, on the Adriatic. Besides the officers there were present Gens. Barnes, Ward, and Woodward, and many personal friends. Capt. Smith, of Co. H, read a set of complimentary resolutions, which, handsomely engrossed and inclosed in a sealskin and leather album, were presented to the Colonel, who made a brief response. Then he was presented with a handsome watch by Sergt. Kraft, of Co. D, on behalf of the regiment, and another soldier handed Col. Fincke a huge basket of beautiful flowers.

The 23d Regt., Brooklyn, was reviewed Saturday evening, May 9, by Col. Wm. E. Everdell, who was the first commander of the regiment. The armory in Clermont avenue was crowded. After the review the iron cross was presented to the following members for faithful and continuous service for 10 years or over (the first two having served nearly 16 years): John J. Norris, James F. Craft, James Hosford, Geo. W. Hand, Willis L. Brownell, J. D. A. Onderdonk, Jos. Kane, Hershel Hildreth, David Moffat and Willard F. Cook, Lieut.-Col. A. S. Bacon commanded the regiment.

A circular from Harold L. Crane, Captain "Brooklyn City Guard," Co. G, 23d Regt., gives the names of the members of the company who have done full duty during the season just closed, viz.: 1st Lt. G. E. Hall, Q. M. Sergt. C. J. Holt, Sergeants E. Haynes, A. F. Carey, and Q. C. DeGrove, Jr., Corporals C. J. Fisher and G. F. Crook, Privates G. B. Adams, A. G. Findlay, Jr., F. Heenan, A. T. Morro, W. S. Silcocks, Jr., and H. H. Walker. The following members have missed but one roll call: 2d Lieut. J. W. Silcocks, 1st Sergt. W. M. Despard, and Privates J. H. Boynton, Jr., and W. Concklyn.

MILITIA ITEMS.

The Twenty second Regiment Veteran Corps will visit Boston June 16 and 17, leaving New York by boat the night of June 15. The corps will be the guest of the National Veteran Militia Association and the Charlestown Cadets. There will be a parade, a dinner at Charlestown, and a ball in honor of the visitors. Final arrangements for the trip will be made at 4 Union-square Tuesday evening.

Sergt. C. J. Barber, on the 3d of May, was chosen 2d lieutenant of the Wheeler Rifles, Ohio.

The several companies of the 9th N. Y. will parade for inspection by the regimental commander: Cos. B and C, Monday, May 9; F and G, Tuesday, May 10; I and K, Wednesday, May 11; A and D, Thursday, May 12; E and H, Friday, May 13.

$160,000 have now been appropriated by two bills for Kings County, N. Y., armories. Early in the session, Mr. Worth had passed a bill, which became a law, authorizing the insertion of an item of $110,000 in the Brooklyn tax levy, for an addition to the armory of the 23d Regiment. The second bill is that of Senator Griswold, for a State appropriation of $50,000, for the armory of the 47th Regiment. This bill went to the Governor May 6, The money appropriated by Mr. Griswold's bill is to be expended under the direction of the State Armory Commission.

The 1st Battery, Capt. L. Wendell, will have a mounted battery drill at Van Courtland on May 18. The 2d Battery, Capt. F. P. Earle, will give an excursion. A committee has the matter in charge and due notice of the affair will be given. The membership of the command is now 108. The battery has offered their services to the Chief of Ordnance to fire some of the salutes at State Camp during the season.

Civil war appears to be in full progress in Atlanta, Ga., the parties to it being the Gate City Guard on one side and the editor of the Atlanta paper and his friends on the other. The editor boasted that he had struck Captain Burke, of the Guard, thereupon his face was slapped by a member of the captain's company. Next, A. M. Gardner, of the Atlanta World, who said something in defence of his contemporary, was attacked by another Guardsman, H. J. Whittemore, with a result which is thus described in a despatch to the N. Y. World: "Whittemore struck Gardner a stinging blow in the face. Then Gardner sailed into his opponent, and in less time than it takes to tell it had administered to him a terrible beating. His first blow was a clean knock down, and he followed it up with more of the same kind, literally beating Whittemore's face to a jelly. Policemen soon put in an appearance and took both men to the station. Gardner's face showed the imprint of no blow. Whittemore, on the other hand, presented a pitiable sight. His face was badly bruised and covered with blood and his eyes were almost closed. When arrested he was so badly used up he was unable to walk and had to be taken to the station in a carriage. Both men were released on bail, Mr. Atwood going on Gardner's bond." To add to the complication news has been received that the British Government has refused to permit the Guard to visit England armed and in uniform. Queen Victoria has evidently been reading up the story of the Trojan horse.

Brig.-Gen. Louis Fitzgerald orders the 1st Brigade to parade on Decoration Day as escort to the Grand Army of the Republic, the commands forming in close columns, the heads resting on Fifth Avenue, as follows: 7th Regt., on W. 53d street; 69th Regt., on E. 53d street; 8th Regt., on W. 52d street; 9th Regt., on E. 52d street; 12th Regt., on W. 51st street; 71st Regt. on E. 51st street; 11th Regt., on W. 50th street; 22d Regt., on E. 50th street; 2d Battery, on W. 49th street; 1st Battery, on E. 49th street, in which order they will join the column. A marching salute will be rendered to the Reviewing Officer at the Worth Monument.

The appointment of Lieut.-Col. Thomas B. Rand, 9th N. Y., as a member of the Brigade Board of Examination is announced.

The New York Regiments are ordered out for first general practice at Creedmoor as follows: 7th Regt. on May 16, 17 and 19; 8th Regt., May 26; 9th Regt., June 6; 11th Regt., June 13; 22d Regt., June 17; 69th Regt., June 20 and 28; 71st Regt., June 23; 12th Regt., August 1 and 5. The 7th, 12th and 69th Regts. will practice by detachments.

Capt. W. H. Murphy will have as his 2d Lieutenant in Co. F, 12th Regt., the elder son of Gen. Alex. S. Webb, President of the New York College. It is the special desire of Gen. Webb that his son will do military duty under Capt. Murphy.

PENNSYLVANIA NATIONAL GUARD.

SPEAKING of the new 12th Armory, the Philadelphia Item calls attention to the fact that in that city there are thousands of rounds of fixed ammunition kept in buildings that it is folly to call armories; buildings that could offer no adequate resistance to a mob bent upon procuring the arms contained in them; buildings so constructed that the defenders would be exposed in a needless manner: buildings that, through the parsimony of the City Councils and citizens in general, are worthless as rallying points for those upholders of law and order, the citizen soldiers.

Gov. Beaver formally opened the exposition of the City Grays at Harrisburg, May 7, in the presence of several thousand people. In speaking of the utility of the National Guard the Governor said that a little over a month ago it looked to those in authority very much as though the services of the more than 80,000 disciplined men would soon be needed. Inquiry had come from Washington as to the time that would be required to concentrate Pennsylvania troops at Lake Erie in case of trouble with England in regard to the fisheries dispute. The reply was sent back that 24 hours would be all that would be necessary to concentrate the troops at the lake or at any point on the border of the State. Gov. Beaver's statement has, we understand, no other foundation than the Department's regular annual inquiry as to the strength and availability of the militia of all the States.

CALIFORNIA NATIONAL GUARD.

THE companies composing the 2d Brigade, N. G. C., will encamp for not less than seven days, at a date to be named hereafter, under the command of Brig.-Gen. W. H. Dimond. Those commands of the National Guard not belonging to the 2d Brigade who desire to encamp with that brigade are authorized to do so.

The returns for March show that the Cadet Company, 1st Infantry Regiment, had the highest attendance at drill—100 per cent.; and Co. C, 3d Infantry Regiment, and Co. C, 5th Infantry Regiment, the lowest—51 per cent.

STATE OF CONNECTICUT.

G. O. No. 10, Hartford, May 11, directs that the companies of infantry, machine-gun platoons, and platoons of light artillery, National Guard, parade one day during the present month, in their respective towns, under orders of the regimental, battalion or battery commander. Companies of infantry and machine-gun platoons will devote a portion of the day to rifle practice, under orders of the commandant and supervision of the regimental Inspector of Rifle Practice, and the rest of the day to such drill as the commander shall direct, including instruction in guard duty and skirmish drill, which will form a part of the day's duty. Regimental signal officers will attend the parades of those companies having signal details, for the purpose of instructing the men in that duty, if so ordered by regimental commandant. The Guard is invited to attend and parade at the dedication of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, at New Haven, June 17, proximo. Transportation and rations will be provided by the city of New Haven. The brigade commander and staff, the field, staff and bands of those organizations volunteering to parade on that day will be ordered out for duty, so that no expense need be incurred by any member of the National Guard.

MASSACHUSETTS MILITIA.

THE troops comprising the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia will parade for drill at the places and on the dates hereinafter named: 1st Inf., Boston, Oct 3, 10 A. M; 2d Inf., Framingham, June 6, 10 A. M.; 5th Inf., Boston, May 25. 10 A. M.; 6th Inf., South Framingham, Sept. 17, 10 A. M; 8th Inf., Salem, Sept. 30, 10 A. M.; 9th Inf., Boston, Sept. 8, 10 A. M.; 1st Corps Cadets, South Framingham, Sept. 19, 10 A. M.; 2d Corps Cadets, Clifton, June 13, 10 A. M; Battery A, 1st Battery Art., Boston, Oct. 10, 10 A. M.; Bat. B, Worcester, Sept. 10, 10 A. M.; Bat. C, 1st Battery Art., Par. III., July 13, 10 A. M.; 1st Bat. of Cav., Boston, Sept. 29, 10 A. M; Co. F, Cav., Groton, Sept. 2, 10 A. M.; Signal Corps, South Framingham, June 6, 10 A. M.; Ambulance Corps, South Framingham, June 6, 10 A. M.; Signal Corps, South Framingham, July 18, 10 A. M.; Ambulance Corps, South Framingham, July 18, 10 A. M. The annual encampment of the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia for the year 1887 will be held as follows, and the troops composing the several organizations of same will go into camp for five days, as herein directed: 1st Brigade, Brig. Gen. Nat Wales, commanding, at State Camp Ground, South Framingham, June 7 to 11, inclusive; 2d Brigade, Brig. Gen. Benj. F. Peach, Jr., commanding, at State Camp Ground, July 19 to 23, inclusive; 1st Corps Cadets, Lieut. Col. Thos. F. Edmands, commanding, at Hingham, July 12 to 16, inclusive; 2d Corps Cadets, Lieut. Col. J. Frank Dalton, commanding (place to be announced), Aug. 16 to 20, inclusive.

NEBRASKA.

IN G. O. 1, of May 5, Gov. Thayer announces his staff as follows: Gen. A. V. Cole, Adjt.-General; Col. E. M. Correll, Q. M. General; Col. M. W. Stone, Surg.-General; Lieut.-Col. Franklin Sweet, Insp.-General; Major John C. Watson, Judge-Advocate, Aides-de-camp: Col. S. J. Shirley, Sidney; Col. W. H. McCann, Hay Springs; Col. Wm. F. Cody, North Platte; Col. E. S. Dudley, Lincoln; Col. James Britton, Wayne. Col. L. W. Colby is appointed Brig.-General in command of brigade. Colonels Correll, Stone and Sweet are reappointments; Col. Shirley was Q. M. 1st Inf.; Col. Cody, better known as "Buffalo Bill," is now on a European tour.

In G. O. 2 Adjt.-Gen. Cole says: "There being vacancies in the offices of colonel and lieut.-colonel of the 1st Regt., Nebraska National Guard, caused by the promotion of Colonel L. W. Colby and Lieut.-Col. A. V. Cole, the officers of said regiment are hereby ordered to meet at the office of the Adjutant-General, in the State House, in the city of Lincoln, on May 20, 1887, for the purpose of electing a colonel and lieut.-colonel of said regiment, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting. Brig.-Gen. L. W. Colby will preside at the meeting.

RHODE ISLAND.

GOVERNOR DAVIS announced, May 10, the following personal staff: Darius B. Davis, Pawtucket; William Von Gotschalk, Lincoln; Howard Smith, Newport; Patrick E. Hayes, Pawtucket; Thomas J. Peirce, North Kingston, and John McManus, Providence. Darius Davis is the Governor's brother. It is understood that Governor Davis will form his staff upon the Massachusetts plan of a Governor's council, and that there will be less of gold cord and plumed chapeaus than is customary with Governors' staff in Rhode Island.

MICHIGAN.

THE Michigan troops will hold their encampment in August next, and they have great hopes that Gen. H. M. Black, the commander of Fort Wayne, will be selected to visit their camp and inspect them.

THE ENGLISH MILITIA.

"ONE OF THEM" who writes in Colburn's United Service Magazine informs us that for the most part the English militia is officered by "country gentlemen, either landowners or younger sons, with a fair sprinkling of briefless barristers and business men, a large proportion of wealthy idlers, and a small percentage of men who have been in the Regular Army, altogether as good material for officers as can well be imagined." The rank and file are declared to be "fair representatives of the middle and lower classes of the laboring world, not of its aristocracy, for well paid, highly skilled artisans do not care to leave their work to join the militia, and if they soldier at all it is as Volunteers." 17,000 men are artisans, 24,000 are mechanical laborers, nearly 9,000 are miners, and 2,000 fishermen; agricultural laborers contribute 35,000, and miscellaneous occupations 22,000. As to age, 34,000 are lads in their teens; 31,000 are between 20 and 25 years; 22,000 between 25 and 30; 13,000 between 30 and 35, and 10,000 over the latter age. The men are described as "capital fellows at bottom; their discipline is good, their knowledge of drill very fair, their cleanliness respectable, and their self-esteem as soldiers sufficiently developed; in short, they are excellent material with which a skilful officer can do great things, provided he knows how to handle them properly."

As to musketry, "the shooting in the militia is so infamous that it is painful to write about it. The inspecting officers are quite indifferent about marksmanship, and solely base their reports to headquarters on cleanliness, smartness in dress, and marching past. No practical soldier can for a moment affirm that men after such a month's training, with its intrinsically useless evolutions and its sham musketry course, are adequately prepared for war. Yet on these infantry soldiers, and engineers and artillery trained in almost as superficial a manner, this country spends more than £1,300,000 a year."

SOCIETY SETS IN WASHINGTON.

THE extravagance and glitter of recent entertainments in Washington society, inaugurated exclusively by members of the new Administration, has caused the creation of two distinct sets. One is called the new or official clique, and the other is the old or the Army and Navy faction. The receptions and affairs of the old society people, who stay here year after year and watch processions of temporary officials sport for a brief while, are now made rigorously plain and unostentatious. The other set are not invited to these entertainments, but they do not seem to mind it a bit. On the contrary, they delight in showing how profuse and gorgeous people can be who have oil wells, railroads, and such things at their back. The war will not end while a certain part of this Administration remains in office.

TORPILLEURS ET MERE GIGOGNE.

LIEUTENANT WEYL, in writing in the Journal dela Marine, says in an article headed "Torpilleurs et Mère Gigogne"—"From some important revelations, it results that the naval administration is still in search of a good torpedo boat. Neither the 33 nor the 35 metres are to-day in favor; the 41 metres has gained ground, and yet officers who have seen that type at sea declare it to be inferior to the 33 metres. All this proves that in spite of efforts and millions expended, the end, said to have been completely realized three years ago, has not been attained, and the microbe has not yet slain the giant. Alas! at that epoch the microbe had never discharged torpedoes at sea. I am mistaken, it had discharged one in the roads of Tunis in the presence of the Bey, and it went to the bottom and was lost. Since that time, in spite of reiterated demands on the part of officers, no torpedoes have been discharged at sea. They cost so much that the authorities hesitate incurring the risk of losing them." Means having been found, thanks to an ingenious mechanism, of closing the tubes to the sea without any risk of a premature explosion when the torpedo is discharged. The Mère Gigogne, which is destined to act as a sort of magazine for six torpedo boats, is to be armor clad, protected with 35 c. plates, armed with two 34 c. guns and machine guns, and to be fast. Lt. Weyl thinks that this "mother" will cost over 2,000,000 fr., and the offspring about 1,500,000 fr. He thinks that all kinds of difficulties would be experienced at sea in getting the torpedo boats safely alongside of the Mère Gigogne to replenish their stock of torpedoes, or to return those out of order to store, or for repair.

H. M. S. ORLANDO.

THE Orlando, belted cruiser, made a four hours' trial of her machinery with the forced draught at Plymouth, April 20. The draught of water forward was 20 ft., aft 22 ft., her deep load-line draught with all her stores, guns, ammunition, coals, and crew on board ready for sea. Steam in boilers, 129 lbs.; in the starboard cylinders, high 34 lb., intermediate 26.9 lb., low 16.5 lb.; vacuum in condenser, 26.1 in.; revolutions of engines, 119.2; horse-power, high 874, intermediate 1,442, low 1,997—total, 4,313. Port engine—steam in cylinders, high 38 7 lb., intermediate 26.4 lb., low 16.1 lb.; vacuum in condenser, 26.2 in.; revolutions, 118.5; horse-power—high 990, intermediate 1 389, low 1,930—total, 4,309, and for both engines 8,622. The highest horse-power attained was 8,932, or 492 above what was contracted for, and the vessel attained a mean speed, by patent log, on the measured mile, of over 19 knots. This is the highest speed yet attained by any of her Majesty's armed vessels. The engines worked well and without any hot bearings, and the boilers gave a good supply of steam without priming. The curve of the wave-line was taken in order to ascertain whether the protective belt was placed in the right position below the water-line, and it was found to be most accurate. The Orlando is, therefore, in all respects a success.—Admiralty Gazette.

PRACTICE WITH REPEATING RIFLES.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Pall Mall Gazette lately saw at Metz a company of German troops drilling with the new repeating rifles, and writes as follows:

The company I saw had had but little practice, and were getting reprimands from half a dozen officers standing beside the drill sergeant, for the slowness of their movements, but to a non-military eye nothing could have been more machine-like. The repeating rifle differs from the ordinary rifle in the fact that the stock, instead of stopping short where it is grasped by the left hand, is prolonged to within an inch of the end of the barrel. This constitutes the reservoir of cartridges. The firing consists of three movements—the "ready," during which each man gives a sharp turn to the right to a little lever above the lock of his gun, and the familiar "present" and "fire!" The company stood four deep, the two front ranks firing, while the two rear ranks recharged their magazines. So rapid were the movements that the magazine, holding either ten or twelve cartridges—I forgot which—was emptied, with a perceptible allowance each time for rapid aim, in ten seconds. The thought of what would happen to any body of men exposed to half a minute of firing like this made the spectacle almost appalling. A stolid-looking German by my side, who, as I afterward learned, had been one of the Landwehr in the war, expressed his feelings in one word—the most vigorous in his native tongue, "Schaudernaft!" he exclaimed under his breath. It is all very well for a Russian governor to issue orders to his troops calling upon them to remember that battles are won by courage and not by repeating rifles, but the moral effect of the new weapon both upon those using it and those opposed to it, must be enormous. To be able to wait until the enemy, in whatever form he may be, is within a few yards of you, and then to deliver your fire upon him at the rate of a shot a second, is enough to make "cracks" out of even Falstaff's levies.

PROPORTION OF THE THREE ARMS.

THE Avenir Militaire observes that for many years past there has been a tendency, both abroad and in France, to augment cavalry in proportion to infantry. "As regards artillery, the old proportion of two guns per 1,000 men has everywhere been doubled, and lately it was declared that, at all events for the troops of the second line, this four per 1,000 ought to be considered insufficient." Statistics published by the Rivista Militaire and official German documents show that the wounds inflicted in 1870-71 by infantry were 89.8 per cent., by the artillery 9 per cent., and by cavalry 1.2 per cent. The Avenir points out that the German statistics deal only with the wounded and not with the killed, splinters of shells are more deadly than bullets, sword and lance generally kill, and if dead as well as wounded had been counted, the co-efficiency of the branches would be seen to be much more even than has been made out. If the infantry kill the most, it suffers the most. In the Franco German War the Germans lost—116,487 infantry, out of an effective of 660,830 men; the artillery, 6,019 out of 92,360; the cavalry, 4,639 out of 73,883; other arms, 693 out of 53,942. The Avenir, which is by no means Boulangerist, approves of the proposed addition of 48 squadrons to the French cavalry.

ENGLAND'S SLEEPING ADMIRAL.

WE have not heard the last yet, and are not likely to hear for some time, of our sleeping Admiral, and the omission of the ceremonial salute when our iron clads visited Cannes. It seems that after leaving Cannes the Duke of Edinburgh, with his squadron, steamed for Naples, and that as they entered the bay they fired most punctiliously the salutes required by the laws of international etiquette, for failing to fire which at Cannes the Duke has been so harshly criticized. I notice, however, that in one of the Italian papers which, as it were, chuckles over the event, there is a comment to the effect that the British ships could scarcely have had in the interim an opportunity of procuring the small cannon for firing the salute, which, it was stated, were not on board when they were at Cannes. The inference that the Italian journal wishes its readers to draw is obvious.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

GEN. BOULANGER has submitted to the French Chamber of Deputies a bill looking to an experimental mobilization of the Army in October.

THE £1,040,000 recently voted by the French Chamber is to be expended in three 19-knot protected cruisers, three 2d class cruisers, three 3d class cruisers, and 30 torpedo vessels.

HERR KRUPP is reported to intend the manufacture of a gun weighing 3,000 cwt., and of a calibre of 17½ in. The shell to be fired from this gun is to weigh 30 cwt., and to be nearly 6 ft. long.

THE Spanish Minister of Marine will shortly ask for estimates to build 21 cruisers and 160 torpedo vessels. It seems probable that the greater part of these craft will be built in England.

WHEN the Martini-Henry was adopted the English stock of Sniders were turned over to the colonies. Now that the magazine gun is to be adopted the Martini-Henry are to replace the Snider in the hands of the native army of India.

A NEW torpedo boat, constructed by Messrs. Yarrow for the Italian Government, has been tried on the measured mile below Gravesend. The weather was squally and rough, and the mean speed of six runs over the course was at the rate of 25.1 knots per hour, half a knot in excess of that registered by a previous boat of the same type.

HERR NORDENFELDT is about to sign a contract with the Hungarian Government for the establishment of a factory at Pesth for the manufacture of small arms. Hungary will allot the land on which the factory will be built free of rent and will exempt the property from the payment of all taxes for fifteen years. It will also exempt from duty all imported machinery which will be used in the factory and guarantee an order for 400,000 rifles to be delivered in two years.

AT Chatham the foundations are being laid of a 180-ton hydraulic crane, and efforts are to be made to complete it to lift the heavy guns on board the Benbow and Rodney.

A BILL is to be presented to the Cortes fixing the strength of the Spanish army at 100,000 men for the Peninsula, 19,000 for Cuba, 8,700 for the Philippines, and 3,700 for Porto Rico. Gen. Cassola is determined to pursue his plans for the military territorial division of the Peninsula, so as to place Spain in line with other countries as regards the science of warfare

La France declares that all the rifles furnished to the French Army between the years 1869 and 1886, want precision; that neither the Chassepot nor the Gras fire straight, and that it is the same with the new small bore model Gras-Lebel. It is also complained that the new repeating-rifle must be taken from the shoulder after each round. It finds some consolation in the fact that it is the same with the German rifle.

SOME foreign Governments which have freely adopted Hotchkiss quick firing shell guns are now insisting that solid drawn cartridges must be used for these weapons, instead of the composite cartridges originally invented by Mr. Hotchkiss.

THE Fee Cheu, armed cruiser and cable vessel, has been launched on the Wear. Her dimensions are—length, 220 ft.; breadth, 32 ft., and depth of hold, 20 ft. She is built entirely of steel, and the estimated speed is 13 knots per hour. The armament consists of two 6-in. Armstrong breechloaders, with four small Armstrongs in the 'tween decks.

IN consequence of the melinite explosion at Belfort General Demay, the Director of Artillery, has been replaced by General de St. Germain. Yet the belief in the new explosive is not abandoned in spite of this accident and a more recent one at Bourges. It appears the Belliqueuse, one of the early ironclads built in France, is to be operated upon with melinite shells. She is a vessel of 3,617 tons displacement.

EXPERIMENTS made by the German War Office have proved that melinite decomposes if kept long and is therefore useless for war purposes.

THE French Headquarters' staff, which, under the Empire was a special service, and consisted of only 580 officers, has now been thrown open, and consists of 1,003, a number which might be doubled in the event of a mobilization—603 officers of infantry, 124 of cavalry, 230 of artillery, 45 of engineers, and a Captain of Gendarmerie. All these officers have to pass a severe examination, and after serving for three years on the staff have to return to their corps, so as not to forget their regimental duties.

REPORTS from Burmah show that General Roberts has not succeeded better than his predecessors in subduing the country. Now that the garrisons are compelled to move back at the approach of the deadly hot season, fresh swarms of natives press upon their retreat, believing it to be a confession of weakness. Wherever insurgents are found they are

SEALED PROPOSALS, in triplicate, subject to usual conditions, will be received at this office until 11 o'clock A. M., June 1, 1887, at which time and place they will be opened in the presence of bidders, for furnishing and delivering at this depot miscellaneous Quartermaster's stores, such as army lamps and parts, lanterns and globes, stationery, G. I. buckets and barrels, iron, zinc, horse and mule shoes and nails, &c., &c., specified on schedule to be seen and had at this office.

The Government reserves the right to reject any or all proposals or to accept, as may be most advantageous to the department.

Preference given to articles of domestic production and manufacture, conditions of price and quality being equal, and such preference given to articles of American production and manufacture produced on the Pacific coast to the extent of the consumption required by the public service there.

Blanks and information as to bidding, &c., will be furnished by this office on application.

Envelopes containing proposals should be marked "Proposals for Quartermaster's stores, to be opened June 1, 1887," and be addressed to the undersigned, killed offhand, but the soldiery are said to be disgusted with this profitless butchery. Old English officers are quoted as declaring that Burmah is by far the most difficult task England has undertaken in a century and one well-nigh hopeless, and even if she succeeds it is not worth the trouble.

HENRY C. HODGES,

THE special committee appointed to consider the question of a new rifle for the British service having recommended for further trial two out of the numerous classes of weapons submitted to them, namely, the improved Lee and the Lee-Burton magazine-rifles, a quantity of these arms have been ordered, and they are now being issued to selected men in England, and 50 rifles are being shipped to India for trial there. The committee have decided against the detachable magazine system, and in favor of a fixed form of hopper or magazine, and have fixed upon the bolt form of breech-action. They have discarded the Enfield authorities' new wooden gun-stocks, and reverted to that used on the modern Martini-Henrys. A hand-guard of leather or canvas is to be provided to protect the men's hands when the rifles get heated during rapid firing.

Broad Arrow, referring to a scheme of volunteer batteries proposed, says: This is only one of the many numerous stopgaps to enable us to eke out our military deficiencies—one of the numerous patches on our ragged military cloak. Where so much is required, where shall we begin? Military reformers may well contemplate our military necessities with despair—ironclads, armor-piercing guns, mine-fields, guard-boats, torpedo-boats, torpedo-boat catchers, quick-firing guns, and so on ad infinitum.

THE Paris correspondent of the London Post quotes a distinguished diplomat as saying: "My opinion is that France is meditating a coup de scène in Egypt. A great deal has been said in the newspapers about Gen. Boulanger and his daring schemes; but very little has been written about the French Minister of Marine, Admiral Aube, who is not only clever and enterprising, but also an ambitious man. . . . My firm belief is that the concentration of the French Fleet in the Mediterranean was ordered with the intention of pursuing a vigorous policy in Egypt. The tone of the Radical Press of late, especially the newspapers devoted to Gen. Boulanger, in attacking England was not purely accidental. It was manifestly calculated to prepare the public for some sensational coup de main. What resistance could the English offer in Egypt to an attack by a powerful French expeditionary corps? Admiral Aube would not hesitate also to accept a naval engagement if the opportunity presented itself. I repeat it. The Pagny incident may have upset the calculations of France, but I believe I may assert that a few days ago a conflict between France and England was a far greater probability than a second Franco-German War."

La Journal de la Marine gives a description of the 2d class cruisers Davoust and Suc, about to be laid down at Toulon, 90 m. 70 c. long, 12 m. 10 c. beam, 3,000 tons displacement, armed with four 6 in. guns, machine guns, and torpedo gear, etc. These cruisers are to have four masts, to be schooner rigged, to have two independent engines each working a screw, and capable of developing, with forced draught, 9,000 horse power between them. Their speed is to be 20 knots, and they are to carry 480 tons of coal, which it is calculated will allow them to steam 4,000 miles at the rate of 12½ knots.

Proposals for Purchase of Vessels

WASHINGTON, April 25, 1887.

IN accordance with the provisions of the fifth section of an act of Congress, approved March 3, 1883 (Statutes at Large, vol. 22, p. 599), sealed proposals will be received at the Navy Department until noon on Saturday, July 30, 1887, at which time and place they will be opened for the purchase of the following-named vessels, which have been stricken from the Navy Register, viz:

Tennessee, appraised at $35,000, Powhatan at $17,000, and Ticonderoga at $15,000, at the Navy Yard, Brooklyn, New York; Shenandoah at $12,000, Lackawanna at $12,000, Wachusett at $10,000, and Cyane at $3,000, at the Navy Yard, Mare Island, California.

The vessels will be sold, for cash, to the person or persons, or corporation or corporations offering the highest prices therefor above the appraised value thereof. Each bid or proposal must be accompanied by a deposit of cash (or satisfactory certified check, payable to the order of the Secretary of the Navy) of not less than 20 per cent. of the amount of the offer or proposal, and also a bond with a penal sum equal to one-half the amount of the offer, with two or more sureties, whose ability is certified to by a U. S. Judge, District Attorney, Postmaster, or Collector of Internal Revenue, in the district in which the sureties reside, conditioned for the payment of the remaining 80 per cent. of the amount of such offer or proposal within thirty days from the date of its acceptance. In case default is made in the payment of the remaining 80 per cent., or any part thereof, within that time, said cash deposit of 20 per cent. shall be considered as forfeited to the Government, and shall be applied as directed in the act of March 3, 1883. A bond need not be furnished, provided the cash deposit or certified check accompanying the proposal covers the whole amount of the proposal. All deposits and bonds of bidders, whose proposals shall not be accepted, will be returned to them within seven days after the opening of the proposals.

Proposals must be submitted in a sealed envelope, addressed to the Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D. C., and endorsed "Proposals for the purchase of vessels," so as to distinguish them from other communications. No offer for more than one vessel must be included within one proposal. In the case of tie bids, the award will be made by the Secretary of the Navy by lot.

On application to the Department, a printed list will be furnished giving general information concerning the vessels; also forms of bids and bonds which must be used by bidders. The vessels can be examined at any time by applying to the Commandant of the Navy Yard where they are.

The purchasers must remove the vessels purchased from the limits of the Yard within such reasonable time as may be fixed by the Department.

WILLIAM C. WHITNEY,
Secretary of the Navy.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
NEW YORK DEPOT OF THE QUARTERMASTER'S DEPT., HOUSTON ST., COR. GREENE,
NEW YORK CITY, April 26, 1887.

SEALED PROPOSALS IN TRIPLICATE are invited and will be received at this office until 11 A.M., June 9, 1887, for the mason and iron work, plastering, &c., called for by specifications numbered 1, and for the carpenters's work, painting, &c., called for by specifications numbered 2. The work is required in altering the Academic Building at West Point, N. Y., for which plans and specifications may be seen at this office, and at the Post Quartermaster's office at West Point, N. Y., where also the blank forms of proposals, contracts, &c., can be obtained. Bidders must state the time within which the work will be completed. Bids must be for all the work, materials, &c., on either the specifications, or on both. Proposals must be made in strict conformity with the plans and specifications, and must be accompanied by a guarantee bond having justification for 20 per cent. of the amount of the proposal, and a bond with a penalty of 10 per cent. will be required upon execution of the contract. The Government reserves the right to reject any or all proposals.

A SAFE INVESTMENT

For both large and small sums of money is offered in the DEBENTURE BONDS of the NEBRASKA LOAN AND TRUST CO. and the CENTRAL LOAN AND LAND CO. These bonds are secured by mortgages on productive real estate after the manner of securing National Bank notes, bear 6 per cent. interest and run 10 years. Experience proves that they are one of the safest investments ever devised, and they are commended to the attention of officers of the Army and Navy.

WHOLE NUMBER 1239.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 21, 1887.

SIX DOLLARS PER YEAR.
SINGLE COPIES, FIFTEEN CENTS.

Publication Office, 240 Broadway, N. Y.

THE War Department will soon issue a revised edition of the publication containing the names of all cadets admitted to the U. S. Military Academy since its formation. The last edition, published in 1876, has long been exhausted. The new book will contain the names of all cadets down to and including the present fiscal year.

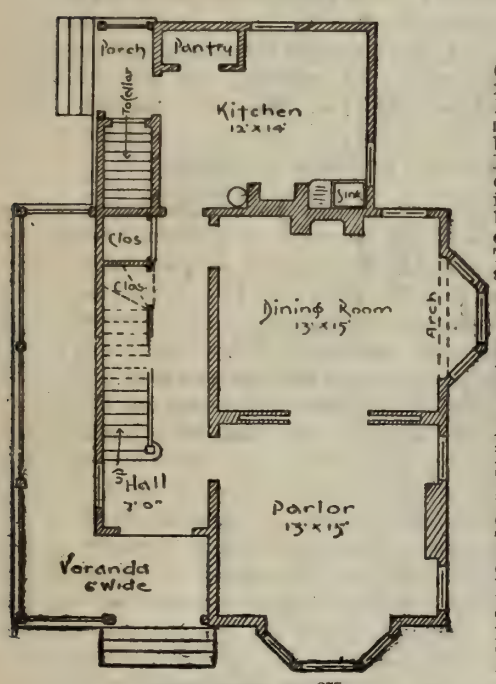
TO MAKE retirement the aim of any man, says the London Army and Navy Gazette, "is to stifle ambition, zeal, and every quality which goes to make up an efficient officer. If there is no 'certainty of promotion' for those who, although they may have no interest, are yet acknowledged to have no superiors in their line of business, then it is manifest that a premium is offered to 'loafing.'"

SECRETARY WHITNEY has ordered Captain T. O. SELFRIDGE to return to the command of the Omaha by the first steamer leaving San Francisco. A Court composed of officers on the Asiatic Station will be ordered to inquire into the circumstance which led to the death of the Japanese from the explosion of a shell fired from the Omaha. The Japanese Government does not hold Captain SELFRIDGE responsible for their death, and regards it as a purely accidental occurrence.

A NON-COMMISSIONED officer of fourteen years' service writes: "You deserve well of the Army for your efforts to bring about a system of more frequent payments to the enlisted men. It is a practical question and should be discussed from a practical standpoint. Those who favor the proposed system as being almost the only way to prevent desertions and secure a better discipline are largely in the majority. What objections can there be, therefore, to giving it a trial?" The point is well taken.

THE Australians are greatly disturbed by the French occupation of the New Hebrides, which has continued since 1885, when the French landed in force there in consequence of an assault upon Europeans, in which seven were killed and a number wounded. In the House of Lords the Earl of HARROWBY protested against the occupation, on the ground that it is a violation of an agreement that neither France nor England was to do anything in contravention of the independence of the islanders. The French have in late years annexed the Society Islands, Rapa, the Austral Group, and the mass of islands called the Lower Archipelago. In New Caledonia they have a large convict colony, and, with the Loyalty Islands and the New Hebrides, possess a stretch of the islands intervening between Australia and Fiji. It is now reported that the French intend to propose joint occupancy with England as a solution of the difficulty.

WE publish elsewhere the statement made by Señor MARISCAL, Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, in refereuce to the circumstances attending the assassination of Captain EMMET CRAWFORD, 4th U. S. Cavalry. The facts were fully presented in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL at the time, and we do not think it necessary to go into the subject at length again. It is sufficient to say that the statements of the Mexican Government concerning the entire absence of uniform in Captain CRAWFORD'S command are flatly contradicted by officers of our Army who were present with Captain CRAWFORD, and who may be presumed to know better than even the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs what dress they wore on that occasion. It remains to be seen whether our Government proposes to put them in the position of having misrepresented the case. If that is the judgment of our State Department after reading the Mexican Government's tardy attempts at explanation, the proper course is to report the officers referred to to the War Department. It is certainly impossible to reconcile their statements with those of the Mexican Foreign Office.



IF any one has doubts as to the industry of the Navy Department clerk he should take a peep into the room occupied by the board on the consolidation of stores and supplies for the Navy, Captain BROWN, president. Around a large table in the centre of this room will be found at any time during working hours nearly a score of clerks, including a representation from each bureau, bending over and intently examining large printed pages nearly a yard square. These are the printed schedules of the stores and supplies for the Navy soon to be advertised for under Secretary WHITNEY'S consolidation scheme, and the clerks, as a necessary adjunct to the members of the board, are busily engaged arranging and classifying the five or six thousand different articles required for the Service and embraced in these schedules. At least another fortnight will be required to complete the schedules, and it will then be in order to advertise for the articles required. With the exception of stationery all stores and supplies will be delivered at the New York Navy-yard, and from there shipped to the other yards and stations in such quarters and at such times as may be desired. The Washington Navy-yard will be the general headquarters for all stationery.

THE law authorizing the construction of the Newark, two 19-knot cruisers, and two gunboats provides (last paragraph of section 2 of the Naval Appropriation act) that if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the President of the United States, from the bidding for the contracts, when the same are opened and examined by him, that said vessels cannot be constructed at a fair cost on or near the coast of the Pacific Ocean or the Gulf of Mexico, he shall authorize the construction of said vessels, or either of them, elsewhere in the United States. It is assumed by some "sea lawyers," whose attention has been called to the words in italics, that we are to have on the first day of August next the unusual spectacle of the President of the United States opening and examining bids in the presence of shipbuilders, naval officers, and the usual gathering of newspaper men. The Navy Department's circular inviting bids was issued without reference to this requirement, and the bids will be received at the Navy Department as usual, and, we presume, opened as usual. Even a strict construction of the law would seem to require only that the plans should be examined by the President—"when the same are opened," but not necessarily by him. The opening is a mere clerical operation, and is constructively done by the President when done by his orders or under his authority.

THE Ordnance Sergeants, Post Quartermaster-Sergeants and Commissary Sergeants of the Army, are making a concerted effort to have their pay increased at the next session of Congress and place them on a similar footing, in that respect, with Hospital Stewards who had their pay increased to $45 a month by the act approved March 1, 1887. During the past five years we have had a mass of correspondence (unused) advancing the claim of each grade of non-commissioned staff officer to have the higher responsibilities and duties. This, in our opinion, is scarcely the way to look at it. Each grade has been created for the performance of certain specific duties, and those duties are, of course, in their relation to the welfare of the Army, of equal value in the eyes of the Government. It is essential that each should be an expert in his own sphere, the Hospital Steward in his dispensary, the Ordnance Sergeant in his care and knowledge of armaments, the Post Quartermaster-Sergeant in the indoor and outdoor duties which devolve upon him as the right-hand man of the Post Quartermaster, and the Commissary Sergeant in his multifarious duties connected with the issue of rations and the preparation of the complicated papers required by the Subsistence Bureau. Each, therefore, should be well paid, and the grades being equal and the duties equally expert and valuable, the pay, we think, should be equal too. We trust, therefore, that Congress will take up this matter next winter and bring it to its legitimate conclusion.

A STAFF officer writing to the JOURNAL to express thanks for the enterprise in publishing designs for improved officers' quarters at posts, says: "It is hoped that the agitation of this subject may result in some improvement in the present architecture (?) of our large garrisons. It is a fact not to be disputed that the present Quartermaster General of the Army is far better versed than any of his predecessors in the very important subjects of building, water supply, sewerage, etc. Since he has taken charge of that important branch of the War Department, he has improved the water supply of all the large posts in the country, where formerly appeals and estimates were pigeonholed or destroyed; all the officers of his Department have been supplied with standard works on architecture, building, drainage, sewerage, etc., as has for many years been done in the Medical Department and Engineer and Ordnance Corps. Formerly nothing was furnished them. It has been suggested by both line and staff officers that it would be an important addition to the Quartermaster's Department if a division of architecture, sewerage and water supply were added to the other branches of the Quartermaster General's Office. At present plans for buildings, or estimates for water supply and sewerage are prepared at posts—sometimes at Department Headquarters—and are forwarded to the Quartermaster General's office for revision and action. The buildings erected are not in keeping with the improvements in progress in cities, and the result is that the class of work now being done at posts is not in advance of that done 10 years ago. With experienced assistants in charge of such a branch of the Q. M. Dept. in Washington, the class of buildings erected would be not more expensive but far more attractive than at present, and, as the matter could be better controlled by the experienced head of the Q. M. Department, it is thought that thousands of dollars could be saved—in the way of estimates, and better work be the result. Recalling the very excellent article in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL of April 28, 1883, written by General HOLABIRD on 'Permanent Posts for the Army,' it is hoped that he may be enabled to carry out the progressive ideas therein expressed."

DESIGNS FOR OFFICERS' QUARTERS.

WE give another illustration from Shoppell's Modern Houses (design No. 377)) This represents a house having a front of 23 feet 6 inches, not including veranda, and side 40 feet 6 inches. First story 10 feet high; second story 8 feet 6 inches. There is a cellar under the whole house 7 feet high, and having 8-inch brick walls. The attic is unfinished. There is an ample veranda. Parlor and dining room are connected by sliding doors. An open fireplace is in the dining room, and a false chimney breast in the parlor. The foundation is brick, the first story clapboards, the second story and roof shingled. The estimate of cost is $2,500 complete, except mantels, range and furnace. This estimate is based upon the following prices for material and labor:

Excavation, per cubic yard	$0.25
Rubble stone work laid up complete, all materials furnished by contractor, per perch of 25 cubic feet	4.25
Stone wall, double faced above grade, 25c. per foot, or per perch	6.25
Brickwork laid in the wall, per M	15.00 to 16.00
Plastering, per yard	30 to .35
Spruce timber, per M feet	20.00
Hemlock timber, per M feet	14.00
Hemlock sheathing boards, per M feet	15.00
Pine shingles, per M	4.50 to 5.00
Pine flooring, merchantable, per M feet	26.00
Clear pine clapboards, per M feet	25.00 to 30.00
Novelty siding, per M feet	30.00 to 35.00
Rosin sized building paper, per lb	.01
Clear pine trim, reeded or moulded, ⅞x5 in., per lineal foot	.05
Turned corner blocks, each	.01
Moulded base, 9 in. high, ⅞ in. thick, per lineal foot	.01
Glazed window sash, 2 ft. 7 in. x 5 ft. 6 in. x 1½ in., per pair	2.00
Doors, four panels, moulded both sides, 2 ft. 8 in. x 7 ft. x 1½ in. each	2.85
Blinds will average all around, per window	1.50
Tinning, per square of 100 square feet	6.00
Painting, including materials and labor, per square yard, each coat	.06
Carpenters' labor, per day	2.50 to 3.00
Masons and plasterers, per day	3.00 to 3.50

SECOND FLOOR, NO. 377.

We speak from experience when we say that the labor and materials here mentioned can be obtained at or within the prices named. The actual prices paid in building at a point on the Hudson River, twenty miles above New York, were as follows: Stone foundation, sand and stone furnished on the ground, 8 cents a cubic foot; plastering, 30 cents a yard; spruce timber, per M, $18–$18.50; hemlock, per M, $13.50; shingles, $3.60–$5.40; clapboards, $25. Carpenters, $2.25 to $3. For less than $3,000 (in round figures $2,800) a house was built having a cellar 6 feet 6 inches high and over 900 square feet of room; on the first floor four rooms, and on the second floor five rooms and a bath room. The attic is unfinished, but floored over so that it can be used. The dimensions of the rooms are as follows: Parlor and dining room, each 15 ft. by 16 ft.; sitting room, 14 ft. by 14 ft.; kitchen, 19 ft. by 9 ft. 6 in.; hall, 6 ft. by 24; four bedrooms, from 11 to 14 ft. square; a large room out of one of the rooms over the piazza, 6 ft. by 12 ft.; bath room, 6 ft. by 8 ft. There is a roomy pantry out of the kitchen, another out of the dining room, and a closet under the stairs on the first floor; two large closets in one bedroom, and one in each of the others, with one exception. The hall has light from stained glass windows and two handsome doors, the upper part of which has small circular panes of glass. The pantries and all the closets have direct light from windows, and there is not a dark or cheerless corner in the building. The carpenter work was done by the day, and everything is well done. The stonework of the foundation is excellent, and the cellar is beamed-filled to keep out the air. On the sides are, first tongue and grooved boards set diagonally for bracing; over these is stretched a patent water-proof paper, with a very close texture and strong fibre, and outside are clapboards on the first story, and shingles above. Every window is flashed, and every precaution has been taken to keep out cold and moisture and make the house comfortable in every respect. The price named does not include plumbing or mantels. Wooden mantels of a very neat pattern can be bought for $10 in white wood and $13 in hard wood—ash or black walnut. It will cost $3 to $4 to oil and polish each one. For $23 a mantel with mirror top was offered, the mirror being extra and according to size. We mention these details of actual experience thinking that they may be found of service. We shall be glad to learn of any points upon which information is desired, our object being to assist those interested in getting the best results in room, comfort and convenience for what they expend upon building. We refer to the Shoppell plans here for the simple reason that we are indebted to the courtesy of the Shoppell Company for the use of these designs. Their cheapness and practicability make them valuable for use, though of course it is not to be expected that all of them should have the individuality that might be found in a design drawn for a special purpose by a competent architect. They, at all events, illustrate the point we are making that comfortable quarters can be built, and well built, for the price the Government is accustomed to spend. That they can be built under the conditions that control the expenditure of public money we cannot undertake to say.

"THAT'S NOT SO."

THE Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Times says: "Among the prominent men who sat upon the platform on Thursday afternoon to see the unveiling of the statue of Garfield was Gen Rosecrans. It was considered a gratifying instance of forgetfulness on his part of a controversy which has always aroused the feelings of the friends of both Garfield and Rosecrans, for the dispute involved charges of treacherous infidelity by one officer to his commander. Keifer stood not 10 feet away from Rosecrans while he spoke. He could not have avoided seeing him, but he might easily have avoided the allusion which he made to Rosecrans in his address. When about half way through, in reviewing Garfield's qualities, he said: 'Gen. Garfield was strong in tempest as well as in fair weather. Preserving his equanimity when others did not, but through no indifference, he would, on special occasions, calmly assume responsibilities others shrank from. As Chief of Staff at the headquarters of the Army of the Cumberland, he counselled an early aggressive movement on the enemy against the judgment of the commanding General and nearly all the corps and division commanders of that Army. In this was exhibited in a peculiar light the bold and independent spirit of a man ready to act when all round him hesitated, and willing to stand or fall by the event.' This allusion to Chickamauga led Rosecrans to speak out in an audible tone: 'That's not so,' and as he concluded the sentence Rosecrans repeated the remark, turning to his neighbors to emphasize it with nods."

(Correspondence of the Army and Navy Journal.)

RIFLE SHOOTING AT BELLEVUE.

THE Omaha Rifle Club, with some 30 members, had a pleasant day at the Bellevue range during their last shoot. They fire to one side of the soldiers' range, and the shooting of each is reciprocally interesting. The citizens shoot on the decimal target, 8, 9, and 10 being in the bull's-eye, and so on out to 4. They use the Texas target frame. The pit was constructed by Lieut. Brumback, of the 2d Infantry, and soldiers who were paid for their labor by the Club, and during the firings four soldiers are paid 50 cents each for marking in the pits. Arriving at the range roll is called and lots drawn for order of firing, target and number; the orders are called up, and firing proceeds in scores of 10 shots each till all are through; then other matches are arranged for. A special train takes the Club down on Wednesdays. Several ladies added to the pleasure of our last competition, and after shooting some champagne, claret punch, ice cream and strawberries were indulged in. One of the young ladies, who perhaps intends to join the Army, preferred a delicious plate of bean soup, prepared by the French cook of Lieuts. Wilson and Wright. The bond of sympathy between the citizen and soldier, already strong, will be made doubly so by this rifle shooting at Bellevue, and the opportunity for becoming acquainted with the gallant 2d Infantry. CITIZEN.

THE name of Lieut.-Gen. Sheridan bobs up every now and again in the daily press in connection with the Presidency.

CAPTAIN J. J. O'CONNELL, U. S. A., and Mrs. O'Connell, of Cincinnati, expect to spend a short time at West Point in June.

LIEUTENANT R. G. PROCTER, 5th U. S. Artillery, visiting at Auburn, Ky., has had his leave extended two months on account of sickness.

MRS. LOUIS WILHELMI and family, now at Whitestown, N. Y., are expected in New York in a few days, preparatory to sailing, June 1, for Europe.

MAJOR J. C. POST, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., who has left Cincinnati for Washington, is much regretted in the former city, where he was extremely popular.

THE reunion of California Pioneers at Washington, May 15, was a great success. Among those present were Rear Admiral Almy, Gen. Rosecrans and Gen. Pleasanton.

COLONEL R. I. DODGE, 11th Infantry, of Fort Sully, will be at Fort Meade May 28, to preside over a General Court-martial convened for the trial of Captain C. N. Gray, 25th Inf.

THE marriage of Miss Royall, daughter of Col. W. B. Royall, and Mr. Jeffrey Parsons, of Boston, will take place on the evening of June 1 at St. John's Church, Washington, at 8 P. M.

GENERAL J. A. EKIN, U. S. A., made a touching address at the funeral, in Louisville, May 12, of Miss Jennie Bowman, who was brutally assaulted by a man named Turner and subsequently died.

MR. BRITTON DAVIS, lately of the U. S. Army, was, during the recent earthquake at a point 25 miles from Corralitos, 74 miles south from El Paso and 110 miles west and had a severe experience.

CAPTAIN E. C. WOODRUFF and Lieut. W. O. Clark, 12th U. S. Infantry, left Oswego, N. Y., early in the week for Washington to report to Gen. Black for service in connection with the National Drill. Lieut. W. E. Ayer, 12th Infantry, has taken temporary command of Fort Ontario.

WHEN the Prince of Wales was leaving Manchester a member of the Town Council pushed himself forward and in a burst of loyalty said: "Bring the old woman with thee next time." The Prince looked surprised, not exactly understanding to whom the civic dignitary was referring. Observing this the latter said: "I mean your mother," for in this familiar and local fashion had he alluded to Her Majesty.

A WASHINGTON correspondent referring to the visit a few years ago of the Marquis of Lorne and to the present visit of Queen Kapiolani, quotes Gen. Sherman as saying at the time: "It's lucky for us the Marchioness didn't come. We know what to do with the Governor-General of Canada. But in Heaven's name, what would we do with Queen Victoria's daughter?"

MAJOR CHARLES H. WHIPPLE, Paymaster, U. S. Army, the officer ordered to relieve Major John P. Baker on duty in Leavenworth, is a very popular officer in the Army, and though a brother of Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota, is not much of a bishop himself. Everybody regrets that the call of duty takes Major Baker and his interesting family from this section of the country next July.—Kansas City Times.

"LIEUTENANT BENJAMIN ALVORD'S detail to West Point," says the Kansas City Times, "was quite a surprise to that officer. He had not dreamed of anything of the kind and can hardly account for it. What branch of studies he shall instruct in is not known, but he thinks that it will be in mathematics, as he stood very high in that branch on his graduation. He is being congratulated on all sides for his good luck. Lieut. Alvord stands very high in the estimation of his brother officers at Fort Leavenworth."

EX-MARSHAL BAZAINE, says a Paris correspondent, is slowly recovering from the wound lately inflicted upon him by Hillairaud. Asked his opinion as to Gen. Boulanger and the present situation, the ex-Marshal said that if the chief of the French Army were of a merit which corresponded with the popularity to which he had attained he might succeed in doing something, but one man was not enough. The war might take place, and the French, in his opinion, were ready so far as effective fighting strength went, but it remained to be seen whether they had changed in temperament or not.

A PRETENDED Army officer has been playing a number of insane freaks upon traders and other citizens at New Bedford, Mass. At different places he gave the names of William Gurnett and Thomas Dillon. When he was Gurnett he was lieutenant in the 4th Artillery, and as Dillon he was in the 1st Infantry. He paid for everything in advance with drafts on imaginary military paymasters or quartermasters, each being made for a few dollars above the amount agreed upon, but he did not ask for the difference, and no goods were delivered. The bogus lieutenant paid cash for his board and lodging, but made an unsuccessful attempt to get the lodging house man to cash a draft. He would appear to be insane.

MRS. ELIZA WHITNEY, whose death we noticed last week, was the mother of Capt. F. A. Whitney, 8th U. S. Infantry.

MAJOR GENERAL D. E. SICKLES, U. S. A., has been appointed an Emigrant Commissioner at New York by Governor Hill.

LIEUT. E. F. WILLCOX, 6th Cavalry, will remain on duty at Fort Leavenworth until early in July, and then join his troop at Fort Union, N. M.

MAJOR GENERAL O. O. HOWARD, U. S. A., presided at the recent international convention in San Francisco of the Young Men's Christian Association.

LIEUTENANT O. J. BROWN, 1st Cavalry, on leaving West Point in August next will spend a few months in the East before joining his troop at Fort Custer, Montana.

COLONEL LUKE O'CONNOR, British Army, who was a sergeant at the battle of the Alma, in Crimea, has been placed on the retired list as a Major-General. He is a V. C.

CARDS are out announcing the approaching marriage of Miss Emma Wilson, daughter of Major Wilson, U. S. A., to Mr. Percy E. Burgoyne, of St. Paul, Minn., May 26.

LIEUTENANT C. D. COWLES, 23d Infantry, was in Omaha last week greeting old friends. He was in charge of recruits from David's Island going to Fort Russell and other points.

LIEUTENANT EMMET, 9th Cavalry, leaves Fort Niobrara, with his wife, for the East next week, to attend the wedding of his twin sister, Miss Rosina Emmet, the gifted artist.

CAPTAIN D. H. KELTON, 10th U. S. Infantry, of Fort Crawford, Col., has received a year's sick leave and will probably spend a portion of it at his old station, Mackinac Island, Mich.

THE proceedings of the Army Retiring Board in the case of Capt. Cass Durham, 18th Infantry, were received at the War Department on Thursday. It is understood that he was recommended for retirement.

LIEUTENANT H. DEH. WAITE, 5th U. S. Cavalry, lately at Fort Monroe, Va., arrived at Fort Reno, I. T., early in the week, calling on his way at Fort Leavenworth, where he was the guest of Lieutenant Almy.

GENERAL LEW. WALLACE was in Omaha last week, and was warmly greeted by old friends there. At a dinner given for him, Gen. and Mrs. Crook, Gen. and Mrs. Hawkins and other old Army friends were present.

"AN Hour with the Soldiers at Bellevue Range, Neb.," is the title of an excellent descriptive and illustrated article in the Omaha World. With it is a portrait of Col. Guy V. Henry, U. S. A., Inspector of Rifle Practice, Department of the Platte, and a sketch of his military career.

CAPTAIN F. E. DECOURCY, 13th U. S. Infantry, has about completed his long leave of absence and will leave New York next week to return to his post at Fort Wingate, N. M. The leave of absence he has just completed is the first leave he has had from his regiment since joining it in 1861.

CAPTAIN RAY, 8th Infantry, reached Omaha last week and took charge of judicial matters at Headquarters Department of the Platte. Noting his arrival, an Omaha paper kindly mentions his scientific work in the Arctic regions and says: "Capt. and Mrs. Ray will prove a valuable acquisition to Omaha society."

THE proceedings in the Court-martial, in the case of 2d Lieut. James H. G. Wilcox, 7th Cav., whose trial, on charges of duplicating pay accounts and absence without leave, ended May 5, have reached the Acting Judge Advocate General of the Army at Washington, which fact plainly shows the sentence to be dismissal from the service. It is reported from Fort Snelling that the court recommended the accused to the clemency of the President.

GENERAL BELKNAP, who was President Grant's Secretary of War, and was impeached on a charge of office-broking, lives in Washington now. He practices law, lives quietly but comfortably, and is one of the most popular men at the capital. He dresses faultlessly, is large and handsome, with a full short beard that was once light red, but now half gray, and is generous to a fault. He never speaks ill of any one, is genial and generous, and an entertaining conversationalist. His friends say he will some day be completely vindicated.

AN Omaha paper, commenting on the determination of the Secretary of War to apply impartially, as soon as funds are available for travelling expenses, July 1 next, his rule that no staff officer shall be retained at any station more than five years, states that the four years of Gen. Dandy, of the Quartermaster's Department expired last March; and that in the ensuing fall two other staff officers will have been there the allotted time, viz.: Gen. Hawkins, of the Subsistence Department, now Chief Commissary of the Department, and Captain McCauley, of the Q. M. Department.

THE N. Y. Sun says: "Prof. Wm. G. Peck, the author of several conspicuous works on physics and a professor in Columbia College, lives in a fine old-fashioned house with spacious grounds, adjoining William Rockefeller's beautiful place in Greenwich. Prof. Peck has the good will of all the college boys, and he enjoys a popularity among them rarely attained by college professors with students." Prof. Peck is a graduate of the Military Academy. The New York Graphic says that Prof. Peck is only thirty-five years old, which makes the college boys wonder how he can know so much.

MAJOR W. E. CREARY, paymaster U. S. A., lately visiting in Washington, will go to Omaha in a few days for duty in that city.

LIEUTENANT G. F. COOKE, 15th Infantry, who has been abroad for some months past, arrived in New York from Liverpool on Thursday.

ACTING JUDGE-ADVOCATE GENERAL G. N. LIEBER, U. S. A., and Mrs. Lieber will spend a portion of the summer at White Sulphur Springs.

THE veteran journalist, Ben: Perley Poore, was overcome by the heat on May 17. Dr. Baxter was summoned who relieved him as much as possible.

PROFESSOR S. P. LANGLEY, of the University of Western Pennsylvania, has been elected Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, of Washington, D. C.

CAPTAIN THOMAS TURTLE, U. S. A., now on duty in the office of the Chief of Engineers, has located in Georgetown, D. C., with his family, at 3126 Dumbarton avenue.

MAJOR W. H. GARDNER, Surgeon, U. S. A., of Fort McHenry, Md., gave on Monday the first of a series of medical lectures for the benefit of the officers and men of the post.

THE Vancouver Independent of May 11 says: "Col. Henry M. Lazelle, U. S. A., who succeeds the late Col. Robert N. Scott in charge of the War Records office, will leave Vancouver about June 1 with his family for Washington.

THE death of Capt. C. O. Bradley, 20th Infantry, has promoted 1st Lieut. J. A. Manley to captain and 2d Lieut. J. A. Irons to 1st lieutenant. Capt. Manley's service dates from 1861, and his 1st lieutenancy in the 20th Infantry from 1868.

QUITE a number of Assistant Surgeons with the rank of 1st Lieutenant will attain the rank of Captain on Monday next, May 23, by reason of completion of five years' service. They are W. E. Hopkins, Benjamin Munday, G. F. Wilson, W. O. Owen, Jr., P. R. Egan and Edward Everts.

ADOLPH FRANZ, JR., a son of Ordnance Sergeant Franz, U. S. A., in charge of Fort Constitution, N. H., is a member of the recent graduating class of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York City. Mr. Franz was present at the commencement exercises at Steinway Hall, May 12, and received his diploma.

"GATH," the well-known newspaper correspondent in a Washington letter to the Cincinnati Enquirer, speaking of the Army people there, says: "Gen. Ricketts' wife is probably the most beloved of the wives of Army officers. She is particularly pleasant with gentlemen. During the winter season, 'Mrs. Ricketts' punch,' which is given every Friday, is always famous, and an event of the week in society circles."

THE following officers of the Army are registered at the War Department building: Capt. F. E. Trotter, 14th Inf.; Maj. H. A. Haubright, ret.; Major J. C. Post, Engrs.; Major J. J. Upham, 5th Cav.; Col. H. M. Black, 23d Inf.; Capt. J. T. Haskell, 23d Inf.; Capt. H. Briggs, ret.; Capt. E. C. Woodruff, 12th Inf.; 1st Lieut. F. A. Smith, 12th Inf.; 1st Lieut. R. K. Evans, 12th Inf.; 1st Lieut. W. O. Clark, 12th Inf.; 1st Lieut. S. E. Allen, 5th Art.

THE following officers of the Army, recently examined by retiring boards, have been added to the list of incapacitated officers awaiting retirement, published in the JOURNAL in March last: Captain W. B. Pease, 9th Inf.; Capt. James Kennington, 14th Inf.; Capt. Cass Durham, 18th Inf., and Asst. Surg. Fred. W. Elbrey, Med. Dept. Several boards in the cases of medical officers are yet to be heard from. No selections have yet been made for the three vacancies on the retired list, but the probabilities are that two if not all three of the line captains mentioned will soon be retired.

GOVERNOR LEE has written a letter to General Adam Badeau, in response to one from the latter in reference to General R. E. Lee's having drawn rations from the Union forces after his return to Richmond from Appomattox in 1865. Governor Lee shows that General Lee did not draw or apply for rations, and concludes: "His colored dining-room servant, Sam, is living here, and I had a conversation with him this morning. He says he did the marketing every morning and that at no time was there any scarcity of supplies. This is not an important matter, and I am sorry so much prominence has been given it. I think it likely some person or persons drew supplies in General Lee's name, of which he knew nothing."

MAJOR J. L. RATHBONE, appointed this week Consul General to Paris, is a graduate of West Point (in 1865), and served in the 12th U. S. Infantry, and afterwards in the 1st U. S. Artillery. He was appointed A. D. C. to Maj. Gen. Schofield in 1866, and served in that capacity until June 28, 1872, when he resigned from the Army. Maj. Rathbone is a stepson of the late U. S. Senator Ira Harris. His wife is a daughter of Mr. Atherton, one of the California pioneers, and a lady of rare attainments. He is now president of the Blood Horse Association of California, an association composed of the most enterprising and wealthy citizens of the Golden State; also a director of the Union Club of San Francisco, and an honorary member of several of the leading clubs of New York.

GENERAL MILES in relieving Col. J. F. Wade, 5th Cavalry, from duty in the Department of Arizona to enable him to join his new regiment at Fort Riley, writes to him as follows: "The Department Commander tenders to you his most earnest congratulations on your promotion, and his sincere regret that your well-deserved advancement will in consequence of your change of station deprive the Department of Arizona of your valuable services. He fully appreciates the important work accomplished by you at Fort Apache, when the exigency of Indian affairs required the exercise of unusual executive ability, cool judgment, as to when and how to act judiciously, and that energy, promptness and unfaltering purpose which always secures satisfactory results. He wishes you well in your new field of service."

LIEUTENANT RICHARDSON CLOVER, U. S. N., and Mrs. Clover, will spend the summer in Newport, R. I.

CIVIL ENGINEER A. G. MENOCAL, U. S. N., registered at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, early in the week.

CAPTAIN A. R. YATES, U. S. N., is in Portsmouth, N. H., on a visit. He will shortly be detached from his duties at Newport, R. I., where he has proved a valuable officer.

THE friends of Captain E. P. Meeker, U. S. M. C., will regret to learn of the sad loss of his only daughter, Annie Rusher Meeker, who died May 13, at the residence of her parents, 183 Hancock street, Brooklyn, N. Y., aged 15 years.

MR. F. J. SPRAGUE, late Ensign in the U. S. Navy, delivered a lecture before the U. S. Naval Institute, Annapolis, May 16, on "Electro Motors." Mr. Sprague is a graduate of the Naval Academy, and is now engaged in scientific pursuits.

PAYMASTER H. T. STANCLIFF has been elected 2d Vice President of the Navy Mutual Aid Association. Paymaster Stancliff, as secretary and treasurer of the association did much toward bringing it to its present flourishing condition, and deserves any recognition of his services that may be accorded him.

CAPTAIN NORMAN H. FARQUHAR, U. S. N., lately assigned to command the Trenton at Norfolk, has about concluded his arrangements for the cruise, the last being the setting of his family at their home in Pottsville, Pa. It was hoped by many that the Captain would decide to leave his family in Washington during the cruise.

THE assignment of 1st Lieut. Denny, U. S. M. C., to the steel cruiser Boston will be a cause of profound regret to a wide circle of friends in Washington, and the departure of Lieut. and Mrs. Denny will be a "blue day" for those who have been accustomed to meet them so pleasantly on Mondays at the Barracks, and on other days elsewhere.

THE following officers registered at the Navy Department: Lieut. J. M. Hawley, Asst. Paymr. J. A. Mudd, P. A. Surgeon E. H. Marsteller, Lieut. Lucian Flynne, Lieut. E. H. Taunt, Prof. Marshal Oliver, Comdr. W. B. Hoff, Lieut. J. M. Bowyer, Capt. G. C. Wiltse, Ensign J. S. Walters, Lieut. W. E. Sewell, Comdr. F. M. Green, P. A. Paymr. Frank H. Clark, P. A. Paymr. John Corwin, and Comdr. Fred. Rodgers.

CAPTAIN LESTER A. BEARDSLEE, who has been assigned to torpedo instruction, will embrace the opportunity for adding to his already very considerable store of scientific attainments, and will tend to render him one of the most valuable officers of the line. Capt. Beardslee's researches and experiments in metallurgy in its practical applications to the wants of the Navy, at the Washington Navy-yard a few years since, will not soon be forgotten.

THE Secretary of the Navy has been greatly gratified by the highly flattering reports of the progress made by Ensigns W. L. Capps and C. H. Hewes, of the Navy, who are undergoing a course of instruction at the Glasgow University. These young officers were sent abroad by the Navy Department to take the advanced course in construction and marine architecture at Glasgow. The Secretary now learns that they are first and second in their class.

MEDICAL DIRECTOR GRIER, of the Navy, retired, has began his annual flitting in search of comfort and fresh air, and as a beginning has taken up temporary quarters at the Hygeia Hotel, Old Point Comfort, where he may be seen daily sniffing the breezes of that ocean over which, in days gone by, so much of his cruising was done. From Fortress Monroe the Doctor expects to go North by easy stages, finally "fetching up" for the season as far east as practicable.

IT is suggested that the detachment of Captain Henry Wilson, U. S. N., from the command of the receiving-ship Franklin at the Norfolk Navy-yard, which he has held for about two and a half years, is preparatory to an assignment as commanding officer of the Chicago. This vessel will probably be ready for commission by August 1, so far as hull and motive power is concerned. When the battery for this fine vessel will be ready is not definitely known. Capt. G. C. Wiltse, U. S. N., has reported as the relief of Capt. Wilson.

LIEUTENANT DOWNS L. WILSON, U. S. N., who has been assigned to torpedo instruction, will go to sea in the autumn. Lieut. Wilson, having occupied his new house on Greene street in Georgetown, gave a house-warming on Tuesday night last on the occasion of the celebration of his "tin wedding." The cosy establishment was filled to overflowing, and many congratulations and wishes for happy returns were showered upon the happy bride and groom of ten years' experience. It is probable that Mrs. Wilson will accompany her husband to Newport.

CONSIDERABLE speculation was indulged in over the recent call to Washington of Chief Engr. Melville by Secretary Whitney. Since Mr. Melville's return to Philadelphia, it has transpired that the visit was one of a combined private and public nature, the Secretary, among other things, being desirous of knowing the exact status and prospects of the work on hand at the Cramp's yard. The visit was of brief duration, and so rapid was the flitting that few knew at the time that the Jeannette hero was in town. Work at Cramp's is progressing fairly well, and it is believed that as the experience of practice improves the situation, the progress will be more satisfactory.

A TELEGRAM received at the Navy Department two weeks ago stated that Lieut. M. K. Schwenk had accidentally shot himself while on duty as officer of the watch on the Alert. Mail advices received May 16 put a more serious light on the matter. While on duty on the vessel Lieut. Schwenk stooped to pick up a revolver, which proved to have been tied in such a manner that when lifted a bowline slipped over the trigger, causing a discharge. Commander Graham reports that there can be no doubt that there was a plan to assassinate some officer of the vessel, and that he has ordered a searching investigation. Lieut. Schwenk was seriously wounded in his left wrist, and blood poisoning is feared.

LIEUTENANT N. T. HOUSTON, U. S. N., is soon to leave Norfolk, Va., to join the Trenton.

CHIEF ENGINEER W. H. SHOCK, U. S. N., registered at the Grand Hotel, New York, on Tuesday.

COMMODORE D. B. HARMONY, U. S. N., visited Boston this week on matters connected with the letting out of contracts at the Navy-yard.

LIEUTENANT L. C. WEBSTER, U. S. Marine Corps, and Mrs. Webster, of Mare Island, are coming East to spend a portion of the summer with relatives.

PAYMASTER W. W. WOODHULL, U. S. N., and Miss Woodhull will spend the summer at Wissahickon Inn, near Philadelphia, now a popular summer resort.

MRS. WHITNEY, wife of Secretary of the Navy Whitney, was expected in New York this week, from where she will go to Lenox, Mass., to remain probably until autumn.

THE Naval Retiring Board has recommended in the case of Lieut.-Commander Socrates Hubbard that he be granted six months in which to prepare for a second physical examination. He is now incapacitated for active service, but the Board think it possible that he may recover within the time given.

LIEUTENANT SAMUEL C. LEMLY, of the Navy, who recently reported for duty on the Trenton, has been making a brief visit to the post at Fortress Monroe, where, as pretty much every where else in the world, he has a host of friends. Lieut. Lemly is a brother of 1st Lieut. Henry R. Lemly, of the 3d U. S. Artillery.

CIVIL ENGINEER W. P. S. SANGER, U. S. N., retired, is living very quietly at his fine residence in Georgetown, D. C., No. 3309 Prospect Park. Capt. Sanger's health is not especially good, and the past few years, dating from his retirement, have changed him considerably. He was retired with the relative rank of Captain Oct. 15, 1881.

PAYMASTER H. T. B. HARRIS, U. S. N., has been detached from special duty at the New York Naval Station and assigned to the Galena as the relief of Paymr. H. T. Skelding, this latter officer being detached, ordered home, and directed to settle his accounts. Paymr. Skelding joined the Galena May 31, 1886, and his detachment at this time is at his own request.

THE friends of Lieut.-Comdr. Thomas Perry, U. S. Navy, recently assigned as executive officer of the Boston, will read with deep regret and concern, that a leave of absence for three months has been granted him on account of ill health. While not very robust, Lieut.-Comdr. Perry has always been regarded as enjoying good health, and this sudden breaking down will be a great surprise to a wide circle of well wishers.

PAY DIRECTOR J. S. CUNNINGHAM, U.S.N., says the Tribune, has in his possession a document of more than ordinary interest, but it will soon pass into the hands of Charles Stewart Parnell. It is the commission issued by Andrew Jackson to Charles Stewart as Post Captain of the United States Navy. His commission is entirely in writing, as were many Government commissions prior to Buchanan's Administration. After that time they were printed on parchment. The President's autograph is in letters over an inch in length.

LIEUTENANT J. C. GILLMORE, U. S. N., who has been on duty in the Navy Department Library since August, 1885, and is now among those detailed for duty and instruction at the Torpedo School, made a full cruise in the Pacific on the Iroquois, returning to the U. S. in May, 1885, so that his tour of shore duty is not yet completed. Ensign Cook, a shipmate of Lieut. Gillmore on the Iroquois, will also report for torpedo instruction at the same date. This course at Newport is frequently the immediate precursor of sea orders, and in many cases this year it will prove to be the case.

A DESPATCH to the New York Telegram says of the case of Capt. Selfridge: "The members of the Japanese Legation have taken great interest in the matter, and some of them have had long conferences with the Secretary during this week. It is understood that the Japanese Government is satisfied that the explosion of the torpedo resulting in the death of several of its subjects was purely accidental, and not due to the carelessness of Capt. Selfridge. The Captain has been a daily caller on the Secretary, and it is generally supposed that a satisfactory settlement of the unfortunate affair will soon be made."

THE Washington correspondent of the New York Herald says: "Secretary Whitney's natural kindness of heart, while he never allows it to make him too lenient where he has reason to think such leniency would impair the efficiency of the Naval Service, always disposes him to listen to reasons why orders he has given or sanctioned should be revoked, and to revoke them when convinced that he should do so. Recently an officer who has been married not quite two years and whose wife has lately had to mourn not only the loss of their promising baby boy, but also of her mother, and has been threatened with legal complications consequent on the death of the latter, was ordered to sea. The officer was naturally in despair at the thought of leaving his wife at such a time when she needed so much of his powers of consolation and his care of her business interests, and a lady friend of hers hearing of the sad situation, ventured to write a plain statement of the case to Secretary Whitney, who, after only one day's consideration answered, saying of course the officer should, under the circumstances, have time at home, and he thanked his correspondent for calling the matter to his attention."

HOW CAPTAIN CRAWFORD WAS KILLED.

CITY OF MEXICO, May 17.

SENOR MARISCAL, the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, has addressed a letter to the U. S. Legation in answer to several communications from Mr. Jackson, the former Minister from the United States, giving the results of an official investigation by the Mexican Government into the circumstances of the killing of Capt. Crawford of the U. S. Army, 4th Cavalry, by a body of Mexican troops while he was in pursuit of a band of Apache Indians. Senor Mariscal says:

"From the judicial and military investigations made by the Mexican Government, it appears that the Apache Chiricahua Indians had invaded the State of Chihuahua, stealing quite a number of cattle and murdering several Mexicans, as attested by reliable witnesses; that Maurico Corredor, a citizen of said State, in order to defend his home raised about 120 volunteers to pursue the Indians; that he found their trail and followed it till Jan. 10, and at daybreak on the following morning attacked the Indians, who were intrenched in the rocks to the number of 250 or more. The fight lasted about one hour, during which time Maurico Corredor, the commander of the Mexican band of volunteers, was killed, with four Mexicans, and several others were badly wounded.

"Just about the end of the battle an American young man, without any uniform or any military insignia whatever, came out of the rocks and told the Mexicans they were fighting United States troops and not hostile Indians. The firing was at once stopped, and it was not afterward renewed, as alleged by Lieut. Maus. Capt. Crawford had already been killed before the firing ceased, but as soon as the Mexicans realized what had happened they expressed their sorrow for the unfortunate mistake, while the Americans likewise expressed their regret at the death of Corredor.

"The Indians who were attacked on that day are the same who committed the raids aforementioned on Mexican territory; they were dressed just like the hostile Indians, and had in their possession the stolen cattle, which they refused to restore, notwithstanding a formal demand was made for them by the Mexicans.

"It is not true that Capt. Crawford waved a white handkerchief when the fight commenced. The Americans wore no uniform nor military insignia of any character whatever, nor did they show any proof of being what they represented themselves to be, except a single scrap of paper written upon with a pencil. The cattle found in the possession of the Indians were recognized by the Mexicans as belonging to some farms in Chihuahua, from which they had been stolen.

"The agreement allowing the regular troops only of either country to cross the boundary in pursuit of hostile Indians did not contemplate that Indians without uniforms or other military insignia should come over into Mexico, where they have committed so many raids, and then succeeded in returning to their reservations as innocent men and fed and clothed by the United States Government."

OUR NEW NAVY.

THE good work of rehabilitating the Navy is slowly progressing. The first frame of the Baltimore was raised this week, and the Messrs. Cramp report the arrival of plenty of material to carry on the work without interruption on both that vessel and Gunboat No. 1. The first carload of material for the Charleston arrived at San Francisco last week, and her contractors expect to go on with the work of construction without delay. The Columbia Iron Works, of Baltimore, are making good headway in getting out the material for Gunboat No. 2, and will be able to begin work of construction very soon.

At the Navy Department Mr. Whitney is stirring things up to get the plans, specifications, blank forms of proposals and contracts, ready for the bidders on the Newark, two 19-knot cruisers and two 1700 ton gunboats. The bids for the construction of these vessels are not to be opened until August 1, but according to the Department's circular the plans, etc., were to be ready for the inspection of bidders by June 1. It is a little doubtful whether this promise can be kept, but the work is being pushed with all possible speed. Chief Constructor Wilson is working with an extra force of draftsmen upon the plans for the hulls, and with the valuable assistance of Naval Constructor Hichborn is making good headway with the detailed specifications. Colonel Remey's office, in addition to its other multifarious duties, is preparing the blank form of proposals and contracts. The plans for the machinery of these vessels are being prepared under the direction of Chief Engineer Melville at Cramp's works in Philadelphia. Several assistants and draughtsmen have been placed at his service and he has been directed to employ all the additional force necessary to give the plans out by June 1. As he only received the instructions last week some lively work will have to be done during the next ten days if the Secretary's wish is to be complied with. The plans of the gunboats, however, will be simply copies of those upon which the machinery of Gunboat No. 1 is being built, and the plans for the 19-knot cruisers will be, practically, duplicates of the Baltimore's machinery. The plans of the hulls of the two gunboats by Chief Constructor Wilson are also copies of Gunboat No. 1, now building.

The hulls of the 19-knot cruisers will be similar in design to the Newark. The plans and specifications for the hull and machinery of the latter vessel have been practically completed by the Bureau of Construction and Repair and the Bureau of Steam Engineering. The latter bureau is now engaged upon the plans for the machinery of the 6,000 ton armored vessels.

The Board, Capt. Ramsay, president, appointed to examine plans for these vessels have agreed upon a report and await notice from the Secretary of the Navy to present it. What they have agreed upon cannot be definitely learned, but it is rumored around the Navy Department that they failed to agree and that the Secretary has declined to receive the report until he can submit certain advice which may force them to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion. It is well known that there was considerable diversity of opinion among members of the Board before they convened the last time and now that there is so much mystery connected with their report, there would seem to be good reason for suspecting that an unanimous conclusion was not reached.

In connection with this we give from the Proceedings of the Naval Institute the following synopsis of our new navy. It is an elaboration of the table which we published in our number for Mar. 12:

CHANGES IN REGIMENTAL STAFF.

IN the JOURNAL of May 7 we gave a list of all changes made in the regimental staff, under the four year order, up to and including May 5. Since that date the following appointments have been made by the regimental commander and approved by the War Department:

Third Artillery.—Lieut. Charles B. Satterlee appointed adjutant May 1, vice Chase, relieved.

Sixteenth Infantry.—Lieut. S. W. Dunning appointed adjutant April 26, vice Allen, relieved.

Three changes are yet to be made before the order has been fully complied with, viz.: An adjutant of the 5th Infantry and the regimental quartermasters of the 1st and 19th Regiments of Infantry. 1st Lieut. Wm. P. Evans was nominated to succeed Lieut. S. C. Vedder as regimental quartermaster of the 19th Infantry, but the War Department disapproved the recommendation, for the reason that he had not completed his tour of special duty at West Point. His time there will be up on June 1 when, if Colonel Smith has not made another designation in the meantime, the Department will probably withdraw its objection. Nothing has yet been heard from Col. Shafter in regard to the new quartermaster of his regiment, and Col. Gibson, of the 5th Infantry, has yet to designate some one to relieve Lieut. Bailey, the adjutant of his regiment. On March 7 last Col. Gibson wrote to the Department asking to be excused from the appointment of a new adjutant until April 1. Nothing further has been heard from him on the subject, and as far as the Department knows Lieut. Bailey is still serving as adjutant.

THE NEW BRITISH FLEETS.

St. James's Gazette gives the following table showing the whole of the new British fleet, for which 25,000 tons of shipping were ordered in 1885:

TRIALS BY COURTS-MARTIAL.

GEN. CROOK'S circular showing the number of trials at the different posts in his Department is good as far as it goes, but in justice to the company commander at posts with large percentages it should be shown what companies, troops, or portion of the command give rise to these high percentages. At this post I am sorry the average per cent. of trials in the infantry is 20, while that of the cavalry is over 44. So our post gets a black eye for the neglects, greater discipline, more or less "personal attention," or whatever you choose to call it, on the part of others. Let every company or troop be shown up, and then the good captain or company will get his just dues for interest in his men, and not as now—pulled down by others at a post. LEX TALIONIS.

WHO PUT THAT FLAG THERE?

THE N. Y. Sun says: "Six sailors from the Dale, perfect specimens of physical development, were detailed to assist in arranging the flags loaned by the Navy Department for the decoration of the Congregational Church for the Grand Army reunion. On reaching the church yesterday morning they found that one of the officers of the church had spread one of the flags along the aisle.

"'Who put that flag down there?' angrily asked the leader of the sailors.

"'Mr. ——,' said a bystander, 'to save the carpet.'

"'It has got to come up. You may be good Christians here, but you are d——d poor Americans. Come aboard the Dale, and you will see every hat taken off as that emblem comes down.'

"The flag came up."

CAPTAIN G. C. REMEY, U. S. N., left Norfolk, Va. on Monday on a short visit to Washington.

A PARIS correspondent writes: I spent a pleasant half-hour recently with Rear-Admiral Charles H. Baldwin, U. S. Navy, who is staying with his wife in a charming apartment in the Hotel de Hollande, Rue de la Paix. The Admiral, since his arrival in Europe last January, has been down in the south of France, fighting with more or less success against a variety of colds and neuralgias, and he was not at all delighted with the necessity (earthquakes) which compelled him to exchange the lovely weather of Nice for the cold and sudden changes of Paris. Another American officer is here, Major Horace Neide, U. S. Army, who has, together with his wife, been spending several months in Germany, France, and Italy. He says that he would have gone into Russia but for the extraordinary action lately taken by that Government towards strangers. "I have it on most trustworthy authority," said the Major, "that in every hotel, boarding house, etc., where foreigners are received, some person in the establishment is required, under penalty of a heavy fine, to act as spy over the guests, and to report to the Government officials the results of such surveillance." "Colonel Jerome Bonaparte Patterson is spending a few days in Paris at the Hotel Scribe. A quiet American gentleman, nothing more. And yet, when you think of the past, and you cannot but think of it, for the soldier is there before you, as well as the gentleman, and a strong resemblance is there, as well, to a greater soldier than he, a soldier who did not put up at the Hotel Scribe when he came to Paris—why, all this sets your thoughts running on through a tangle of 'ifs,' until you bring up in a daze at the transformation wrought in the fate of an unpretentious man by a simple freak of destiny."

THE ARMY.

G. O. 35, H. Q. A., May 17, 1887.

By direction of the Secretary of War, the "blanket bag," manufactured and supplied by the Ordnance Department for the use of the Army, is hereby officially adopted as a portion of the infantry soldiers' equipment.

By command of Lieutenant General Sheridan:
R. C. DRUM, Adjt.-Gen.

CIR., WAR DEPARTMENT, May 17, 1887.

The following decision of April 19, 1887, of the acting Second Comptroller of the Treasury, in regard to proposals received in response to advertisement for supply of miscellaneous quartermaster's stores, is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

In all cases where bonds are not required, if the law in respect to due advertisement is observed, and proposals received and notice in writing is given to the lowest responsible bidder of the acceptance of his proposal, the transaction constitutes a written engagement between the parties, binding alike upon the Government and the contractor, and if all the papers relating thereto are filed in this office, upon the settlement of accounts arising thereunder, they will be regarded as a sufficient contract in writing to satisfy the provisions of section 3744 of the Revised Statutes.

Ordinarily, where, in the settlement of an account an expenditure appears to have been made under contract, the files of this office are referred to for the purpose of ascertaining whether such contract has been made, and if the files contain satisfactory evidence upon this point, no inquiry is made as to whether the contract has been executed in quintuplicate as provided for in Par. 1485 of the Army Regulations, or whether the provisions of sections 3744-5 of the Revised Statutes have been compiled with.

These are matters of administration which concern the head of the War Department and do not affect the validity of a contract which in all other respects is valid and complete.

In the class of cases referred to, the evidence which would be required to be filed in this office would consist of the order of the head of the bureau directing the purchase to be made, a copy of the advertisement, with a certificate or other proof by the officer of its due publication, stating the period of time and manner of publication, a certified abstract of the proposals received, and the particular proposals accepted, and the written notice of acceptance.

By order of the Secretary of War:
R. C. DRUM, Adjt.-Gen.

G. O. 2, DIV. OF THE ATLANTIC, May 17, 1887.

Publishes the results of the classification in marksmanship and figure of merit of posts at which target practice was held during March, 1887.

G. O. 3, DIV. OF THE ATLANTIC, May 19, 1887.

In consequence of the temporary occupation during this month of the rifle range at Washington Barracks, D. C., by the Executive Committee of the National Drill and Encampment, the practice season for that post, for the current target year, is extended to July 7, 1887, and G. O. 1, c. s., from these headquarters, is modified accordingly.

By command of Major General Schofield:
WILLIAM D. WHIPPLE, Asst. Adjt.-Gen.

STAFF CORPS AND DEPARTMENTS.

Quartermasters and Subsistence Departments.

Capt. Forrest H. Hathaway, Asst. Q. M., is appointed to act as inspector on certain camp and garrison equipage and recruiting property at the recruiting rendezvous, 908 Pine street, St. Louis, Mo. (S. O., May 18, H. Q. A.)

Pay Department.

Major Wm. E. Creary, Paymr., now on leave of absence, will report in person on June 1, to the Comdg. Gen., Dept. of the Platte, for duty at Omaha, Neb. (S. O., May 18, H. Q. A.)

Col. Rodney Smith, Asst. Paymr. Gen., will pay the troops at Fort Gaston, Cal. (S. O. 23, May 10, Div. Pacific.)

So much of S. O. 27, as directs Major Asa B. Carey, Paymr., to pay at Fort Gatson, Cal., is revoked (S. O. 30, May 10, D. Cal.)

Medical Department.

To enable Capt. Edward B. Moseley, asst. surg., to complete transfer of medical and hospital property at the Purveying Depot, he will be relieved from duty in San Francisco, Cal. (S. O. 21, May 2, Div. Pacific).

In Orders 105, Fort Sill, May 9, Lieut. Col. E. P. Pearson, commanding, says: "Major Morse K. Taylor, post surgeon, will be relieved from duty May 10, preparatory to retirement. In the retirement of Doctor Taylor the service loses an honorable and competent officer, and this garrison a faithful and vigilant post surgeon, who was ever on the alert to protect his charge against the bad consequences of either their own careless habits, or the mistakes of the supply departments. On such occasions, Doctor Taylor spoke in no uncertain terms, as the records of the Adjutant's office show. Besides being a skilful physician, Doctor Taylor has attainments as a sanitary engineer. Fort Sill was fortunate in having the service of one so competent in designing and superintending the construction of a water supply. Since Doctor Taylor became the sanitarist of this post, its standing in the order of health has greatly increased, and the post commander deems it proper on this occasion, in behalf of the garrison, to express their appreciation of his eminent services, and to say that he will carry with him the kind wishes of all."

Hospl. Steward J. R. Fowler will proceed to Fort Mojave, A. T., and report for duty (S. O. 52, May 9, D. Ariz.)

While awaiting assignment to a station, Hospl. Steward John W. Barney will report to the C. O., Presidio of San Francisco, for quarters and rations (S. O. 21, May 2, Div. Pacific).

Hospl. Steward Henry W. Miller, Fort Maginnis, M. T., is granted a furlough for four months, to take effect after his re-enlistment (S. O. 46, May 12, D. Dakota).

Engineers and Ordnance Departments.

Major James C. Post is assigned to duty in the office of the Chief of Engineers (G. O. 5, May 12, C. E.)

1st Lieut. Wm. C. Langfitt, C. E., Engineer Officer, is assigned to Co. G, 14th Inf., for target practice (S. O. 6 May 2, D. Columbia).

Capt. Joseph C. Clifford, Ord. Dept., will inspect subsistence stores at the Frankford Arsenal (S. O., May 17, H. Q. A.)

The journey, on official business, performed by Major John A. Kress, from St. Louis Powder Depot, Mo., to St. Louis, Mo., and return, Feb. 21, is approved (S. O., May 18, H. Q. A.)

THE LINE.

Changes of Stations of Troops and Field Officers

Ordered, as reported to the Adjutant-General's Office during the week ending May 14, 1887:

TROOPS.

Bat. E, 5th Art., to Fort Hamilton, N. Y.
Bat. M, 5th Art., to Fort Schuyler, N. Y.

For inattention to and neglect of duty, and for general inefficiency as a non-commissioned officer, Sergt. Lawrence H. Speidel, Co. K, has been reduced to the ranks.

The Kansas City Times, referring to the recent desertion of Sergt. Megargal, Co. C, says: "The sergeant, while on duty as sergeant of the guard on the day the paymaster paid the troops at Fort Douglas, walked into the prison room after the prisoners had received their money and informed them that he received instructions to have them turn over all moneys to him and give them a receipt. The prisoners not doubting the sergeant, whose reputation for honesty, sobriety, and integrity was beyond question, responded to his request, the entire sum amounting to about $300. He then went to his quarters, left his belts, and left for parts unknown. Megargal was a married man, having been compelled to take this step by an irate Mormon father. He never liked the alliance, and being pressed for money he took the steps here related to put himself into a financial condition which will carry him through safely for a time."

7th Infantry, Colonel Henry C. Merriam.

DEPARTMENT NEWS.

Dept. of the Missouri.—Maj. Gen. A. H. Terry.

The plans for the new buildings to be erected at Fort Riley, prepared by Capt. Pond of the Qm. Dept., have been received at Washington and approved by the authorities. The designs for the commanding officer's quarters and for the officer in command of the artillery troops are said to be very neat and attractive.

The President has directed a troop of cavalry to be stationed at Cheyenne, W. T., to aid the civil authorities in enforcing his proclamation forbidding the fencing in of the public domain and directing the removal of such unlawful fencing.

WEST POINT, N. Y.

MAY 18, 1887.

WEST POINT has donned its prettiest dress, and is now in the height of its glory in appearance. There are a number of visitors at the hotels, but it will be two weeks before the rush can be expected.

Last Thursday Prince Leopold, accompanied by the German Minister, visited the Academy. The customary salute was fired for the Minister. The party only remained a short time, leaving before 4 o'clock.

On Saturday evening Lieut. Zalinski read a paper on his new dynamite gun in the Library. Most of the officers and a number of cadets were present and heard an exceedingly interesting paper. After the reading Lieut. Zalinski made a number of explanations in response to the numerous questions asked. A number of drawings were used to show the working of the fuses, etc. On the same evening the cadets had a hop in room No. 1, which was well attended. The presence of some of the cadets at the lecture instead of at the hop, was due to the fact that those in confinement could attend the former, but not the latter.

Capt. Fisk has been walking on crutches for a couple of weeks, he having sprained an ankle while playing tennis.

On Saturday afternoon the cadets of the first and third classes had an interesting game of baseball. Seven innings were played, the score standing 13 to 12 in favor of the first class.

Replies to the circular sent out last week by the Association of Graduates are coming quite rapidly; if the average continues there will be over a hundred present at the annual dinner.

We are looking for a visit from the Queen of the Sandwich Islands. It is suggested that instead of a review the party be tendered a hop.

Rev. Father J. T. Early, of the Catholic Church, who has been here for the last 16 years, will leave to-morrow for Poughkeepsie to take charge of a parish. His successor here is Rev. Father McGimley, of New York.

Lieut. Powhattan Clarke, 10th Cavalry, has been visiting the post since Saturday.

Gen. Augur spent Monday here visiting his son.

The usual order, announcing the programme for the June examination, was issued yesterday: The examination will begin on Wednesday, June 1, and continue daily, Sundays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. till 1 o'clock P. M., and from 2.30 o'clock P. M. till 4.30 o'clock P. M., until finished. The Academic Board will be divided into two committees, as usual.

1st Lieut. Sidney E. Stuart, Ordnance Department, and 2d Lieut. Frederick S. Foltz, 1st Cavalry, are appointed the secretaries of the first and second committees, respectively. The following military exercises will take place during the examination:

Artillery.—Siege Battery Drill, June 1. Mortar Battery Drill, June 1. Light Battery Drill, June 3. Sea Coast Battery Drill, June 6.

Cavalry.—School of the Company and Battalion, June 7. School of the Soldier mounted, June 10.

Practical, Military, Engineering, Ordnance, Small Arms.—Ponton bridge building June 9. Spar bridge building, June 10. Military Signaling. Practice with Ballistic Machines. Use of the Sword and Bayonet. Military Gymnastics.

This order of exercises may be changed on account of the weather, or for other causes. The members of the first class will be graduated June 11, 1887.

The steamer Mary Powell will commence her trip to-morrow, reaching here about 8 A. M. on the down trip, and 6 P.M. returning.

When the salute for Prince Leopold was being fired, some difficulty was experienced in getting the friction primers to work properly; the trouble was due to several birds' nests that had been built in the guns.

James F. McIndoe, Lonaconing, Md.; Sterling P. Adams, Tuskegee, Ala., and Herbert Owen Williams, Tupelo, Miss., were this week designated for examination for admission to the U. S. Military Academy.

FORT SULLY, DAKOTA.

CAPTAIN and Mrs. Quinby entertained the garrison Friday evening with one of the most enjoyable dances ever seen at Sully. It was the celebration of the 13th anniversary of their marriage. The hop room was beautifully decorated and the supper was excellent. Among some of the guests present were Lieut. Clayton and Mrs. McChesney, of Fort Bennett; Prof. Hitchcock, Edgar and Charles Markhu, and the Misses Hagerty, Wells, Harvey, Porter, Evans and De Lano, of Pierre College.

The Pierre College nine came up Friday morning and played our boys three games Friday and Saturday. We succeeded in winning two out of the three games, and have the honor of being the first nine to beat them this year.

Major Roche, the Paymaster, and his clerk, Mr. Vedder, are with us again.

Mr. Doug. Carlin, a nephew of General Carlin, is a guest of Post Trader Russell. MARS.

FORT BARRANCAS, FLA.

Thousands of dollars have been invested in improvements on the buildings at Fort Barrancas this year. The pleasant and striking appearance of the entire inclosure is conclusive evidence that the money has been most advantageously expended.

The men have organized, and equipped with instruments, a brass band, under the name of the "Barrancas Band." The otherwise monotonous life, which would result from remaining in this fort, is pleasantly interrupted by the music which is pleasantly rendered by the "boys in blue."

"Skipping by the Light of the Moon" is not only represented on the stage, but has been successfully practiced by as many as a dozen soldiers, since our return from camp on October 25 last. The attractions of this portion of Florida are few and far between.

2d Lieut. Charles F. Parker has been confined to his bed for the past fortnight, and his friends entertain some doubt in regard to his rapid recovery. Lieut. Parker is a gentleman in every sense of the word, and no one regrets his illness more than the enlisted men.

Duluth Grugan, son of Capt. Frank C. Grugan, who was so unfortunate as to have an arm and leg broken while at play a few weeks since, is rapidly recovering under the skilful treatment of Dr. M. C. Wyeth.

FORT DU CHESNE, UTAH.

MAY 1, 1887.

CO. F, 21st INFANTRY, is out, cutting poles for the contemplated telegraph line, and Captain Jocelyn, who suffers from a severe lacerated wound of his foot, was obliged to go on sick leave and left post this day for two months. A photographer has pitched his tent in the river bottom, and is willing to take anyone's features for eight dollars a dozen. The parade ground is very near gray—green, I should say. The fruit trees in the garden are in full bloom, and there is nothing now that could be done for this post unless a reasonable allotment of funds is made by the War Department to erect quarters for the infantry. The cavalry have theirs to somewhat protect them from that horrible dust to which we are at present exposed. Our Post Trader is doing immense business here, he even is obliged to keep two kinds of beer—Milwaukee and Salt Lake beer; the former and superior quality is only sold to private families and others, the latter and inferior kind to enlisted men exclusively; the price of each is 50 cents a bottle. As the beer delivered at Du Chesne costs about 10 cents a bottle, the profit is 400 per cent. VOX POPULI.

FORT BLISS, TEX.

MAY 12, 1887.

A DISASTROUS fire broke out at this post about 3 A. M. today, consuming the whole line of stables, 27 animals, and Doctor Coudray's fine span of carriage horses. The soldiers worked with a will, saving the shops, water-works, storerooms, etc., and succeeded in confining the flames to one side of the corral. It was fortunate and almost miraculous that any portion of the corral was saved.

Lieut. Dunning celebrated his promotion to the regimental staff by a champagne reception. It goes without saying that it was a sparkling affair. The ladies participated and the band played.

The season of much bathing has come and the water-pipes of Fort Bliss hang high and dry. There is no place on the face of this earth that needs water so much as this gray, glaring spot of sand and heat. We would be satisfied with the "lakes" if a greater quantity was impossible.

Capt. G. H. Palmer's aged father is making the family a visit. The old gentleman is a Mexican War officer and also of the late war. He is 77 years of age, and en route from California to the far East.

Our regiment should make a bow to Lieut. G. I. Putnam, for he has certainly "made us proud" by his spicy and promising article to the "St. Nicholas" for May. E. J. P.

FORT RENO, I. T.

THE enlisted men at Fort Reno are evidently disturbed because of the announcement that Major Sumner was the first to qualify as marksman in the department and receive his certificate. The claim was never made by the major. His score was sent in several days before that of the troops reached the headquarters, among which Sergt. Reed is included. The certificate issued to Major Sumner is marked No. 1, it being the first issued this year. Sergt. Reed may have been the first to qualify at the post, which does not include the Department. Major Sumner notified the inspector of rifle practice some days ago that Sergt. Reed was the first man at the post to qualify.—Kansas City Times.

FORT MONROE, VA.

THE Secretary of War has approved a site for the new hotel at Old Point Comfort, to be built by Mr. John F. Chamberlain. It is immediately opposite the Hygeia Hotel, by the Baltimore wharf. Mr. Chamberlain hopes to have it open and ready for the reception of guests by Jan. 1, 1888.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, KAS.

IN recent orders, General McCook directs that captains will not in future attend dress parades but will detail lieutenants for that duty, giving as many officers as possible an opportunity to command, paying due regard to rank; the full complement of officers being present with each company. He also invites the attention of company commanders to G. O. 86, 1883, and says: "They will be held responsible for the instruction of their lieutenants in the requirements of all orders and circulars published to the first sergeants at the adjutant's office."

FORT SIDNEY, NEB.

THE Omaha Excelsior of May 14 says:

Mrs. Capt. Haughey left Monday to join her daughter in St. Louis, and Capt. Haughey left Tuesday to join at Fort Du Chesne. Before leaving the band tendered the captain a pleasant serenade....Gen. Morrow had a pleasant reception on his return from Fort Robinson....Lieut.-Col. John S. Poland, on leave, was a guest of Gen. Morrow last week. During his stay he was the recipient of a number of social courtesies, a breakfast having been tendered him by his host and hostess.

NEWPORT, R. I.

THE surviving members of the 5th N. Y. Volunteers (Duryee's Zouaves) who will visit Newport on Memorial Day to hold appropriate services over the grave of General G. K. Warren, U. S Army, have completed arrangements. Mrs. Warren has expressed a wish to have the visitors call upon her after the ceremonies.

The artillery troops from Fort Adams, the officers of the torpedo class, and the officers, marines, and apprentice boys of the naval training vessels will be in line on Memorial Day.

FORT OMAHA, NEB.

THE Excelsior of May 14 says:

Mrs. Capt. Miller is quite sick with acute neuralgia....Lieut. Kinzie, adjutant 2d Infantry, has his sister, Miss Nellie Kinzie, from Chicago, visiting him....Lieut. Pickering left this week for Santee Indian Agency....The powers at Washington evidently believe that the site at Fort Omaha will be changed at an early day, as they refused a small appropriation for putting water into the officers' quarters....Dr. Haskin, U. S. A., on duty at Bellevue rifle range, was the victim of a burglary this week at his boarding house in the village of Bellevue. The burglar, however, was not inclined towards the medical department as a profession, as he kindly left the doctor's pocket case in a lower room after having examined its contents. Not so, however, with the small change which he found in the doctor's pocket; this he took with him....Col. Brisbin goes to Fort McKinney, Wyo. This will interfere with the General's letters descriptive of Western Nebraska, now being published in the Bee and Republican....A party of ladies and gentlemen accompanied the Omaha Rifle Club to Bellevue on Wednesday to attend the Club's second shoot. The young lieutenants of the U. S. Army in camp at Bellevue distinguished themselves in their devotion to the ladies of the visiting delegation, and everything was done to make the guests contented.

COURT-MARTIAL CASES.

In G. C. M. O. 20, c. s., Dept. Ariz., Gen. Miles says: "The records of the garrison Court-martial at Fort Huachuca, A. T., in the case of Trumpeter Granville Laypole, Troop K, 4th Cavalry, tried for failure to pay debts due the post trader and the troop tailor, and for other offences, and sentenced, having been received for supervision, the proceedings, findings and sentence are disapproved and set aside, and the sentence will not be executed. The Department Commander is averse to allowing the establishment of a precedent which would convert private indebtedness of a soldier into a military offence, where the contracting of such debts does not directly affect the Service nor impair military discipline, and would tend to multiply the number of cases to be tried by garrison courts."

THE NATIONAL ARMORY.

THE Springfield Republican in an interesting article on the National Armory says: "It is more than any other institution the nucleus from which Springfield's prosperity has grown. It has kept in our midst constantly a large body of the most intelligent mechanics in the world; it has enabled hundreds of these men to secure and pay for homes of their own, which make them the bone and sinew of our citizenship; it has enabled dozens of them to get a start in life, to embark in business for themselves on the savings at the armory, and to train up sons without number into positions of trust and power in the community. A more perfect realization of the American ideal is hardly to be found in the country. The armorer of the longest service is Sylvester Van Horn of the milling shop, who entered in 1828, and has never worked for any paymaster but Uncle Sam since. James Stillman, foreman of the stocking shop, entered the armory in 1835, coming here from a gun shop, in Pittsfield, which at that time manufactured for the Government. Oliver B. Bunnon was an armorer under the civil system, and has seen almost 50 years of intermittent Government service. W. G. Chamberlain, foreman of the milling shop, came in with Ripley and military rule in 1842, as did Daniel Proctor, Levi Streeter, and A. H. Clark of the same shop. The long service of Major Ingersoll as paymaster which closed a few years since, began at the same time.

A MILITARY DANCING SCHOOL.

ONE of the morning duties at West Point is the dancing lesson. Each class has an hour a day allotted to it. The dancing master calls the dance, the pianist strikes up a lively tune, and the cadets revolve and gyrate in couples about the room. They can hardly fail to become good dancers when all enter into the spirit of it with so much heartiness. The dancing master is the jolliest of short, fat Frenchmen.

"Attention, cavaliers!" he calls. "In ze valtz ze right foot es advance, so; zen ze left, and ze right brought up, so! Now—one, two, tree; one, two, tree!" and he sways his body and half closes his eyes as he chants the numbers, while the whole roomful of boys moves as he directs. Suddenly he sees a cadet leaning against the wall, and he darts across the room to him.

"Ah, Monsieur, vy do you not dance?"

"Can't get the step," is the reply.

"Oh, et is verry easy! I vill get you a partner." And away he goes to another, who also has difficulty with the step, and, panting and red in the face, brings him to the scene. "Now, Mees Fisher, allow me to introduce Monsieur Johnson; now you will dance." And "Johnson and 'Mees' Fisher" bow, and redden at the laughter around them, and then try again.—From "Winning a Commission," by Geo. I. Putnam, in "St. Nicholas" for June.

WHAT JEFFERSON DAVIS NOW THINKS.

JEFFERSON DAVIS, in a recent speech at New Orleans, said: "What was the army and navy of the South? It was the patriotism of persons who bared their breasts to bullets in defending a constitutional right. With great navies and armies against us, we formed regiments and battalions. At their head we placed Lee as their commander. With inferior numbers of men we marched onward fighting for our rights, and battle after battle was fought and won, but the Northern historians never conceded that and indulged in triumphs of mind over matter. But now those scenes and incidents have passed, and they only live in memory and history. United you are now, and if the Union is ever to be broken, let the other side break it. The army of the South will shine forever around the camp-fires, and will still shine to our children and children's children. The truth we fought for shall not encourage you ever to fight again, but keep your word in good or evil."

SECRETARY ENDICOTT'S PERPLEXITY.

SECRETARY ENDICOTT has an elephant on his hands, and one that is causing the rich blue blood in his veins to course through his system faster than is healthy for him in this hot weather. This elephant is, "How shall the clerks be accommodated in the new War Department Building when it is finished, and where will the æsthetic furniture come from, now that only $60,000 has been appropriated for furnishing all these luxuries?" The building is to be ready for occupancy by January next, and, as the law requires that all the bureaus except the Signal Service and a portion of the Surgeon-General's office, which are now in rented buildings, are to be brought in the new one, this will bring an army of clerks, and to fix them in place will be quite a job. The Secretary by law will be required to use all the old furniture now in service, and he dreads the idea of having to come in contact with the old-time three-legged stools, ant-eaten desks, and old-fashioned articles now enjoyed by the clerks.

CANTEEN CLUB'S DINNER.

THE monthly meeting and banquet of the Canteen Club took place Saturday evening, May 14, at Martinelli's, 5th ave. and 19th st. There were present Gen. Molineux, who presided; Commo. Benham, of the U. S. Navy; Col. John Hamilton, 5th Art., Col. Haswell, Capt. Van Reed, 5th Artillery; Capt. W. H. Murphy, 12th Regt., and others. Several new members were elected, after which the club enjoyed its banquet, at which all the table equipments, except the knives and forks, were of tin. Major James J. Jackson, 1st U. S. Cavalry, read a paper entitled "The Modoc War," the incidents of the paper being drawn from personal experience.

Swatara—At Portsmouth, N. H. Is to have new boilers. It is not known at present when she will be ready for sea. Construction work is practically completed. When ready she will be assigned to duty on the North Atlantic Station.

Enterprise and Nipsic—Undergoing repairs at New York. In all probability will be assigned to the North Atlantic Squadron. Will be completed about July 1.

Chicago—Will be finished at New York. The engines are practically completed, and but little construction work remains to be done. Will be in condition to sail for New York within two weeks.

Kearsarge—At Portsmouth, N. H. To be repaired. Construction work is well underway.

VARIOUS NAVAL ITEMS.

FIVE more torpedo boats are to be put into commission at once by the British Admiralty.

ONE of the 38 ton guns in the fore turret of H. M. S. Agamemnon is reported defective, the A tube being badly scored.

THE Trenton will be ready for sea in a short time, and will proceed to Rio Janeiro by the most direct route, where it is hoped the exchange of officers and men with the Lancaster may be effected without loss of time.

COMMANDER SCHLEY found the Boston Equipment yard in excellent order, and says it will be in regular operation within a month. He proposes to bloom about 2,000,000lbs. of scrap iron, which has been rusting in the yard.

ENGINEER-IN-CHIEF LORING and Chief Engineer Wm. H. Harris made an inspection of the Arrow Steamship Co.'s plant at Alexandria, Va., May 17. This company, but recently established, has already entered into contracts for the construction of several large and fast merchant vessels.

A COURT-MARTIAL was held on board H. M. S. Hibernia, at Malta, April 22, for the trial of Lieut. and Comdr. Reginald Yorke Smith of the Starling, for having suffered his vessel to run ashore on the Dædalus Shoal in the Red Sea. After a trial lasting from 9 A. M. to 4.45 P. M., he was sentenced to be dismissed his ship.

THE Naval Inspection Board returned from a visit of inspection to the seven monitors at City Point, on May 7. They were found to be all in excellent condition, four of them, the Wyandotte, Catskill, Lehigh and Ajax, being ready for active service, and three, the Mahopac, Manhattan and Canonicus, being suitable for harbor defence.

THE monitors Terror and Amphitrite, at Philadelphia and Wilmington, respectively, will shortly be subjected to dock trials to demonstrate the efficiency of their machinery, which has been reported finished by the contractors. It was the Secretary's desire to have the trials take place at sea, but the condition of the hulls would not permit and he has consented to dock trials upon the same conditions prescribed for the Puritan. The final payments to the contractors will not be made until these trials are made and reported satisfactorily.

MR. HUNT, the New York architect, is in correspondence with the Naval Observatory officials as to details of the plans for the new observatory, and is making progress with his drawings.

THE Board of Naval Constructors, headed by Constructor Pook, having visited some of the largest ship-building yards and machine works in the East to acquaint themselves with the most efficient appliances in use have submitted their report to the Secretary. It is understood that they find the New York Navy-yard can be equipped, with all additional plant necessary for building a large vessel, at a cost much within the $150,000 appropriated by Congress for the purpose.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Philadelphia Bulletin says: "Within the last two and a half years there have been eight or ten suicides of naval officers, and the following are some of the names: Semmes, Greene, Augur, Danenhower, Snyder, Shock, Rider, Clark, and others. This extended list seems to justify the suggestion that the conditions of living and the habits of study in the American Navy might offer excellent opportunity for study by some neurological specialist."

THE following is the status of the cases recently referred to the Navy Retiring Board: Lieut.-Comdr. E. B. Thomas, Lieut. R. H. Townley and Ensign F. W. Toppan are recommended for retirement; Lieut.-Comdr. S. Hubbard is granted six months' extension of sick leave, when he again appears for examination; Lieut. E. L. Amory is granted an extension of ten days in which to prepare certain papers; Lieut. E. W. Bridge is too sick to appear and the board will probably examine him at his home in New York. Engineer officers do not appear until May 24.

FROM THE ASIATIC STATION.

ADVICES from the flagship Brooklyn at Yokohama, Japan, April 22, give the disposition of vessels at that date as follows: Palos and Omaha at Nagasaki. Former vessel is under repairs to her crank pin. These will be completed about May 1, and then both vessels proceed to Yokohama, Essex still absent in search for traces of supposed survivors of missing American bark Abbie Carver off the southeast coast of Formosa.

Marion is at Yokohama, and is in efficient condition.

Caulking to decks and top sides of the Brooklyn are completed. The repairs to her boilers will be completed by the latter part of May.

Rear Admiral Chandler writes: "As Yokohama has one of the best drill grounds on the station, I am taking advantage of my stay at this port to land the battalions of the vessels weekly as a brigade for the various manœuvres. I am glad to report they are in a very efficient condition. The general health of officers and men of the fleet is excellent. Two cases of supposed cholera have appeared in Tokio, Japan, but the disease has not yet been definitely settled as such by medical experts."

NAVAL ACADEMY.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., May 18, 1887.

AT one o'clock on Saturday the Constellation went into commission. Lieut. Leutze brought the Wyoming back from the morning cruise at noon and reported as 1st Lieutenant. The other officers have all reported and are standing their watches in turn.

On Saturday afternoon the base ball team from George town college succeeded in defeating the cadets by a score of 4 to 3. The game was exciting from beginning to end, and none will be played this year that will be of greater interest to the spectators.

To an impartial observer it was evident that the cadets were handicapped by the umpire. His decisions showed either shocking ignorance of the game or a decided leaning toward the Georgetown team. As it is now known that he had waged $15 that the cadets would lose, his work is not as hard to account for. At the same time it is but fair to say that his character was unknown to the Georgetown team, who, in addition to being splendid ball players, showed themselves thorough gentlemen. Georgetown made three runs in the second innings on a hit, a base on balls, and errors by Hubbard and Allen. Their other run was made in the sixth inning on a dropped third strike and errors by the cadets.

The cadets secured their runs by innings, playing a strong uphill game. Runs were made on hits by Anderson, Robison, Hubbard, Snow, and Long, and on passed balls by the Georgetown catcher.

The pitching on both sides was very effective, and batting was very light. The hits made by the college men were mostly bases on balls and scratch hits in front of the plate, they being unable to gauge Anderson's swift curves. The game was called after six innings to allow the college men to catch the train. In the fifth inning the third baseman had his leg injured and retired. Stone, the cadets' right fielder, and captain of this year's foot ball team, ran into him and unfortunately strained the tendons of his knee.

On Wednesday the cadets play with the St. John's college, of Annapolis, and on Saturday with the Johns Hopkins University, of Baltimore.

In the evening the officers gave a pleasant hop. The numerous cadets, lately returned from a two years' cruise, were present. As usual, the officers and their wives, and cadets of the first and second classes were well represented. Many young ladies from neighboring cities visiting friends in the yard were present. The hop closed at 11 P M.

The invitations for the June ball, given as a farewell to the graduating class have been given out and are exceedingly pretty.

Nearly all the naval cadets of the class of '85 have returned and are preparing for their final examination.

All the first and second classes are having instruction in Steam Tactics, under direction of Lieut. Leutze.

An additional number of seamen for the Constellation came last night. Capt. Tilton, M. C., was sent in charge.

On Monday evening Mr. Sprague of New York, delivered a very interesting lecture to the Naval Institute and the second class, subject, Electro-motors. Mr. Sprague graduated from the Academy in '78.

The examinations for candidates began on Tuesday, and those passing without a re-examination will enter the Academy on Friday. The Japanese student who is to enter has arrived but is not required to take the entrance examinations.

Miss Chace has returned from a visit to Leavenworth, Kas.

Miss Todd, daughter of Prof. H. D. Todd, U. S. N., formerly attached to the Academy, is the guest of Miss Loomis.

KRUPP'S new rapid firing gun consists of a tube resembling that of a steel field-gun, projecting from the port-hole of an ironclad; its carriage being reversible, and having a seat for the gunner at its rear.

CRUISE OF THE RICHMOND.

KEY WEST, FLA., May 12, 1887.

SINCE the arrival of the U. S. flagship Richmond, Captain Robert Boyd, U. S. N., commanding, at Key West, the crew of the vessel has been exercised at target firing with small arms as well as with great guns. Every man in the ship has fired from 10 to 15 rounds with the rifle, and all boarders and others armed with the pistol have fired from 15 to 25 shots with the Navy revolver.

During the firing with great guns, which took place on the afternoon of May 9, great excitement prevailed among all the gun captains, as it had been announced that a prize would be awarded to the captain who made the best score as to both accuracy and celerity of his practice. The prize medal, of a handsome design, had been purchased by the officers of the Richmond.

A regulation sized great gun target was towed out from the Government wharf, where the Richmond has been moored since her arrival here a week ago, and anchored abreast of the flagship, and at a distance from the same of 1,000 yards. During the practice, which was carried out in a manner as laid down in a regular programme, officers were stationed in the tops and in boats anchored at certain distances from the target to mark the fall of the projectiles.

George B. Moncrief, Boatswain's Mate, and captain of No. 3 gun, belonging to the 2d Division, under command of Lt. A. C. Dillingham, U. S. Navy, was the happy winner of the prize.

The five best scores out of the total of eight were:

G. B. Moncrief, Boatswain's Mate, No. 3 gun..	.9000
J. J. Heary, Captain of Top, No. 5 gun	.7333
C. Simonsen, Captain of Top, No. 6 gun	.7167
C. G. Anderson, Captain of Forecastle, No. 1 gun	.7000
John Schlae, Captain of Top, No. 4 gun	.6667

In making up these scores, no account is taken of the time in which the five shots were fired. The greatest number which could be reached was 1,000, and this by putting all five shots within 50 yards of the target in range, or within a vertical circle of about seven feet radius.

To show that the result of the Richmond's firing was one of the best ever attained, be it said that during last year a class of Naval Cadets at Annapolis, about 30 in number, fired at target with great gun under the same conditions as above stated, and the average obtained only reached .5498.

The Richmond will proceed to sea Friday morning, May 13, and while en route to Matanzas, Cuba, hold an extensive target practice after the following programme:

North Atlantic Squadron, Key West, May 11, 1887.

Memorandum regarding Gunnery Practice.—The practice will consist of the four following kinds: One, firing with the great guns at a target at distances of from 1,100 to 800 yards, with the ship at speed and the helm kept moving from side to side; two, firing with the 60-pdr. and 8-inch rifles at a target at a range between about 1,200 and 500 yards, while the ship approaches these at speed, while keeping the target as far forward as their limit of train will allow; three, firing the Hotchkiss revolver-cannons at a target while approaching and leaving it at speed at ranges from 1,200 to 200 yards; four, firing at a target with the Gatling gun in the top, the Hotchkiss revolver-cannons which will bear, and as numerous a body of riflemen (with ball cartridge) as the ship's quarter bill will allow, at ranges from 200 to 500 yards.

This last practice may take place at the same target as the former. The officer commanding the riflemen will carefully instruct his men to keep under cover and to use a rest as much as possible.

The first three kinds of practice will be carefully plotted by cross bearings, the last kind it will evidently be impossible to plot. As shown in the diagram a boat may be dropped and anchored at B, being careful that, while steaming towards the point marked T, there is a sea-horizon, so that the distance B T may be laid off by Buckner's method. The ship will then steam along a line T A, making a right angle with T B for a distance of 1,000 yards, and a second boat will be dropped and anchored at A.

In conclusion it may be said that exercises of this kind are of the greatest importance to the Naval Service, and the awarding of prizes is highly commendable, as it aids to urge all to renewed efforts, and as everybody is certainly aiming his best, knowing that a prize is to be gained.

It is sincerely hoped that in the near future the same method of holding target practice, as started in the North Atlantic Squadron may be adopted throughout the entire Service, as it would greatly aid in giving to the Navy a number of competent gun captains.

AN army 25 miles long starts on a march of 25 miles—they need 10 hours to march these 25 miles. A courier starts at the same time from the rear of the Army (on horseback), and rides to the head of the Army and back again. He reaches the rear of the Army when they just come to a halt, after having marched 25 miles. How many miles has the courier travelled?

TO ARMY OFFICERS.

The undersigned having represented the Penn Mutual Life Ins. Co., of Philadelphia, as its General Agent for Northern Ohio, during the past year, with the experience thus gained feels himself to be competent to give Army Officers advice on many matters pertaining to Life Insurance, which may be to their advantage. To this end, therefore, he gratuitously offers his services to the Army, and respectfully invites correspondence from such as desire information on this subject.

While the Company he represents has no superior in the country for security or for liberality in its policies to officers in the Military Service, yet he will be pleased to advise and assist officers who may prefer to place their insurance in other reputable companies. Information as to the standing of the various companies and their relative profitableness for investment he will gladly communicate to those who desire it; also advice as to kind of policy best suited and most profitable to those of different ages.

By this announcement the undersigned hopes that he may serve the interests of his brother officers, enabling them to place their insurance in the most substantial and profitable companies, in a form of policy most advantageous to themselves.

THE members of the Board on the Revision of the Army Regulations are still confident that their work can be completed by July 1, and are working early and late to accomplish this. Colonel OTIS and Lieutenant DAVIS frequently devote entire evenings to the work. General BENÉT has other duties, and attends the meetings of the Board only when questions involving amendments on new regulations are submitted by the Secretary of War for recommendation. Considerable discussion has lately been devoted to the subject of more frequent payments and the enforcement of Sunday laws in the Army. Three hours were spent on Thursday in discussing the proposition of the Paymaster General to have each officer paid by a specified paymaster, in order to prevent duplication of pay accounts. No final conclusion has been reached upon either of these subjects, but it is presumed that action will be taken and announced in general orders before the work of revision of the Regulations has been completed.

A YOUNG officer, who was a candidate for special duty at West Point instead of making his application in the regular way prevailed upon his Senators, his Representatives and his lady friends in Washington to call upon the Secretary of War and explain how important it was to the Service that he should be assigned to duty at the Academy. The Secretary heard what all his friends had to say, and then sat down and wrote the young officer a letter, in which he was told that he had already had more than his share of special duty; that his services were not needed at West Point, and if they were the Superintendent would be able to find it out without the interference of outside parties. It was plainly and emphatically stated that the Department was opposed to all attempts to influence the authorities, and that those who resorted to such methods need not expect any favors from the Department.

THE RECORD OF THE TORPEDO BOATS.

THE French naval manœuvres were to commence on May 12, when the evolutionary squadron was to leave for Algiers with a convoy. A division of torpedo-boats is to be concentrated at Ajaccio and will endeavor to bar the passage of the vessels. Thus far the record of the torpedo-boats is not of the best and their enemies hope to find them still further discredited by this new trial. During recent manœuvres in the Mediterranean, the Desaix, Seignelay, Villars, Dupetit-Thouars, Annamite, and 16 torpedo-boats, which were to have left Toulon on April 18, were detained in port for 24 hours owing to bad weather. Once out of the harbor the seas swept over the boats, leaving nothing visible beyond their funnels; two boats ran short of coal after 18 hours' steaming, and nearly an hour was spent in putting two tons of coal on one of them. This, says a writer in Le Journal de la Marine, proves the impossibility of supplying torpedo-boats at sea, and shows what easy victims they would fall to armorclads. There was nothing to be done, he adds, but to run for the nearest anchorage:

> This was done, and the division was soon lying off the coast of Minorca, at the mouth of the little port of Cuidadela, whose inhabitants, sheltered under their umbrellas, contemplated from the top of the cliffs this imposing sight, this naval force picturesquely massed under the huge naked rocks scourged and chiselled by the waves. The captains and crews of the torpedo boats are thoroughly exhausted by this struggle with the sea, by constant watching, by being uninterruptedly shaken from head to foot in a way which deprives one of all feeling. Pluck cannot make up for this physical annihilation, and it may well be asked if these picked commanders and sailors, when in this condition, would be able to discharge a torpedo; and would not all this jolting disarrange the delicate machinery of the weapon?

After a night's rest, the division put out to sea once more, to repeat the same experience, and great satisfaction was felt when the port of Algiers was reached. During the voyage a sailor was pitched overboard from No. 65, but fortunately picked up by No. 75. Further, it appears that some previous experiments off the Isles of Hyères in discharging torpedoes were anything but satisfactory. On the other hand, tests of BULLIRANT nets at sea by the squadron of Admiral PEYRON have proven very satisfactory, proving that vessels with their nets out answered the helm, that they could déployer them while steaming at seven knots, and that they offer a good protection to armorclads not going over five knots. A writer in the Temps adds that, contrary to the opinion expressed last year by the new school, the firing of the heavy guns in no way injured the fastening of the nets. And all the torpedoes discharged by the Balay and the Déroulède, two sea-going torpedo-boats, got entangled in the nets of the vessel attached. In fact, during the operations of Admiral PEYRON'S squadron the nets gave great satisfaction, and not so the torpedoes, whose course, under the most favorable conditions, was most erratic. In crossing from Toulon to Algiers, none of the torpedo-boats, we are told, could have taken part in an engagement; and as for recoaling at sea from a Mère Gigogne, that is out of the question.

THE class now assembling at the Naval Academy for final examination previous to graduation, having concluded the two years' probationary course at sea, numbers but thirty-four. This is the class which entered in 1881, and of the thirty-four remaining members not far from one-half entered as cadet engineers, although as fourth class-men the members were, respectively, forty-eight cadet midshipmen and twenty-five cadet engineers. The examinations for final graduation will begin early in June and continue until every memberr has been examined.

THERE are at present sixty Congressional appointments to the Naval Academy yet to be filled. These the Secretary of the Navy is authorized by law to fill if nominations are not made by the Congressmen whose districts are unrepresented at the Academy before July 1. It is highly probable that Secretary Whitney will have quite a number of these nominations at his disposal, but it is a delicate matter for him to exercise his right, as he is almost certain to incur the enmity of the Congressmen who are by their own negligence deprived of the right to nominate. Members of Congress whose districts are unrepresented frequently fail to nominate because they desire to keep the vacancy until some particular candidate for academic honors arrives at the required age. They omit to name any one, overlooking the provisions of the law until they find, much to their chagrin, that their district secures a representative at the Academy without any act of theirs. Some of them nominate fictitious persons, and so keep the vacancy open until they are ready to fill it. Others ask permission to postpone their nomination for a time, and this permission is invariably granted. Many claim that they failed to receive a notice that their district was unrepresented at the Academy.

NEW YORK has had within its limits this week a live queen, and is, therefore, happy. On Tuesday Her Majesty took a trip down the bay in the steamer Atlantic, placed at her disposal by Major-General Schofield, and, under the escort of Major Sanger, A. D. C., visited Bedlow's Island and Governor's Island. At the latter place she was received by General Whipple, Assistant Adjutant-General, who did the honors in the absence of General Schofield, temporarily absent from New York. A salute was fired on her arrival and departure; Major Randolph, commandant of Fort Columbus, tendered a review, and all the officers were introduced. She afterwards visited the museum and other places of interest on the Island, and departed well pleased with her visit. Similar courtesies have been shown by the Navy Department in New York and Brooklyn, and, taking all together, Queen Kapiolani will have arrived at the conclusion that New York is a hospitable city.

THE Secretary of War on Wednesday nominated six heads of bureaus and one person from each bureau in the War Department, to be arranged by the Civil Service Commission into an examining board to carry out the recently promulgated changes in the civil service rules regulating promotions. The Civil Service Commissioners will select three heads of bureaus to constitute the departmental board and one clerk for each bureau to be added to the board as an auxiliary. The board will immediately prepare forms of examination, and, after they have been approved by the Commissioners, they will be applied to the Surgeon-General's office, to determine the qualifications of the clerks in that branch for promotion or their liability to reduction or dismissal. It is expected that the new rules will result in a reassignment of duties and salaries that will be more just, and have some relation to the merits of the clerks. The Board of Examination for the War Department consists of the following clerks of Class 4: Charles H. Carrington, office of the Secretary of War; Oliver W. Longan, A. G. O.; Edward Shaw Surgeon-General's; Lewis W. Tolman, Chief of Division of Requisitions and Accounts; George W. Pratt, A. G. O.; Warren H. Orcutt, I. G. O.; Thomas Duke, Chief Clerk Bureau of Military Justice; Thomas W. Webster. Q. M. G. O.; Wm. A. Decaindry, Chief Clerk, C. G. O.; Jacob Frech, Surg.-G. O.; Wm. T, Kent, Paymr.-G. O.; Waverly D. Drinkard, Chief of Engineers; John J. Cook, Chief of Ordnance; Wm. R. Bushby, Signal Office.

JOHN S. SMYTH, in an article in the Chicago Current, on the duties of Governments, says: "It is their duty to compel obedience to their laws, and protect all citizens. If the police will not do their duty, and the sheriffs cannot, the militia can be called in at once, and the punishment of evildoers made sure. There should be an efficient detective force, to prevent the commission of crime, as well as to apprehend the criminal; and any man acting the detective without a Government permit should be severely punished. No man should be given a permit unless he shows a good character. It is better to have a Regular Army than the present Pinkerton army, commanded by a private citizen, ununiformed, whose officers and pay are unknown, of no character and undisciplined; and who, when they kill a man, are mustered out of the service before the coroner can convene a jury."

A NEW blank form of voucher for disbursements under the new mileage law, has been prepared by Paymaster General Rochester, and is now being printed at the Government printing office. It is accompanied by this certificate: "I certify that I did not travel upon a conveyance belonging to, or chartered by, the United States; that I was not furnished transportation, nor was it practicable to obtain the same from the Quartermaster's Department, for any part of the journey for which transportation is charged, and that the cost of the transportation actually paid by me, exclusive of sleeping or parlor car fare and transfers, was as charged in memorandum attached."

AS THE result of the recent Easter manœuvres, it is announced that the state of the English Volunteers is very satisfactory in respect to discipline, steadiness in marching and manœuvring, and especially in marching past. 150 velocipedists were organized as scouts—some mounted on bicycles, the rest on tricycles. The manœuvres showed that the former could, on level ground, defy the best mounted cavalry, while the latter could scarcely be employed on any duties save as means of communication between columns of a corps d'armée, and then only by roads.

THE contemplated reunion of Pickett's men at Gettysburg in July next has been abandoned, and no Confederate monument to the memory of Pickett's soldiers will be erected at Gettysburg, owing to objections made by the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Association. The action of the Association is severely criticized, especially in Grand Army circles.

THE Duke of Edinburgh is ordered by his mamma, the Queen, to touch at Marseilles, on his way home to join in her jubilee celebration, and salute the French flag on land. This is to settle the little unpleasantness resulting from his failure to return the salute offered him by the French.

THE following changes of stations of quartermasters have been recommended by Gen. Holabird, but not yet approved by the Secretary of War: Lieut.-Col. Batchelder, from Washington to New York, relieving Lt.-Col. H. C. Hodges, who goes to San Francisco to relieve Major Geo. H. Weeks who goes to Washington in place of Col. Batchelder. No order has yet been issued for these changes, although we see it stated that one was issued May 17.

A COURT OF INQUIRY on Capt. T. O. Selfridge will convene at his request. Detail: Capt. W. E. Fitzhugh, president; Capts. E. O. Matthews and F. V. McNair, members, and Paymaster R. W. Allen, Judge Advocate. To convene at Nagasaki, Japan. Secretary Whitney states there "is no doubt but that Capt. Selfridge supposed himself to have done everything necessary as a precaution against imperilling the lives of others, and if it should be found, nevertheless, by a judgment formed subsequently that he was negligent, I consider it an injustice to him to impute any wilful disregard of the law."

THE French Government has sent an invitation, through the State Department, for two officers of the Army, to witness manœuvres of the French troops, to take place near Paris in September next.

SECRETARY ENDICOTT has decided to forbid the practice of requiring military prisoners to carry a heavy log for punishment, which has already become obsolete by disuse.

RECENT DEATHS.

THE funeral of the late Colonel Alanson M. Randol, Major, 1st Artillery, took place at the Presidio of San Francisco, May 9, with military honors. The Cavalry, Artillery, and Infantry of the post furnished the escort. The pall-bearers were Col. Piper, 1st Art.; Col. Carey, Pay Dept.; Major Bennett, 2d Cav.; Major Moale, 1st Inf.; Major Tilton, Med. Dept., and Capt. Darling, 1st Art. Major-General Howard and staff, all the officers, a delegation of the Loyal Legion, and numerous citizens attended the funeral. The services at the grave were conducted by Chaplain Kendig and were very impressive. The deceased officer leaves a widow and four children.

General Orders No. 6 announces the death, at New Almaden, Cal., May 7, after a long illness, of Major Alanson M. Randol, 1st Artillery, Brevet Colonel, U. S. A., gives his military history and says: "Since the close of the war he has almost constantly been on duty with his regiment; was for a time Acting Insp.-General on the staff of the late Major-General McDowell. Since that he has been in command successively of the posts of Fort Winfield Scott and Alcatraz Island, Cal., and Fort Canby, W. T." A notice of Col. Randol, issued by his comrades of the California Commandery of the M. O. L. L., concludes as follows: "He was emphatically a duty officer, and was rarely absent from his company and regiment; he bore himself during his protracted illness with the same soldierly spirit that characterized him in battle; and though he realized that he must soon close his eyes to this world, yet he met his last enemy as resolutely as he had faced the storm of the enemy's bullets in battle."

CAPTAIN CHARLES O. BRADLEY, 20th Infantry, meritorious officer of over twenty-five years' service, died at Fort Maginnis, Montana, May 14. Captain Bradley was born in New Hampshire, and when the war broke out went to the front as a 1st Sergeant of Co. I, 1st N. H. Infantry. In 1862 he was appointed Captain in the 13th New Hampshire, mustered out in June, 1864, and in September following appointed Captain of the 1st N. H. Artillery. On Feb. 23, 1866, he was appointed 2d Lieutenant and 1st Lieutenant, 11th Infantry; transferred to the 20th Infantry in September of that year and promoted Captain in August, 1874. He has therefore been identified with the gallant 20th for nearly 21 years, and his loss will be deeply felt.

WILLIAM BURNHAM WOODS, who served with distinction during the war, rising to the grades of Brigadier and Brevet Major-General of Volunteers, died May 14 at Washington, D. C. He was appointed by President Grant in 1869 a United States Judge for the Fifth Circuit. On Dec. 15, 1880, Judge Woods was nominated by President Hayes an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; he was confirmed Dec. 22, and on Jan. 8, 1881, he took the oath of office and his seat upon the bench. The funeral took place on Monday and was attended by the President and all the members of the Cabinet, the Justices of the Supreme Court, Lieut.-General Sheridan, Admiral Porter, ex-Justice Strong and General Schenck, and many others. The coffin was borne to the hearse by the messengers of the Supreme Court, the Justices of the Court and ex-Justice Strong acting as honorary pall bearers.

EX-GOVERNOR WILLIAM SMITH, of Virginia, long familiarly known as "Extra Billy," died at his home in Warrenton, Va., May 18, in the 90th year of his age. He was twice Governor of his native State, his second term covering the notable last years of the Civil War. At the age of 63 he entered the Confederate Army, was badly wounded at Sharpsburg and afterward made Brig.-General. William Smith, his eldest son, was, while serving as a midshipman in the U. S. Navy, lost in the Indian Ocean. Another son, Col. Austin Smith, was killed in the battle of Seven Pines.

MISS ANNIE RUSHER, only daughter of Captain E. P. Meeker, U. S. Marine Corps, a bright young lady of fifteen, died at Brooklyn, N. Y., May 13. The funeral took place on Monday, May 16, from 183 Hancock street, Brooklyn, and was largely attended.

THE death is reported of Gen. Johann Stepanovitch Ganetsky, Aide de Camp General, Governor of the fortress of St. Petersburg, who commanded the Corps of Grenadiers before Plevna, and repulsed the last desperate sortie of Osman Pasha.

MRS. FREEMAN, widow of Major Alexander H. Freeman, died at Philadelphia, May 14. Her husband was an officer of the 6th Infantry, received the brevet of Captain for gallantry at Chancellorsville, and resigned in 1866.

COLONEL PLATT ADAMS, a veteran of the War of 1812, died at New York, May 13. He was born December 20, 1792.

A CHEEKY CADET.

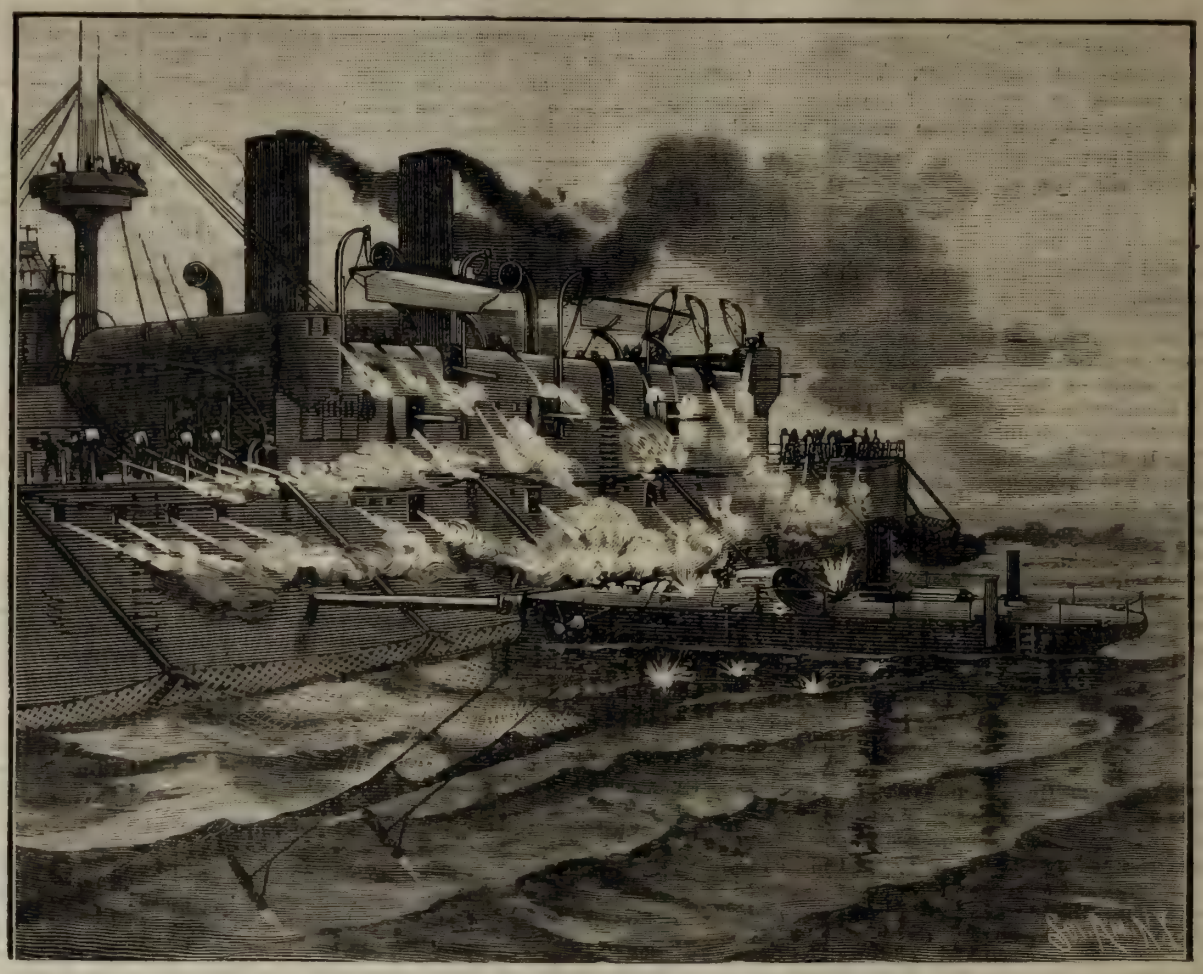
Once there was a youngster who was so perfectly outrageous that he knew he would be dismissed at the approaching examination, so he determined to have a good time before he left. On the grounds was an old disused shed of some kind, and in it the young hopeful piled all the shavings, rags, and everything else combustible he could get, and one fine night set a match to it and had a magnificent bonfire of his own. Of course suspicion pointed to him, and a court of inquiry was organized to investigate the outrage. Gen. Thayer was superintendent and Col. Fry commandant of the cadets. When the prisoner was called up for examination before the court, composed of officers of high rank, imposing in the majesty of the law, he was asked to state what he knew about the fire.

"I—I don't know anything myself but what is hearsay testimony, and you won't admit that," he replied.

"The court does not desire your views on hearsay testimony," severely remarked the prosecutor. "You are directed to state what may have come to your knowledge regarding the affair."

"Well, but," objected the culprit, "I don't know anything about it, and what I heard I don't believe."

"The court, sir," thundered the officer, "has not inquired into your belief. You will immediately state what you heard."



"But—but—you don't believe me, either."

By that time the court was in a rage. "Go on, sir," roared several officers together.

"Well, they do say," stammered the cadet, diffidently, "that Gen. Thayer got the shavings, and old Fry set 'em afire."

The story reads well, but, as a matter of fact, General Thayer relinqushed the superintendency of the Military Academy July 1, 1833, and General James B. Fry did not enter the Academy until 1843, and, though on duty there after graduation, was never commandant of cadets. Cary H. Fry was a cadet at the Academy from 1830 to 1834, but was never commandant of cadets.

THE BERDAN TORPEDO.

THE accompanying illustration shows very clearly the character of General Berdan's invention. In place of a bowsprit, the torpedo-boat is fitted with a pole, which is so arranged that if its end is pressed inward it will ignite the explosive and expel the torpedoes. These do not, however, depend entirely upon the original impulse for their speed. They are to be provided with four tubes containing rocket composition, each 6 inches in diameter and 32 inches long, with a 2-inch hole bored through the centre of the composition, so as to expose a large burning surface. The composition in the tubes is ignited by the discharge, and forces the torpedoes through the water with greatly increased speed. It is calculated that their velocity may be as high as 30 knots an hour after and during immersion. The torpedoes when discharged from the tubes dive nearly vertical. As they enter, the rocket powder begins to burn, and they swing around the arc of a circle with great speed, diving under the torpedo net, rising within it, and striking the ship's bottom. The blow, by a percussion apparatus, explodes them. By adjusting the length of the pole, the period of release and discharge may be regulated. Electricity or other supplemental means of firing the torpedoes from the tubes may be used in cases where it seems undesirable to wait for actual contact, or where it seems preferable to dispense with the discharging pole. The tubes may be arranged a little off the vertical, so as to spread the torpedoes in their course. The system is not necessarily confined to a pair, as four or more may be used. The size of the torpedoes is 8 feet long and 14 inches in diameter The charge is to be 200 pounds of compressed gun cotton. The connection with the snubbing posts is so arranged that should a torpedo miss the attacked vessel the fastening will give way as it rises to the surface, and it will fly away from the torpedo boat. In attacking at an angle, the outer torpedoes are disconnected and not discharged. With reference to this invention, Gen. Berdan writes as follows:

WASHINGTON, May 16, 1887.

I SEE in your journal of May 14 that you attempted to explain the state of my torpedo in the different European countries. You did not go far enough. As it may be of interest to your readers to know just how it stands, I will state the case briefly. I have written engagements from England, France, Germany, Russia, Sweden and Norway, Turkey, Italy, Spain, and Mexico not to make or use my torpedo for all time without my permission—all expressing at the same time a desire to make trials at once, but no government was willing to allow the other governments to witness the trials. So I came here under the expectation that our Government would be willing to allow officers from those governments to come and attend the trials, and I have informed these governments that I have reason to believe that this permission will be granted. Some of these governments have already applied officially, and I am keeping them informed of all the improvements I have made by sending models and explanations.

These engagements were, I am told, never given by either of these governments before for any invention, and were given to me solely for the reason that they believed my torpedo would not only circumvent the net, but that it was the only one yet invented that would do so. Our Government declined to give this guarantee, so I was forced to patent it in this country. Very respectfully,

H. BERDAN.

THE WASHINGTON ORDNANCE YARD.

THE work of transforming the Washington Navy-yard into a gun foundry, is being slowly pushed. Operations at present are confined to the old anchor shop. This building is being cleaned out with the view of fitting it up for the construction of guns of small calibre, eight-inch and under. The floor will be levelled off and concreted, foundations for lathes erected, and a foundation also for the 40-ton travelling crane, which it is intended to erect in this building for the handling of the guns. The most important change at the Yard, that of erecting a wing to the anchor-shop for the manufacture of large guns, ten-inches and upward, has not yet been commenced. The plans are still in the hands of the draughtsmen, and the detailed drawings are not yet completed. It is intended that this building shall be much higher than the anchor-shop, so that the 110-ton travelling crane for the big guns may have a hoisting height of about 40 feet. The anchor-shop crane will not have a hoisting height of over 15 feet. It will be many months before the gun foundry will be in full working order. Civil Engr. Menocal, who has been retained on duty at the Yard, has just returned from a visit to Nicaragua in connection with the surveys of the proposed Nicaragua canal route, and will probably resume at once his duties as civil engineer of the Yard, and will be active in carrying out the proposed changes.

NEW REPEATING ARMS.

SOME experiments were held May 3, at Hütteldorf, Austria, with the repeating rifle which Herr Fortelka, a blind man, has invented and latterly modified to suit the requirements of the Martini-Henry cartridge. The firing with the Martini cartridges stopped at the rate of once or twice in four shots either from some defect in the rifle or from some flaw in the cartridges, so that the repeating action did not yield a thoroughly satisfactory result. Herr Fortelka hopes to improve his rifle. It will weigh 9 lb. and cost about $15.

The Danish Folkething has had laid before it the draft of a bill implying the introduction of a new rifle into the Danish Army for which 4,100,000 crowns will be required, spread over a period of five years. According to the Vort Forsvar, the initial velocity of the new rifle is 1,700 Danish feet per second. The cartridge is lighter than that now used with the Remington, and the soldier can carry with him nearly a third more cartridges than is possible with the German Mauser gun. The rotary velocity of the new rifle gives about 1,800 turns per second. Its magazine is loose, and the cartridges can be replaced with great rapidity.

REVENUE MARINE.

SECRETARY FAIRCHILD has issued instructions to Capt. Healy, who is to command the revenue cutter Bear in Alaskan waters this season, to carry out instructions similar to those issued last year and previous years—to prevent depredations on the seal fisheries and the killing of young and female seals, and the importation of liquors and firearms into Alaska. The subject of claims asserted by this Government as to jurisdiction in Alaskan waters is still being negotiated.

The Coast Survey steamer Carlisle P. Patterson left San Francisco May 4 for Southeastern Alaska on surveying duties.

Lieut. John Wyckoff, who has been stationed on the Rev. steamer U. S. Grant for the past three years, has been detached on the reporting of his relief (Lieut. S. M. Cressly), and ordered to the Rev. steamer Dexter at Newport.

A board of revenue marine officers are in session at the Treasury Department, engaged in the examination of candidates for appointments as cadets in the service. The following applicants are being examined: Percy H. Brereton, Paterson, N. J.; M. E. Bowes, of the United States steamship Galena; F. G. Dodge, Fair Haven, Mass; Charles Morgan, of the receiving ship Dale; L. L. Robinson, Irving, Kan., and S. K. Smith, Babylon, L. I.

The following assignments of Revenue Marine officers were made this week: 2d Lieut. F. M. Dunwoody, from Corwin to Rush; 3d Lieut. H. B. West, from Rush to Corwin; 1st Asst. Engr. E. F. Hedden, from Walcott to Rush; 1st Asst. Engr. W. G. Marsilliot, from Corwin to Walcott; 1st Asst. Engr. C. W. Beckwith, from Stevens to Manhattan; 2d Lieut. John L. Davis, from Dallas to Bibb; 2d Asst. Engr. E. A. Jack, to the Fessenden; 1st Asst. Engr. D. McC. French, from Washington to Perry; 1st Asst. Engr. James Ogden, from the Manhattan to the Washington; 2d Asst. Engineer Alex. Bennett, from Gallatin to Woodbury.

SAM SMALL told his Minneapolis congregation that if they paid $4 to hear Bernhardt they would be damned. That must be so, for there are plenty of men in Kansas City who said they would be damned if they paid $4 to hear her. But they expressed a perfect willingness to pay $3.—Kansas City Times.

AN UNJUST REFLECTION.

I SEE it is proposed and the matter now being arranged by which each officer of the Army is to be assigned to some special paymaster from whom to draw his pay. And this, too, not for the convenience of the officer nor of the paymaster, but, solely it would seem, to prevent dishonesty on the part of said officers. Has it, indeed, come to such a pass, and is it not a serious reflection on our heretofore noble little band? Our pride in the Service has always been that we were honest and so considered governed solely by "esprit de corps," which was and should be more binding than law or orders. Admitting that some of late have overlooked this fact and have defrauded in this particular, is it not a good and cheap riddance on the part of the Government and service to weed out such, as has in every case been so found? The Navy mode of pay is cited as authority, but was it so arranged or proposed to prevent dishonesty? Far from it, as I understand, but solely for the convenience of the officer in drawing and assigning his pay when absent on sea duty or otherwise. I, for one, can but protest and regret that this restriction is thought necessary for the sole reason assigned. Do let us wait and find some better cause for such a change and let us hold on to the good we have and as always "let the penalty fit the crime." Many and lengthy arguments could be advanced in opposition to the change proposed and it is surprising that there should be such indifference on the part of officers when such reflections are made. May we ask your valuable aid in trying to suppress this unfair and ungenerous measure?

ONE OF MANY.

SUNDAY IN THE SERVICES.

To the Editor of the Army and Navy Journal:

As the Sunday question is again moving the Army, being a soldier and at the same time a conformist, I have asked myself if I had any right to be heard. I think I have.

It is doubtful if it ever may have been a question as to whether or not preacher's babies should be washed or soldiers be inspected for neatness on Sunday. Of course it is a funny way to view the matter of observance, and can be used to plow round the true question involved.

How ready we have become in these days of advanced religionists to smile at parsons' committees. And I don't know but we are right; for the main object of the new departure in clerical thought appears to be a dogma of sentimental latitudinarianism: the new law of Love: whatever is pleasant is right. Thank God that religion and the construction of it, as applied to practical life, do not lie entirely with the clergy, for I have heard from many of them quite as liberal views of what Sunday was made for, as from the liberal men of the Army.

As a subaltern, I belonged to a company where, after Sunday inspection, the drill was a show for all those who had dressed in the morning for the occasion, and especially for those who never dressed for any occasion. After men and horses had been torn through the dust, and sweat for two hours of a hot summer day, they were sent to the stables to grooming and the crowd dispersed, with thanks to the battery commander. A dollar's worth of entertainment, free. The men's dress uniforms were soiled and much injured, and their tempers very justly soured. They felt they had been "used" and abused.

When western posts were a-building, I have seen captains drill their companies for two hours after Sunday morning inspection, and when asked why, their answer was, It is the only time we see our men; they are all on extra duty during the week. The logic was convincing. Works of necessity occupied them during the week, soldiering on Sunday.

Does it add to the dignity of the soldier's profession to be reviewed, drilled, and paraded to the braying of horns and beat of drums, before the class of people that such things bring together of a Sunday? Does it prepare, through the cleanliness spoken of, either the soldier or the visitor for the best observance of the day?

At a Southern post of my ken, I was told that the crowd assembled by such demonstrations was a degradation to all, and an offence to the neighborhood. Yet a protest of the decent element was treated as an impertinent interference with the rights of the executive branch of the government. It is fairly presumable that the protest was not against washing the soldiers to fit them for divine service.

Where exists the human right to prevent me from working on any day I choose? Where has such a claim been fully discussed? If I am to be deprived of a day, I wish to be heard. Maybe every sixth, eighth, or ninth day would suit me and the majority better. Some peoples prefer the ten-day period. A week of eight days would have the advantage of being divisible into groups of two or of four days. Just think how inconvenient is seven to a soldier who may not be able to change his underclothing for cleanliness every day; he cannot equalize it in seven days—2x2x3; there is that dirty third day—3x4; there is that dirty fourth day. Why don't the Army Regulations change it? an eight-day period is much more rational and military. A duodecimal period would be still better, giving groups of two, of three, of four, and of six days.

What right has law to impose on me this seventh day? But if law does step in violently to force on me this day of rest and quiet, what consistency is there in its authorizing my neighbor to rob me of them by beer and music? I am at present stationed where the whole day of rest is occupied in keeping the honest hornyhanded sons of toil, their wives and their children from entering front yards and devastating the flowers and shrubbery: is occupied with the boisterous roars from beer gardens, the screams from soups, the poundings of the fatigued laborer of the week on the lever catapult, and the hurdygurdy of the carousal, with its three tunes. O how I wish it would climb up its golden stairs! Three bands, and such bands, are playing in hearing each its own tune, and we are in a place where no lady can travel in a street car, even if she wished to so break the Sabbath. The streets on Sunday night are filled with the guffaws and yells of lager and whiskey.

Again I ask where comes the right of law to subject me to this? If law has any right to establish a seventh day it must have the right to disestablish it, and it is to be hoped it will do so. Human regulation of the day has resulted in chaos. Is it not pitiful to see men trying to select what shall and what shall not be done on the Sabbath day? Is it not painful to see the puzzled officers trying to enforce special legislation?

Our new wise men in authority tell us that Christ came to teach a better view of the Sabbath; to cure the sick, to thresh and harvest corn, (did not he, when hungry, harvest and thresh and eat corn by the wayside?) and did not he declare himself Lord of the Sabbath, and did not he come to fulfil the law? If to fulfil the law breaks up Sabbath observance, the whole decalogue is likewise broken up.

No, my friends; there is no human authority to establish or destroy or define a Sabbath. No human wisdom can doctor up a Sabbath. Is not it pitiful to see our rulers afraid to be called hypocrites and canters, should they declare that there never was, nor never can be, any law governing the Sabbath day, but the law of God.

REMEMBER THE SABBATH DAY TO KEEP IT HOLY: Sacred to the Lord: His in work: His in thought: His in worship. Let this plain command, the highest of all law, the only source of authority, be the central pivot of law and life. Its common sense translation will not leave the clergyman's baby undight, nor the soldier uninspected; nor will it leave a hero unable to distinguish between trimming a sail and slushing a mast. It will insure the laboring man and the non-laborer a day of rest. It will enable the laborer to claim his other day of recreation. It will enhance the value of his daily toil beyond its present proportion to the days wrought. It may check the rate of mushroom and godless progress but it will throw conscience into business, and balance the claims of capital and labor.

No, my superiors; you will never rid yourselves of hypocrisy by calling the efforts of godly men "cant." We are all hypocrites in wishing to seem better than we are, but this hypocrisy is virtue compared with frank, shameless latitudinarianism for the sake of being called liberal.

Hold up the hands of your subordinates who may wish to keep the Lord's Day by the old, rather than by the new dispensation of beer and music.

JOHN HAMILTON.

MACHINERY OF THE U. S. S. CHARLESTON.

THE propelling machinery of the Charleston (Cruiser No. 2) is from the designs of Mr. F. C. Marshall of R. and W. Hawthorne and Co., of Newcastle-on-Tyne. The engines are almost exact duplicates of those of the Japanese cruisers Naniwa Kan and Takachiho Kan and of the Italian Etna class, and are similar to the engines of the Chilian cruiser Esmeralda and the Italian Giovanni Bausan. The boilers are duplicates of those of the above mentioned Japanese cruisers.

The propelling engines, consisting of two slightly inclined direct acting compound twin screw engines, will be placed in separate watertight compartments. The designed collective indicated horse power under forced draught is 7,500.

Each engine will have a high pressure and a low pressure cylinder, and their casings bolted together to form a steam connection. The main valves will be of the piston type, two for each cylinder. The cylinder casings will be of cast iron, with hard cast iron valve chest linings and high pressure cylinder linings. The high pressure cylinders and their covers will be steam jacketted; the low pressure cylinders will not be jacketted. The pistons will be of dished form of cast steel. Each piston will have a single cast iron packing ring; the weight of the piston being taken on this ring. The piston rods, one for each piston, will be of forged mild steel. The piston rod stuffing boxes will be fitted for the ordinary packing. The cross-heads will be of cast steel with cast iron boxes working on straight bar guides of forged steel. The connecting rods will be of wrought iron, forked at the cross-head end and fitted with adjustable brasses; the wrist pins being carried by the crossheads. The crank pin brasses will be fitted with white metal in dovetailed strips.

All the shafting will be made of mild steel. The line, thrust, and propeller shafts will be bored out to save weight and to detect imperfections. The crank pins will be bored out for the same reason, but the crank shaft journals will be left solid. The crank shaft of each pair of engines will be made in one piece, with cranks at right angles. The crank shaft bearings, three for each pair of engines, will be contained in an iron casting which will be connected to the cylinders by forged steel stays. The crank shaft brasses will be lined with white metal. The valve gear will be of the Marshall type. The reversing gear of each pair of engines will consist of a steam cylinder and a hydraulic controlling cylinder, with a connecting rod directly on the reversing quadrant. The cut-offs in the two cylinders will not be separately adjusted. A governor to prevent racing will be connected with the steam throttle valve. A starting, or passover, valve will be fitted on each low pressure cylinder.

The condenser for each pair of engines will be placed athwartship at the side of the low-pressure cylinder, and will be cylindrical in form, built up of sheet brass. All parts of the condensing surface will be rendered equally efficient by a system of baffling plates. The condensers will be fitted to be worked by jet injection when necessary. The circulating pumps, one for each condenser, will be of the centrifugal type with connections for pumping the bilges in case of a large leak.

There will be one air pump for each condenser, worked by a separate compound engine. All metal work about these pumps will be composition. The contractor will not be required to follow the design furnished for the air pumps, as it is defective in some parts, the Naniwa-Kan in her trial in December, 1885, having made a mean vacuum of only 22.85 inches. The engines which work each air pump will also work two bilge pumps. A feed water tank will be fitted in each engine compartment into which the air pumps will discharge.

The thrust bearings will be fitted with composition rings to take the ahead thrust; the backing thrust being taken on cast-iron.

All moving parts of the engines will have wiping oiling gear. Water service pipes will lead throughout the engine rooms with branches to all bearings.

The screw propellers will be made of manganese bronze, each with three blades of modified Griffith form with axially expanding pitch.

There will be six cylindrical steel boilers in two compartments, with two athwartship firerooms. Each boiler will have three furnaces, with tubes extending from a combustion chamber at the rear of the furnaces to the other end of the boiler. The furnaces will be plain cylinders, each in two lengths, joined by an Adamson ring.

The tubes will be of wrought iron. The stay tubes will be screwed into both tube sheets. The grates will have flat, wrought-iron shaking bars. There will be one fixed smoke pipe communicating with the uptakes of the boilers in both compartments.

The firerooms will be arranged to be closed air tight for forced draught; supplemental bulkheads being fitted to reduce the space kept under air pressure. Air will be supplied by four blowers; two in each fireroom. Each blower will be driven by a single direct-acting engine.

The steam and water gauges, feed pumps, feed pipes and check valves will be duplicated in each fireroom. All feed pipes will run above the floor plates in plain view.

The steam pipes will be so arranged that in case of accident to any part of them half-power may still be used. The stop valves and safety valves will have gear for working them from deck. Separators will be fitted in the main and auxiliary steam pipes.

The feed engines will be double inverted cylinder engines with shafts and fly wheels; each working two double acting pumps.

There will be an auxiliary boiler above the protective deck for working the distillers and auxiliary machinery. The auxiliary machinery will consist of a steam windlass, steam winch, hydraulic steering gear, a pair of turning engines, a bilge pump and a fire pump in engine rooms, and an ash hoist for each fireroom.

THE STATE TROOPS.

NEW YORK STATE CAMP.

G. O. No. 20, A. G. O., Albany, May 16, 1887, promulgates general regulations for the government of the Camp of Instruction, when occupied by troops. The camp is constituted a military post, and will be conducted in accordance with the rules provided for the government of military posts, and these regulations, from which we extract what follows:

Transportation for troops to the camp will be furnished, as far as practicable, in such manner that they will arrive at the camp not later than 3 o'clock, P. M., of the day ordered.

Commanding officers of regiments, battalions, batteries and separate companies, and officers specially detailed, if not travelling with troops, will at once, upon notice of detail for camp service, make requisition for proper transportation of men and baggage from their station to the Camp of Instruction. Transportation will be allowed for one servant for the officers of each company and the field and staff of a battalion, and for three servants for the field and staff of a regiment. Horses for field officers will be furnished by the post quartermaster, and transportation or forage will not be allowed for any other horses. On the journey to and from, and the march into camp, the senior officer will command the troops present, and before leaving their stations commanding officers will telegraph to the post commander the strength of their command, servants separately.

A ration will consist of early bread and coffee, breakfast, dinner and supper. Commanding officers of troops coming from distant stations, should see that their commands are properly provisioned for the journey. Rations will be allowed for the authorized number of servants.

The pay rolls, in triplicate, will be prepared before going into camp by entering on them the name of each officer and enlisted man of the organization. If practicable, the pay rolls should be signed, by the officers and enlisted men before coming in camp, but they must be signed by the first Sunday in camp. Pay will be allowed to officers and enlisted men present for the days on which the regiment or company arrives at, and departs from, the camp; and for such other days of the tour during which they are present, at least from guard mounting in the morning until after retreat or dress parade in the evening, provided their whole stay in camp does not consist simply in coming to camp on Saturday and spending Sunday there, or staying but one day, and returning on Friday to depart again on Saturday.

Commanding officers of regiments, battalions and companies are, and will be held, responsible for the correctness of returns and reports rendered by them.

The report book must show the condition of the company at the time the report is made, and the remarks are to explain all the alterations which may have occurred since making the last report. Within ten days after the close of the camp tour, commanding officers of regiments and battalions will make reports to the Adjt.-General of the general management of their command and the results obtained.

The State Service uniform will be worn as prescribed in the regulations; on drill, fatigue, and when not on actual duty, the fatigue coat, R. 835, may be worn. White helmets may be worn by regiments and battalions fully supplied with them.

The officers detailed as commanding officers of battalions are authorized, each, to select two competent officers of suitable rank, and five non-commissioned officers, to serve with them at the Camp of Instruction respectively as adjutant, quartermaster and commissary of subsistence, sergeant major, quartermaster sergeant, color bearer, provost sergeant and clerk. The names of officers and non-commissioned officers thus selected will as soon as possible be reported to the Adjt. General.

Persons not connected with the administration of the post, or not being members of the organizations in camp, will not be permitted in the camp after tattoo.

The sale of all spirituous liquors, wine, ale, or beer, and all huckster and auction sales within one mile of the camp are prohibited. No ale, beer, wines or spirituous liquors shall be used in camp, except upon the prescription of the post surgeon. Fire works, illuminations, and other out-of-door performances will not be permitted.

The 7th Regiment from June 18 to June 25, 1887.
The 12th Regiment from June 25 to July 2, 1887.
The 9th Regiment from July 2 to July 9, 1887.
The 47th Regiment from July 9 to July 16, 1887.
The 23d Regiment from July 16 to July 23, 1887.
The 71st Regiment from July 23 to July 30, 1887.
The 10th Battalion from July 23 to July 30, 1887.
The 5th Sep. Co. from July 2, to July 9, 1887.
The 6th Sep. Co. from July 2 to July 9, 1887.
The 11th Sep. Co. from July 2 to July 9, 1887.
The 17th Sep. Co. from June 25 to July 2, 1887.
The 19th Sep. Co. from July 9 to July 16, 1887.
The 20th Sep. Co. from July 9 to July 16, 1887.
The 35th Sep. Co. from June 25 to July 2, 1887.
The 30th Sep. Co. from July 2 to July 9, 1887.
The 41st Sep. Co. from July 2 to July 9, 1887.
The 6th Bat., as inf., from July 9 to July 16, 1887.

The 6th, 11th, 38th and 41st Separate Companies will form a provisional battalion, the first.

The 5th, 19th and 20th Separate Companies and the 6th Battery will form a provisional battalion, the second.

The 17th and 35th Separate Companies will be considered, during their tour of camp duty, as part of the 12th Regiment, Col. James H. Jones, Armory, 9th Avenue, 61st and 62d streets, New York city.

Assistant Surgeons of separate companies not detailed by name for duty at the Camp of Instruction, are excused from such duty.

The following officers are assigned to duty at the State Camp:

As Post Commander, Major-Gen. Josiah Porter, Adjt.-General, with such officer or officers as he may select as assistants.

As Quartermaster, Commissary of Subsistence, and Ordnance Officer, the Chief of Ordnance, assisted by such officer or officers as he may select.

As Post Adjutant, Col. Fred. Phisterer, A. A. A. Gen'l.

As commanding officer of provisional battalions: Of the 1st, Major Frank A. Jones, 11th Regt., New York city; of the 2d, Major Geo. A. Miller, 22d Regiment, New York city.

As Medical Officer of 1st Provisional Battalion, Assistant Surgeon Clarkson C. Schuyler, 6th Separate Company.

As Medical Officer of the 2d Provisional Battalion, Assistant Surgeon John P. Wilson, 19th Separate Company.

Regimental bands will be furnished with transportation and rations, and $500 will be paid for the service of a band during the tour of its regiment, by the Paymaster-General, on the pay roll of the field and staff, to the commanding officer of each regiment.

THE NATIONAL DRILL.

EVERYTHING is in readiness now for the opening of the National Encampment at Washington. It is to be known as Camp Washington, and will be under the command of that veteran soldier, General C. C. Augur. On his staff he has chosen representative soldiers from the States, among them being General James A. Carnahan, of Indiana; General H. H. Wright, of Iowa; General Johnston Jones, of North Carolina; Colonel P. Lacey Goddard, of Pennsylvania; Colonel Charles King, Captain, U. S. A., of Wisconsin; Colonel H. Kyd Douglas, of Maryland; Major W. T. Gurrin, of Michigan; Major Wm. H. Sheffield, of Alabama; Lieutenant Roger D. Williams, Adjutant of the 2d Regiment of Kentucky; Captain Sam Carnes, of the Chickasaws, and Capt. C. A. Sinclair, of the Branch Guards. Dr. David W. Yandell, of Louisville, has been chosen Medical Director, and Dr. Hamilton E. Leach, Surgeon of the Camp.

The first troops arrived this week, and all are expected to be in camp by Monday next. Some 3,000 tents will be pitched and floored and laid off in brigades, regimental camps and company streets. Central among them will be a great camp restaurant, with ample kitchens, storage and dining rooms for 4,000 persons. It is estimated that from 5,500 to 6,000 soldiers will attend this encampment, covering 31 States. Virginia brings a whole brigade; Ohio, Kentucky and North Carolina full regiments; Rhode Island and District of Columbia and others enter battalions, and there will be nearly 100 contestants for company prizes in infantry, artillery, zouave and cadets.

The drills for competition will take place in the ellipse of the lot just in rear of the President's grounds. This is now almost enclosed by a high fence and by grand stands for the accommodation of the public, occupying nearly one-half of the half mile around it. Experts say that this drill ground is the finest ever seen in this country, and upon it drills will daily be held from early morning until late dress parade of one or the other of the brigades in camp each evening. Like the camp ground, the drill ground enclosure will be supplied with restaurants, saloons and all conveniences for the public.

The camp exercises, commencing on May 23, will last one week, ending on Decoration Day, May 30. The interim will be filled by competition of the infantry, cavalry, zouaves and cadets in the morning hours, and each evening a grand dress parade will be held of one or the other of the brigades in camp.

Wednesday will be Governor's Day, when the Chief Magistrates of 19 States will surround the President on a grand stand, built in front of the White House, to which only the reviewing officers, judges of the courts and the Diplomatic Corps will be admitted. The entire army in camp pass in review. Sunday there will be religious services, with preaching by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn.

Decoration Day will be the closing ceremonial. In the forenoon the volunteers will parade as escort to the Grand Army en route to Arlington Cemetery. In the afternoon the prizes, consisting of flags, stands of colors, etc., gold silver and bronze medals, and over $26,000 in cash premiums will be presented by the President to the victorious commands. These medals are a unique work of art, beautifully designed and stamped.

There have been 79 entries for individual drill and 98 for rifle practice.

Managing Secretary De Leon announces the following as the list of organizations that have entered for the National Drill (the names printed in italics are those of companies not competing):

The Executive Committee have appointed one hundred men to serve as a reception committee during the week.

This has been a week of hard work, rush and excitement with the board of management. All arrangements, however, will be completed in good season, and everything now points to the elaborate and interesting programme being carried out to the very letter. The Army officers appointed to be the judges in the various competitions arrived in Washington the early part of the week and have been busy since arranging the programme of manœuvres. They held their first meeting at the Arlington on Wednesday, when they organized, with Col. H. M. Black, 23d Infantry, as president of the board. Their programme will not, of course, be published in advance. As each company enters the drill ground for competition it will learn from the judges for the first time the particular manœuvres it will be required to perform. The board consists of the following officers: Col. H. M. Black, 23d Inf.; Capt. E. C. Woodruff, 12th Inf.; Capt. J. T. Haskell, 23d Inf.; Capt. J. M. Lancaster, 3d Art.; 1st Lieut. Constantine Chase, 3d Art.; 1st Lieut. Fred. A. Smith, 12th Inf.; 1st Lieut. B. H. Randolph, 3d Art.; 1st Lieut. R. K. Evans, adjutant 12th Inf.; 1st Lieut. W. O. Clark, 12th Inf., and in connection with the rifle competition, 1st Lieut. S. E. Allen, 5th Art.

Twenty-second New York—Col. John T. Camp.

THE 22d, who go into camp on June 30, seem for the present season to have abandoned the project of crossing the river which divides the camp from Peekskill on pontoon bridges on account of certain obstacles which cannot be overcome in time to put the plan into execution. The matter is universally regretted in the regiment. On the other hand, the march from New York City to the camp ground may now be regarded as definitely settled, and it will certainly form a feature of great value in the camp tour of the regiment. The preparations, both theoretical and practical, will be most thorough. Colonel Camp proposes to have an address upon the subject of bivouacs and marches, and although the request has not been formally assented to, there is no doubt but that the lecture will be held July 9.

The only matter of interest at present is the appointment of two new staff officers. Commissary Joseph P. Jardine, the oldest member in the regiment, has, after 25 years' service, been placed on the supernumerary list with the rank of captain—a well deserved distinction—and in his place Col. Camp has appointed Quartermaster Sergeant Joseph M. Smith, a brother of the present adjutant. The position of I. R. P., which has been vacant for some time, since the resignation of Capt. Charles T. Smith, has been filled by the appointment of 2d Lieut. J. W. Finch, of Co. C. While we have no remarks to make on either of these appointments, it is a fact that the matter has created considerable comment in the regiment for various reasons. It appears to be well known that Commissary Sergeant Arthur Moore, who has held his present position for about three years, and who is a very competent man, was serving with the understanding that he should receive the appointment of commissary as soon as the place was vacated by Jardine, and the selection now of a man from another department has caused considerable surprise and disappointment.

In the rifle department Lieut. Harry A. Beneke has, ever since the position was vacant, performed the duties pertaining to it with marked ability and energy and satisfactorily to all, and in view of this fact the selection of another has also created much astonishment. This especially, because Lieut. Fitch is an officer with little experience, having come into the service as a civilian only two years ago. Of course, the regiment, which is generally harmonious in its management, accepts the state of affairs in proper spirit, but the judgment of the colonel in making these appointments is questioned in many quarters.

A movement to celebrate the coming 25th anniversary of the departure of the regiment to the War in conjunction with ex-members of the organization, has so far proved ineffective.

A plan to organize the non-commissioned officers into a society for mutual improvement in military matters, under the supervision of Lieut.-Col. W. J. Harding, promises to prove more successful.

CANADIANS MUST CELEBRATE AT HOME.

MONTREAL, QUE., May 17, 1887.

THE officers of the 66th Regiment some time ago requested leave from the Government to spend the Queen's birthday at High Gate Springs, Vt., and great was their astonishment yesterday when this was refused by the Militia Department. Two commanding officers of the Fifth District were asked their opinions regarding the decision of the Government and expressed satisfaction thereat. "Why, it would be most unwise," remarked the first, "to allow men wearing Her Majesty's uniform to go into the United States just now, in view of the strong anti-British feeling which has been engendered in certain American circles in connection with O'Brien's visit, and also over the fishery dispute. The slightest provocation might lead to blows, and you can easily imagine how compromising such a question might become. Again, the Government two years ago was compelled to refuse permission to the 69th Regiment, of New York, which was invited here by some of the Irish societies, and, if I remember rightly, intended making political capital out of the trip. The Government, I understand, take the position that it is a bad precedent to lay down, more especially in view of existing circumstances."

WISCONSIN.

I SEND you a copy of the Proceedings of the 6th Annual Convention of Officers of the Wisconsin National Guard, of which you gave some report at the time it was held, January 4 and 5, 1887. It contains two excellent addresses, one by 1st Lieut. Philip Reade, 3d Inf., I. of R. P. on General Terry's staff, on "Rifle Practice," and another on "Military Instruction of the National Guard," by 2d Lieut. Lyman W. V. Kennon, 6th Inf., A. D. C. to General Crook. In concluding his remarks, Lieut. Reade said:

During the competition of selected riflemen for places on the Division of Missouri team, last September, the number of hits made on the kneeling figure ran up as high as 23. This means that one skirmisher hit the kneeling figure of a man 23 times in a single run, under the conditions here stated. Assuming that an unwounded man had taken the place of the silhouette after each hit, that skirmisher disabled 23 men in a firing interval of two minutes and a half, traversing also 800 yards between the time he started and the time when he had fired his 40 rounds. The average number of shots fired at each halt varies. I have seen a soldier of the 20th Infantry make 10 hits in a 15 second interval, using the Springfield rifle. How many shots he fired—assuming that not all of his shots were hits—I do not know. During the Division competition at Fort Snelling, in 1885, Major-General Terry was one of a number of officers to "time," watch in hand, one of the competitors. The object was to see how many cartridges he could use in 30 seconds. The man exhausted 25. Weapon, Springfield rifle. Position, lying down. At Fort Leavenworth, last October, Lieut.-General Sheridan was a pleased, interested, astonished spectator; and, in presenting the medals to the successful competitors for places in the Army team, said that things were revolutionized; war would have to be relearned, and that he didn't know what the end would be if this thing of rifle instruction kept on. These comments were made after the conclusion of a skirmish run by the Army team—two officers and 10 enlisted men.

Lieutenant Kennon's excellent address concludes as follows:

It is common to hear remarks on the uselessness and even absurdity of certain forms common among soldiers. The military art as it exists to-day is eminently utilitarian; it is the development of ages of experience, and in all of its details, there is not one but has for its existence and continuance in use, a good and sufficient reason. In some cases the reason may not appear at first sight, but in every case it exists, and a fuller knowledge will make it manifest. War is too serious a business, and there is so much to learn in it, that no time should be wasted in learning useless forms. Military authorities have long recognized this, and as a consequence, the military art to-day is a good example of the survival of the fittest.

Now it is difficult for an American to be induced to govern his acts by any other light than that of his own reason, and it was one of the gravest faults of our volunteer troops, and one which greatly impaired their usefulness, at first particularly, that they were loath to do things the reasons for which were not apparent to them. The change from the status of thinking citizens of a free republic to that of soldiers, whose duty was to obey simply, was too sudden, and it was experience only that opened their eyes to the necessity of many things at which at first they rebelled, but whose utility eventually became manifest to them. The military service must, of necessity, be a despotism within itself, the all-pervading principle of which is that of obedience. Inferiors are required at all times "to obey strictly, with alacrity and good faith" the orders of their superiors. The soldier must do as he is told. "His not to reason why." It is only by an intelligent realization of this truth, on the part of the American citizen, that he may become a good soldier, when his country shall have need for his services.

Wisconsin is peculiarly indebted to the Regular Army for services rendered its militia organizations. Chas. King, as Colonel on the staff of the Governor, has rendered inestimable services, especially during the trying time of the socialist riots in Milwaukee. Through him Lieut. Reed and Lieut. Kennon have been brought into active co-operation and have done us excellent service. Gen. Terry has heartily approved of their labors in our behalf and they have received every encouragement from Governor Rusk, from the Adjt.-General of Wisconsin, and from the officers and men themselves.

On the subject of rifle practice Wisconsin is stirred up all along the line. Exhibition drills are less talked of here than competitive rifle matches. The State Legislature has lately appropriated for each company and troop the money to be spent in buying such things as are needed in gallery practice and in pointing, sighting, and aiming drill.

REARMING THE MILITIA.

THE action of the State Legislature in taking the first step towards the rearming of the New York State militia by proposing the organization of a commission to recommend a new rifle has roused a hearty amen from one end to the other of the Guard. The present weapon is not a favorite. It is not a good shooting arm, and if the very military order of having each man shoot with his own piece is insisted upon fully 90 per cent. of the men are doomed to certain failure in scoring. Now and then a good shooting rifle is met with. This is marked and passed along the line so that all may have an equal chance. While at the Springfield Armory the experts are now testing a new 40-calibre rifle on the United States Army pattern, burning eighty-five grains of powder and making capital score at 800 yards, the New York State militiamen are compelled to go on with an antiquated 50-calibre weapon, burning but seventy grains of powder and rushed off in such a careless, contract style that there are any number of imperfections about them. The commission, when it opens its work, will find it advisable to take the opinions of many men in the guard who have given time and attention to the use of the rifle as an arm of precision. Dolan, Robbins, Van Heusen, Murphy, Price, Chauncey Eagle, Bodine, Gildersleeve and Brown could each give valuable points—gained in a long experience in ball practice across the Creedmoor lawn. It would be well, too, for the commission to inquire whether it is at all necessary to compel an inventor to study Upton and frame his model of an arm so as to comply with the set of tactics and the school of the soldier which the old drill General formulated. The commission, if it is to be at the head of the present fashion in military effort, will insist upon having a small-bore magazine arm capable of being used as a single loader and of the hammerless design. There have been many new models brought out recently, many of them not yet out of the inventor's hands. Some seem to embody all the good points of the old arms and avoid all the objectionable features, while the state of the arms market is just now at such a point that the contract for the 20,000 stand needed can be made on terms very favorable to the State.

INSPECTION OF SEPARATE COMPANIES.

THE annual inspection and muster of the organizations named below, will take place as follows: 7th Sep. Co., Cohoes, Thursday, June 9, 2 P. M.; 12th Sep. Co., Troy, Friday, June 10, 2.30 P. M.; 21st Sep. Co., Troy, Monday, June 13, 2.30 P. M.; 6th Sep. Co., Troy, Tuesday, June 14, 2.30 P. M.; 32d Sep. Co., Hoosick Falls, Wednesday, June 15, 3 P. M.; 20d

Sep. Co., Hudson, Thursday, June 16, 3.30 P. M.: 16th Sep. Co., Catskill, Friday, June 17, 2.30 P. M.; 14th Sep. Co., Kingston, Monday, June 20, 3 P. M.; 10th Sep. Co., Newburgh, Tuesday, June 21, 2.30 P. M.; 4th Sep. Co., Yonkers, Wednesday, June 22, 3 P. M.; 15th Sep. Co., Poughkeepsie, Thursday, June 23, 2.30 P. M.

Eighth New York.—Col. Geo. D. Scott.

THE Eighth is now well-settled in its new quarters on Broadway and 35th street. Though but little gain in space the men begin to realize the vast advantages in location, condition of company rooms and general surroundings which their new quarters, although only a makeshift, possess over the rookery recently vacated. This interest is plainly shown by the increased attendance at company drills, which are the only exercises which can be held in this armory. Recruiting, except in the district in the vicinity of the projected new armory, cannot be called very brisk, but this is a matter which will naturally regulate itself in time, since a much more important point than mere numerical strength has been settled, and this is the possession of an active, intelligent corps of company officers of good standing. Numerous changes have taken place in the Eighth within a year or so, much of the old undesirable element among the officers has been weeded out, and those who have taken their places belong to a class which raise the regiment far above many of its sister organizations with most vital effect. When the men come in there will be no lack of competent, active instructors.

AN INTERNATIONAL COMPLICATION.

THE Gate City Guards, of Atlanta, some six months ago conceived the idea of dazzling the effete monarchies of Europe by parading through the streets of their cities in arms carrying, it is to be presumed, the glorious Stars and Stripes. It was a little "fresh" perhaps, but amiable. Besides the precedent, no practical injury to foreigners could result from the tramping of the handsome Guards over the cobblestones of European capitals with unloaded muskets. The spectacle would have done great good to the oppressed of those climes, and the exercise would have benefited the muscles of the Guards, not to speak of the stimulus given to the shoe trade of two continents. Our minister at the Court of St. James had added to his other duties the task of getting the British Government's assent to the programme. Mr. Phelps, in reply to the representations of our State Department on the subject, made the chilly and irrelevant response that there was no precedent for the British Government's permitting armed bodies of foreign troops to march through the empire. There was a precedent against it, for in 1884 Capt. Mike Whelan, of Detroit, had sought the same permission and had been refused. This was an exasperating attitude for our minister to take, inasmuch as he was asked and expected to get the required permission, and if there was no precedent for getting it, to make one. In the six months that have since elapsed Minister Phelps has been exercising his finest diplomatic skill to enable Capt. Burke and his gallant Guards to include the United Kingdom in their tour. With what success he labored is shown by his letter of April 27, in which he "regrets his inability" to obtain the desired permission. The humiliation of failure was intensified, no doubt, when he penned his cablegram of May 12. On May 11 Capt. Burke cabled: "Is the refusal of the English Government to the Gate City Guards final?" On the following day Minister Phelps cabled, "It is." So all is over, and the Guards will have to leave the United Kingdom severely out of its tour. "This," says Capt. Burke, "is an insult to every volunteer soldier in the United States." It undoubtedly is, if they all wish to carry their muskets when they travel, but those who have any better business than that of making a raree show of themselves will not be disturbed by the decision.

VETERANS AT SARATOGA.

THE Society of the Army of the Potomac will hold its annual meeting at Saratoga Springs on June 21. Governor Hill, as Commander-in-Chief of the National Guard, has been requested to detail two regiments of the militia which had served during the war in the Army of the Potomac to take part in the celebration, and the Legislature has appropriated $7,500 to meet the expenses. Adjutant-General Josiah Porter will detail the 69th Regiment, of New York, and the 14th Regiment, of Brooklyn. The amount appropriated will be divided between the two commands.

PHILADELPHIA ARMORIES.

THE article in the JOURNAL of last week (credited to the Philadelphia Item), which calls attention to the unsafe buildings in which thousands of rounds of ammunition are kept, is too true to be denied by either citizen or soldier, and only calls to mind that not only is the ammunition of the 1st Brigade, N. G. of Pa., at the mercy of a mob that might desire to get control of it, but the muskets and accoutrements of an entire company, the Gray Invincibles, one of the best companies in the Guard, are subject to the control of the Knights of Labor. This extract from the Philadelphia Sentinel will show: "A very few people outside of the members of Invincibles, are aware of the position this company would be in, in the event of a labor riot. Their armory is on the 5th floor of the large building, No. 505 Chestnut street, the 3d and 4th floors are occupied by more than one hundred assemblies of the Knights of Labor, having a membership of over ten thousand members. Consequently, in the event of a labor riot it would be at the option of these men, whether or not, the Gray Invincibles should fulfil their obligations to the State, in aiding the remainder of the State militia in preserving the peace of this great commonwealth. The Knights of Labor are well aware of the position in which they hold the Invincibles. In the event of an outbreak of workmen they could take possession of every fighting instrument in the Invincibles quarters, long before the Captain could assemble his men."

MILITIA ITEMS.

Last week, in announcing the death of Mr. James McKenney, the name was given as James H. McKenney. The latter is the son and is the head of the firm of James H. McKenney and Co., of which his father, Mr. James McKenney, was a member and manager—the present firm having succeeded that of Baker and McKenney some years ago.

The 2d Battery, N. Y., have decided to have an excursion to Oscawana Island, near Peekskill, on Thursday, June 9. The entertainments of this battery, and particularly the excursions, have always been very popular and successful, and extra exertions are being made to make this year's affair more of a success than has been the case at any previous occasion. The steamer Sirius, of the Iron Pier Line, one of the fastest and safest steamers in the harbor, the ample and superior accommodations of which are well known, will carry the excursion.

The 69th N. Y. is under orders for assembly at the armory on Monday evening, May 23, for presentation of marksman's badges.

Brig.-Gen. Fitzgerald, with a number of his staff, were at Creedmoor on Monday, May 16, and all qualified except Maj. C. H. Eagle, who did not fire on account of other duties which devolved upon him as inspector of rifle practice of the brigade, in connection with a battalion of the 7th, who were firing at the same time.

Private Howard L. Waldo was elected Sergeant in Co. A, 23d Regt., Friday, May 13. He is a son of Howard Waldo, one of the veterans of the 7th N. Y.

The bill appropriating $7,000 for the expenses of a regiment to be designated by the Governor to act as escort to the Army of the Potomac at its Saratoga meeting passed the N. Y. State Senate on Thursday. The 7th, 69th, or 14th Regiment is to be selected.

The 1st Battery, Capt. L. Wendel, went to Lion Park, 110th and 9th avenue, N. Y., on Wednesday, May 18, for target practice with their new carbines.

The annual excursion of the 2d Battery, N. Y., Capt. F. P. Earle, will take place on June 9. The fine iron steamboat Sirius has been chartered and will take the members of the battery and their friends up the Hudson River to Oscawana Island. Athletic games will be held and a good time generally will be had. The battery expects to make a fine show in the parade on Decoration Day.

Co. H, 69th Regiment, N. Y., gave a reception at their armory on May 12, and entertained as guests Co. A, 1st New Jersey, of Newark. A very enjoyable evening was spent. A large number of people were present, including Mayor Hains, of Newark.

The 69th N. Y. will not go to Boston, as was anticipated. It is now thought the regiment may attend the G. A. R. encampment at Saratoga, N. Y., where they have been specially invited.

The 8th Regiment, N. Y., are rapidly making their rooms look homelike in their new quarters, 36th street and Broadway, and getting to rights. They are very much pleased with the change.

The bill making the Veteran Corps of the 71st N. Y. an incorporated body has passed the Assembly and Senate, and been vetoed by the Governor.

The companies of the 9th Regiment, N. Y., have been engaged during the past week in inspection and guard mounting, as the regiment goes to camp on July 2. The new belts and equipments have been issued to the different companies.

Mr. Bush's bill, providing that all members of the National Guard who shall be wounded or disabled while in the discharge of duty, or who shall have been so injured within the past ten years, shall receive a pension equal in amount to that which persons under similar circumstances receive from the United States, was passed by the New York Assembly, May 14. In cases of fatal injury or death the widow or minor children of such member shall receive such pension, to date from the passage of this act, and hereafter at the time of receiving the injuries on account of which such reward is allowed.

The 47th N. Y., excepting band and drum corps, is ordered to assemble at the armory, in fatigue uniform, for drill and instruction as follows: Cos. B and F, May 23 and 31, June 6 and 13; E and I, May 24, June 1, 7 and 14; A and G, May 26, June 2, 9 and 16; D and K, May 27, June 3, 10 and 17. Assembly on each occasion at 8 o'clock, P. M. These drills will be devoted exclusively to instruction in the ceremony of guard mounting, particular attention being given to instruction of sentinels.

Adjt.-Gen. Howard states that the roster of the active militia in Maryland April 1, embraces 173 commissioned officers and 1,913 enlisted men. On the general staff are 28 officers. There are 146 line officers, 304 non-commissioned officers, 104 musicians and 1,505 privates.

PENNSYLVANIA NATIONAL GUARD.

THERE will be due to the State of Pennsylvania each year under recent act of Congress $28,000. This year the Adjt.-General purposes using a part of it in re-arming the Guard with the 45 calibre Springfield and taking the balance in tents or camp equipage. As far as they go, the new arms will be allotted to regiments commanded by the senior colonels and perhaps an independent company. It is supposed they will be ready for delivery early in August.

Companies F, G, and H of the 2d Regiment paraded in fair strength on Friday evening, May 6, for inspection by Major Wetherill. The men were in heavy marching order, were generally steady, and made a good appearance.

Pieces were badly handled, however, in tossing them up for inspection, and especially in resuming the order. In the latter but few steadied the piece with the left hand. At the close of the inspection knapsacks were removed and the battalion equalized into four companies of twelve front for battalion drill. The manual was irregular and without snap, except that the order came with a bang. File closers and guides paid but little attention to par. 189. Marching in column of fours fair; in column of companies, wheels almost on a fixed pivot, as they must always be in attempting to execute two wheels at each end of the narrow drill hall of the regiment. On the left, to the left, on the right, etc., from column of fours were very fairly carried out. Right of companies rear into column was well done. In forming double column there was a slight hitch and a blunder in changing direction by the left flank. Taking all in all there were not many bad errors in the drill, yet it was not a good one: it was not snappy.

On Tuesday evening, May 10, Companies A, B, E, and K, reported in heavy marching order, the inspection of arms, equipments, and general appearance being made as usual by Major Wetherill, Inspector 1st Brigade. Col. Hepburn, Inspector-General, improperly, as he was not in uniform, accompanied him both during the inspection of general appearance and of arms. Pieces were handled by the men no better than on the Friday evening previous. In resuming the order, after inspection, every man seemed to have a style of his own and generally not anywhere near the tactical one.

Knapsacks being removed, the battalion was put through a number of movements, beginning with the manual in open ranks. The manual was somewhat irregular, yet better than that in the battalion drilled on Friday evening. The marching movements began with the usual column of fours: step at first irregular, but afterwards steadied, until the step was even, but distance was taken only upon the command being put to marking time. Column of fours break from the right to march to the left, the second company lost distances. March in column of companies as usual only fair, wheels being on a fixed pivot for want of space. A continued wheel at the end of the room might make an improvement. Double column fours left and right was well executed; but in deployment fours right and left the guide of the right centre company only came out after being called by the adjutant. On the left, to the right, etc., into close column were fairly executed, except in one or two cases of companies moving too far to the left or right, as the case might be. Right of companies and left of companies rear into column were both well executed, especially considering that they are so frequently poorly done. Centre forward, fours left and right, nicely carried out; but forming line to the left, right companies on left into line, came to grief by the third company moving forward after fours left. Ployments into close column right and left in front were fairly executed: in the deployments both the right and left centre companies were more or less tardy in getting into line, while the right centre company in our deployment went almost to pieces. In battalion in line, there is no command continue the march, fours right (or left) about, and therefore it should not have been given. Notwithstanding the errors, the drill was better than the first one of the series.

Cos. C, D, and I were drilled on Wednesday evening, under command of Major Porter.

A correspondent in last week's JOURNAL criticised Major Wetherill's method of inspecting the pieces of the 1st Regiment. His point was not well taken, and the major properly continued the same method in the 2d Regiment.

Companies C, D, and I, 2d Regt., inspected on Wednesday evening, in appearance equalled either of the previous companies. The most noticeable feature of the inspection was the awkwardness of the men in handling their pieces. At the close of the inspection knapsacks, etc., were removed and the battalion equalized into three companies of twelve front and one of eight front. Two of the companies were under command of captains, the others under command of lieutenants. The formation was prompt and without error, except that colors saluted.

Major Porter began the drill with a wheel into column, well executed. Marching in column poor, the drill room being so small that, as usual, it was nearly all the time a change of direction and those on a fixed pivot. The drill throughout was the poorest of the season, the companies, with one exception, Company D, being handled miserably. Centre forward, fours left and right, the centre companies formed double column and the fourth company followed or tried to follow suit, but finally came in correctly. A second attempt met almost the same fate; the left centre company again moving into position of double column. The deployment to the front was not much better. The formation of double column was afterwards executed fairly, but followed by a poor deployment. Right of companies rear into column broke them up badly. On the left, etc., was but little better. Ployments into close column, right or left in front, were generally fair, but in deploying the second and third, and in one or two instances the fourth company were well mixed.

The mistakes were due not to misunderstanding the orders, but solely to the ignorance of three of the company commanders. When they could follow the right company they generally managed to come out correctly, but at other times they were all at sea.

On Monday evening, May 16, the 1st Regiment paraded for the concluding inspection and was exercised in the skirmish drill and in the ceremony of guard mounting and dress parade.

The calls were first beaten for guard mounting, everything went off in good shape until the sergeant major began the work of verifying the details; he accomplished this after a time, but a very long time, and in a very bungling manner The sergeant major having reported, the officers of the guard marched on incorrectly one from one flank, the other from the other. Officers, etc., to the front and centre was poor and the work of the adjutant which followed could have been much improved. The handling of the pieces during the inspection by both officers and men was very awkward, to say the least. The balance of the ceremony in the main was well executed.

The skirmish drill followed, Co. E leading off with a very good drill room exhibition of the several movements. Co. B followed with an excellent drill under Lieut. Ewing, giving the commands by the bugle. Cos. A and D were also drilled by bugle, but a good many errors were made and they would probably have appeared to better advantage if commands had been given in the ordinary way. The firing of Co. D, however, was excellent. All in all the drill of Co. G was equally as good, if not better, than that of any other company. Of course, there were a good many errors, but not many really bad ones. Marching to the rear, Co. C in assembling on right skirmished incorrectly, executed it on the original left skirmisher. This was one of the most noticeable errors, and the captain of Co. H remained during the drill in front of his company.

The skirmish drill being concluded, line was formed promptly and correctly, except that colors saluted. The regiment was given a turn once or twice around the room, as it almost appeared at first for review, though none of the details were carried out. Double column, fours left and right, was formed, and captains given charge of their companies, followed by a re-formation for dress parade. It could hardly have been better; with exception of a man in Co. F, who raised his hand to his face, the men were as steady as rocks. The manual was the best seen during these inspections.

This ended the inspection of the 1st Regiment and, perhaps, the work of Col. Wiedersheim as its commanding officer. At a meeting of the board, which took place after the drill, he, much to their regret, announced that it would be impossible for him to remain longer in command. Losing him the regiment loses one of the best commanders it has ever had. He has been a hard worker and an efficient one. His place will be difficult to fill.

ILLINOIS NATIONAL GUARD.

THE new armory of the 2d Infantry, Chicago, is a handsome and expensive structure, but it presents this anomalous condition—inexcusable to the eye of the man who is a believer in systematic instruction in rifle practice: The drill room is 220 x 80 feet; the shooting gallery less than six feet wide, without smoke shafts, wholly without natural light—is stuck down under the gallery; is accessible only by a trap door and a steep ladder. Leave out of consideration the absence of ventilation, of sunlight; omit, also, the considerations of the stifling, blinding, sulphurous atmosphere after a score of five shots have been fired; just calculate how long it will take one man to shoot, as prescribed—and then calculate the time required to practice the entire regiment!

Yet this is a crack armory and the members of the organization are just as good shots, I suppose, as the average uninstructed militiamen.

The I. N. G. is too much split to care very much about the proposed new site as recommended by Gen. Terry. It is made up of Northern Illinois, 1st Brigade, and Southern Illinois, 2d Brigade. The 2d Brigade and the Governor of the State and Adjt.-Gen. Vance want Springfield first, last and every time, or no place for the annual encampments. The 1st and 2d Regiments of Infantry belong in Chicago, and want a $30,000 lot of land to be bought within 30 miles of there, and so cut loose from Springfield altogether.

NEW JERSEY.

The annual inspection and muster of the 4th N. J. Regiment will be made at the Oakland Rink on Thursday, May 26, at 9 o'clock P. M. Admission (except for officers and members of the regiment) will be by ticket only, and the tickets will be distributed by the officers of the regiment. Commandants of companies and 1st sergeants thereof are ordered to be at their respective armories, in fatigue uniform, for the inspection of quarters and company books and papers, as follows: Co. B, on Friday, May 27, at 8 o'clock; Cos. C, E, and F, on Wednesday, June 8, at 7 o'clock; Co. A, on Wednesday, June 8, at 8 o'clock; Co. D, on Wednesday, June 8, at 9 o'clock.

G. O. No. 6, April 29, abolishes the existing Manual for Gun Squads and adopts a Manual for Gun Detachments to be drilled in the use and practice of howitzers or other similar guns, compiled by 1st Lieut. Julius C. Shailer, commanding 3d Regt., N. G., and adopted by the State Military Board.

By an act approved April 12, 1887, the National Guard of the State of New Jersey is organized into a division of two brigades, and not more than sixty companies of infantry, two Gatling gun companies, and one sea coast artillery company. Each county is to be entitled to at least one company. The Acts of March 12, 1880, and April 22, 1884, authorizing cities of the first and second class to organize battalions, are repealed. Also the Act of April 5, 1886, authorizing sea coast cities to organize companies of artillery.

1st Regiment—1st Lieut. George Handley, B, to be Captain; Private Jeremiah G. Connolly, B, to be 1st Lieutenant; Capt. George Schenck, F, to be Captain Co. C; Private John W. Bird, C, to be 2d Lieutenant.

2d Regiment—Capt. Ramon M. Cook, C, to be Major; William E. Arrowsmith to be Captain Co. D.

3d Regiment—2d Lieut. John C. Lucas, E, to be 1st Lieutenant; Private Charles Steinfels, E, to be 2d Lieutenant.

4th Regiment—1st Lieut. John Graham, C, to be Captain.

5th Regiment—Hospital Steward William S. Disbrow, to be Assistant Surgeon with the rank of 1st Lieutenant; 1st Sergt. Thomas R. Mills, D, to be 2d Lieutenant; Sergt. Francis B. Reilly, E, to be Captain Co. F.

6th Regiment—Capt. George A. Cheever, K, to be Lieutenant-Colonel; 1st Sergt. Ulysses G. Lee, D, to be 2d Lieutenant; Private Francis A. Hurrell, K, to be 2d Lieutenant.

7th Regiment—2d Lieut. Winfield S. Gale, F, to be 1st Lieutenant; 1st Sergt. Micajah E. Matlack, F, to be 2d Lieutenant.

Sea Coast Artillery—Private James Brady, A, to be Captain; Private Joseph Whelan, A, to be 1st Lieutenant; Private Harry Brady, A, to be 2d Lieutenant.

VERMONT NATIONAL GUARD.

THE annual June drill and inspection of the several organizations of the National Guard of Vermont, will be held as follows: 1st Regiment—Co. A, Rutland, June 16; Co. B, St. Albans, June 9; Co. C, Brandon, June 14; Co. D, St. Johnsbury, June 11; Co. E, Barre, June 10; Co. F, Northfield, June 3; Co. G, Bradford, June 4; Co. H, Montpelier, June 10; Co. I, Brattleboro, June 18; Co. K, Bennington, June 15; First Sep. Co., Newport, June 7; Light Battery, Brattleboro, June 18; and Section Battery, Northfield, June 3.

MASSACHUSETTS MILITIA.

The Battalion drill of the 1st Massachusetts Infantry, which was to take place in Fall River, May 17, has been postponed until the fall, as the Cunningham Rifles, of Brockton, could not attend, it being so near the time of the annual encampment at South Framingham, June 7-11.

The veteran corps of the 22d Regiment, N. Y., will have a dinner at Delmonico's, on May 28, as a celebration of the 25th anniversary of the regiment's departure for the war. The active members of the regiment will also participate. The veterans have also decided to visit Boston on June 16 and 17. They will be the guests of the National Veteran Militia Association and the Charlestown Cadets. They will have a parade in Boston, a dinner in Charlestown, a grand ball in the evening, and an ocean sail and visit to Provincetown.

It is proposed to have long range rifle shooting during the encampments of the Massachusetts militia at South Framingham, Mass., this year.

Forty members of the 1st Infantry, M. V. M., now wear the handsome badge of the emergency corps. Hereafter all members of the Massachusetts militia who secure diplomas from the Massachusetts Hygiene and Emergency Society will be allowed to wear a silver badge on their uniforms.

CALIFORNIA NATIONAL GUARD.

THE Alta, referring to the action of the Board on Uniform, says: "The Board certainly made a wise choice when it decided to adopt the McKeever belt and cartridge box instead of the woven one. The former is not only the handsomest, but gives a proper military aspect to the wearer, while the woven one would insure a cowboy appearance to the men if they were filled with cartridges. There is another good reason why the woven belt should have been discarded. Many of the men would not have known for what purpose the little receptacles about the belt were intended and might have turned out on parade some day with their belts filled with cigars, when by the McKeever box they can snugly hide them away."

RHODE ISLAND.

BRIG.-GEN. E. H. RHODES and several of the line officers met at Adjt.-Gen. Dyer's office recently for the purpose of considering the reorganization of the Brigade. The proposed plan is the consolidation of the four battalions of infantry into two regiments. The result will be the abolition of two battalion headquarters and a reduction of officers certainly to the extent of sixteen. It is intended to recommend prompt action that the troops may be able to go into camp this summer under the new régime.

MISSOURI.

THE official order disbanding the Missouri militia arrived at St. Louis, May 17. The 1st, 2d, 3d, 5th, and 7th Regiments are now disbanded, and the only organization left in St. Louis is a light cavalry company.

TEXAS.

THE State military encampment will be held at Houston from June 21 to June 25. At least twenty volunteer companies and three companies of regulars will be present to assist in making the affair a success.

THE work of improving the harbor of Calais is now nearly complete, and the improvements are fully described in the London Times of May 4.

The work is to be done on the building bounded by Whitehall, Pearl, Moore and Water sts. Separate proposals are required for each of the specifications. Blank forms of proposals, contracts, &c., can be had at this office. Bids must be made in strict conformity with the terms of the plans and specifications, and must be accompanied by a guarantee bond having justification for 20 per cent. of the amount of the proposal, and a bond with a penalty of 10 per cent. will be required upon execution of the contract. The Government reserves the right to reject any or all proposals. Envelopes containing proposals should be addressed to the undersigned and marked proposals for "Steam Heating," &c., as the case may be. HENRY C. HODGES.

J. A. G. asks: Which of our naval vessels are fitted up with the Edison electric light? ANS.—The Trenton, Dolphin, Chicago, and New Hampshire. The Omaha has the Sawyer, the Boston the Brush, and the Atlanta the Weston system.

Constant Reader.—If you will call on Pillsbury, printer and stationer, 680 Sixth avenue, and get a copy of the "Report of the Executive Committee of the Association of Medical Officers, 1st Brigade, N. G. S. N. Y.," you will find in it information on the point you mention.

Old Soldier asks: How do I stand on the list for appointment as Post Q. M. Sergeant, having passed the required examination? ANS.—No list is kept, and until a vacancy occurs in the two appointments from your regiment no information can be given as to your standing.

An Old Soldier asks the date and place of death of General W. G. Peck and General Kenner Garrard. ANS.—We cannot give the date and place of Prof. Peck's death as he is still alive and performing his duties as Professor of Mathematics in Columbia College. Probably you refer to Gen. John J. Peck, who died at Syracuse, April 21, 1878. Kenner Garrard died May 15, 1879, at Cincinnati, O.

F. B. asks: Ceremonies, page 33, Official Memoranda of Divisions, on points of tactics of Nov. 9, 1885 says: "The company being at a carry, the officer, if he desires to inspect simply acknowledges the salute, and then says: Prepare your company for inspection, or, for inspection and muster. The captain then faces about, causes the company to carry arms." How can the company commander bring his company to a carry arms, when the company was at a carry arms before the inspector gave his orders? ANS.—There is an error in the decision referred to, which will probably be corrected at an early date.

C. H. F. asks: 1. Before dismissing the company, does the 1st sergeant, in saluting the captain, stand on the right of the front rank? ANS.—Your question is very indefinite. If you mean whether the 1st sergeant when on the right of the company in dismissing it remains in his place or steps to the front, the Lieut. General Commanding the Army has decided that he should step two paces to the front, face to the left and give the command for dismissal.

2. In all successive formations and in the formation of the battalion, do the markers, as soon as posted, come to present arms? ANS.—They do not "present" arms. If carrying flags they hold them in front and centre of the body.

G. B. asks: Where is the quartermaster sergeant of the regiment in column of fours, with the band at the head of the column? Is he on the right of the first four of the band according to Upton's Tactics—late decisions not to be taken? ANS.—The quartermaster sergeant has no connection with the band except for manœuvring, when he conforms to the movements of the battalion with the band, on the right of the front rank of the latter. This, however, is practically rendered a dead letter by the clause on page 155 of the Tactics, which says that he may be excused from drill except in preparing for ceremonies, and he generally is so excused. During ceremonies the position of the N. C. staff is well defined in the Tactics, while during manœuvres the band, if taken out, is never at the head of the column. The only occasion when it is placed in this position is on the march or on review. Tactics do not define a position for the quartermaster sergeant on the march, because Regulations, par. 1249, require the quartermaster to be with his train, and here, naturally, is also the position of the quartermaster sergeant. Gen. Sheridan made his decision (which you have to take), fixing the position of the staff, etc., on street parades as for review, because generally there is no room on such occasions for them to march in their tactical positions. On an ordinary march in column of fours without supply train, etc., and plenty of room, the quartermaster sergeant would simply face with the battalion and march on its flank opposite the left centre company, irrespective of band.

Private asks: In drilling by the numbers, in fire lying down, after the command cease firing, company rise, is it not proper for the company to rise, come to the carry; (two) drop the left hand to the side? ANS.—The firing lying down is not divided into numbers. See par. 111, Tactics.

Entre Nous asks: 1. When a company on dress parade is commanded by a sergeant, should he carry a musket or a sword, or should he or the sergeant next in rank go to the front and centre and report? ANS.—He should carry a musket and should go to the front and perform all the duties of 1st sergeant. This seems proper under par. 811 of the Tactics.

2. When the colonel and adjutant are the only officers on dress parade, what should the adjutant do after he gives the command parade is dismissed? ANS.—Such a contingency is not provided for. The best way would be to go through the ceremony as laid down, and let the adjutant march up to the commanding officer by himself. This would give the sergeants in command of companies the proper moment when to march off their companies.

3. When a sergeant is acting adjutant at dress parade or dress guard mounting, should the ceremonies be the same as though he were a commissioned officer? ANS.—This is another matter not provided for. A non-commissioned officer should not be detailed for such a duty so long as a commissioned officer is available. Before taking a measure of this kind it would be better to direct one of the officers of the day to mount the guard. However, if a non-com. officer should act as adjutant, the ceremony should be conducted fully according to the rules, but the non-com. officer should not be allowed to take position to which his rank in the service does not entitle him. The principle laid down in par. 811 governs here.

Pennsylvania asks the correct way of receiving and returning the colors, and whether the colonel uncovers when delivering and receiving back the colors. ANS.—After the color guard is inspected by the color sergeant it is marched to headquarters. After halting the guard the color sergeant leaves the ranks, and the guard is brought to an order by the senior corporal and stands at attention until the approach of the colors and the senior corporal orders "carry arms." The guard then presents arms at the command of the color sergeant, who takes place in the ranks, brings the guard to carry arms and marches them to the color company. The color sergeant upon leaving the ranks presents himself before the commander, salutes, and upon receiving the colors again salutes. When returning the colors he salutes, delivers them to the commanding officer, and again salutes. The places of the color bearers upon leaving the ranks are habitually filled by corporals No. 2 and 3 of the rear rank, but in the reception and return of the colors the rear rank men retain their places. After taking their places on the left of the color company, the color sergeant and color guard are under the command of the captain of the color company. After drill or parade when the captain turns the company over to the 1st sergeant the color sergeant marches the color guard to headquarters, where, after halting, the guard presents arms at command of the color sergeant, and after he leaves the ranks with the colors the guard is brought to "carry arms" and dismissed by the senior corporal. In going and returning with the colors the guard marches by fours or twos, as circumstances permit. It is customary for the colonel to lift his hat after delivering and before receiving the colors.

A NUMBER of ordinary shovels issued to an English regiment were recently broken while being used by the troops. Opinions differ materially as to whether the usage to which these shovels were subject was fair or otherwise. They have been returned into store, and the Inspector-General of Fortifications will assist in thoroughly investigating them.

THE youthful Sultan of the Sooloo Islands, not long ago, kept an English post captain waiting an hour for an interview, the reason being that five or six of his wives were dressing him up in his best clothes, and that neither singly nor combined were they able to drag on the royal feet a pair of silk stockings recently imported from Europe!

THE General-in-Command at Massowah has proclaimed a blockade of the African coast extending from the Bay of Hamfila on the south to the point opposite the Difnen Islands on the north, between which places all trade or communication with the Abyssinians is prohibited. The Italians have now a larger force at and around Massowah than the British have in Egypt.

Proposals for Purchase of Vessels

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, April 25, 1887.

IN accordance with the provisions of the fifth section of an act of Congress, approved March 3, 1883 (Statutes at Large, vol. 22, p. 599), sealed proposals will be received at the Navy Department until noon on Saturday, July 30, 1887, at which time and place they will be opened for the purchase of the following-named vessels, which have been stricken from the Navy Register, viz:

Tennessee, appraised at $35,000, Powhatan at $17,000, and Ticonderoga at $15,000, at the Navy Yard, Brooklyn, New York; Shenandoah at $12,000, Lackawanna at $12,000, Wachusett at $10,000, and Cyane at $3,000, at the Navy Yard, Mare Island, California.

The vessels will be sold, for cash, to the person or persons, or corporation or corporations offering the highest prices therefor above the appraised value thereof. Each bid or proposal must be accompanied by a deposit of cash (or satisfactory certified check, payable to the order of the Secretary of the Navy) of not less than 20 per cent. of the amount of the offer or proposal, and also a bond with a penal sum equal to one-half the amount of the offer, with two or more sureties, whose ability is certified to by a U. S. Judge, District Attorney, Postmaster, or Collector of Internal Revenue, in the district in which the sureties reside, conditioned for the payment of the remaining 80 per cent. of the amount of such offer or proposal within thirty days from the date of its acceptance. In case default is made in the payment of the remaining 80 per cent., or any part thereof, within that time, said cash deposit of 20 per cent. shall be considered as forfeited to the Government, and shall be applied as directed in the act of March 3, 1883. A bond need not be furnished, provided the cash deposit or certified check accompanying the proposal covers the whole amount of the proposal. All deposits and bonds of bidders, whose proposals shall not be accepted, will be returned to them within seven days after the opening of the proposals.

Proposals must be submitted in a sealed envelope, addressed to the Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D.C., and endorsed "Proposals for the purchase of vessels," so as to distinguish them from other communications. No offer for more than one vessel must be included within one proposal. In the case of tie bids, the award will be made by the Secretary of the Navy by lot.

On application to the Department, a printed list will be furnished giving general information concerning the vessels; also forms of bids and bonds which must be used by bidders. The vessels can be examined at any time by applying to the Commandant of the Navy Yard where they are.

The purchasers must remove the vessels purchased from the limits of the Yard within such reasonable time as may be fixed by the Department.

WILLIAM C. WHITNEY,
Secretary of the Navy.

Proposals for Quartermaster's Stores.

JEFFERSONVILLE DEPOT, Q. M. DEPARTMENT,
JEFFERSONVILLE, IND., April 27, 1887.

SEALED PROPOSALS in triplicate, subject to usual conditions, will be received at this office, until 11 o'clock, A. M., (Central Standard time,) on Friday, the 27th day of May, 1887, at which time and place they will be opened in presence of attending bidders, for furnishing this Depot various Quartermaster's Stores, including stationery, horse and mule shoes, horse shoe-nails and toe-calks.

The Government reserves the right to reject any or all proposals, and to accept the whole or any portion of the articles bid for.

Preference given to articles of domestic production and manufacture, conditions of price and quality being equal, and such preference given to articles of American production and manufacture, produced on the Pacific coast, to the extent of the consumption required by the public service there.

Blanks and full information as to bidding, etc., will be furnished on application to this office.

Envelopes containing proposals should be plainly marked "Proposals for Quartermaster's Stores at Jeffersonville Depot, Indiana," and addressed to the undersigned.

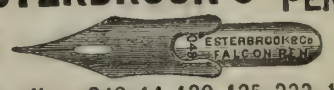
NEW YORK DEPOT OF THE QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT,
HOUSTON ST., COR. GREENE, May 13, 1887.

SEALED PROPOSALS IN TRIPLICATE are invited and will be received at this office until 10 A. M. June 13, 1887, for supplying steamers by charter to take the place of the steamers Chester A. Arthur, Ordnance, and Atlantic, respectively, when required during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888. The steamer to take the place of the Chester A. Arthur must be of the size and character and have about the same passenger and freight capacity as the Arthur, and the steamers to take the places of the Ordnance and Atlantic, respectively, must have the capacity for freight and passengers and be of the size and character generally of the steamer James Bowen, which has a 26-inch cylinder, low pressure engine. All the vessels must be staunch, in first-class order in every respect, well equipped and found, and conform fully to the requirements of the law.

Coal will be furnished by the department.

Proposals must state the price per day of 24 hours for each vessel, and how much per hour for day service and for night service, and must include an engineer and fireman. The remainder of the crew will be furnished by the department.



The vessels when required must be furnished immediately, or at such time as the department may designate.

The Government reserves the right to reject any or all proposals.

THE GATLING GUN.

The above illustrations show the latest improvements made in the feed of the Gatling gun.
The Accles' feed magazine allows the gun to be fired at all angles of elevation or depression, at the rate of over 1,200 shots per minute.
The Bruce feeder receives the cartridges directly from the paper boxes in which they are originally packed, thus giving an uninterrupted fire.

THE militia of the United States, says the Critic, referring to the national drill, represent the freest of all governments the sun ever shone on, and, what is more, they have to foot their own bills.

THE formal adoption of the "blanket bag," as a portion of the infantry soldier's equipment seems to give general satisfaction. It has been in somewhat general use for some time past and its adaptability for service is fully demonstrated.

"MEMORIAL DAY," May 30, comes on Monday next, and the indications are that it will be observed, if anything, with greater enthusiasm and respect, especially by the Grand Army of the Republic, than in recent years. The tomb of General GRANT at Riverside Park will be a central point for observance in the vicinity of New York City. The tomb will be decorated by U. S. Grant Post, of Brooklyn, assisted by E. D. Morgan Post and Alexander Hamilton Post, of New York. Rev. John Rhey Thompson will deliver the oration, and the Apollo Club, of Brooklyn, will furnish the music.

IN response to a memorial from the Chamber of Commerce of St. Etienne (Loire), the Birmingham of France, a syndicate of gunmakers were offered an order for 100,000 of the new French Army rifle and presented types of the rifle for examination. The gunmakers, however, discover that to meet the business they will have to renew or alter all their existing manufacturing machinery, and it is considered that the order is relatively too small to justify such an important expenditure. Only the Government possesses, as yet, the requisite plant for turning out the LEBEL pattern rifle, and this was recently imported at great cost from the United States. It is not yet in working order, and it is doubtful when the French rearmament can be completed.

UNDER present regulations, Major A. S. NICHOLSON, the Adjutant and Inspector of the Marine Corps, visits and inspects the Marine Barracks at Mare Island once in each year, that at Pensacola twice a year, and those on the Atlantic Coast once a quarter. Since the institution of these frequent inspections there has been the most marked improvement in the drill, discipline, and general appearance and efficiency of all of the marine commands, and the competition for the lead is active. The barracks at Annapolis and at Pensacola have received, perhaps, the best reports, which is in part attributable to the troops being subject to fewer changes. While the progress of the Marine Corps is very slow, it seems to be healthy, and everyone who sees much of it recognizes that it has gained greatly under its present commandant.

THE San Francisco Report lashes itself into fury because, by a vote of 318 to 45, the British House of Commons has decided that the Duke of Connaught, one of Queen Victoria's sons, and Commander-in-Chief of the forces in India, may return to England to be present at his mother's jubilee. The Report says: "The Duke of Connaught holds his position of Commander-in-Chief of the Indian army simply and solely because he is the Queen's son. He has never shown any military ability, far less ability enough to be intrusted with such an all-important command. He probably has no military ability at all." While he may owe his position to his royal blood, it is but fair to say that it is a matter of record that the Duke has had many years experience in his profession, and has many other qualifications which fit him for high position.

THE care, preservation, and repair of ordnance and ordnance stores at forts and in the hands of troops is declared to be—on and after July 1 next—"the legitimate duty of the soldier." This, of course, means the discontinuance of extra duty pay, and while we agree with the declaration as to the nature of the duty, we sympathize with those who are deprived thereby of a considerable addition to their monthly pay. Years ago the question was discussed as to the organization of a small force of old and experienced artillery soldiers (somewhat similar to the British Coast Brigade), a few to be stationed at each fort and charged with the especial duty of looking after the armament and keeping it in thorough working order. This would enable the troops to give absolute attention to their more legitimate duties of drill, target practice, signal instruction, etc. The time seems propitious for a renewal of the effort to secure the establishment of some such force as that referred to.

THE value of a self-registering target is so apparent that it needs no argument to show the importance of the results obtained with the electric target invented by Lieutenant FRANCIS J. PATTEN, 21st Infantry. With reference to the success Lieutenant PATTEN has obtained Lieutenant EDWARD H. BROOKE, of the 21st, writes as follows to Colonel HENRY from Fort Sidney, Neb., May 19, 1887: "I have just come from the shop where Mr. PATTEN has put up his electrical registering target, and knowing your interest in all matters pertaining to the target range, I write you that Mr. PATTEN has beyond doubt solved the question of employing electricity as a means of registering shots in a simple manner, and his target works to perfection. He is now only waiting for a few mechanical contrivances for connecting his wires securely before he gives a public test, and in the meantime he has connected them temporarily with the battery, and the target does exactly what he has claimed for it. We made a half dozen shots, and the annunciator gave the exact location of the hit every time. The plates furnished are not of the proper material, and till others are obtained will not stand much shooting, but the principle of communicating is shown to be of practical utility."

THE attack upon Lieutenant-General SHERIDAN by the Bellefontaine Examiner, on account of his Shenandoah Valley experience, has excited the fighting blood of the editor of the Cincinnati Telegram to boiling heat. This editor, who it appears served under General SHERIDAN in the Valley, gives him of the Examiner a little illustration of what would have happened to him had he caught him at that time. He is compelled to choose between accepting the character of a "cowardly traitor" and that of a "natural born idiot," and his critic evidently has a strong leaning towards the idiot theory, for he finally settles upon the term "asinine contemporary." Next he calls him a "venomous copperhead," and a "foul-mouthed butternut." His head is described as "impious," his heart as "craven," his larynx as that of a "loud-mouthed throat fighter," his home as a "den," and its locality as a "dunghill." Ordinary epithets having been completely exhausted he is further described as a "bloviating bully," whatever that dreadful creature may be, and finally as "a contemptible edition of ANANIAS," whose cowardly soul will be shrivelled in flames and his existence forgotten while the "glorious name of PHIL SHERIDAN will go thundering down the ages millions of years after." To all of which we can only say "Little children love one another."

THE Philadelphia Times, commenting upon the frequent discussions as to the relative merits of the chieftains of the Civil War, says: "It might be well for Lord Wolseley, General Sherman and Jefferson Davis to look squarely in the face the facts that the war ended 22 years ago; that those 22 years have developed every phase of the history of the war; that in this land of universal newspapers, free discussions and open fields for ambition, the status of every chieftain of the war, on either side, has long since been irrevocably settled in the record of history. There could be no more profitless discussion at this time than in the attempt to unsettle the position in the history of such men as Grant and Lee; Sherman and Johnson; Sheridan and Jackson; Thomas and Longstreet; Hancock and Hill, and the many other lieutenants of the blue and the gray whose fame as leaders is imperishable. There was not an important battle fought about which plausible ifs could not be applied to reverse results, but the buts summarily end speculation and the ifs vanish before the inexorable and irreversible facts of history. The war is over; all but a few Bourbons in the South and a few Mossbacks in the North have accepted its arbitrament in a spirit of sincere patriotism, and let the ifs and buts of the conflict perish with the sectional strife that so deeply crimsoned the history of the noblest people of the earth."

FROM statistics which reach us we infer that there is some need of improvement in the matter of the physical examination of applicants for enlistment in the Army. An applicant may be able-bodied, able to pass the vision tests required by TRIPLER'S Manual, by GREENLEAF, and by the orders and regulations governing the examination of recruits, and yet the accepted one may never become an effective soldier, because incapable of being made a reliable marksman. Normal vision of one eye should, we think, be insisted upon, and it would be well if some arrangement could be made by each recruiting officer whereby the candidate for enlistment could be put through a systematic examination as to the promise of development in the matter of handling the Service rifle, and of his eyes, in course of time, becoming efficient range finders, and thoroughly educated and trained to work—finger and eye together—as they ought to work. The recruiting officer having applied his tests, then the medical examiner should follow with his, separately, and the comparisons would follow. At the recruiting depots might come a further test of the successful applicant, and if after three months' trial the recruit showed his incapacity to see straight or to shoot straight then let him be discharged. This matter, it seems to us, should receive careful attention, for as it is now company commanders often have a weary and profitless time in instructing the recruit in the principles of rifle practice and in teaching him how to become a marksman.

THE following Army officers are registered at the War Department this week: 1st Lieut. E. P. Andrus, 5th Cav.; 2d Lieut. Geo. P. Ahern, 25th Inf.; 1st Lt. Geo. F. Cooke, 15th Inf.; Lieut. Col. Geo. W. Gile, ret.; Major Jas. R. Roche, Pay Dept.; Capt. John L. Bullis, 24th Inf.; Chaplain F. H. Weaver, 10th Cav.; Capt. J. B. Burbank, 3d Art.; 1st Lieut. F. S. Strong, 4th Art.; Major Amos Sickney, Engrs.; Capt. S. T. Norvell, 10th Cav.

THERE is a large office on the eighth floor of Cyrus W. Field's Washington Building, the door of which stands always open. As one passes by he catches a glimpse through the open windows of the bay and harbor, the green hills of New Jersey and the Bartholdi statue with its uplifted arm and torch. But from this view his mind will be at once distracted by the wealth of bunting with which the room itself is adorned. American flags are draped everywhere. On a great easel in the corner is an oil portrait of Gen. Grant surrounded by flags and black drapery. In a big arm chair with his head tipped back and his feet elevated on a stool, there is generally to be seen a short, stout man with florid complexion, high forehead and straggling brownish gray whiskers. It is Gen. Rufus Ingalls, who was the intimate friend and comrade of Gen. Grant. The office is his special "den," and he goes there as regularly as clock work. The General is engaged in the dredging business and in the promotion of the Cape Cod Ship Canal,—N. Y. Tribune.

THE Omaha Herald in an article on "Army Animals" says: "Capt. Archer, of the 5th Inf., was celebrated in 'the old army' for his love of dogs and the number he possessed. Capt. Ovenshine, of the 5th Inf., (now Major, 23d Inf.,) owned a dog in Santa Fe of such a mongrel type that one could not conscientiously give him a name, but generically, as it were, called and spoke of him as 'purp.' He owned him in the days when 'brevets' were being fastened upon Army officers with a prodigality that attached the title of General to a lance-corporal, almost. An officer of the 5th, who never saw an angry shot fired, was brevetted lieutenant-colonel; and, thereupon, Ovenshine brevetted 'purp' Newfoundland, or rather canonized him, for he never spoke of him afterwards except as his St. Bernard. Maj. Joe G. Tilford, 7th U. S. Cav., stationed in Fort Harker in 1868, had an imported Isle of Skye terrier, Gyp by name, which was the prettiest dog in the Army on account of its ugliness, and very intelligent. Gen. Miles, when colonel of the 5th U. S. Inf., commanding at Fort Harker, had a Gordon setter named 'Jack,' and which was given the surname that made his whole designation run among the soldiers as 'Jack Miles.' He was a wonderfully intelligent dog."

THE statue to General J. B. Steedman, at Toledo, O., was unveiled May 26 with imposing ceremonies.

COLONEL CHAMBERS, 17th Infantry, arrived in Omaha last week, on leave of absence from Fort Russell. It is hoped that his health will be improved by a change from the high altitude of Fort Russell. Miss Kinzie, sister of Lieut. Kinzie, adjutant 2d Infantry, is visiting at Fort Omaha. Capt. Downey, 21st Infantry, and wife are in Omaha, and attended the reception of Gen. and Mrs. Crook last week.

OSMAN DIGNA is a Frenchman by birth. After his father's death his mother then married a merchant of Alexandria, Osman Digna by name, who took a great fancy to his step-son, young George Vinet, bringing him up as a Mohammedan and sending him to complete his education at the military school in Cairo, where Arabi Pasha was his companion. Here he studied tactics and the operations of war under French officers. It was at this period that his father-in-law migrated to Suakin, where he set up as a general merchant and slave-dealer, and very shortly was doing a lucrative business. At his father-in-law's death George Vinet continued to carry on the business under the same name. A few years passed, and when the war broke out in Egypt, in 1882, Osman Digna(2) espoused the cause of his old friend and companion, Arabi, and became one of England's bitterest foes as the Mahdi's lieutenant.

MAJOR W. LUDLOW, the engineer commissioner of the District of Columbia, has involved himself in a controversy with the District Court, according to a Washington despatch, which says:

"Sometime ago the owner of certain real estate subdivided it and applied to have a plot of the subdivision recorded by the City Surveyor. That officer refused to perform his duty, and on May 9 Justice Cox, in the Circuit Court of the District, issued a rule directing him to show cause why a mandamus should not issue requiring him to perform his duty. The rule was disregarded, and Judge Cox issued an order in which he said: 'It also appearing to the court that the interference of the engineer commissioner of the District of Columbia with the duty of the respondent, in regard to the record of subdivisions in the Surveyor's office of the District of Columbia, is unwarranted and illegal, it is on the 18th day of May, 1887, adjudged that the peremptory writ of mandamus issued as prayed in said petition directing the respondent, Wm. Forsyth, to forthwith admit to record the relator's proposed subdivision of parts of lots 10 and 12, and all of 11, in square 444, which said proposed subdivision is described in any made part of relator's petition.'"

ADMIRAL PORTER, U. S. N., having been accused of intending to write a play for Mrs. James Brown Potter, is credited with saying that there is much more probability of his acting on the stage with her.

MR. F. E. HORN, of the Naval Bureau of Construction and Repair, has been detailed for duty as a member of the Central Board of Civil Service Examiners, under the regulations recently approved by the President.

SERGEANT D. W. C. MCCLOSKEY, an old and faithful member of the Marine Corps, who has achieved fame in yellow fever emergencies at the Pensacola Barracks, has been reported as in hospital at that station with his right side paralyzed.

1ST LIEUTENANT L. W. T. WALLER, detailed as the relief of Lieut. Clarke, of the Marine Corps, who died on the Iroquois, made his last cruise on the flagship Lancaster, European Station. Since his return he has developed considerable talent as an artist, and is an officer of energy, zeal, and most courteous manners.

LIEUTENANT CHARLES T. HUTCHINS, at present stationed at the Naval Academy, is the winner of the prize given this year for the best essay on "The Naval Brigade, its Organization, Equipment and Tactics." There were five competitors. The judges selected to award the prize were Capt. Joseph S. Skerrett, U. S. N.; Major Charles Heywood, U. S. M. C., and J. N. Miller, Esq., of New York.

THE first naval memorial service in honor of Admiral David G. Farragut and the heroes of the Navy was celebrated in the Brooklyn Tabernacle on Sunday evening, the naval posts having invited the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., to preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion. There were present about five hundred veteran sailors in Grand Army uniform, and the building was thronged with people.

CAPTAIN ROBERT L. MEADE, U. S. M. C., recently before a Retiring Board at Washington, was not found to possess any organic disease that would permanently incapacitate him for duty and the surgeons declined to recommend his retirement. He will be given six months' additional sick leave, making twenty-one in all, in which to repair injuries. It is believed that Captain Meade could get retired under the thirty years' service law.

CAPTAIN J. G. WALKER, U. S. N., registered at the Brevoort House, New York, on Sunday.

REAR ADMIRAL W. G. TEMPLE, U. S. N., registered at the Everett House, New York, last week.

MUCH regret is expressed by a wide circle of friends at the assignment of Passed Assistant Surgeon C. W. Deane, U. S. N., to the Naval Hospital at Mare Island, Cal. The Doctor is detached from the receiving ship Dale at the Washington yard, being relieved by Passed Assistant Surgeon Dickson. Dr. Deane's last cruise having expired in June, 1884, it is not unlikely that the Pacific or China Station may be his next cruising ground, and that, too, not far in advance.

QUEEN KAPIOLANI, attended by her daughter and various dignitaries, visited the Navy-yard at Brooklyn on Tuesday. Mayor and Mrs. Hewitt and several other ladies and gentlemen made up the party. The yard was handsomely decorated, and the Queen was received by Commodore Guerardi, Mayor Whitney and others. She was presented to the officers, reviewed the Marines, and lunched with the Commodore. The Queen and her suite sailed for England on Wednesday on the City of Rome.

IN the JOURNAL of May 21 we noticed the success of Ensigns Capps and Hewes at the Glasgow University. A correspondent sends us the record of the marks made by each of them at the four examinations which the class had during the term, as follows:

	1st.	2d.	3d.	4th.
Capps.....	91	91	94	90—366

CAPTAIN C. F. WILLIAMS, Marine Corps, and Lieut. T. S. Phelps, U. S. N., while driving into Vallejo, May 14, had their horse run away and their buggy wrecked. Lieut. Phelps was quite seriously bruised. When he was thrown out of the buggy a valuable diamond was knocked from a ring on his finger, but the stone was found afterwards. The ring was a present to Mr. Phelps from an African princess, who fell in love with him during one of his trips through the Dark Continent.—San Francisco Report.

CAPTAIN T. O. SELFRIDGE, U. S. N., late of the Omaha, has been spending the last few days of his time, previous to departure for China, at Newport, with Mrs. Selfridge. The captain sails from San Francisco on the steamer of June 4, and will probably be accompanied by the officers from the United States forming a part of the Court of Inquiry in his case. It is quite likely that Capt. Selfridge will return home again by August, and perhaps sooner, the Secretary having declined to restore him to the command of the Omaha.

CAPTAIN F. M. RAMSAY, U. S. N., has applied to the new Second Comptroller to be relieved of the suspension of several hundred dollars in his accounts for disbursements in connection with the entertainment of the Board of Visitors to the Naval Academy. The checkage was made by Ex-Comptroller Maynard, who refused to allow several seemingly unreasonable amounts for liquors, cigars, etc. Capt. Ramsay has clearly shown that he was at the mercy of the Board of Visitors, and was practically forced to furnish everything asked for. He will no doubt be able to have the accounts reopened and satisfactorily adjusted.

A VERY enjoyable dance was given at Fort Adams May 24, the ladies receiving being Mrs Best, Mrs. Morris and Mrs Field. Many naval officers, including Capt. Goodrich, of the Torpedo Station; Capt. Yates, of the Naval Training Station, and Captain Mahan, of the War College, were present.

CAPTAIN F. H. HARRINGTON is expecting to succeed Captain James Marmaduke Terrett Young on the Richmond and as fleet marine officer of the North Atlantic Station. Captain C. F. Williams will probably have to go to sea in place of Capt. Meade, who has been on shore since October, 1 79, and that, as matters now stand, will carry him to the Trenton upon her return from Brazil.

NAVAL CADET C. C. POE, U. S. N., is a recent guest at the Perry House, Newport, R. I. He has recently returned from the European Station for his post graduate examination, minus nearly everything he started to bring home with him, the accumulations of his foreign travels, his papers, books, etc. Mr. Poe was unfortunate enough to be a passenger on the Champagne when she was beached to save her from sinking, and thus suffered the loss of his baggage.

THE bronze tablet prepared by the medical officers of the Navy in memory of the "noble example and heroic death" of Dr. Ambler, a member of the unfortunate De Long party, has been removed from the Corcoran Art Gallery to the corridor in front of Surgeon General Gunnell's Office in the State, War, and Navy Department Building, where it will remain until the new building for the Naval Museum of Hygiene, its permanent resting place, is completed. This tablet has been fully described here.

THE good people of Danbury, Conn., propose to make all the use they can of Comdr. F. W. Dickins, U. S. N., previous to his departure on the Trenton on June 4, to take command, at Rio de Janeiro, of the Tallapoosa. He has accepted an invitation from James E. Moore Post, G. A. R., to officiate as marshal on Decoration Day. He has also received an invitation from Captain C. A. Stillman, of the Naval Veterans, to officiate as a member of his staff of officers at the occasion of the dedication of the Soldiers' Monument at New Haven.

PAYMASTER PETERSON, of the United States Navy attached to the United States ship Iroquois, was detailed by the commanding officer of that vessel to forward to Mr. Henry W. Clarke, of Newport, R. I., particulars of the suicide of his son, Lieut. Arthur H. Clarke, of the Marine Corps, on duty on the Iroquois. The letter was received May 25. Paymaster Peterson says: "The vessel arrived at Panama May 6, after a 14 days' run from Chili. On May 7 Lieut. Clarke seemed well, though perhaps a trifle abstracted. He ate breakfast, took a cigar as was his habit and went on deck, but soon went to his room. About five minutes afterwards we heard two shots. Upon going to the room from which the sounds came, we found the poor boy lying on the floor with one bullet through his head and one through his breast."

OUR correspondent "Quam id alto est," whose communication appeared in the JOURNAL of May 14, if he had consulted the list of retirements in the Marine Corps, which was published in the JOURNAL of January 29, would have spared himself the trouble of speculating as to the successor of Colonel Commandant McCawley, for the gallant colonel, although a veteran of two wars has still nearly six years of service remaining to him on the active list. Three officers of the corps retire before Col. McCawley, viz: Lieut. Col. J. L. Broome, March 8, 1888; Lieut. Col. T. Y. Field, Aug 17, 1889, and Lt. Col. C. D. Hebb, July 10, 1892. This will leave as the ranking officer of the corps at that time, Maj. Chas. Heywood, who does not retire until Oct. 3, 1903, so that he would have ten years on the active list if the rule of senority for promotion should prevail.

RECENT DEATHS.

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR EUGENE DOVILLIERS, U. S. Navy, of the Naval Academy, died at Annapolis, Md., May 20, aged 60. He was in the Department of Modern Languages and was a native of France.

"ESQUIMAU JOE," recently drowned on a whaling expedition, attained much reputation as a guide under Lieut. Schwatka. He accompanied the Polaris expedition, which left the Brooklyn Navy-yard June 29, 1871, under the command of Capt. C. F. Hall. After the death of Captain Hall and the loss of the Polaris, Joe was one of the 19 persons who drifted on the ice floe from Oct. 15, 1872, through Robeson's and Kennedy's Channel, Smith's Sound and Smith's Channel, until the party were rescued, May 1, 1873, by the sealing steamer Tigress. During this wretched drift of six months, suffering from an Arctic winter, with insufficient clothing and on starvation rations, Joe was the mainstay of the party, considered as the food provider, being the most efficient hunter and sealer, and without his aid it is scarcely possible the whole party could have been kept alive.

GENERAL CHAS. E. LA MOTTE, who died at Wilmington, Del., May 21, served with distinction during the war as lieutenant colonel of the 4th Delaware Infantry, and afterwards as colonel of the 6th Regiment of Veteran Volunteers. He also served on the staff of Gen. R. B. Ayres, U. S. A., and received the brevets of colonel and of brigadier general for gallantry at Petersburg and during the war. It is our impression he is a brother of Col. R. S. La Motte, 13th U. S. Infantry.

HENRY P. LESLIE, carpenter, U. S. Navy, retired, died at his residence in Elkton, Md., May 20, from the effects of a fall. He joined the Navy in 1833, and had an excellent record. He was highly respected, and a member of the Vestry of Trinity Church of Elkton. He was married in 1836 to Helen Marion Gray daughter of Stephen W. Gray, of Washington, D. C., who survives him. They celebrated their golden wedding last year. He also leaves five children.

GENERAL J. L. SELFRIDGE, who served with distinction in the volunteer service during the war, and afterwards held several responsible public positions in Pennsylvania, committed suicide at Philadelphia, May 19. He had been suffering for several years with Bright's disease, and this, it is supposed, led to the fatal act.

MISS HILDA LIEBER, youngest daughter of the late Capt. Hamilton Lieber, U. S. A., and niece of Acting Judge Advocate Gen. Norman Lieber, U. S. A., died at Dresden, Germany, May 9. Her mother was with her when she died. The remains were interred at Baden Baden.

DR. THOS. F. ROCHESTER, a distinguished physician of Buffalo, died in that city May 24. During the war President Lincoln detailed him to inspect hospitals in the field. He was the author of several works, including "The Army Surgeon."

A DAUGHTER of the late Maj. Gen. James W. Ripley, Chief of Ordnance, U. S. A., Maria Louisa, died suddenly at Hartford, Conn., May 23. Her distinguished father died in 1870.

MR. JULIUS H. GASKINS, for several years chief clerk of the Construction Department at the Norfolk Navy-yard, and made several cruises as captain's clerk, died at Portsmouth, Va., May 23.

COLONEL J. S. HENRICK, who served during the War as an Additional Paymaster, died at Cincinnati, May 25.

MRS. OSGOOD, mother of Lieut. H. B. Osgood, 3d U. S. Art., died last week.

FIRE AT OMAHA.

A FIRE occurred at Fort Omaha, the residence of General George Crook, on the occasion of an evening reception May 18. Never was seen so cool an assemblage of people under exciting circumstances as Gen. and Mrs. Crook and their guests. Everything seemed so quiet and orderly, even after the fire department came and began work, that one would have thought it was a part of the programme being carried out with the general's usual precision. One of the officers in remarking upon the quiet scene as they stood in the parlor with the water dripping down from the stories above, said: "Mrs. Crook, I've known for a long time what a brave soldier the general was, but I never knew you were so cool under fire." About the only excited person present was the Chinaman who presides over the cuisine at the general's house. He had bought a fine silk umbrella last week, and was very proud of his "fine umbel like Melican man." When the dread reality dawned upon him that the house was afire, and everything of value must be saved, he rushed frantically to his room, and donning his best clothes and the silk umbrella, descended to the hall, and there, amid all the rush of the firemen and others, calmly surveyed the wreck of the stream of water from above, grasping his "fine umbel" like a drowning man clings to a log. Several attempts were made to borrow it, but in vain. John proposed to save it or die himself in the attempt.

TARGET PRACTICE ALL NOT ON ONE SIDE.

IN a letter to your paper, among other remarks, Lieut. Merriam, 4th Inf., says: "It is as well known as anything can be that is not positively known that numbers of marksman's badges are now worn by men who never obtained them strictly in accordance with regulations," or, in other words, these men were certified to as marksmen by their company commanders, said certificate being false.

Captain Kellogg, 18th Inf., who sides with Lieut. Merriam, says in your JOURNAL, referring to objections raised by publicly discrediting scores made, "'O, but why wash our dirty linen in public,' says our horrified critics. 'Simply because so much foul cloth has been forced upon us that it cannot well be cleansed in private."

My experience at several large posts does not justify me in agreeing with the above remarks, and it would be of interest to the Service for the posts, regiments or companies at which false certificates are made, to be located. The sooner the better, as purification by dismissal would quickly follow. Unless marksmen are made "strictly in accordance with regulations" they are not made at all.

As to abolishing the "figure of merit system," how was it before we had such? Some few did well and a large majority did not do at all. Emulation, and official publication of results, is that which has brought the Army to its present high standard, encouraging the good and zealous captains and making the indifferent or lazy work.

If any change is wanted let firings be based upon the totals or per cent. made, counting every shot fired, but don't stop comparisons or publications in orders. In the meantime, let discussions stop, and let us honestly and zealously carry out the present system, the first we have had, and changes will follow, if they are needed, at the proper time.

PROGRESS.

CRACKING THE MATHEMATICAL NUT.

I SUBMIT the following solution of the "Mathematical Nut," published in your issue of May 21, as follows: Let A be the point from which the head of the column starts on its march, and B the (unknown) point it has reached when the courier overtakes it. x=rate of courier's progress: 10x=total distance ridden by him. Then $\frac{10x-25}{2}$=A B—and $\frac{10x+25}{2}=\frac{10x+25}{2}$= distance ridden by courier from B to A—at the rear till he reaches the head of the column at the point B. As he travels at x miles per hour, he does this in the time $\frac{10x+2}{x}$. In this same time the head of column, whose rate is 2½ m. per hour, travels the distance $\frac{10x+25}{2x}, \frac{5}{1}=\frac{50x+125}{4x}$=AB.

Equating these expressions for A B, reducing, and solving, we find x=6.0355+, and the distance travelled by the courier 60.355+ miles.

THE following Mexican War claims were allowed by the Second Comptroller this week: Charles S. Merchant, Captain, 2d Art., $15; Wm. H. Wood, 2d Lieut., 3d Inf., $75.

MUSKETRY AND INSPECTORS.

"FOUR ARMS," in your issue of April 9, has quite warmed up for the Acting Inspectors-General of the Army, when he claims they are "zealous, meritorious, intelligent, industrious, well-informed, manly, soldierly, and self-reliant." In fact, they possesses all the elements of soldiers, Christians, and gentlemen—some may object to the Christian part. But why all this claiming of points, never referred to, in letter of "One of the Inspected;" in fact, he admits they are all excellent men. All he did say was that if target practice interfered with discipline it was the duty of inspectors to show in what way. Are the habits of the men worse? Records show there are fewer trials, and less breaches of discipline during the target practice season, than during the rest of the year. If any particular company, troop or battalion is poorly drilled, don't put it upon target practice, for there will always be an excuse made for any failure by some. As to the reduction of season to three months, this was recommended by all concerned, and one of two months would be better, but as "Four Arms" says, referring to the three months: "Not as deep as a well but will do." Some would be pleased at no well or target practice at all, as the past has shown. Who stimulated target practice? Not the Acting Inspectors-General—they certainly must claim that, with all their virtues. A dress parade, a battalion drill or review, is much more conducive to "glorious pomp and display," than teaching or looking at a man shooting on his back or belly. The latter, however, may be undignified and very unsoldierly; but it means business, when fighting begins, and that is what an Army is kept and maintained for. "Four Arms" says "some commands are as ignorant as 'wharf rats' of the effective use of the military weapons they carry."

The records fail to show any "wharf rat" ignorance where field service has not interfered with the necessary practice. Some Inspector of Rifle Practice has been neglecting his duty if this ignorance exists, as "Four Arms" states. I believe in most rigid inspections, and so do all good officers, as well as in the acquirements of all useful duties and drills for a soldier. I also agree that the inspectors are good men and true, not, however, that with all the virtues claimed by "Four Arms," they may not err in their views, and on the subject of target practice I have failed to see the interest taken by them in their reports, as would indicate, at least, that this instruction was of great importance for the soldier, when, in fact, it is more important than any other duty required of him, but not to the exclusion of other duties. If they visit posts and find men enthusiastic over target matters, with its practical results, can they wonder at it, when they know the present tactics would be impracticable in action with our improved fire-arms and accuracy of firing? and when they find a company well up in target practice, but not in drill, it is their duty to so report, and hold each officer up to all his duties, but not put upon target practice, neglects due to other causes.

"ONE OF THE INSPECTED."

OUR GUARD HOUSE SYSTEM.

THE order of the Secretary of War directing that soldiers be not placed in confinement without the sanction, after due investigation, of a commissioned officer, is a step in the right direction, as it is evidently intended to elevate the status of the enlisted man; but the idea should be carried out still further, by the amendment of the Regulations so as to admit of the confinement in their barracks of soldiers charged with light offences while awaiting trial and promulgation of sentence. I urge this change because good men, guilty of, or charged with, some trivial breach of discipline or unintentional neglect of duty, must now be confined, until the result of their trials by Courts-martial is published, with murderers, thieves, and other hard characters, the offscourings of the Army, among whom the most deeply-dyed villain is the hero to be looked up to, admired, and envied. Good and bad, innocent and guilty, pure-minded and vile, all must receive the same treatment—must work and eat and sleep together. Locked in together in a common room, the hardened reprobates pour out words of filth, blasphemy and corruption that the uninitiated in crime, shuddering, must listen to—listen to, night after night, until he first fails to be nauseated by them, then to mind them, and finally to dislike them. It is the old saying, "Evil communications corrupt, etc." It is an outrage, this guard house system of ours; it is the great demoralizer of our Service. What does it profit a man to be good, respected by himself and others, for fifty-nine months, if, in the sixtieth and last month, he, for some minor fault, is to be degraded by being placed on the same level with convicts. If there is a military prison to which criminals cannot be sent for fear of degrading and contaminating men guilty of purely military offences, even including desertion (surely a crime in the eyes of the civil law, for by desertion a man forfeits his rights of citizenship), and a penitentiary for felons, why can there not be two prison rooms and two kinds of hard labor at a post, so that the two classes can be kept apart? Is it a matter of vital importance to discipline, this old style of heterogeneous admixture of a penitentiary, an inebriate asylum, a police station, a house of detention, a reformatory, an insane asylum, a prison and a workhouse? I do not think it is. It is not of our generation. It is dead; it should be buried.

FISH OF ONE FLESH OF THE OTHER.

UNDER "Personal Items" in your issue of May 14 you state that the deserter, J. J. Shaw, late 2d lieutenant 6th Infantry, when last heard from was in London, from which place he tendered his resignation to the Adjutant General, and that "it was, of course, not accepted."

Why "of course?"

It is a notorious fact that not long ago an officer serving in the Department of Arizona left his regiment without leave and fled into Mexico, whence he tendered his resignation, which was accepted. He thus escaped the consequences of dire alternatives, viz.: Returning to the United States for trial and probable dismissal, or continuing his status of unauthorized absence long enough to be dropped as a deserter under R. S. 1229.

DIFFERENT BREECH LOADERS.

ALL breech loading small arms have either a fixed chamber or a movable chamber. All of this latter class are deemed obsolete; they embrace the following named rifles: The Burnside, the Hall, the Sleeper, the Worrell. All fixed chambered small arm have either a movable barrel or a movable breech block. Those having a movable barrel either slide or rotate. They are Gardner's repeater, the Gallagher, the Prussian needle carbine, the Maynard, the Wohlgemuth, and all old pattern revolvers like Colt's, the Scott, and the Helm.

The second classification of fixed chambered breech loading small arms—that is those having a movable breech block—is very much more numerous. Some are closed by sliding; one, the Ballard, by sliding and rotating; the rest by rotating about an axis. Three sorts are thus indicated. The first sort includes the following, all of which have concealed locks: The Prussian needle gun, Dreyse's improved needle gun, Chassepot, Ward-Burton, Mauser, Vetterlin, Greene, Milbank, and the Lee. The Van Choate, Joslyn-Tomes, and Merrill are also bolt guns, but have outside locks. Then come those moved by levers: The Morse, Merrill, Barnekov-Greene, Winchester, Stetson, Burgess, Beals, and Rumsey. The slide of the Sharps is vertical.

The next sort of rifle includes those whose breech blocks rotate about an axis either parallel to the axis of the barrel or at 90 degs. to the axis of the barrel. These are the Werndl, Snyder, Warner, Snell, Joslyn, Earnest, Freeman, Milbank, Broughton. Also the Springfield, Berdan-Russian, Morganstern, Roberts, Elliott, Werder, Smoot, Peabody-Martini, Conroy, Westley-Richards, Beal, Allen-Murdock, Morse, Symmes, Remington, Remington-Locking, Thomas, Remington-Ryder, Whitney, Dexter, Whittemore, Updegraff, Muir-Mont-Storm, Spencer, Robertson, Starr, Evans, Kirk, and G. R. Remington. The following are the weights of the muskets of different nations:

	Weight.	Working parts.	Cartridges weighs, grains.
United States, Springfield	8.38 lbs.	2.38 lbs.	720
England, Martini-Henry	8.75 "	2.38 "	794
Austria, Werndl	9.04 "	2.69 "	655
Spain, Remington	9.19 "	—.—	638
Italy, Vetterlin	9.26 "	3.94 "	532
France, Gras	9.26 "	—.—	675
Russia, Berdan	9.47 "	2.25 "	606
Prussia, Mauser	6.66 "	2.25 "	660
Holland, Beaumont	9.76 "	—.— "	609
Switzerland, magazine gun carrying 11 cartridges, the Vetterlin	10.14 "	3.94 "	473

The devices for increasing the facility or rapidity of fire from breechloading muskets and carbines, are Col. Benton's plan, R. T. Hare's plans, Capt. Metcalf's plan, Ira Merrill's plan, James Stillman's plans, the Elliot cartridge box, L. F. Bruce's block stop, United States service cartridge box, and Ira Merrill's improved side lock.

HOW SECRETARY WHITNEY BOUGHT "GRASSLANDS."

AN interesting story may be told of how the Secretary managed to win over the former proprietor of the estate [Grasslands]. The tenacity of the old-time Maryland or Virginia planter for his patrimonial estates is proverbial. He would often rather eke out an existence of debt and inconvenience than to sacrifice his acres and live in competency and relief. Without a word the Secretary made up his mind what he was willing to pay for the estate, which comprised about 105 acres. Instead of greenbacks, promissories, bonds, mortgages, and such mythical evidences of tangible values to the average rural mind the Secretary converted the whole sum into hard bimetallic cash, "eagles" with golden wings and "standards" bearing the legend "In God we trust." He drove to the mansion, and seating himself at a rickety table of the colonial era, placed the bags of ringing coin before the mystified relic of the old regime. Twenty thousand in sight, versus speculative crops, realistic taxation, and increasing ratio of dilapidation was enough to shake even the traditional loyalty of the long-suffering and impecunious legatee of an ancient family and a noble name. The bargain was struck. The Secretary that evening drove back to town the proprietor of a beautiful estate, the planter remained with his ducats. Twenty thousand dollars restored the old family seat to more than its former splendor, and never was hospitality more lavishly dispensed than it is to-day under its generous host and hostess.

SUCCESSFUL BIDDERS.

AT noon, May 24, General Franklin, president of the board of managers of the National Home for disabled Volunteer Soldiers, opened, at Hartford, sixteen bids for supplying the Home with fourteen different articles. The contracts awarded are as follows, being the lowest bids:

Grey wool blankets—B. Y. Pippey and Co., New York $3.67 each.

Caps (10,000)—B. Y. Pippey and Co., 48½ cents each.

Twenty ounce dark blue cloth—Liberty Woolen Mills, Virginia, $1.87 a yard.

Canton flannel—T. A. Ashburner, 9 89-100 cents a yard.

Shoes—Marcy Bros., Hartford, $1.42½ per pair.

Yarn, blue and white—Test Bros., Richmond, Ind., blue at 64¾ cents a pound; white at 59¾ cents.

THE ARMY.

G. O. 36, H. Q. A., May 20, 1887.

By direction of the Secretary of War, G. O. 43, of 1883, from this office, is revoked, to take effect June 30, 1887, and thereafter all work necessary for the care, preservation, and repair of ordnance and ordnance stores at forts and in the hands of troops is declared to be the legitimate duty of the soldier.

The commanding officers of all forts and other military stations will detail, on daily duty, the men required for the proper care, preservation, and repair of the ordnance and ordnance stores belonging to their commands.

By command of Lieutenant General Sheridan:

R. C. DRUM, Adjt.-Gen.

CIR. 4, H. Q. A., May 17, 1887.

The following decisions, rulings, etc., have been made during the month of April, 1887, and are published to the Army for the information of all concerned:

WHITEWASHING QUARTERS.

The whitewashing quarters comes within the provisions of par. 400 of the Regulations (amended by G. O. 60, of 1884, from this office), and should be done by enlisted men, as a part of their fatigue duty.—(Decision Sec. War, letter April 1, 1887.)

DEFECTIVE POST SHOES.

The decision published in Cir. 9, of 1885, from this office, authorizing the gratuitous issue of post shoes to replace those found defective by a board of survey convened within thirty days after their issue, is modified so as to allow a board of survey to act on all boots and shoes manufactured at the Military Prison which, through no fault of the wearer, shall have proved defective from thirty days' wear or less.—(Decision Sec. War, letter April 4, 1887.)

OPENING BIDS RECEIVED ON ADVERTISEMENT.

A bid received after the hour stated in the advertisement inviting proposals should not be considered; thus, if the bids are to be opened at 12 o'clock noon, a bid received after that hour should not be opened.—(Decision Sec. War, April 6, 1887.)

TRANSPORTATION OF PROFESSIONAL BOOKS.

The decision published in Cir. 12, of 1886, from this office, authorizing the transportation of dictionaries, encyclopedias, historical works, etc., as professional books, is applicable only on change of station of officers.—(Decision Sec. War, letter April 8, 1887.)

CORPORAL PUNISHMENT OF MILITARY PRISONERS.

Military prisoners should not be punished by being required to carry a heavy log. Some other punishment can be found equally effective and not open to the objections urged against this method. The practice will, therefore, be discontinued.—(Decision Sec. War, letter April 13, 1887.)

SAVINGS OF FLOUR.

The savings of flour at the post bakery may, under existing regulations, be sold to the Subsistence Department, or to other parties, as desired. The flour may be sold to private parties at whatever price can be obtained, but if sold to the Subsistence Department only invoice or contract price can or should be paid.—(Decision Sec. War, letter April 14, 1887.)

TRANSPORTATION OF VEGETABLES, ETC., TO A TEMPORARY CAMP.

The Quartermaster's Department should transport the necessary articles of food and of public property from a permanent to a temporary camp if the movement is made by proper authority.—(Decision Sec. War, letter April 29, 1887.)

MUSIC STANDS FOR REGIMENTAL BANDS.

Under par. 527 of the Regulations (amended by G. O. 9, of 1885, from this office), music stands for regimental bands should be purchased from the regimental funds.—(Decision Lieut. Gen., letter April 4, 1887.)

POSITION OF A FLAG AT HALF-STAFF.

A flag at half-staff should be displayed at a point midway between the truck and the cross-trees.—(Decision Lieut. Gen., letter April 9, 1887.)

SWORD WORN BY A REGIMENTAL ADJUTANT OF ARTILLERY.

When a regiment is armed and serving as infantry the adjutant should wear the sword prescribed for an adjutant of infantry.—(Decision Lieut. Gen., letter April 9, 1887.)

TARGET PRACTICE.

Par. 332, Blunt's "Rifle and Carbine Firing" distinctly prescribes the composition of the firing line in company skirmish practice. The object of excusing 20 per cent. of the company from such practice was to cover the cases of those at the post who from sickness, confinement, etc., were not available for practice. The firing line must then, in all future practices, contain 80 per cent. of all the enlisted men of the company present at the post, excepting from the computation of its strength only the sergeants, musicians, and recruits mentioned in the paragraph in question.—(Decision Lieut. Gen., letter April 25, 1887.)

RETURN TRANSPORTATION FOR ATTENDANT IN CHARGE OF AN OFFICER'S PRIVATE HORSES.

Return transportation for the attendant in charge of the private horses of a mounted officer changing station is a proper charge upon the Quartermaster's Department, under par. 1952 of the Regulations, and the decision of the Secretary of War, published in Cir. 1, of 1884, from this office, provided the entire expense of transporting the horses and attendant does not in the aggregate exceed $100 for each horse.—(General decision, letter April 8, 1887.)

SALUTING A REGIMENTAL ADJUTANT.

The office of adjutant gives no right of precedence. All 1st and 2d lieutenants rank according to date of commission in their respective grades.—(General decision, letter April 13, 1887.)

SILKEN COLORS.

Waterproof covers are furnished by the Quartermaster's Department with the silken colors, standards, and guidons to protect them from damage. Should, however, by accident, the colors be exposed to rain, they should then be hung up lengthwise, so that the water can drip straight down each stripe. The running of the scarlet into the white will not be so serious if this precaution is taken.

TACTICS.

With a battalion marching in line, when broken to pass an obstacle, it should be left to the discretion of the colonel to provide for the proper direction of march of his battalion and for the preservation of the interval for the rear companies during the temporary absence of the color-guard from the line.—(Letter, April 2, 1887.)

At "trail arms" the little finger should be in the rear of the barrel.—(Letter, April 9, 1887.)

In facing to the rear the fours halt at command after executing the "about."—(Letter, April 13, 1887.)

"Fix bayonets" should not be executed on the march as a means of instruction in the manual.—(Letter, April 23, 1887.)

In successive battalion formation the designation of a company changes after the command "Guides posts," which ends the movement.—(Letter, April 27, 1887.)

Battalion being in line, at the command "Backward, guide centre, march," the captains retain their positions, and step backward at the command "March."—(Letter, April 30, 1887.)

At the above command the color bearer and general guides retain their positions in front of the battalion, and step backward at the command "March." In regard to the above two questions it may be remarked that the back step is only used to gain a few steps to the rear (see par. 49), and to march the battalion a few paces to the rear the officers, color bearer, general guides, guides, and file closers remain in positions (see par. 401).—(Letter, April 30, 1887.)

Ordinarily the wheel into line from a column at full distance is made toward the guides, who would be at a "carry" before the commencement of the wheel. If all the arms are at a "right shoulder" in a column at full distance and at a halt, and a wheel into line is ordered before indicating the guide or ordering the guides to cover, then both guides of each company would be at a "right shoulder," and would both come to a "carry" at the command "Company, halt."—(Letter, April 30, 1887.)

By order of the Secretary of War:

R. C. DRUM, Adjt.-Gen.

G. O. 12, DEPT. OF ARIZONA, May 17, 1887.

Trumpeter Walter Vincent, Troop F, is now languishing for six months in the guardhouse at Fort Huachuca and suffering a dockage of $60 for "disrespectful and insubordinate conduct" in writing, signing, and sending to his troop commander the following: "Respectfully calling the company commander's attention to the fact that I, Walter Vincent, want a transfer, my reasons are told in a very few words. Firstly, the majority of the non-commissioned officers belonging to Troop F are drunkards and gamblers. Secondly, if a private offends a non-commissioned officer he is sent to the guardhouse, and it is very seldom he gets of [f], without getting tried. Thirdly, if a non-commissioned officer offends a private, and the private reports it to his company commander he gets no satisfaction. I say and I leave it to the judgment of all sensible men that a drunkard is worse than a beast, and that a gambler is worse than a thief, and that neither one of them are fit to be in charge of a body of men. I am fearless of the consequences these few lines may produce."

DEPARTMENT NEWS.

Dept. of Dakota.—Brig. Gen. T. H. Ruger.

A Fort Assiniboine despatch, referring to predatory Indian bands, says: "The War Department will take the question vigorously in hand during the coming summer. Steps have already been taken to establish permanent camps in the troubled district so that the country may be thoroughly patrolled. Heliograph stations, similar to those used in Arizona, will probably be erected in the Sweet Grass Hills and Bear Paw Mountains, and other measures employed for the detection and capture of these pestilent little bands. This will result either in ridding the country of them or making some more good Indians among the Piegans and Bloods."

Division of the Atlantic.—Maj.-Gen. Schofield.

At the thirteenth annual session of the Florida Medical Association, recently held at St. Augustine, Dr. De Witt Webb, late A. A. Surgeon U. S. A., read a paper on "The Indian Under Medical Observation," giving the results of his observation as medical officer in charge of the 497 Apaches for the last year confined at Fort Marion. The Indian suffered largely, the doctor said, from the same maladies as the white man, modified to a great degree by his mode of life. On the whole, the Apache had in him the elements of a most sturdy race, capable of great endurance, and in such high degree of health as promised the perpetuation of the race.

The commanding officer Fort Barrancas, Fla., has been directed to transfer 15,000 pounds of mortar powder from Fort Pickens, Fla., to Rock Island Arsenal, Ill.

Gen. Crook has sent Troop K, 9th Cav., to Cheyenne to enforce the removal of fences from the public lands. The cattle companies failed to remove the fences as ordered by the Government and the troops are sent to protect the men engaged in the work from the interference of the cowboys.

WEST POINT, N. Y.

MAY 25, 1887.

A LONG spell of hot and dry weather from the last of April, was broken yesterday by a copious shower, which has made the whole place look exceedingly lovely.

Most of the buildings, fences, seats, posts, etc., have been freshly painted and everything is in apple-pie order and will surely please the crowd of visitors that will begin to arrive by the end of next week.

Last Thursday Miss Newlands entertained her friends at an afternoon tea from 4 till 6 o'clock. She was assisted by Mrs. Hasbrouck, Mrs. Edgerton and Miss Nellie Rich. Her table was beautifully decorated with flowers; refreshments of sandwiches, strawberries and cream, chocolate, coffee, tea and cakes were served to the guests.

On Saturday evening the cadets had a hop in room No. 1, which was completely filled by the dancers and spectators.

At this year's graduating hop no german will be danced, but the whole affair will be all "hop," where everybody can take part from beginning to end. The germans of the past few years, while popular with those who got good seats and plenty of favors, were very much denounced by all others as breeders of discontent and selfishness.

No one has been detailed to deliver the usual address to the graduating class on June 11. Probably it was thought that enough "advice" has been given heretofore to last for several seasons if judiciously distributed.

Among those who have announced their intention to be present at the alumni meeting are Gen. Sherman, Maj. Mordecai, Col. Mordecai, Col. Fred. Grant, Col. Farley, Gen. R. H. Anderson, Gen. Ingalls, Capt. Ruffner, Col. Loeser, Gen. Wm. F. Smith, Gen. Van Vliet, Gen. Burns, Gen. Van Buren, Gen. McCalmont, Gen. Whipple, Gen. N. H. Davis, Gen. Flint, Col. Huse, Loyall Farragut, L. T. Howes, D. S. Denison, Jas. R. Dennison, Sebree Smith, Lt. Phelps, Edwin McNeill, F. L. Hills, E. R. Hills. The number is about the same as at the corresponding time last year.

The little son, aged 18 months, of 1st Sergt. Hall, of the Artillery Detachment, died last Thursday morning of convulsions, and was buried on Sunday. The funeral was largely attended by the families of the enlisted men of the post.

The indications are that the class to enter this year will be the largest in the history of the Academy. There will be over 150 vacancies; about 42 alternates have been appointed, and about 135 principals. The "plebes" will begin to report on June 14, and will come for three days.

Lieuts. Poor, Shipp and Cabell were visitors during the past week.

U. S. ARTILLERY SCHOOL.

FORT MONROE, Va., May 24, 1887.

DR. BROOK delivered his third lecture last Friday evening. Subject: Hemorrhage, the circulation of the blood, the venous and arterial systems. The lecture preceding this was on the reanimation of a drowning man. Both were listened to with marked attention.

Lieut. Rodman delivered an interesting lecture on electricity last Saturday evening. He intended only to amuse the officers' children, but both parents and children were delighted with it.

Last evening Col. Pennington gave an instructive entertainment in the theatre building. It consisted of panoramic views of the great battlefields and principal scenic sights of Europe. It was immensely enjoyed, especially by the young and untravelled.

Torch signalling commences here this evening under Captain Hobbs, to be continued until the necessary proficiency is attained.

Col. R. Jones has spent this day inspecting and rejecting, and will drill the troops at 9 A. M. to-morrow. The minute attention paid to things at this post, both to tree and shrub, by the commanding officer and police officer, Lieut. Osgood, places it far away ahead of any other in this division.

The fire engines have been removed to the new engine house, and the children's school from a low, incommodious shanty to a suitable and spacious room, upstairs in the engine house.

A game of ball came off here last Saturday between the School Club and a citizen nine, resulting in a score of 14 to 9 in favor of the former. The officers of the post—many of them very good players—and their ladies, too, take much interest in baseball, and the enlisted men are proud to say that many of the officers accepted, with pleasure too, honorary positions in the club, some attending its meetings. The game was umpired by Major Babbitt, the honorary president of the club, who showed his familiarity with every new change of rule and who is, and has been, for years back, the promoter and supporter of every athletic and manly exercise.

FORT DAVIS, TEX.

THE Fort Davis News of May 20 says:

Lieut. W. H. Barnum returned Wednesday from Pena Colorado.....The post Sunday school, at the suggestion of Mrs. Col. Clendenin, who is one of its valuable workers, is to have a picnic Saturday.....Col. and Mrs. A. G. Brackett left Saturday for the North and will spend a considerable portion of the time in Des Moines, the home of Judge McHenry, the father of Mrs. Brackett, and will also visit some of the summer resorts at Minnesota.....The Fort Davis Lodge is the banner Good Templar lodge of the State.

VANCOUVER BARRACKS, W. T.

THE Independent of May 18 says:

Lieut. Frank Taylor, 14th Inf., will deliver the address at Vancouver on Memorial Day.....Gen. John Gibbon, Monday, went to Puget Sound.....On Monday Gov. Eugene Semple, of Washington Territory, visited here.....Lieut. J. N. Allison, 2d Cav., and Miss Susie Whalley were married at St. Stephen's Chapel, Portland, May 12. They immediately went to Fort Walla Walla, where a few days later they were tendered a reception by the officers and ladies of the post.... The amateur dramatic club, composed of Vancouver Barracks gentlemen and ladies, will, May 18, give at the Standard Theatre the comedy of "Engaged." The cast is: Cheviot Hill, Capt. C. A. Woodruff; Belvawney, Capt. A. H. Russell; Mr. Symperson, Lieut. F. Taylor; Angus Macalister, Lieut. A. Todd; Major McGillicuddy, Capt. C. H. Warrens; Belinda Treherne, Mrs. Anderson; Minnie Symperson, Mrs. Poole; Mrs. Macfarlane, Mrs. Warrens; Maggie Macfarlane, Mrs. Hunter; Parker, Miss Sladen.

FORT OMAHA, NEB.

THE Excelsior of May 21 says:

Capt. Ray, of North Pole exploration fame, now here as Judge Advocate, has joined the rifle club and took his first shoot Wednesday ....The affair of the week was the reception given by Gen. and Mrs. Crook at their residence, 1,702 Chicago street, to their friends in Omaha. About 300 invitations were issued. The house was prettily decorated and lighted for the occasion and the evening being exceedingly cool everybody enjoyed the opportunity of paying their respects to the host and hostess. The Fort Omaha band was stationed on the lawn and enlivened the occasion. A light collation was served about midnight. Mrs. Crook was assisted in receiving by Mrs. L. W. V. Kennon, Mrs. General Wheaton, Mrs. P. H. Ray, Mrs. Colonel Henry, Mrs. General Dandy, Mrs. Hall, Miss Carrie Summers and Miss Jennie McClellan.....Quite a number of ladies went down to the rifle range on Wednesday. The scores were fair, the shooting being delayed by a "strike" among the soldiers who were to have worked the targets, which stirred up Col. Henry not a little.....Gen. and Mrs. Wheaton give a dinner at the garrison this afternoon to Judge and Mrs. Savage, anticipating their departure for Europe in June. They will also give a dance next Thursday evening to their guest, Miss Kinzie, of Chicago, a sister of Lieut. Kinzie.

FORT LEWIS, COLORADO.

BATTALION drill began to-day; gallery practice this afternoon.

Corpl. Hines, Co. A, 22d Inf., died on May 13, and his body was interred on the evening of the 14th. Owing to this, Col. Swaine very generously gave us Sunday off, or, in other words, no inspection.

Paymaster will be here on May 17. Work on the new commissary store-house is rapidly going on. It will be of stone, and is greatly needed.

The "Fort Lewis Social Club" will give a grand ball on Friday evening, May 20. It will be largely attended, as this is a very popular club, being mainly composed of jolly young fellows.

The boys were on the ball ground yesterday afternoon, but it was rather "gusty" for the enjoyment of the fascinating game.

General police is finished, and the garrison is much more pleasant looking.

Troop F, 6th Cav., is still at Amargo, N. M., and expect to remain there for some time.

It is rumored that Co. A will go into the field ere long.

ENIGMA.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, KAS.

A BASE ball club has been organized and named the McArthur club in honor of Capt. McArthur, 13th Inf. C. H. Devreux is president and manager; W. E. Brady, secretary; Payne, captain and catcher; Gallop, pitcher; Devine, first base; Suchanks, second base; Tunry, third base; Clark, short stop; Kelly, left field; Culton, centre field, and Sturgis, right field.

Memorial Day this year is to be enthusiastically observed in this locality. All the civil societies of the city are to be in line and with the cavalry and artillery in the procession it will be a long one. Col. George B. Santord, 1st U. S. Cav., will act as grand marshal, he to appoint his aides. State Senator H. B. Kelley, of McPherson, Kan., will deliver an oration.

The Times says: "The mail received May 19 from Fort Reno was badly mutilated. A number of letters were soaking wet and one communication, relating to an application of Lt. Goldman, 5th Cav., for a six months' sick leave, was so badly used up, the red ink used having become blurred, that it cannot be read intelligently. Lieut. Goldman is suffering from cystitis, which has existed in his system for nearly a year, and the acting assistant surgeon recommends a cessation from all duties for at least six months."

FORT RILEY, KANSAS.

ANOTHER land slide has occurred in the sewer ditch, but this time without casualty.....Lieut. J. B. Bellinger, Troop I, 5th Cav., granted a sick leave of 15 days, has arrived from Camp Martin.....Q. M. Sergeant O'Shea will leave the post shortly to go into business with his brother, post-trader at Fort Spokane.....An interesting contest took place here between Lieut. Nicholson and Mr. Moses Waters on the race track. The post trader ran his favorite horse against the Lieutenant's bay for a purse made up between the two parties. The latter was badly beaten by his contestant to the great grief of Moses.—Kansas City Times.

FORT NIOBRARA, NEB.

THE Excelsior of May 21 says:

Paymr. Bash arrived Wednesday, and paid off the troops ..... A social hop was given by the 8th Infantry Social club at the post hall Saturday evening..... ...Before leaving for Omaha, Lieut. Ray, 8th Inf., and Mrs. Ray were tendered a banquet by the officers and ladies of the post. Lieut. Ray will be missed from the garrison, but the position of Acting Judge Advocate is his by right of promotion, so we can only wish the Lieutenant and his estimable wife happiness in their new field of labor.

FORT McHENRY, MD.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Baltimore Sun writes: It is not thought there will be any summer encampment this year for the troops quartered at Fort McHenry. The principal event of interest at the post is the progress of the annual target practice. Gen. Roger Jones, U. S. A., Insp.-General, left Fort McHenry, May 22, after three days' inspection of the post. Capt. E. R. Warner, who has been promoted Major 1st Artillery, will leave July 1 for duty on the Pacific Coast. May 22 Major W. H. Gardner, surgeon of the post, delivered an instructive lecture on "The Care of the Wounded on the Field of Battle."

FORT SIDNEY, NEB.

THE Omaha Excelsior of May 21 says:

Lieuts. Duncan and Williams are in the woods establishing corners.....Lieut. Bonesteel is acting adjutant during the absence of Adjt. Duncan.....The band is playing music that is much appreciated.....Mrs. Lieut. Patten entertained a number of friends at cards on Thursday evening last..... Dudley, the five-year-old son of Lieut. W. Y. Stamper, of the 21st Inf., died in New York recently.

COURT-MARTIAL CASES.

IN the case of Q. M. Sergeant M. J. Ryan, 15th Infantry, tried at Fort Buford for insubordination, disrespect, etc., towards the quartermaster and sentenced to be reduced, confined at hard labor for ten months, and forfeit $100 of his pay, the reviewing authority, Gen. Ruger says: "It appears from the record that the prisoner attempted to prove by cross-examination of a witness for the prosecution, acts of violence to himself by the officer toward whom he was charged with having behaved in a disrespectful and insubordinate manner, but was not permitted to do so—the court holding it not admissible. It does not clearly appear at what precise time such acts of violence were supposed to have been done, but apparently before the last of the disrespectful acts charged against the prisoner, and specified as, in substance, a repetition of a former one. It also appears that the court refused to permit the prisoner, when making his defence, to submit evidence, presumably, to prove such acts of violence as are above referred to, and also declined to receive and place upon the record, a statement by the prisoner made through his counsel, of certain facts he wished to prove in his defence. The prisoner had an undoubted right, upon cross-examination of the officer preferring the charges, a witness for the prosecution and against whom the disrespectful conduct was alleged, to ask questions calculated to bring out all the attending circumstances, and particularly conduct on the part of such officer tending directly to provoke the prisoner to disrespectful conduct; and also to introduce testimony to like effect when making his defence. It is a fair inference from the record as a whole, that the court confined the inquiry essentially to the wrong conduct of the prisoner, and shut out proper evidence offered by the prisoner in extenuation in part, at least, of such conduct. If such inference does not accord with the actual facts, it still remains that the court, by refusing the prisoner the right to state and have appear upon the record what he wished to prove in defence, rendered it impossible for the reviewing authority to judge whether substantial justice was done to the prisoner in the sentence imposed. The proceedings are disapproved, and the findings and sentence set aside. (G.C.-M. O., 15, D. Dakota, 1887.)

CHARLEY TONG SING, one of the survivors of the ill-fated Jeannette, has opened a restaurant at 619 Jackson street, San Francisco.

SOCIETY OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

THE annual reunion of the Society of the Army of the Potomac will be held at Saratoga Springs, New York, on Wednesday and Thursday, June 22 and 23. The orator is Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, of N. Y. City; poet, Wallace Bruce, Esq., of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. The headquarters of the Society are at Congress Hall. The programme is as follows: Wednesday, June 22—11 A. M., Corps meetings in Congress Hall; 2 P. M., Business meeting of Society at the Town Hall; 8 P. M., Public meeting. Welcome by the Mayor, etc. Oration and poem at the Town Hall. Thursday, June 23—Excursions to Mt. McGregor and other points of interest. 7.30 P. M., Banquet at Congress Hall. Price to members of the Society $3, including wines. Hotel charges—The rate at Congress Hall will be $3 a day to veterans and their families, and at the numerous hotels and boarding houses accommodations may be secured at reasonable prices. Railroad rates—Arrangements are in progress to secure half rates from any point in the State of New York. They will be announced in a later notice. There is every indication that this will be the largest meeting since the organization of the Society, and many distinguished officers will be present.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Steward.—See answer to Subscriber in JOURNAL of May 21, 1887, p. 864.

J. A. L.—A portrait of Gen. Boulanger will be found in the Paris Illustré of April 30. It is by Debat-Pouson and from the Salon of 1887.

E. S. C.—Ask your company commander to attend to the matter for you and it may hasten the matter, but auditors of the Treasury are not to be hurried.

J. H. S.—Gen. Grant did not resign but "vacated" his commission as General of the Armies of the U. S., March 4, 1869, the date of his inauguration as President.

On duty.—There is no particular limit to the number of officers of the Army who may be granted leaves of absence at the same time. We are unable to say whether the system is or is not overdone.

J. G.—"American Aristocracy" is by Duane Merritt Greene, formerly an officer of the Army. It was published by the Central Publishing Company of Chicago in 1880. You might get a copy by writing to that company.

Arizona.—Your statements are vague, but we infer from them that your enlistment is valid. Better serve out your time cheerfully and do not waste your relatives' money in trying to do what it is nowadays very difficult to do.

Flotsam.—Capt. William R. Pease is a retired officer of the Army and lives at Wallingford, Conn. Capt. W. B. Pease belongs to the 9th U. S. Infantry, was recently before a Retiring Board at San Francisco, and is now on sick leave.

Subscriber asks: When will the candidates for promotion who lately passed the Department boards be examined at Fort Monroe? ANS.—This has not been decided, but it is presumed that the examination will not take place before Oct. 1.

W. M. B.—It is quite possible to get a commission in the Army without enlisting or passing through West Point, but just at present the prospects are not hopeful for civilian appointments. Still, qualifications and influence may bring about your desire in course of time.

F. A. G.—The loss of the original discharge does not invalidate the claim, but in presenting your papers and certificate of discharge you should make affidavit that you have lost the original (with details), that you have made diligent search to find it but without success, etc. The Paymr.-General of the Army, we presume, can furnish you the necessary blanks.

T. W. asks: Is it not proper for chief of second platoon in column of platoons to give command in changing direction? ANS.—The chiefs of both platoons give commands for wheeling. Par. 261, after defining the action of the chief of the first platoon, says that the second platoon changes direction by the same commands and means as the first. This is as plain as a pikestaff.

W. W. N.—The survivors of the Greely Arctic Expedition are: Gen. Greely, now Chief Signal Officer of the Army; David L. Brainard, 2d Lieut., 2d Cav., Fort Walla Walla; Julius R. Frederick, sick and crippled at his home in Indianapolis, Ind.; Henry Biederbick, Inspector of Customs, New York City; Maurice Connell, 1st class private, Signal Corps, San Francisco, and Francis Long, sergeant, Signal Corps, New York City.

Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

The following are the officers of the Commandery of the State of Pennsylvania, elected May 4; Commander, Major-Gen. David McM. Gregg, U. S. V.; Senior Vice-Commander, Commo. Bancroft Gherardi, U. S. N.; Junior Vice-Commander, Major Wm. H. Lambert, U. S. V.; Recorder, Lieut.-Col. John P. Nicholson, U. S. V.; Registrar, 1st Lieut. Frank D. Howell, late U. S. Army; Treasurer, Pay Director Alexander W. Russell, Captain, U. S. Navy; Chancellor, Gen. William L. James, U. S. V.; Chaplain, Lieut. George Bates Wight, D. D., late 1st N. J. Infantry; Council: Capt. Richard S. Collum, A. Q. M., U. S. Marine Corps; 1st Asst. Engr. Daniel W. Grafly, Lieutenant, late U. S. Navy; Capt. Geo. B. White, U. S. Navy; Gen. Lewis Merrill, U. S. V.; Gen. W. W. H. Davis, U. S. V.

At a meeting of the California Commandery, held at San Francisco, May 25, the following were balloted for; Major H. T. Lee, U. S. V.; Capt. H. S. Thompson, U. S. V.; Capt. J. Ransom, U. S. V.; Lieut. N. D. Hodge, U. S. V., and Lieut. E. T. Blackener, U. S. V. There were also balloted for: Messrs. Louis Sloss, Henry L. Dodge, Wm. Alvord and Geo. C. Perkins, "gentlemen in civil life, who, during the rebellion, were specially distinguished for conspicuous and consistent loyalty to the National Government, and were active and eminent in maintaining the supremacy of the same." The annual election takes place May 28, when the following ticket will be presented: Commander, Commo. G. E. Belknap, U. S. N.; Junior Vice, Major W. G. Gould, U. S. V.; Recorder, Col. W. R. Smedberg, U. S. A.; Registrar, Capt. J. W. Staples, U. S. V.; Treasurer, Capt. C. M. Kine, U. S. V.; Chancellor, Col. A. G. Hawes, U. S. V.; Chaplain, Post Chaplain Winfield Scott, U. S. Army. Council: Gen. Chauncey McKeever, U. S. A.; Gen. Edward S. Salomon, U. S. V.; Gen. Thomas B. Van Buren, U. S. V.; Chief Engr. Montgomery Fletcher, U. S. N., and Lieut. Edward Carlson, U. S. V.

The Memorial Volume to Gen. Hancock, prepared by direction of the Commandery in-Chief, is ready for distribution, and will be forwarded to any address on receipt of seventy-five cents.

The Commandery-in-Chief will convene at Headquarters, 723 Walnut street, Philadelphia, on Wednesday, June 1, at 8 P. M., to take action on the application for a charter to organize the Commandery of the State of Colorado, at Denver.

At a meeting of the District of Columbia Commandery, to be held June 1, Gen. J. C. Abbott, U. S. V., will be balloted for. The commandery now has a total of 333.

THE NAVY.

TALLAPOOSA, 4th rate, 13 guns, Comdr. William Whitehead. Arrived at Rio de Janeiro May 18. Comdr. F. W. Dickens has been ordered to command this vessel, and will sail on the U. S. S. Trenton.

European Station—R.-Admi. Sam. R. Franklin.

Mails should be addressed to care B. F. Stevens, 4 Trafalgar Square, London, England, unless otherwise noted.

PENSACOLA, 2d rate, 16 guns (f. s. e. s.), Captain George Dewey. Was at Villefranche, May 4.

QUINNEBAUG, 3d rate, 8 guns, Comdr. W. M. Folger. Arrived at Villefranche May 4. After Commander Folger's return from Germany, and when the Quinnebaug is ready for sea Rear Admiral Franklin will direct him to proceed with the Quinnebaug to Constantinople and other ports. The Admiral stated that if the Department was to send a crew out to the Quinnebaug the cruise would be deferred until autumn. This is likely to be done as the Department intends to send a crew.

Pacific Station—Rear Admi. L. A. Kimberley.

ALERT, 3d rate, 4 guns, Comdr. J. D. Graham. Intends to cruise with the Mohican on coast of Salvador if required by condition of affairs there. Arrived at Corinto, Nicaragua, April 20, and at Panama May 7. Still there May 17.

Commander J. D. Graham, in a letter dated Corinto, Nicaragua, April 21, 1887, writes: I have the honor to inform the Department of my arrival in this port, with the Alert under my command, at 4.30 P. M., on the 20th of April, from Amapala, Honduras. During my stay in Amapala, the officers were entertained at a State dinner by the Commandant of the Port, in the name of the President of Honduras. I propose to remain here long enough to take in coal, and to await the arrival of the mail steamer from Panama, due on the 25th inst, when I shall leave for Punta Arenas, remaining at the latter port until the arrival of the mail steamer, when I shall proceed direct to Panama, arriving there about May 6 or 7. The general health of the ship's company is excellent, although some of the crew are suffering from slight troubles arising from the excessive hot weather.

ADAMS, 3d rate, 6 guns, Comdr. Louis Kempff. Sailed from Guaymas, April 26, for Las Pas, Mazatlan and Acapulco. Mail matter for the vessel should be sent to care U. S. Navy Pay Office, San Francisco, Cal.

IROQUOIS, 3d rate, 7 guns, Comdr. Richard P. Leary. At Panama May 17.

A report received at the Navy Department from the Pacific station, shows the Iroquois to be in very bad condition. Her hull is badly out of repair. No orders have yet been issued to repair, but she will probably be ordered to Mare Island shortly to be examined by the Board of Survey.

JUNIATA, 3d rate, 8 guns, Comdr. G. T. Davis. It is very probable that the Juniata will be ordered to the Asiatic Squadron. At Caldero April 13, and on May 17 was expected at Panama daily.

MOHICAN, 3d rate, 8 guns, Commander Benjamin F. Day. Was cruising off Salvador ports May 17.

PINTA, 4th rate, screw, 2 guns, Lieut. Comdr. John S. Newell. Cruising in the vicinity of Sitka. Mail matter will reach this vessel quickest by sending it direct to Sitka, Alaska.

THETIS, 4th rate, Lieutenant W. H. Emory, Jr. En route for her station in Alaskan waters. Sailed from Barbadoes, May 26, for Rio de Janeiro.

VANDALIA, 2d rate, 8 guns, (f. s. p. s.), Capt. Henry L. Howison. Arrived at Payta, Peru, May 24.

Asiatic Station—Rear-Admi. Ralph Chandler.

ST. MARY'S, sails, 8 guns, Comdr. A. S. Crowninshield. N. Y. School ship. Address at present, New London, Conn. Cruising in Long Island Sound, preparatory to her cruise to Foreign ports. Expects to leave New London the latter part of May, for Fayal, Azores. Arrive at that port June 10, reach Cadiz June 21, leave Gibraltar July 6, and reach Madeira July 13. From the latter port she will leave for New London about July 20, and arrive there about August 14.

TRENTON, 2d rate, 10 guns, Comdr. N. H. Farquhar. At Norfolk, Va. Was recommissioned May 16. Will sail shortly for Rio, South Atlantic station, with relieving officers and crew for the Lancaster. Will probably be assigned later to the North Atlantic station.

Swatara—At Portsmouth, N. H. Is to have new boilers. It is not known at present when she will be ready for sea. Construction work is practically completed. When ready she will be assigned to duty on the North Atlantic Station.

Enterprise and Nipsic—Undergoing repairs at New York. In all probability will be assigned to the North Atlantic Squadron. Will be completed about July 1.

Chicago—Will be finished at New York. The engines are practically completed, and but little construction work remains to be done. Will be in condition to sail for New York early in June.

Kearsarge—At Portsmouth, N. H., being repaired.

THE 45-ton guns of H. M. S. Colossus have been tried at quick firing at a target, the ship passing at a speed of eight knots. Four rounds were fired in six minutes, three of the four shots striking the target.

LATE advices from Corea are to the effect that the King is rapidly making modern improvements in such parts of his kingdom as are accessible to foreigners, and that much of this is due to advice given him by Rear Admiral Shufeldt, U. S. N.

PETROLEUM refuse has been used as fuel for some time past in many Russian ships of war, and a newly-invented liquid fuel furnace has been ordered to be fitted to several steamers now building for service on the Oxus. The petroleum raises double the amount of steam to that raised for the same weight of coal, so that a vessel's staying power at sea would be doubled.

THE Nautical Gazette says: "The Union Iron Works, San Francisco, has driven the piles and placed the keel-blocks for the Charleston, and the company is only awaiting the arrival of the steel plates to commence the ship. They have several large castings and forgings for the machinery, but not a blow can be struck on the hull for want of material. The Columbian Iron Works, Baltimore, is in very much the same plight as the Union Iron Works; they are progressing with the machinery, but have obtained no hull plates."

THE Naval Ordnance Bureau has ordered the building of six more 6-inch gun carriages, which makes a total of ten now in course of construction.

SURGEON-GENERAL GUNNELL is distributing among the medical officers of the Navy Surgeon Major J. H. Porter's work, entitled, "The Surgeon's Pocket-book," which is especially adapted to field work, when medical appliances are not at hand.

THE only bid received to build a caisson on the Boston Naval drydock was the Atlantic Works, of East Boston, which offered to do the work for $37,500, which is $6,000 in excess of the appropriation for the purpose. The bid was rejected and new proposals will be called for, by advertisement.

MEDICAL DIRECTOR TURNER, of the Navy, is now engaged in experimenting with the present standard Naval ration and is confident that the showing made by him will make the necessity for a change for the better apparent to the authorities. He has a glass "stomach" with which he conducts his digestive experiments.

WITH the absence of Secretary Whitney from Washington and the return of the members of the Ramsay board to their regular stations, the result of the examination of the plans submitted for the two 6,000-ton armored ships is still unknown, as far as official statements are concerned. Little hints from here and there, however, tend to increase the belief that the board's report is one of disagreement. It is said that certain members of the board, including its president, regard the English designs and models as superior to any of the others, while Shield Wilson, of New York, and Edward Burgess, of Boston, the two civilian members, and possibly Assistant Naval Constructor Bowles also, object to the English plans because, in their opinion, the vessels would be top heavy and too slow. At any rate the difference of opinion is so radical that it will be found difficult to reconcile, and it is hardly probable that a decision in favor of any of the plans submitted will be reached soon. The other members of the board besides those before named are Comdr. Goodrich, Chief Engr. Kiersted and Lieut. Knox.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Baltimore Sun, writing from Yokohama, Japan, April 24, says: "The Brooklyn has been caulked on deck and outside by Japanese workmen, and I am safe in making the assertion that these Japs did more work in one day than caulkers in our Navy-yards at home would have done in a week. A day's work here is nine hours, and a caulker who gets as much as 40 cents a day is very well paid. They spent their noon meal hour on board ship, and it was an odd looking sight to see them squatted about the decks, laughing and chatting as happily as though work was a pleasure, as they ate a frugal meal of fish and rice out of curious looking bowls of Japanese pottery, picking up the fish with the fingers of one hand while dexterously using a pair of chopsticks with the fingers of the other, transferring the rice so rapidly from the bowl to the mouth that one could scarcely discern which fingers held the chopsticks. Japanese workmen are also engaged in repairing our boilers with a similar degree of rapidity, but it is not expected that they will complete the work within a month, 18,000 thousand miles of steaming having pretty well worn out boilers which were far from new when we left New York in August last."

FROM THE PACIFIC STATION.

LETTER of Rear Admiral Kimberly, showing disposition of vessels of the Pacific squadron during month of April: Vandalia (flagship), off Panama, arrived March 27. Mohican, arrived at Panama April 2; 12 days from Callao. Sailed April 30 for La Union and the coast of Salvador, to intercept the Alert for same duty, if necessary, and to return to Panama after carrying out present orders. Alert left Acapulco about March 25, after arrival of mail steamer from San Francisco for San Jose de Guatemala and Panama, intending to make stops at La Libertad, La Union, Corinto and Punta Arenas, expecting to reach Panama between May 1 and 10. Orders have been issued for her to cruise with the Mohican on the coast of Salvador, if required by condition of affairs there. Adams left Acapulco for Mazatlan, via Manzanillo, March 20. Orders have been issued, 16th inst., by mail, for her to return to Callao, Peru, after fully carrying out order of the Department. She was also furnished with a copy of the Department telegram concerning stoves from San Francisco. Iroquois—I received a telegram April 22, dated at Arica of the 21st, that she would sail that night for Panama. She is expected here about May 6. Juniata—On April 12 telegraphed by squa iron code, "Proceed on your cruise according to orders in your possession. Come to Panama, stopping en route at discretion." On April 13 received telegram dated Caldera, "All quiet here." Monongahela, storeship, at Coquimbo.

NAVAL ACADEMY.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., May 25, 1887.

THE week has been an eventful one for the candidates for cadet hips at the Academy. For months they have been arriving, singly, in pairs or in parties, alone, with parents, or surrounded by friends. Some have been receiving private instruction from tutors here in the city, while many, probably the greater part stand on their previous preparation. On Monday the steps leading to the Superintendent's office were crowded with these young aspirants, each one looking as if his fate was soon to be settled. As a whole they were probably happier then than at any other time during the week; for a large portion had then to learn the difficulties attending an academy examination and were happier for their ignorance. Before noon all had reported and were ready for the test to begin. On Tuesday all the applicants were examined in English branches and a large proportion passed successfully. On Wednesday came the examination in mathematics, and, as is the case nine times out of ten after admission, it proved a stumbling block to many. To some it proved more than this, a Waterloo, in fact, and seeing the hopelessness of further trials many candidates "folded their tents and stole silently away."

On Thursday and Friday came physical examinations for those successful in their studies, and further chances for those who had failed. On Saturday all was settled, and the May portion of the class of '91 entered the Academy. The number of candidates cannot be said to be less than usual, but only 33 successfully passed their mental examinations, and more than five of these failed physically. As nearly 50 are usually admitted at this time of the year something out of the usual order seems to have taken place.

Whether this can be a change in the examinations or in the ability of the candidates is a question that first suggests itself to an inquirer.

Prominent among those who have just entered is Nive, the Japanese representative at the Academy. He is of middle height, has the features of his race, i. e., of the better portion, and enters upon all his duties with an earnestness that promises success. His knowledge of English is not bad, but he is forced to speak slowly and is sometimes at a loss to express his thoughts.

In his case it is certain that no "hazing" will be attempted as the older cadets have certainly too much sense and too much courtesy to attempt such an action. It is said that all classes of cadets think well of him and are anxious that he should carry back to Japan a favorable impression of the Academy. At present all these new cadets are under the care of Lieut. Wood, U. S. N., and are daily given a "setting up" drill by Swordmaster Corbesier in the armory.

On Saturday afternoon the cadets narrowly escaped a defeat at baseball by their old rivals, the Johns Hopkins University. The game was called at 2 o'clock, and was a hard fought battle, though but four innings could be played. It took an hour to play the first two innings and then a recess was called.

At this time services were held in the chapel—the funeral service of Prof. Dovilliers, so many years connected with the Dept. of Modern Languages. The funeral was well attended by officers and cadets, and the service, as conducted by Chaplain Rawson, was impressive, as it always must be.

Later in the afternoon the contest on the base ball ground was continued, but the college men were forced to leave at 4.20 and only two more innings could be played. In the first half of the third innings the Hopkins teams scored a single run on a disputed point, and, although it was given by the umpire, it was challenged by Captain Bryan of the cadet team and will be referred to base ball authorities. Beside this neither side scored, and at the end of four innings the score stood 1 to 0 in favor of the college team. From the first it was a contest of pitchers, as neither side could hit the ball to any extent. Aside from bases on balls the only hit on either side was made by Bryan of the cadet team.

The game opened by Anderson giving two men bases, and then it required the utmost exertions on the part of the cadets to prevent these men from scoring. After one man struck out, a hot grounder was hit to Bryan at third base. He made a splendid stop and by a quick throw shut out the runner at the home plate and saved the score. The third man went out on a foul tip and the side retired. Snow and Robison struck out for the cadets, Hubbard knocked a fly to left field, which Tarleton dropped and gave him a life. He went to second and made third on Canfield's wild throw to shut him off. Dashiell then gave his whole attention to the batter who retired on a foul tip. After this the game was well played but consisted mostly of battery work, as nearly all struck out. In the third inning a Hopkins' man was on second and one was on third, when a ball was hit to Long at short. He threw it home in time to cut off Canfield, who was coming in from third. He stopped and retired toward third. Hubbard, the cadet catcher, stood on the home plate and held the ball until the runner from second crossed third. As he ran over the base, the ball was thrown to Bryan, who touched him out. When the ball left the home plate, Canfield rushed in and crossed it, making the only score. His run was disputed on the ground that as the ball was at the home plate, while another runner held third, and he was between the two, he was thereby forced out. The umpire decided him safe and his run was scored. For the Hopkins team, the battery did all the work, Dashiell in the box and Canfield behind the bat, comprising the backbone of the team. For the cadets, Anderson, Bryan, Long, Allen and Snow played well, but all the team proved weak at the bat.

In the evening the cadets gave their last hop before the June ball. The usual number were present and the entertainment was as enjoyable as ever. An extension was granted by the superintendent and the hop did not close till nearly 11.

This week a different drill is held every afternoon, as a preparation for the Board of Visitors.

Next week the annual examinations will take place and there will be no drills during the week. Those warned that they are unsatisfactory for the year or are likely to be, have been notified for several weeks and have made special efforts to redeem their situation. The re-examinations wanted some cadets, who were deficient last term, have commenced.

Miss Cushman is visiting Mrs. Engr. Farmer.

The President May 23 appointed Commo. David B. Harmon, Wm. A. Wallace, of New York, H. S. Van Eaton, of Mississippi, Asa Morgan, of Arkansas, Thomas A. Logan, of Ohio, and Prof. D. C. Gilman, president of the Johns Hopkins University, as members of the Board of Visitors to the Naval Academy. The other members of the board are Senators Aldrich and Gray, representing the Senate, and Representatives Herbert, Goff and Sayers, representing the House of Representatives. Senator Aldrich's absence in Europe will prevent his attendance. The Board house will be ready for occupancy June 3, and the formal reception of the Board will take place June 4, at 10 o'clock.

REVENUE MARINE.

The board which examined candidates for appointment as cadets in the Revenue Marine Service has reported to Secretary Fairchild that the following-named persons passed a satisfactory examination and gained the highest percentage of those examined: Leonidas L. Robinson, Percy H. Brereton, Shepherd K. Smith and Frederick G. Dodge.

Appointments.—Horace Hassel, Chief Engineer; C. W. Munroe and W. H. Warren, First Assistant Engineers, and O. N. Turner and D. F. Bowen, Second Assistants.

A San Francisco despatch of May 24 says: "The police duties of revenue cutters in Alaskan waters are by no means over, as was thought because of the schooners being released. Captain Shepherd will sail on June 1 with strict, explicit orders to seize every vessel, no matter of what nationality, found transgressing the provisions of the law, relating to fishing in the territorial waters.

The 16-ton schooner Carrie, of New Haven, bound for Rockaway with a cargo of oysters, was run down and sunk off Eaton's Neck during the fog May 25 by the U. S. Coast Survey schooner Eagre. The Eagre struck the Carrie amidships, cutting her in two. Capt. Chappell and Seaman John Petersen, of the Carrie, were picked up by a boat's crew from the Eagre.

The steamer Johnson has been put in commission for a summer cruise on the lakes.

2d Lieut. F. G. F. Wadsworth has been ordered to duty on the Perry, 2d Lieut. G. H. Doty to the Fessenden, and 2d Lieut. Edmund Burke to the Johnson.

The following promotions of Revenue Marine officers are announced this week: 1st Assistant Engineer Horace Hassell, to be Chief Engineer; 2d Assistant Engineers C. W. Munroe and W. H. Warren, to 1st Assistants; 3d Assistant Engineers O. N. Turner and D. F. Bowen, to be 2d Assistants.

A despatch from Port Townsend, Washington Territory, says: "The revenue cutter Oliver Walcot has returned from a four days' cruise along the west coast of Vancouver Island in search of news concerning the ship St. Stephens."

SECRETARY WHITNEY KNOWS 'EM.

OMAHA World: Omaha Man—Secretary Whitney must be very popular in Washington.

Washington Man—How so?

"I saw by the paper recently that when men call at his house on business he don't keep them waiting in the hall as some great personages do in other places, but even if he is at dinner he jumps up and hurries out to see them."

"Oh! well, Whitney has had a good deal of experience in Washington, you know."

"Experience?"

"Yes, he knows the sort of blokes who rush to Washington after offices are not above robbing a hat rack if they get a good chance."

A STUDENT, being desirous of learning whether there was any truth in the statement that Seneca was addicted to drunkenness opened an illustrated encyclopædia, and having found the name of the celebrated philosopher, the first object that met his gaze was a woodcut, beneath which were the words, "Seneca, after an ancient bust." The ardent investigator, finding his worst fears confirmed, looked no further.

A TRAVELLING sleight-of-hand man visited an Indian encampment in Idaho the other day. He took one of the camp dogs in hand and soon drew a large number of coins from his tail to the intense astonishment of the Indians. When he left the Indians promptly killed the dog and dissected him. They were ready to lynch the magician when they found no money in him.

ANNOUNCEMENT.
TO ARMY OFFICERS.

The undersigned having represented the Penn Mutual Life Ins. Co., of Philadelphia, as its General Agent for Northern Ohio, during the past year, with the experience thus gained feels himself to be competent to give Army Officers advice on many matters pertaining to Life Insurance, which may be to their advantage. To this end, therefore, be gratuitously offers his services to the Army, and respectfully invites correspondence from such as desire information on this subject.

While the Company he represents has no superior in the country for security or for liberality in its policies to officers in the Military Service, yet he will be pleased to advise and assist officers who may prefer to place their insurance in other reputable companies. Information as to the standing of the various companies and their relative profitableness for investment he will gladly communicate to those who desire it; also advice as to kind of policy best suited and most profitable to those of different ages.

By this announcement the undersigned hopes that he may serve the interests of his brother officers, enabling them to place their insurance in the most substantial and profitable companies, in a form of policy most advantageous to themselves.

THE picayune policy which controls our Government in some matters seriously embarrasses officers who are honored with the position of official representative of the United States in foreign countries. The little fortune that Admiral Farragut had accumulated during a lifetime was nearly all expended in paying the expenses imposed upon him by his position as the representative of his Government when he went abroad on his last cruise in command of the European Squadron, 1867-8. A Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Times now tells us that "many officers are loath to accept such invitations as France now offers, as they are brought into contact abroad on such occasions with foreign officers whose Governments have provided them with generous allowances for expenses, and not a few of them have large private fortunes. Col. Volkmar, now an Assistant Adjutant-General, when in the cavalry arm of the Service was chosen to represent this country at the military practice in France. He remembers his visit with regret, as he had only his salary as a captain with which to maintain the dignity of his Government, while officers from other countries had liberal allowances for entertainment."

SOME ARTILLERY NOTES.

IN a recent lecture before the Royal United Service Institution Major General W. H. GOODENOUGH, C. B., R. A., called attention to one advantage resulting from the practice of artillerists in musketry firing which may help to reconcile those who object to their occupying so much time with this branch of military training. The lecturer stated that he had found that men instructed in musketry had their eyes so trained to the use of sights, that they become ready and quick in laying the gun. He dwelt at the same time upon the necessity of training the men in artillery, and, in order to make all ranks take interest in accuracy, he suggested that some valued recognition of artillery firing should be instituted. A high officer of the German artillery who discusses the subject of the artillery of the future, shows that it is not sufficient to charge and point the gun, however well that may be done, for this is merely technical, and it would be comparatively useless to have even excellent batteries unless there were present a man of great intelligence to group them in action. Such an officer must then be provided with a corps of horsemen for the purpose of transmitting his orders. Another writer who, in the Italian Revista, of Rome, considers the subject of horse artillery, remarks that since the wars of 1870-71-77-78, that special force has been recognized as indispensable in modern armies. "The increase of horse artillery in the principal States of Europe on a larger scale, shows that the lesson learned from recent wars is that the arm should be rendered independent of field artillery," "and that it should be considered a specialité of artillery in campaigning." He argues that the batteries should not be reduced but armed with special pieces, light and powerful, evidently inclining to the adoption of quick-firing guns of greater range than the present 7 c. pieces.

Of our own artillery an officer of the Army writes us that the new field gun is too heavy for horse artillery and of questionable value as a field gun. He says: "With a charge of 3.75 lbs. and 1,750 f. s. initial vel., it will have a terminal velocity at 4,500 yards of 675 f. s. To secure efficiency at this range bullets of 27 to the pound will have to be used with about ninety in the shell. With a 15 lb. projectile and 1,525 f. s. the terminal velocity at this range will be 725 f. s. and the energy about 57 foot tons; that of the 15 lb. shot with 1,750 f. s. about 48 f. t. The German horse artillery gun, adopted nearly twenty years ago, uses a shrapnel projectile nearly a pound lighter than ours, yet it contains 123 bullets, as against 107 for our own, and the former bullets, be it well remembered, are 27 to the pound, while ours are but 32. The effective range of the German gun being practically equal to ours, its efficiency is about 15 per cent. greater. The old German field gun has a projectile of 17.9 lbs., with 210 bullets, 27 to the pound, and some 300 yards greater effective range. What show, he asks, would a battery of our guns have against one like this? Its efficiency is at least twice as great as our own. Our projectile contains 25.7 per cent. of its weight in bullets; the German horse gun 37.3 per cent., and their field gun 43 per cent. Cannot our mechanics," this officer asks, "make a shell as good as that of Germany or the Italian shell which shall contain the same percentage of bullets, giving, instead of 90, 246 bullets of 44 to the pound, which can be used with the greatly increased terminal velocity, thus increasing the efficiency of the gun nearly three times. At the same time the muzzle energy will be reduced from 276 to 242 foot-tons, and the greatly to be desired, lighter carriage can be secured. We kick ourselves 34 foot-tons harder than is necessary, and fail to kick the enemy by nine foot-tons as hard as we might. It is claimed that the high velocity gives us 'greater dangerous space,' but it is not apparent upon what theory of ballistic this is founded. Artillery officers hold the excessive velocities sought for, in part responsible for this. It necessitates a very strong shell, which will have little room for bullets. At 2,000 yards the terminal velocity of the 13 lb. projectile, 1,750 f. s., is 977 f. s.; that of the 15 lb. projectile, 1,525 f. s., is 977.3 f. s. Up to about this range the former will have very slightly the advantage in both the angles of projection and fall.

"But is this what we want? Within this range it sometimes is of great neces ity to fire over our own troops, and this any increase in the angle of projection will favor. This 'dangerous space' is now created by shrapnel fire. Too flat a trajectory, again, is not wanted. Beyond about 2,000 yards, all of the conditions whirl completely around again in favor of the heavier projectile, and the angles of projection and fall are less than with the lighter projectile, and just what one desires, for at the long ranges we have too much of both, and any reduction is to be desired. It seems to me," concludes our correspondent, "that the Ordnance Department have followed the theories of NORMAN WIARD in his absurd Nut Island experiments. It has achieved magnificent results in the construction of a gun, which is a marvel of strength, as is also the carriage, but it appears to have forgotten that our object is not so much to build a gun which can exhibit to us at the breech its powers of resistance as to astonish the enemy several thousand yards in front of its muzzle with its capacity for offence. We had better have a heavier projectile with two or three times as many bullets and less initial velocity."

ENGLISH ORDNANCE INVESTIGATIONS.

THE indignation expressed by the New York Tribune at the report of the English Ordnance Inquiry Commission will doubtless awake in the breast of Englishmen feelings akin to those entertained by the small boy who objected to another lad's tears over his grandmother's grave on the ground that it was none of his funeral. Our contemporary characterizes the judgment of the commission as not corrupt, but utterly stupid. Their report, it says, "contains some of the most astonishing literature of modern days. The system, when any system exists, is bad. The results are—unsatisfactory guns, six years' talk about rifles and no rifles, swords that will neither thrust nor cut, shells that don't burst, fuses that don't light, cartridges that jam, bayonets bending into corkscrews, the worst horse artillery gun in Europe; in a word, the system always at fault and the officials always blundering. The commission show the usual British tenderness towards individuals. They propose to censure nobody, much less punish. Very different would be Lord WOLSELEY'S action if he had his way. His frankness of speech is among the most refreshing features of a document which to every Englishman can only be appalling in its revelations."

As a matter of fact, the Cutlass Committee at least does fix the responsibility on Sir JOHN ADYE, Director-General of Artillery; Colonels DIXON, FRASER and CLOSE, Superintendents at Enfield; Captain HOOD, Director of Naval Ordnance; Captain BOYS, captain of the Excellent, and Mr. TERRY, foreman of the Enfield works. The committee do not undertake to apportion the responsibility, leaving those concerned to divide it between them, share and share alike or in any other way they please. Broad Arrow, with less reserve, declares that the blame rests with the higher authorities of the War Office, who for years past have been supine and careless with respect to the supply of weapons of war to a degree that has almost been criminal, and have recommended officers of the Royal Artillery for the important mechanical appointments of superintendents of a War Office manufacturing establishment, who possessed no previous experience. They have shirked the responsibility that properly devolved upon them, and have allowed their controlling power to slide into the hands of the heads of the Manufacturing Departments.

One of our watchful newspaper critics who is consumed with benevolent anxiety that the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL should be right in all things, by his excess of zeal in this regard recently misled Broad Arrow as to the character of the criticisms we have at times felt called upon to make at the expense of some of our own officials. The comments upon the report of the Cutlass Commission, which we quote, are in the line of the only animadversions we have made, which were not intended to reflect upon the integrity of anyone, but to warn those most interested against the misleading influence of certain professional habits of mind. The English officials have fallen under censure because of their undue reliance upon theoretical opinions in mechanical matters which lie beyond the range of their practical experience. They have been misled, apparently, by that want of appreciation of the knowledge and experience of others, to which self-reliant men are prone. Major-General FRASER, for example, when asked whether the making of swords was an operation so difficult as experts in the trade had maintained, replied jauntily: "I dare say there is a knack in it;" and further, "I know nothing about the making of swords, and I do not pretend to know anything about it." Yet he and others of like self-confidence, ventured to differ in nearly every essential point from the trained experts in sword-making whose valuable opinions were freely given.

PROSPECTS OF THE PANAMA CANAL.

THE opinion of those who are most familiar with the affairs of the Panama Canal Company seems to be that the canal will be completed, but not by the present company, which is approaching the end of its career of brilliant financiering and wasteful expenditure. A despatch from Panama, May 16, announces that in one of the largest, longest, and deepest cuts, high up above the prospective canal work, water has been struck. The amount of earth and rock taken out of the section referred to represents millions of dollars, and all this work is to-day valueless, as the water has washed from the side of the mountain more than sufficient to fill all the cuts. An English engineer, Mr. R. NELSON BOYD, in some notes on the Panama Canal in the Engineer, states the positive opinion that it will be clearly impossible to complete the canal under six years from Jan. 1, 1887, and he inclines to the opinion that it will take nearer twelve than six years. The mishap just reported may further extend this period. Mr. BOYD estimates the total amount of excavation, including deviating and other works, as 150,000,000 cubic metres and the quantity already removed as 30,000,000 metres, or one-fifth. Taking into account the preliminary work, the engineers consider that one-third the actual work on the canal is accomplished, but this has taken five years, and it will thus take another ten to complete the remaining two-thirds. Even assuming the preparatory arrangements to be all that that can be desired, an unavoidable delay will occur at the Culevra cutting. This "immense and difficult work," says Mr. BOYD, "cannot be accomplished under six years, as estimated by men acquainted with the circumstances and competent to judge. Then, again, taking the first or present rate of excavation, we are not allowing for the greater difficulties of the work as the depth increases. Up to the present time all earth moved has been close to the surface, and most of it has been moved by level roads. Later it will be necessary to raise the earth 29½ ft., and the tips will be further away, so that as time goes on we ought to reckon on a smaller and not a larger rate of excavation."

As to cost, Mr. BOYD says: "It is generally believed that more than the original capital has been already spent. Assuming that 1,000,000,000f. have been absorbed by the existing works, interest on capital, etc., the amount of capital eventually required will be over 3,000,000,000f., say £120,000,000 sterling;" six hundred millions of dollars, or more than the cost of all of our great railroad highways connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific. In conclusion, Mr. BOYD says with equal truth and force: "Of course it is quite possible that in less time and at less cost a ditch from end to end with water flowing from the Pacific to the Atlantic may be made, but not the canal as designed, 29½ feet deep. The impression made on the mind by a visit to the canal is a sad one. It seems as if the success of Suez was to be tarnished by the failure of Panama, and the brilliant reputation earned in the East lost in the West. The Suez Canal has been followed too closely for a work constructed under very different circumstances. The engineers at the head of Panama have been those of the Suez Canal. The section is much the same, and a great deal of the early machinery was similar to that used at Suez, though quite useless at Panama. The difficulties were underrated by the early surveyors, and the rate of wages miscalculated. Now there is uncertainty and hesitation about the plans to be adopted, and an eager but tardy straining after economy."

THE English public officials are nothing if not exact. A half-pay officer having furnished a certificate that he was alive in January, was required to send another certificate to prove that he was alive in the previous June. We commend this to the attention of the ingenious interpreters of law in our own Public Departments who are so fond of raising fine points at the expense of the unlucky presenters of accounts. It will make some of them green with envy to see how much the trained worshippers of routine in foreign offices can discount them.

THOSE who have exerted themselves to improve the sanitary conditions under which the members of the Army and Navy live, will find an illustration of the importance of the work they have undertaken in an article by Mr. CHARLES F. WINGATE, brother of General WINGATE, which appears in the New York Epoch. Mr. WINGATE shows that 55 per cent. of the deaths in New York are among the tenement-house population, and as two-thirds of the residents of New York dwell in tenement-houses, this is not an undue proportion. But these deaths, it appears, are largely concentrating in a small proportion of the tenement-houses, estimated at one-eighth. In the worst of these houses the mortality is simply appalling, equalling the mortality rate of 100 per 1,000, which would give a total of 125,000 to 150,000 for the entire city, if the deaths in all sections were in like proportion. In 3,300 tenements there were 12,000 deaths, an average of nearly 4 to a house. In 3,557 others the annual average was one to each house, while in 4,000 tenements there was not a single death in 1880. Of 21,000 tenements 5,000 are classed as good, 9,000 as fair, 5,000 as bad, and about 2,000 very bad. Mr. WINGATE says: "I have found a building in Monroe street where 59 deaths occurred in nine years, though the total number of tenants was only 76. Such a building should not be permitted to stand, but ought to be swept from the face of the earth."

It is hoped that some improvement will result from a bill which has just passed the Legislature, authorizing a Board, to consist of the Mayor and other leading city officers, to spend $1,000,000 annually in tearing down objectionable quarters of the city, and creating new parks and recreative resorts in their place. With the new parks across the Harlem River, which are provided for by existing law, New York will have, aside from the small parks referred to above, in all 4,902 acres of park area. London has 22,000 acres, one tract alone having 6,000 acres, or nearly one-half the area of Manhattan Island. Paris has 172,000 acres, only 500 acres of which are within its boundary, while 2,000 acres of the London parks are within the city limits. With the annexation of an additional portion of lower Westchester County, which is expected soon, the entire area of the New York parks will be within the city boundaries. In 1807 DEWITT CLINTON, to whose prescience New York State is indebted for the Erie Canal, mapped out a plan of parks for the Island of Manhattan, which included an area of 100,000 acres. Before the passage of the act of 1884, increasing the area of New York City parks, the park area of that city was in the proportion of one acre to every 1,363 of the population, while the park acreage of London was in the ratio of 1 to 205; of Paris, 1 to 13; of Vienna, 1 to 100; of Dublin, 1 to 183; of Chicago, 1 to 200; of St. Louis, 1 to 167; of Boston, 1 to 190; and of San Francisco, 1 to 211. It is now 1 to 300 in New York. Other American cities have proportions as follows: Washington, 1 to 150; Buffalo, 1 to 258; Baltimore, 1 to 575; Savannah, 1 to 550; Brooklyn, 1 to 639.

THERE is no longer any doubt that Secretary Endicott intends to detail Colonel John G. Parke to duty as Superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy, and it is expected that the necessary order will be issued early in June. General Merritt will be relieved from the Academy shortly after the close of the graduating exercises, and will be assigned to the command of the Department of Missouri. General Parke will not return from Europe until the latter part of August or early in September, so that Captain Hasbrouck will be in charge of the Academy during the summer encampment of the cadets. There had been some talk of relieving this officer early in the coming fiscal year, but that plan has now, we understand, been abandoned, and it is probable that he will continue to fill the office of commandant of cadets for another six months or a year.

THE board on the rules and regulations for the new Hospital Corps of the Army is gradually closing up its work, and will probably be able to make up its report by June 1. It is understood that it has already been decided to exempt hospital stewards now in the Service from further examinations, but it is probable that they will be given new appointments, to take effect from the date of the passage of the act, from which date they will be entitled to the increase of pay. It is expected that the board will also recommend a slight increase in the present force.

A WASHINGTON correspondent of the New York Times, "E. G. D.," says:

One of the greatest obstacles encountered by the present administration in its efforts to improve the Government service is a love of comfort and personal convenience that had been permitted under the preceding Administrations for many years. In the minds of too many public officers, of high and low station, the idea of disturbing the practices that have prevailed for years is about as repulsive and as revolutionary, and so deserving of reprobation, as anything that can be imagined. In spite of the best intentions of good officers the political power behind many employees still defies attempts at reform involving such slight disturbances as the shifting female clerks from desk to desk. I have heard a strong, capable, and not cowardly man say that, having transferred some women in his bureau for reasons of the most practical and businesslike character, he was pounced upon by a horde of friends of each of the women disturbed, argued with, menaced, abused, and all but physically demolished. So persistent and fierce was the assault that he was obliged, for reasons of personal comfort, to restore all the women to the places they had occupied when he ought to have dismissed them, and then to suffer the torture he deserved of feeling that the women all despised him for not possessing the power he should have had, while they gloried in being able, with their "influence," to run a branch of the Government.

In illustration of this, "E. G. D." cites the case of the Army Medical Board in New York, which, on the authority of the Secretary of War, he declares to have been unnecessary as organized, its methods dilatory and unbusinesslike, and 20 months having been consumed in work that should have been disposed of in 60 days. Acting upon this opinion, Secretary Endicott issued a code of instructions under which he thought the Board could complete its work in a fortnight. "E. G. D." concludes:

Instead of "fooling" away the whole summer on a small job, the board went to work according to the new instructions. The difficulties in the way of the applicants appear to have been great, according to the reported result. On April 6 the President of the Medical Board reported the termination of the labors of the board. He showed in detail the cause of its exceeding the limit of time suggested by the Secretary of War, and that of the applicants examined one was rejected, two withdrew during examination, four withdrew before the examination began, one failed to appear, and one declined to appear.

This history of an effort to correct laxity in system and to break up ruts into which officers have settled because they brought comfort and personal liberty to enjoy the long summer months on nominal duty is more important as showing that abuses can be discovered and corrected if the head of a department is a thorough and determined man, than it is as an illustration of speed in reform. But the present Administration must make its record up of an aggregation of apparently slight reforms, and in that view it increases an already admirable accumulation of necessary reforms.

COLONEL H. B. REESE, the senior major of the Pay Department, has again requested to be placed on the retired list, and the Paymaster General, under date of May 20, recommended to the Secretary of War that his request be granted. Majors P. P. G. Hall, J. P. Willard, and H. G. Thomas are also incapacitated for further service, but as there are no prospects for their early retirement the Paymaster General has considered it useless to urge action in their cases. None of these officers have been examined by Retiring Boards, but their disability is well established by physicians' certificates. Should the War Department conclude to include them in the 400 retired list, these officers would be retired under the act of 1884 permitting paymasters to retire after twenty years' service, and such being the case no action by Retiring Boards would be required. The chances are, however, that the twenty years' act will continue inoperative for some time to come, as there seems to be no intention at present of changing the policy of filling the disability list by retirements from the line. No retirements have thus far been made under this law. An attempt was made shortly after its enactment to transfer a Judge Advocate to the Pay Department for the purpose of allowing him to retire under its provisions, but the plan was frustrated by adverse action of the Paymaster General.

THERE is quite a lively competition between the chiefs of staff bureaus of the War Department for the desirable offices in the west and centre wings of the new State, War and Navy Department Building. According to the legislative bill for the coming fiscal year all the outside bureaus of the War Department, with the exception of a small portion of the Surgeon General's office, are to be concentrated in the new building by March 1, 1888. A rearrangement of the entire department force will then take place. It is understood to be Secretary Endicott's intention to change his office to the new west front on the same floor in which he is now located, and to have all the chiefs of bureaus on the same floor with him, the allotment of rooms to be made among the chiefs according to seniority. The Lieutenant General would thus have first choice and General Benét next. It is probable that the Lieutenant General will take the quarters vacated by the Secretary.

NO OPINION has yet been rendered by the Court of Claims in the case of Signal Observer King, but as the present term of the court expires week after next some action will certainly be taken next Monday or the Monday following.

THE Director-General of the Medical Department of the British Navy, Sir John Watt Reid, has given official notification of the appointment by the Admiralty of Deputy Inspector-General Lloyd, of the Director-General's office, as the representative of the Navy at the approaching session of the International Congress to be held in the city of Washington on Sept. 5. The Horse Guards had already gazetted Deputy Surgeon-General Jeffrey A. Marsten, R. A., as the representative of the Medical Department of the Army.

IT is understood that late returns from Department boards have added several names to the list of successful candidates from the ranks, for commissions as 2d lieutenants, published in the JOURNAL two weeks ago. It is thought that at least a dozen non-commissioned officers will be ordered before the Fort Monroe board, when convened.

THE Japanese have adopted a plan for providing the money necessary for coast defences which relieves the mass of the people of the charge and throws it upon the class chiefly concerned. With the permission of the Mikado, the wealthy classes of Japan are subscribing sums ranging all the way from $1,000 to $100,000 for this purpose. No sum less than $1,000 is accepted.

THE act passed by last Congress breaking up the tribal organizations of the Indians is soon to be put into force. Each head of a family is to receive 160 acres of land, and the male adults are to become citizens. The surplus lands on which the Indians have a lien will be sold, and the interest on the funds raised will go to the support of the red men. This will put an end forever to the scandals of our Indian administration.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S sixty-ninth birthday happened on Wednesday of this week, May 24, and was quietly celebrated, the manifestations of loyalty and affection by the loyal Britishers and others being held in reserve for the greater jubilee celebration now close at hand.

HAMILTON POST 20, G. A. R., of Poughkeepsie, is to celebrate Memorial Day by a public parade, to which a large number of organizations have been invited. We return our own thanks for a courteous invitation.

LATE ARMY ORDERS.

1st Lieut. G. A. Thurston, 3d Art., is granted four months' leave on surgeon's certificate. Capt. J. J. O'Connell, 1st Inf., 15 days' leave from June 11. Asst. Surg. W. H. Suter, recently appointed, will report for temporary duty at Washington Barracks, D. C. Capt. G. E. Pond asst. quartermaster, is relieved as post quartermaster at Fort Riley, Kas., to devote his time to construction work at that post. Lieut. R. B. Watkins, Signal Corps, is granted one month's further extension of leave. Lieut. J. C. Gresham, 7th Cav., is granted three months' further extension to his leave. Lieut. Col. Cyrus B. Comstock, Corps of Engrs., is granted six months extension of leave on account of sickness, with permission to go beyond the sea. (S. O., H. Q. A., May 27.)

CLEANING BETWEEN SHOTS.

IN a letter to the Boston Rifle, describing some remarkable shooting by himself and Mr. Gibbs, Sir Henry Halford says: "We fired in all 198 shots. Only 16 were out of bull's-eyes elevation, and the whole 198 were in four feet six inches for elevation. Charge of powder, 80 grains, Curtis and Harvey, No. 6, Metford's wads. No cleaning. Rifles blown into four or five times between shots. Mr. Gibbs's shots were fired at the rate of about one a minute; bullet, Metford's, 540 grains weight. The rifle was an old one, which had fired over 20,000 shots, held by Major Young for three or four years, made by Gibbs. I was using a new Metford made by Gibbs, and we were shooting to see if one rifle was better than the other, and could not settle it, for both rifles were doing equally well. The shooting is a positive proof that it is not necessary to clean out between shots to get the best results."

The report of the Naval Advisory Board on the trial trip of the Atlanta has been received at the Navy Department. The board recommends a few slight alterations and some additional work upon the vessel to fit her to go into active service, and the Secretary has given orders to the proper bureaus to have these recommendations carried out.

MAJOR-GENERAL A. H. TERRY and Colonel T. F. Barr, U. S. A., arrived at Fort Leavenworth on Tuesday to inspect the Military Prison.

ROBBERY OF PAYMASTER BASH.

THE Court of Inquiry instituted on the demand of Major Daniel N. Bash, Paymaster, U. S. Army, of which Col. Henry A. Morrow, 21st Inf., is President, has reported the facts and opinion as to the circumstances connected with the reported robbery of Maj. D. N. Bash, Paymaster, U. S. A., at Antelope Springs, Wyo. Ty., Mar. 18, 1887, of the public funds with which he was en route to make payments, with the following opinion:

"1st. That Major Daniel N. Bash, Paymaster, U. S. Army, was robbed at Antelope Springs, Wyo. Ty., on March 18, 1887, of $7,350.03, public money, belonging to the United States, by one Charles Parker, a cowboy, and no part of the money was recovered.

"2d. That Major Daniel N. Bash, Paymaster, U. S. Army, did not give such direct and detailed orders to the members of the escort, as to the manner in which they should guard the public money, in his (Bash's) possession, while en route to Fort McKinney, as the importance of the matter required; and that he did not take the proper and necessary pains to see that any orders which he had given on this subject, were duly obeyed.

"3d. That Sergeant Fox and Private Gregg, were negligent in the performance, of their duties as members of an escort to a paymaster having public funds in his possession.

"4th. That Sgt. Fox, who is a foreigner, by reason of imperfect knowledge of the English language; and Private Gregg, by reason of want of sufficient intelligence, were not proper persons to entrust with the very important and responsible duty of guarding a paymaster, with a large sum of public money, through as wild a country as lies between Douglas, Wyo. Ty., and Fort McKinney, Wyo. Ty.

"5th. That no further action on the part of the military authorities is necessary."

The Department Commander concurs in the opinion of the court that further proceedings by the military authorities are unnecessary, and calls the attention of post commanders to paragraph 4 of the opinion of the court, and to the fact that it was also shown in evidence that the escort was not properly armed. An escort should have, in addition to revolvers, the arms prescribed by regulations.

CLAIMS FOR PERSONAL PROPERTY LOST.

THE application of Sergt. John M. Kenney, late of Co. I, 7th U. S. Cav., for a writ of mandamus on Secretary of War Endicott to compel him to act on his claim for personal property lost in the military service of the United States, under the Act of March 3, 1885, was certified by Judge Cox to the General Term, to be heard in the first instance, and the order to show cause why the writ should not issue, was returnable May 13 before the General Term of the Supreme Court, D. C. The case was continued until May 23, when a return to the order was made by the Secretary.

The Secretary of War was represented by Assistant Attorney General Watson; Messrs. Allan Rutherford and Geo. A. King appeared for the relator, John M. Kenney. Secretary Endicott stated in his reply to the order, that he would act on the case, and the counsel for Sergt. Kenney then agreed that the application be dismissed without prejudice on the understanding that the Secretary would perform his duty under the law and act on the 200 or more claims, some of which have been pending for over two years before him. Each case is to be decided on its merits, it having been found impracticable to adopt a general rule for the payment of them all. It is pretty well understood, however, that the Department will be in no hurry to dispose of these claims, as the Secretary is still hopeful of having Congress come to his rescue. The Secretary has been determined to have the law repealed or amended so as to limit the indemnity, but the framers of the law were in sympathy with the claimants. While waiting for their action the law has been suffered to remain a dead letter. The Secretary did go so far as to appoint a board to recommend a list of articles for which indemnity should be allowed. They recommended the following: Parlor, bedroom, dining-room, kitchen, library and hall furniture; table-ware, provisions and groceries, civilian clothing, military clothing and equipments and money. These suggestions were concurred in by the accounting officers, but the Secretary still declined to act.

THEY EARNED THEIR TITLES.

"ABOUT these titles, now," said a new resident of Kansas to a native, "I want to know something about them. There's Colonel Woodchuck, for instance; how did he get his title?" "Don't know, but he registered that way at the hotel when he first came, so we suppose it's all right." "And Captain Duster?" "He's captain of a base-ball nine." "There's Judge Snoozenberry." "He was judge in a hog-guessing match once." "Commodore Sandbarr." "He runs the ferry-boat." "How about Prof. Bilk?" "He's a pugilist." "And Senator McTuff?" "Oh, he gets mad and wants to fight if we don't call him that." "And the Honorable McBride?" "He ran for the Legislature once." "And Gen. Carpetbagg?" "Well, you see, he is a leading citizen, and we kind o' give it to him in recognition of his public services. Oh, we came by our titles honestly. They call me captain because I've lived in the State 25 years, and if you'll just walk around sort of straight and give it out that you're a major it will be all right."—Dakota Bell.

A DAKOTA paper says: "At the funeral service of the late Colonel Winchester on Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Winchester administered a well-deserved rebuke to the officiating clergyman. The Rev. Dr. Wheezer had just remarked in the course of his sermon that the Colonel was the fourth husband buried by that lady, when the sorrowing widow dried her tears for a moment and drew a large black-snake whip from behind the sofa and struck the reverend gentleman over the head several times. She was assisted back to the sofa when she again wept bitterly. It seems that the Colonel was only her third husband.—Dakota Bell.

SURGEON J. R. WAGGENER, of the Iroquois, arrived at New York, May 24, with Lieut. M. K. Schwenk, who accidently shot himself in the arm on the vessel recently. Lieutenant Schwenk has been placed in hospital.

ANDIDATES FOR THE MILITARY ACADEMY.

THE following is a list of the candidates who appear for examination June 15, 16 and 17 for admission to the U. S. Military Academy. The list comprises 144 candidates and 39 alternates:

Alabama.—James L. Lowell, Sterling P. Adams, Chas. P. Echols.
Arkansas.—Paul Cook, Felix Alfred Kelso.
California.—Bright Burnett Hinshaw, Henry Watson Mizner, Wm. Norton Wood.
Connecticut.—Herbert Royden, Frank S. Long, Lewis C. Lawton (alternate).
Georgia.—Ensley E. Griffin, George Gordon Crawford, Glen Waters (Alt.), Charles J. Humber, Claude W. Wicker.
Illinois.—John J. Bradley, W. F. Grote, Chas. E. Goodhue (Alt.), John H. Smith, Ross L. Bush, Walter P. Paterbaugh (Alt.), Sylvanus J. Leech, Chas. C. Ogden, Lucian G. Smith (Alt.), Chas. Jas. Enbank.
Indiana.—Frank Spear Armstrong, Cassius McMullen, David M. Mattier (Alt.), Asa P. Long, Bird H. Davis, Daniel E. Storms.
Iowa.—Wells W. Wood, George H. McManus (Alt.), Geo. P. White, Milton E. Reed (Alt.), Hanson E. Ely, Palmer E. Pierce, Wm. G. Meissner (Alt.), John T. Brady, Fred P. Wilson, Clark Whittemore.
Kansas.—Claude B. Sweezey, Wm. J. Henderson, Augustus F. Burke, Donald Wickham Kellogg (Alt.), E. J. Rhodes.
Louisiana.—John Barker Galleher, Andrew Hero, Jr. (Alt.), Wm. D. Collins, Wm. L. Erwin (Alt.), Saint J. Liddell, Henry A. Piper.
Maine.—D. B. Metcalf, Albert B. Donwarth.

THE STATE TROOPS.

NATIONAL DRILL AND ENCAMPMENT.

IN G. O. No. 1. May 23, Major-Gen. C. C. Augur, commanding, announces his staff as follows:

Chief of Staff, Brigadier-General Albert Ordway; Adjutant-General, Brigadier-General James R. Carnahan, Ind.; A. A. Generals, Brig.-Gen. Johnstone Jones, N. C.; Colonel Henry Kyd Douglas, Md.; Col. P. M. B. Young, Ga.; Colonel Charles King, Wis.; Lieut.-Col. P. Lacy Goddard, Penn.; Insp.-General, Col. George W. Gile, U. S. Army; Asst. Insp. General, Lieut.-Col. Jo. Lane Stern, Va.; Provost Marshal General, Brig.-Gen. H. H. Wright, Iowa; A. P. M. General, Major W. H. Sheffield, Ala.; Insp. Rifle Practice, Lieut.-Col. S. E. Blunt, U. S. Army; Asst. Insps. Rifle Practice, Lieut.-Col. E. H. Wardwell, Md.; 1st Lt. S. E. Allen, U. S. A.; Chief Q. M., Col. L. P. Wright, D. C.; Chief Engr., Major J. W. Vandenburgh, D. C.; Medical Director, Lieut. Col. David W. Yandell, Ky.; Surgeon-in-Chief, Capt. Hamilton E. Leach, D. C.; Chaplain, Capt. Chas. M. Pyne, U. S. A.; Aides-de-Camp, Col. Walter Cutting, Mass.; Majs. W. T. McGurrin, Mich.; C. A. Nash, Va., and W. M. Evans, Va.; Capts. S. T. Carnes, Tenn.; M. A. Newman, Wis.; Robert H. Bruce, Tex.; L. V. Clark, Ala.; J. F. Oyster, D. C.; C. A. Sinclair, Mo., and R. L. Robertson, Tex.; 1st Lieuts. E. P. Andrus, U. S. A., and R. D. Williams, Ky; 2d Lieut. C. D. Ham, Iowa; Colonel H. H. Crump, Kentucky; 2d Lieut. G. P. Ahern, U. S. A.; 1st Lieut. John A. Drake, Iowa; 1st Lieut. Fredk. S. Strong, 4th Artillery.

Monday noon the Washington Light Inf. Corps, Lieut.-Col. Wm. G. Moore commanding, headed by the 3d Artillery band, marched on to the drill ground and formed in hollow square. Gen. Augur and his staff entered the square and stood with uncovered heads while the chaplain, Capt. Chas. M. Pyne, invoked God's blessing. A magnificent new garrison flag was now drawn to the masthead, the band saluted it with "The Star-Spangled Banner," the troops presented arms and the surrounding crowds enthusiastically cheered, and the National Drill was opened.

A 2 o'clock a large waste-basket filled with sealed envelopes was placed on a table in front of one of the assistant adjutants-general, and the commandants of the corps entered for the competitive drills having been summoned, the drawing for best positions in the competitions took place.

The entertainment for the benefit of the public began with a dress parade at 5 P. M. on Monday, for which purpose three battalions were detailed. Col. Castleton, of Kentucky, took command as the senior field officer present. By request of the management no horses were used, and the parade was held in line of battle single rank, instead of line of masses. Col. King, of Wisconsin, having been permanently detailed as Assistant Adjutant-General in charge of parades, was on duty as adjutant of the line. None of the battalions had had previous experience in the singular form required by the management, who seemed mainly desirous to present as big a front as possible, and Col. King was unwilling to conduct matters other than as required by the tactics, but obeyed his instructions and tried the experiment.

Line was formed with the 2d Ohio on the right, the Washington Light Infantry in the centre and the Louisville Legion on the left. Ohio in fatigue dress hardly presented as swell an appearance as the other companies, which were resplendent in tall bearskin shakos or plumed helmets, and the gorgeous Marine Band being on the extreme placed the sombre service rig of Ohio in the shade. A strong wind was blowing from the rear, and as the long line stretched entirely across the big amphitheatre the left battalion failed to understand the command of the adjutant-general at the attention and carry, but finally got into shape. The present to the brigade commander was somewhat ragged, as the Ohio men hung fire, and Col. Castleton limited the Manual to very few movements, as the wind was too much for his voice on so extended a line. When the adjutant reported the interest displayed by the rank and file was somewhat destructive to steadiness, and after the publication of orders and the dismissal of parade the field officers marched to the front and saluted the tall colonel commanding, but had to change step on the way, as the band was so far away that the command "march" of the adjutant-general reached their musical ears only after the line had started.

The populace expected a bigger turnout, but were measurably appeased by the beautiful exhibition drills of some of the competing companies who took the field as soon as the brigade had marched away.

For purposes of dress parade the following organization of provisional battalions were announced:

First Provisional Battalion—The Louisville Legion, six companies.

Second Provisional Battalion—Six companies—2d Ohio Infantry, Co. D; 8th Ohio, Co. C; 17th Ohio and the Toledo Cadets—Col. Howe, commanding.

Third Provisional Battalion—Washington Light Infantry, National Rifles and Washington Cadets—Lieut.-Col. William G. Moore, commanding.

Fourth Provisional Battalion—San Antonio Rifles, Belknap Rifles, Vicksburg Southrons, Lomax Rifles, Louisiana Rifles, Lee Light Guard, Co. D, 2d Missouri; Cos. B and C, 3d Missouri—Major H. H. Sheffield, commanding.

Fifth Provisional Battalion—Co. D, 2d Maine; Co. D, 32d New York; Co. C, 1st New Jersey; 8th Sep. Co., New York; Co. H, 6th Illinois; Fort Wayne Rifles, Indianapolis Light Infantry, Muscatine Rifles, Col. Bobleter, commanding.

Sixth Provisional Battalion—Co. D, 1st Michigan; Co. B, 2d Michigan; Co. I, 2d Michigan; Co. A, 1st Minnesota; Co. D, 1st Minnesota; Governor's Guard of North Carolina—Col. Anthony, commanding.

Seventh Provisional Battalion—5th Rhode Island Battalion, Sheridan Guard, Sarsfield Guard, Shields Guards, Emerald Guards, Emmet Guards—Lieut.-Col. Moran, commanding.

Out of the seventy infantry companies in camp the following companies compete for drill prizes, eight companies each day. For the best company, $5,000 will be given; to second, $2,500; to the third, $1,500; to the fourth, $1,000; to the fifth, $500:

1. Tuesday, May 24.—Co. A, 1st Minn., Capt. I. L. Amory; 8th Sep. Co.. N. Y., Capt. Henry B. Henderson, Co. C, 2d Iowa (Muscatine Rifles), Capt. Fredk. Welker; Grand Rapids Guards (did not appear); Co. A, 1st Bat. Va. (colored), Capt. Emmett Scott; State Guard, Va. (colored), Capt. R. A. Paul; Volunteer Southrons, Vicksburg, Miss., Capt. C. J. Searles; Co. A, 1st Va., Captain A. L. Phillips.

2. Thursday.—Co. C, N. C. (Governor's Guard), Capt. E. B. Engelhard; Louisiana Rifles, Capt. C. H. Adams; Co. H, 6th Ill., Capt. Geo. C. Rankin; Co. C, 2d Conn., Capt. John Garrity; Co. C, 1st N. J., Capt. Geo. Schenck; Co. B, Washington Light Inf;, Capt. Burton R. Ross; Toledo, O., Cadets, Capt. W. V. McMacken; Co. A, Washington Cadets (colored), Capt. Arthur Brooks.

3. Friday.—Indianapolis Light Inf.; Co. F, 3d Va., Capt. Geo. A. Mushbock; Jackson Rifles, Mich.; Molineux Rifles, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Co. K, 3d Texas Inf., (Belknap Rifles), Capt. R. B. Green; Co. A, 3d Texas, (San Antonio Rifles), Capt. F. J. Badger; Co. B, 1st Ala., (Lomax Rifles), Capt. J. K. Glennon.

4. 1st N. H., Sheridan Guard; Co. B, 1st Va., Capt. Henry C. Jones; Neally Rifles, Me.; National Rifles Washington; Co. D, 1st Minn., Capt. Ed. S. Bean; Co. B, 5th R. I., Capt. Wm. McPherson; Co. D 5th R. I., Capt. Anthony Mungiveu; Co. I, 2d Mich., Capt. Chas. H. Rose; Co. B, 3d Mo., Capt. Wm. Kelly; Co. B, 2d Ind., (Fort Wayne Rifles), Capt. Frank W. Rawles, Co. C, 5th R. I., Capt. John Neary.

The competitive drill of infantry began at 10 o'clock Tuesday, but the manœuvres were at such a distance from the spectators, at the further extremity of the ten-acre lot, that no one knew for half an hour that the contests had really begun. Co. A, 1st Minnesota Regiment, Capt. J. L. Amory, opened the ball, but failed to complete its programme in the limit of 30 minutes, time having been lost in manœuvring to get nearer the spectators. A sudden and severe storm, which created a stampede and a panic on the drill ground, was one of the features of Tuesday.

The seven companies drilled on Monday made a very ordinary showing, many blunders being made by each of them. Of the companies that drilled Thursday the Toledo Cadets undoubtedly made the best record and are way ahead of the companies that have thus far drilled. This whole drill business is a very tame affair. Financially the National Drill is a pronounced failure.

The dress parade was the feature of Wednesday. The President escorted Mrs. Cleveland to the grand stand in front of the Executive Mansion at 12 o'clock promptly. Secretary Endicott represented the Cabinet.

Gov. McGill and staff, of Minnesota; Gov. Lee and staff, of Virginia, and the staff of Gov. Gray, of Indiana, were the only State representatives on the stand, though it was Governor's day. The French Minister and Major Lottin, the military attaché of the French Legation; Minister Kuki and wife, Minister Romero and wife, Mr. Gregor, of the Russian Legation; Adjt.-Gen. Drum, in uniform; Inspt.-Gen. Baird, Asst. Inspt.-Gen. Farnsworth, Gen. Benét, Gen. MacFeely, Col. J. M. Wilson, Commodores Harmony, Sicard and Schley, Senators Sherman and Gorman, Gen. Ewing, of the Department of Justice, were present on the stand.

Gen. Augur and his staff headed the procession and looked very handsome in their brilliant uniforms. Following, came the Provisional battalions in their order.

The foolish Vicksburg Southerns, after forming into line, found that the Washington Cadets, colored, were in line in the division ahead of them. They made a protest through Major Sheffield, commanding their division, who laid the matter befor Gen. Augur, who, with great good sense, refused to take any notice of it; so the Southrons withdrew when the order to march was given. The Memphis Zouaves followed, and together these troops paraded past the reviewing stand and left the line of march at 14th street, returning to camp.

The competition for the artillery prizes was held Thursday morning in Athletic Park, in the presence of about 2,000 spectators. Only two commands took part—Battery A, Indianapolis Light Artillery, Capt. J. B. Curtis, and the 1st Battery Wisconsin National Guard, Capt. Jos. B. Olive, and the competition was subsequently for the first prize of $1,500. The guns, horses and drivers belonged to Battery C, 3d U. S. Artillery, and the judges were Capt. James M. Lancaster, 1st Lieut. C. Chase, and 1st Lieut. B. H. Randolph, all of the 3d Artillery. Two guns were manned by 20 men of each competing company and under the command of their respective captains. A slip containing the movements was handed to each captain when his men came on the field, and 45 minutes were allowed for their execution.

The rifle competition for $100 and a gold medal began at the Washington Arsenal at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, before a large number of spectators. Although there were 98 entries only 38 men reported. Col. S. A. Blunt, U. S. A., Col. Wardwell, of Gen. Augur's staff, and Lieut. Allen, U. S. A., conducted the firing. The contests Thursday were at 200 and 300 yards. The firing Friday was at 500 and 1,000 yards. The result of Thursday's practice was as as follows:

Lieut. Pollard, W. L. I.	42	43	85
Lieut. Bell, Wash'n Cont'ls.	41	42	83
Private Crossman, 2d Iowa	42	41	83
Private Johnstone, Washington Continentals	42	41	83
Corpl. Stoyer, 2d Maryland	45	38	83
Private N. C. Browning, 2d Maryland	44	38	82
Private Falk, 1st Minnesota	39	42	81
Private Cash, W. L. I.	39	41	80
Capt. Browning, 2d Maryland	40	40	80
Capt. Chisholm, 2d Maryland	40	40	80
Sergt. Mountjoy, Fencibles, Pa.	43	37	80
Private Moring, Va. Blues	39	40	79

The total score of the other 26 men ranged from 24 to 76, out of a possible 100.

At 2.30 Thursday, the Zouave competitions began, the Chicago and Memphis companies being entered. The Chicagoans came first. One of their feats was scaling a 12-foot fence. At the word they broke for the fence, rapidly formed a pyramid, tossed up and passed over their guns, and followed themselves. When but two men remained, one jumped upon the shoulders of the other, thence to the fence top, and there turned about and helped up his fellow.

Seventh New York.—Col. Emmons Clark.

COLONEL CLARK announces in orders the resignation and honorable discharge of Capt. and Asst. Surgeon Moreau Morris and 1st Lieut. E. Graham Haight after long and faithful service.

Co. B, 7th Regiment, is the winner of the 1887 competition for the O'Donoghue trophy and will hold it until the result of the next year's competition are announced. The following are the scores:

W. A. Valentine, formerly a corporal in Company F, has been appointed Captain and Asst. Surgeon of the 7th Regiment, to date from June 1, 1887, vice Morris resigned.

Capt. Harry D. Cooper, Co. D, 7th Regt., has received a leave of absence for six weeks from May 27 to go to Europe. This will deprive the regiment of his service in camp.

John McGreevey, an ex-sergeant of Co. G, 7th Regiment, was elected 2d lieutenant of that company on Wednesday, May 25.

On Monday, May 16, Cos. A, B and F, 7th Regt., went to Creedmoor for rifle practice under command of Capt. Steele. Co. F made the best record ever made at Creedmoor. It qualified fifty-nine men out of sixty-four present. On May 17 Cos. C, D, E and G occupied the range with Lieut.-Col. Smith in command, and May 20 Cos. H, I and K practiced. Major Kip was in command. The days were all specially favorable for shooting, and the regiment, all told, qualified 447 marksmen.

At a special meeting of Co. G, 7th Regt., held at the armory, on Wednesday evening, May 25, ex-1st Sergt. John McGreevey was elected 2d lieutenant, having received 49 out of 53 votes cast. McGreevey accepted the honor in a few well-chosen remarks. Lieut. McGreevey's record, as shown below, speaks for itself, showing, as it does, some 14 years' of duty to his credit in the company, and his many friends both in and out of the regiment, will congratulate him on his elevation to his new office: Enlisted, Nov. 13, 1868; promoted Corporal, April 8, 1870; promoted Sergeant, June 21, 1872; promoted 1st Sergeant, May 25, 1874; honorable discharge, Jan. 19, 1881; re-enlisted, March 28, 1881; promoted 1st Sergeant, April 8, 1881; honorable discharge, May 12, 1882.

NEW YORK STATE CAMP.

WITH the final issue of the orders for the conduct of this year's camp of instruction the matter has now been set at rest to the evident satisfaction of all concerned. The clause probibiting fireworks, illuminations, skylarking, etc., while probably not to the taste of a few individuals meets the approval of the majority, and its strict observance will no doubt have the effect of raising the camp in the estimation of the general public. The provision under which adjutants of regiments ordered into camp are authorized to avail themselves of a week's tour of instruction in the office of the permanent post adjutant previous to the arrival of their regiment is a particularly valuable feature of the system to be pursued this year. Adjutants not thoroughly familiar with their work will find the position a difficult one to fill, but a week's observation will obviate all difficulty on this score with any adjutant of ordinary intelligence.

PRESENTATION OF MARKSMEN'S BADGES TO THE SIXTY-NINTH N. Y.

COMPARING the Sixty-ninth of the present with the Sixty-ninth of only half a dozen years or so ago, a material change in the direction of improvement cannot fail to impress itself on the observer. This was clearly manifest when the regiment assembled at the armory on Monday evening, May 23, to receive the decorations won at Creedmoor before the butts during the target season of 1886. It is a well-known fact that in bygone years such affairs in this regiment were characterized by confusion, lack of promptness, and of proper management, and clumsy attempts to perform evolutions which had never been sufficiently studied or rehearsed. A few tours of duty at the State Camp of Instruction have had their effect here as in other organizations. Not only the appearance of the regiment, but the management of the spectators and the aspect of the drill room itself showed a decided change for the better. The companies assembled at the proper time without shouting or aimlessly running about, the men fell in promptly, and all took their places at the proper time without confusion. The uniforms fitted well, individuals looked neat and well set up, and sentries walked their posts in a soldierly manner, paying attention to their work and to nothing else.

The only unfavorable impression during the work preliminary to the formation was created by the fact that all the marching of details from one part of the room to another, changes of positions of companies and squads was done with arms at carry. This did not only look unbusinesslike and untactical, but also produced a strain on the men quite unnecessary, and many showed the fatigued condition of their right arms by their constrained positions. Company commanders should instruct their non-commissioned officers by precept as well as by example that arms under such circumstances should be carried at right shoulder or support. Men should not be fatigued unnecessarily before their real work begins. The formation was good, the guides came out promptly and properly, and when the line was established the regiment, in dark blue coats, well set off by white trousers and white summer helmets, steady to a fault, made a pleasing picture. The ceremonies began with a dress parade, under command of Colonel Cavanagh. It was better executed on general principles than any ceremony of its kind which we have witnessed in the Sixty-ninth, and the improvement of the men in steadiness was particularly conspicuous. This is an important point gained, as one of the most difficult matters here always seemed to be to make the men keep their hands down. The manual was fair as executed by the regiment as a whole, and the winter's work seems to have not been without good result. There is, however, a very marked difference in the cadence of the motions in the various companies, which is a matter easily to be corrected by the appointment of a supervisor of company drills. A few men appeared without gloves, which looked bad. They should have been put in the rear rank, if it was not practicable to provide them with gloves before marching on parade. However, the parade as a whole was very good, and the defects pointed out are such as frequently occur in other armories as well as here.

The time for the presentation of the badges had now arrived and Brig. Gen. Charles F. Robbins, Inspector General of Rifle Practice, took his position at the reviewing point. The regiment at the conclusion of the parade had not been dismissed, and at the command "Attention" from the colonel the line resumed that rigidity which had characterized it during the previous performance. The review was merely a standing one, and Gen. Robbins by waiving the march past not only gained time but obviated a manœuvre which on account of the limited space could have turned out nothing but two crowded rushes, first to get from line into column and afterwards from column into line, and by which the regiment could have gained no credit. After introducing Gen. Robbins the marksmen were called to the front, and their small number, only 69, caused surprise among the spectators, as well as comment by the general in his address to the regiment. Of course, it is hardly to be expected from an organization which recruits its material from the laboring classes that its marksman's roll should attain the rate of other regiments whose members can command their own time and can enjoy every opportunity to qualify in matches. The 69th, like a number of other regiments, is confined for its rifle practice to the regular days set aside for them. Still, the opinion expressed by many that company officers have not given the subject that attention which is necessary to keep up the interest of their men to the right point, and without which no proper results can be obtained, seems to be well founded. In fact the regiment seems to comprehend the matter thoroughly, and the remarks of the General Inspector evidently touched the proper spot. Efforts will be made to revive the interest of the men in shooting matters, and by judicious management and the stimulating effect of trophies for success before the butts, etc., it is hoped to bring the number of marksmen up to 800 during the present season. Adjt. Moran by offering a large bronze model of the Statue of Liberty to the company which succeeds in qualifying the largest number of marksmen during the season of 1887, has set a praiseworthy example, which it would do well for other officers to follow. The trophy, which weighs 50 pounds, is an exceedingly handsome one and well worth competing for. The whole ceremony was successfully conducted to the end, and the regiment has every reason to point with satisfaction to its performance. Several other presentations took place, among them that of a sword to Capt. John Kerr, of Co. K, by the non-commissioned officers of his company. Recognizing the fact that the General Inspector of Rifle Practice is not very often among them, the 69th evidently determined to make the most of him while they had him there, and he was pressed into the service of making all the presentations of the evening, which he did with excellent grace and a neat little speech in each instance. He was rewarded with thundering cheers several times, a matter doubtless well meant, but the propriety of which is somewhat questionable in a military respect. Lieut. Col. M. P. Miller, of the Army, Inspector of Rifle Practice, on the staff of Gen. Schofield, who mustered the regiment into its second term of service during the Rebellion in 1863, was a spectator, in company with Gen. Robbins.

THE POUGHKEEPSIE COMPANIES.

THE 19th Separate Company have been very active during the past month, and have taken advantage of the fine weather for outdoor drills and exercises. On the evening of May 18 this command, 43 files, under command of Brevet Major Wm. Haubennestel, paraded for drill and guard mounting on the spacious grounds of Mrs. Eastman-Gaines, which were generously placed at the company's disposal. After a short, sharp and decisive drill in the manual of arms in marching and instruction in street firing, guard was mounted in splendid shape, and a thorough and practical test of the abilities of the men was had. Each relief was posted under the personal supervision of Maj. Haubennestel, and was accompanied by a commissioned officer, and the duties of a sentry lucidly explained. The work was kept up till all had their share of the duty. The whole affair was a decided success, and the quiet, soldierly bearing of officers and men drew forth the warmest praise from the citizens present. This command will be inspected on June 23, at 2.30 P. M. They have received their orders for a tour of duty at the State camp of instruction from July 9 to 16. Through the well-known energy of Maj. Haubennestel his command have just been supplied with Army brogans for Service duty. They were made to order by W. De Camp, of Roseland, Essex County, N. J., and are an improvement on any shoe of the kind we have ever seen. Maj. H. is a practical worker in leather, and has adapted a design whereby in cutting the hindquarter it throws it further forward on the foot, makes it higher and leaves no gusset in the back, thus giving ease and comfort, and avoiding chafing over the heels.

The 15th Separate Company, Capt. Berthold Myers, are in good condition. Recently new clothing closets were erected in the armory, and the men's uniforms are now placed more conveniently. 2d. Lieut. Chas. Brittain has tendered his resignation on account of business engagements, which keep him out of the district. Much speculation is rife as to his successor. Sergeant Wm. H. Sweet is spoken of as one, and would make an efficient officer, but it is feared will decline to run. We trust whoever may fill the vacancy will devote time and energy to the position. The command is composed principally of young men who need more drilling and often more discipline than those of maturer years. It is sincerely to be hoped for the welfare of this command that care should be taken in the selection of a capable and experienced gentleman for the vacant office.

The Committee of Arrangements of the Grand Army posts in this city have made complete arrangements for the observance of Memorial Day in a complete and fitting manner. The 15th and 19th Separate Companies, the supernumerary officers of the 8th Brigade, city and county officials, and a number of societies and dignitaries have signified their intention to join with Hamilton and Sleight Posts in making the parade and services a grand success. Corporal James Tanner, of Brooklyn, will be the orator of the day. Comdr. Wm. L. De Lacey, the energetic chairman of the committee, is deserving of great praise for his share of the good work.

MILITIA ITEMS.

The 9th N. Y. will assemble at Armory in State Service uniform, wearing fatigue caps, with haversack and one day's rations, on Monday, June 6, 1887, for the purpose of proceeding to Creedmoor for first general rifle practice. If the weather be stormy, members will report with overcoats and knapsacks instead of haversacks. Assembly at 6.30 o'clock A. M. Train boat leaves foot of East 34th street 7.45 o'clock A. M. Train leaves Long Island City 8.05 A. M. James M. Maconnell has been commissioned 2d lieutenant, to date from April 18, vice Skinnell, resigned.

The rumor that Col. E. A. McAlpin, of the 71st N. Y., intends to resign seems to be well founded. Nothing definite has, however, been learned in the matter as yet. At present Col. McAlpin together with Brig.-Gen. Fitzgerald is sojourning at his country residence.

Col. George D. Scott has issued orders for the 8th regiment to go to Creedmoor for rifle practice on Thursday, May 26.

The 71st in response to an invitation will visit Sing Sing on Decoration Day on the occasion of the unveiling of the Soldiers' Monument, leaving by special train at 12.30 P. M., and returning arrive in New York at 6.30 P. M. Company drills have been suspended. Companies will assemble for instruction in guard mounting, in fatigue uniform, under the supervision of Major W. A. Downs as follows: A and B, June 6, 13, 20, and 27; C and D, June 1, 8, 15, and 22; F, G, and H, June 2, 9, 16, and 23; I and K, June 3, 10, 17, and 24. 1st Lieut. Philip S. Tilden has been detailed as acting Adjutant.

The refusal of the Governor to commission Mr. O'Dwyer, recently elected 2d lieutenant in the 69th N. Y., on the ground that he is not a citizen of the United States, has now practically settled a question about which many were in doubt, although the Code is plain and emphatic in the matter. The action of the authorities is correct and proper, and the hint should be sufficient to prevent the election of persons of this class in future. A new election has been ordered.

The question agitating the 23d N. Y. at present is as to who will be colonel. A committee has been appointed to nominate a suitable commandant, and a number of names have already been suggested, among them Gen. Molineux, Gen. A. C. Barnes, Gen. R. C. Ward, Col. J. N. Partridge, and Lieut.-Col. Manchester. It is thought the question will be left open until after the return of the regiment from camp.

The 12th N. Y. have provided themselves with new white helmets for their tour of duty at the State Camp. It is just possible, however, that they will appear in the new headgear in the Decoration Day parade. The expense of the new helmet is divided between the regiment and the men, who contribute 60 cents each towards the cost.

The discharge of Capt. James A. Mulligan, Co. K, 9th N. Y., who resigned some time ago, has been received. Capt. Mulligan was a member of the 9th since April 12, 1870, when he joined as a private. He passed through all the intermediate grades until he was elected captain May 20, 1876, since which date he has commanded his company very successfully.

Commissary John J. Ryan, 69th N. Y., has been appointed inspector of rifle practice of that organization.

John R. Purtill was elected 2d lieutenant Co. A, 11th N. Y.

The Lynn, (Mass.,) Rifle Association has secured a range, upon which can be placed targets at 200 yards, 500 yards, 1,000 yards, and 1,200 yards, located in the rear of Indian Hill in Wyoma, Lynn. It is easy of access. It is expected that the range will be dedicated Memorial Day.

2d Lieut. Harry C. Gibson, of the 1st Penn. Inf., Co. C, recently promoted from corporal, has been requested to resign, he having donned his uniform and taken his place in the ranks of his old company, F, to help it out in the count at inspection.

The non-commissioned officers of the 22d N. Y., have formed a club for mutual instruction, to be known as the "Chevron Club." Lieut.-Col. Harding is President. The club meets on the first Monday of each month. Every non-commissioned officer of the regiment is entitled to membership.

The following elections are announced: Arthur E. Shuman, of Co. A, 11th, to be 2d lieutenant of Co. G, 12th N. Y.; 1st Sergt. C. M. Davis, Co. I, to be 2d Lieutenant in same company.

La Tour D'Auvernge, a soldier of the First French Empire, rejected all promotion to which his bravery entitled him and was content with the title, "First Grenadier of France," and the right to march ahead of the colors. John J. Sullivan of Co. B, of the 22d, has also had numerous offers of promotion but he has adopted as his motto the saying that the post of honor is the private station and prefers to be the first private of his organization. Though probably the oldest member in it, yet he was the first man who, after last year's march to Peekskill, planted his foot on the plateau on which the camp is situated. John has again shown his esprit de corps, although in a somewhat different manner, by the donation of a handsome gold medal for the best drilled man in his company, which has not an awkward man in its ranks. For this reason preliminary selection of contestants was a difficult matter, but on Monday, May 23, the four best men were determined upon and a spirited contest of about an hour's duration took place, when Private Ritchie was announced the winner by the referee, Lieut.-Col. Harding. Sullivan received a tremendous ovation which he bore with his usual modest grace.

Company H, 9th N. Y., had a nice party at the Casino on Wednesday evening, May 25.

The 8th and 71st regiments have received invitations to parade at the 4th of July celebration at Harlem. The 2d battery will fire the salute of the occasion on top of Mount Morris.

On May 19 last 108 veterans of the 14th Regiment, N. Y., held their annual camp fire at the Mansion House, Brooklyn, N. Y. Gen. E. B. Fowler, President of the association, was master of ceremonies, and at the same table sat Gen. J. P. Hatch, U. S. A., Gen. Newton, Gen. John B. Woodward, Gen. H. C. King, Gen. S. L. Woodford, Col. Michell and the officers of the Fourteenth, Supervisor-at-Large Quintard, Alderman Olena, District Attorney Ridgway, Mark D. Wilber and other invited guests.

A large number of people were present in the 13th Regiment Armory May 19 to witness the last public drill of the Cadet Company of the regiment and the presentation of the marksman's badges. At 8 P. M. the company fell into line, and marched on the floor. Capt. F. Remington Wiswell, of the company was in command. Gen. A. S. Barnes, assisted by Major J. Fred. Ackerman, presented the marksman's badges. An enjoyable reception followed.

The 1st Battery, N. Y., Capt. L. Wendel, had its drill and target practice with the new carbines at Lion Park May 18 The distance was 110 yards. Monday, August 1, has been settled upon as the date of the command's annual picnic and prize shooting at Lion Park.

The Park Commissioners on May 25 adopted a protest against the bill now before Governor Hill, which authorizes the military to parade and drill in Central Park. The Commissioners resolved to write a letter requesting the Governor not to sign the bill as its provisions would conflict with the local police regulations of the Park and be objectionable to citizens.

The closing rehearsal of the 22d N. Y. Drum Corps on Thursday evening, May 26, was quite a celebration, and was witnessed by an immense audience. Drum Major Geo. W. Brown deserves much credit for the proficiency exhibited by his corps.

Major John J. Riker, 12th N. Y., has received six months' leave of absence.

The Society of War Veterans, 9th N. Y. S. M. (83d N. Y. Vol.), will hold a reunion at the Rossmore Hotel, New York City, on Wednesday evening, June 8, at 8 o'clock sharp.

MISSOURI.

IN the column devoted to the "State Troops," in your issue of May the 21st, appears the following: "Missouri.—The official order disbanding the Missouri Militia arrived at St. Louis May 17. The 1st, 2d, 3d, 5th, and 7th Regiments are now disbanded, and the only organization left in St. Louis is a light cavalry company."

Your information as to the 3d Regiment is incorrect. This organization has not been disbanded, but is in a prosperous condition and will continue permanently in the service of the State. One of the companies is now in Washington attending the National Drill. If you will correct the error above referred to, the officers and men of the regiment will be under many obligations to you.

Very respectfully,

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 24.

(From the N. Y. Sun.)

MISSOURI'S EXPERIMENT.

THE State of Missouri is now practically without organized militia. A few months ago it had five regiments: the 1st, 2d, 3d, 5th, and 7th. These are all now disbanded, under an order recently issued, and it is said that the only organization left in St. Louis is a light cavalry company.

This is the result of the defeat of a bill introduced into the Legislature a short time ago for the relief of the troops. The amount asked was only $50,000 and it was based on the actual expenditure of time and money in preserving order and guarding property and lives. When the measure was first rejected, the officers of the militia resigned in a body, but the Governor postponed the acceptance of the resignations until the bill should be reconsidered. Taken up a second time, it was again defeated, although by the close vote of 68 to 65. The two St. Louis regiments promptly resigned, the other three followed, the Governor having had this understanding with them, and now the State has virtually no National Guard.

The militia organizations of Missouri have long complained that the Legislature does not treat them with liberality or even with ordinary justice. They say that they have been expected to provide their own uniforms and drill halls, to give their time without compensation, and to go to actual expenses in the State's service which are not reimbursed. They say that the State has never appropriated a dollar for such support of the militia as is customary in some other States; and they are indignant at the defeat of a relief bill so moderate in its proportions as the one of this spring.

Whatever the full merits of the case, Missouri is making a very questionable experiment in undertaking to do without an organized, uniformed, and trained militia. Nor can any State fairly expect its militia to be ready at the Governor's call to preserve order and guard property, often at the peril of their own lives, and yet actually pay for the privilege of getting themselves ready and equipped for this duty.

The importance of the militia is unquestionable. The maintenance of even small forces, if well chosen, well equipped, and well disciplined, not only affords a guarantee of the preservation of peace and order, but removes the necessity of increasing the standing army. At the present time a dispute between the militia forces of a State and its Legislature, based upon allegations of parsimony and resulting in the disbandment of the former, is particularly foolish on account of the new national militia law. This law not only doubles the former annual appropriation made from the United States Treasury for providing arms for the militia, but apportions it according to the percentage of the enlisted, organized, and uniformed militia existing in each State.

CHICAGO'S ENCAMPMENT.

THE International Military Encampment to be held in Chicago in October next gives promise of success. The committee, ex-Gov. John L. Beveridge, Gen. A. L. Chetlain, and Gen. Charles I. Bentley, were to be in Washington to see the Secretaries of State, of War, and of the Navy, and May 25 were to sail for Europe for the purpose of obtaining the co-operation of foreign governments. Invitations will be extended to Great Britain and all the continental governments to send one or more military companies, each with staff officers and musicians to the encampment. There will be at least three grand sham battles participated in by all the troops, and long lines of earthworks, forts, and fortifications will be erected under the supervision of U. S. Army officers.

OREGON.

GOVERNOR PENNAYER has appointed and commissioned the following officers on his staff: J. C. Shofner, Portland, adjt. gen.; J. T. Bowditch, Ashland, judge adv. gen.; M. E. Freeman, Portland, insp. gen., and A. L. Saylor, Lexington, surg. gen.; all with rank of colonel. Also, R. A. Miller, Jacksonville, J. H. Raley, Pendleton, and C. R. Halcomb, Portland, aides-de-camp, with rank of lieut. colonel, and W. J. D'Arcy, Salem, asst. adjt. gen., with rank of major. The Governor has also appointed J. M. Siglin, of Marshfield, brig. gen., commanding the State Guard.

The County Commissioners have decided to erect an armory for the 1st Regt., 2d Brigade, at Portland, and have given out the contract. The building will be 100 by 200 feet, two stories in height, the first of stone and the second of pressed brick, with bastions on diagonal corners. On entering the large double doorway is the assembly hall, 42 by 130 feet. On the left is the board of officers and six company rooms, each 17 by 30. Next is the artillery room 30 by 55. Beyond this is an unfinished space that can at any time be fitted up for company rooms. On the right on entering is a broad stairway leading to the second floor, and under which is the lavatory, etc.; next is the band room, 20 by 20, the library, the N. C. S. and the Quartermaster's rooms, each 15 by 20, then the colonel and adjutant's room, 15 by 20, divided by sliding doors. Beyond this are two squad drill rooms, each 30 by 34 feet. The second floor will be one large room, 95 by 195, with a narrow platform around three sides, and on the fourth a small gallery and a band stand. The armorer and janitor will each have one of the bastions on this floor. The contract calls for the building to be finished by Sept. 20, but it is hoped that the regiment will be able to move in by the last of August. The armory with the four lots on which it stands will cost about $40,000.

CALIFORNIA NATIONAL GUARD.

HEALDSBURG has been decided upon as the place for the brigade encampment in July. The new armory of the 1st Regiment is a handsome and commodious one, with unusual facilities for company and battalion movements.

MARYLAND.

ALABAMA.

A MONTGOMERY correspondent writes: "The 1st Alabama Regiment, Col. Thomas G. Jones, is preparing for its encampment, and application has been made to Washington to have Lieut. J. T. Thompson, 2d U. S. Artillery, of Little Rock Barracks, inspect the regiment and the encampment.

STATE OF CONNECTICUT.

Changes as follows in the commissioned officers of the Connecticut National Guard have occurred since April 22, 1887: Battery A—Wm. H. Lee, of Guilford, appointed 1st lieutenant, commanding 1st platoon. 2d Regiment—Carl E. Munger, of Waterbury, appointed assistant surgeon, with rank of 1st lieutenant. 4th Regiment—Corporal George T. Jewell, of Stratford, appointed 2d lieutenant Co. K. The following are announced as the figures of merit of each organization for the month of April, 1887, based on the drill reports for the month: 1st Regiment, figure of merit, 95.77; 2d Regiment, 95.56; 3d Regiment, 86.81; 4th Regiment, 88.90; 5th Battalion, 85.22; Battery A, 76.90.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The gentleman known to the world as "Donn Piatt," is a very good fellow on the whole, and his bite is by no means as bad as his bark, a fact which should be understood in advance by those who may be tempted to read his "Memoirs of the Men who saved the Union," published by Belford, Clarke and Co. Donn knows just what sort of men were needed to save the Union and just how they should have gone to work to save it in shorter order, and his confidence in his own judgment has been by no means shaken by the experience he had in being sat down upon, first by Mr. Lincoln, next by Mr. Stanton and finally by Gen. Halleck, all of which he tells with charming naiveté, but to the infinite damage to his reputation for good sense—if, indeed, he has had any such reputation in matters rising above the dignity of the introduction of moth destroyers into the Army. Mr. Lincoln must, of necessity, be included in such a volume, but we have a singularly perverse judgment upon his character; Stanton is another of Donn's heroes and with him are grouped Salmon P. Chase and Wm. H. Seward. Then, after demonstrating in his preface and in his comments upon this quartette of civilians, that the sole business of West Point is to educate all military capacity out of a man, our biographer most illogically turns to West Point to find his one military hero of the conflict in George H. Thomas. If we were to have but one, his choice is to be commended. Doubtless it was the logical necessity of travelling further in the same direction if he went beyond one, that induced Donn to cast the entire burden of saving the Union, in a military sense, upon Thomas. Taking the opinions expressed for what they are worth there is much in this volume to interest and amuse, if no to instruct.

The proceedings of the 30th Anniversary of the Enlistment of Colonel Emmons Clark in the 7th Regiment, held at Delmonico's Saturday, Jan. 22, 1887, have been issued in a handsome volume at the expense of Mr. Edward Kemp. A handsome likeness of the Colonel—and it is impossible that a likeness of Colonel Clark should be otherwise than handsome—prefaces the volume, which is dedicated "to Colonel Emmons Clark from his friend and comrade Edward Kemp." In concluding this verbatim report of the proceedings, which were briefly reported in the JOURNAL at the time, Mr. Kemp says: "Friendship, good-will, pleasant recollections, and especially long years of uninterrupted harmony, have suggested and given form to this little book, its compiler having found no better way of showing his personal appreciation than by carefully culling the pleasant events, the eloquent words, the happy incidents, and the expressions of general enthusiasm of that memorable occasion and presenting them as a 'souvenir' to the numerous admirers of his old friend and comrade."

We are in receipt of No. 41, Proceedings of the U. S Naval Institute. It contains the paper read by Wm. J. McAlpine, C. E., in favor of the use of hard steel for guns; and the following papers: The Navigator's Position Indicator, Lieut. H. O. Rittenhouse; Pressure Recording, Jarvis B. Edson, M. E.; On the Study of Naval History (Grand Tactics), Rear Admiral S. B. Luce, U. S. N.; Economy of Compound Direct Acting Pumping Engines, P. A. Eng. C. R. Roelker, U. S. N.; Simpson's Timber Dry Docks, Lieut. Comdr. C. H. Stockton; Notes on the Literature of Explosives XIII., Prof. Chas. E. Munroe. A Memorial of Lieut. Dannenhower, in the form of resolutions, closes the volume. In the Professional Notes we find papers by Naval Cadet Armstead Rust and P. Asst. Eng. G. W. Baird. Appendix published in a separate volume gives an account of the Institution and the proceedings of the annual meeting.

Col. H. C. Symonds, late U. S. A., principal of the Vireun School at Sing Sing, N. Y., publishes, in a neat pocket volume of about 100 pages, an "Abstract of the Elements of U. S. History," which is very valuable for all students of history and especially for those who are to undergo examination by "Civil Service Commissioners, Academic Board at West Point, Academic Board at Annapolis, and Examining Committees for Appointments." It contains an arranged tabular form, each table covering a distinct subject and constituting a reasonable lesson for the youngest class of pupils, and presenting a means of rapid and thorough review of the facts presented. It is for sale by "The Baker and Taylor Co., 9 Bond street, New York."

That excellent periodical for young folks, the "St. Nicholas Magazine," conducted by Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, is publishing a serial by Lieut. George I. Putnam, 16th U. S. Int., entitled, "Winning a Commission." It is a description of life at the Military Academy with illustrations. Those in the number for June illustrate "Off Duty," "Dress Parade—Sir, the parade is formed," "Candidate for color man receiving the last touches of his classmates," and "Target practice with the siege guns." This instalment contains Chapter 4, Life in Barracks and Examinations, and Chapter 5, The Summer Camp. This number of St. Nicholas also has an article by Gen. Adam Badeau on "Sheridan in the Valley."

General Henry B. Carrington, colonel U. S. A., retired, has been inspired by a study of the inner facings of the Washington Monument to write a poem called "The Obelisk and its Voices." It is published by Lee and Shepard, Boston, in unique fashion, the poetry being given on the right hand page and a brief history of Washington, with some extracts from his orders, appearing on the pages opposite. It has two portraits of Washington, and a fac-simile of his closing accounts with the Government. The volume is handsomely printed on heavy paper.

The numbers of the "Century Illustrated Monthly Magazine" from November, 1886, to April, 1887, have been gathered together into the usual semi-annual bound volume. It is hard to find more interesting reading within the same compass. It contains six of the opening chapters of the history of Abraham Lincoln and thirty-five of the articles on the battles and leaders of the Civil War, which have excited such general interest and secured for this magazine the leading place in the regard of patriotic Americans, both North and South.

Messrs. A. C. McClurg and Co., of Chicago, publish, at the price of one dollar, "A Manual for Infantry Officers of the National Guard, showing uniforms, arms, manual, equipments, and positions for officers of every grade on all occasions of drill and ceremony." It is compiled by Col. J. G. Gilchrist, 3d Regiment, Iowa N. G., and revised by Lieut. E. C. Knower, 31 U. S. Artillery, brevet captain, U. S. Army. One purpose of the author is to perfect the assimilation between the Guard and the Regular Army.

Scribner's Magazine for June will contain an illustrated article on "Some Illustrations of Napoleon and his Times," by John C. Ropes. This is in a similar vein to the article on "The Likenesses of Julius Cæsar," which Mr. Ropes contributed to the February number of the same magazine. The illustrations are from the author's valuable collection of Napoleon portraits. Three of them are full-page reproductions.

We are indebted to Lieut. R. P. Rodgers, U. S. N., Chief of of the Bureau of Naval Intelligence, for a copy of the Submarine Cable Chart of the World, which shows also the seacoast stations, and the principal connecting land lines. Upon the face of the chart is also given a table showing the cable rates between the United States and other countries. The chart is an exceedingly valuable one and especially useful for reference.

Lieut. S. S. Pague, 15th U. S. Infantry, at the State College, Centre County, Pa., has prepared a little volume of 29 pages containing customs with regard to guard duty, which would doubtless be of great service to National Guardsmen, for whom it has been arranged.

CHAPULTEPEC.

A MEXICAN traveller writing from Chapultepec says: The official residence of the Mexican President is the Castle of Chapultepec, and it has just been occupied for the summer season by the Diaz family.

The Military Academy occupies now, as it did in 1847, a portion of the height of Chapultepec. Just behind and really forming a part of the same structure is the long building of the Mexican West Point.

The course of the Military Academy is much longer than that at West Point. Boys are taken in at the age of 12, and the full curriculum is eight years. In the Academy the cadets wear school clothes of blue jackets and trousers, but whenever they go out to the city or on parade they don attractive, well-fitting uniforms of dark-blue frock-coats, pantaloons of the same color with broad red stripes and wear the badge of the Academy on the sleeve.

In the model-room are fully equipped war-ships, the work of students, and with these as object lessons the naval cadets receive their instruction. The republic educates her youth destined for the army and navy under the same roof. The courses of study only are different. The cadets sleep in great dormitories containing 100 beds, each with its cabinet and wardrobe beside it. In the armories are the dress suits, the rifles and the rest of the equipment hung upon racks, and under charge of officers.

THE PRESENT ARMY OF FRANCE.

CARROLL TEVIS, in a letter to the New York Times, says of the French Army:

"Respecting the French staff, we learn that 1,003 officers having staff brevets—the distinct corps has been abolished—are fitted to discharge staff duties, and that, in the event of mobilization their number can be doubled. Here allow me a parenthetical remark: The term mobilization is very loosely applied by amateurs and does not seem to be clearly understood by the public; it does not at all mean the bringing up of an army to a war footing by mere recruiting; the increasing, for example, of a British regiment of voluntary enlistment is not its mobilization, though so spoken of. So that the term can only be correctly employed in reference to armies of which the composition is based upon the principle of conscription. All these staff officers are not actually employed on staff service, but, on the other hand, a multitude of officers not belonging to the staff or brevetted ad hoc are detached as orderly officers with Generals—the Minister of War alone has 16—in the Arab bureau and on commissions, all of which is most annoying to regimental commanders, who complain that at least one-tenth of their officers are detached and are not available for the instruction of their troops. In short, counting the necessary completion of the staffs by brevetted officers, we can estimate that nearly one-eighth of the entire personnel would be found wandering about on the search for their situations.

"Considering, then, the number of officers—about 24,000—in the French Army, the mortality bill is not heavy, but it is also apparent that, as a rule, the military career is limited to the rank of captain—295 on the retired list; those who get the next step are lucky. As a set-off to the 24 retired colonels, 39 were promoted brigadiers, which proves that when a man with good health is a captain in the French Army at 28 years of age and a chief of battalion at 40, if he has some luck and a good deal of influence he may count upon being a General. Everything depends upon how he starts and who backs him. Having seen something of the present modus operandi, I should prefer the recommendation for promotion of Citizen Joffries, a retired tallow chandler, but an eminent member of the Parisian City Council, to that of Marshal McMahon or Canrobert.

"General Boulanger proposes to modify all this, and the army is anxiously awaiting the description of his invention for making extraordinary generals. For, so far, all it does know is that the Polytechnique is to be deprived of its military character, and will become merely the nursery of civil engineers, instead of furnishing, as now, the artillery and engineer corps, with their officers. Then, too, he would abolish St. Cyr and Saumur, both of which are considered to be 'reactionary hotbeds,' in which he is not altogether misinformed, the fact being that at the examinations for admission at both schools the aristocratic candidates, somehow or other, manage to carry all before them to the exclusion of 'the children of the people.' Perhaps this may be accounted for by the circumstance that the early studies of the boys are better directed in the 'independent schools,' generally managed by highly educated professors, than in the so-called 'lay schools.'

"The opposition to the measure is very strong, for Boulanger's reasons are not peremptory nor yet conclusive. He wants the origin of all French officers to be identical, and discourages aristocratic pretensions; but people reply that if the sons of the nobility and directing classes pass better examinations for St. Cyr and Saumur than do the 'cads,' they will do the same at the Prytanée, if that be the only sterling point for military careers, and, equality being one of the fundamental principles of a Republican régime, it is impossible to refuse admission to a worthy candidate simply because he happens to have been born a gentleman.

But there are reasons for supposing that Boulanger is very nearly at the end of his tether. M. Grévy feels jealous that his Minister should be acclaimed everywhere, whereas he passes unnoticed and the General's colleagues are jealous of the man who takes all the wind out of their sails, while Clémenceau, beginning to mistrust the docility of his supposed-to-be fidus Achates, the radical press hints darkly that the famous military bill which was to have saved France will simply disorganize her army.

EUROPE'S HOROSCOPE.

I MET several old statesmen on the boulevards this evening, and this is the way they answered the several questions I put to them:

"What, in your opinion, is the situation of Europe at the present moment?"

"Readiness on the part of Germany, anxiety on the part of thoughtful Frenchmen, indifference on the part of Austria, self-conceit on the part of Italy, expectancy on the part of Russia, which has more to gain in a general break up than any other Power."

"What is the policy of Bismarck?"

"To conciliate Russia and let her go to Constantinople, and to crush France absolutely before the death of the present Emperor. But Bismarck hesitates to take the initiative, which is dangerous, not only because of the lack of sanction from Continental Europe, but also because it would not be popular throughout the German Empire."

"What would England like to do?"

"Hold Egypt."

"What does Italy want?"

"She wants Trieste; also to show that the war spirit, which has been slumbering since 1866, is not dead. She has ambitions, but is silly and timid, for what can be sillier than her building such extravagant ironclads without having evinced a capacity for naval fighting?"

THE PERSIAN ARMY.

EX-MINISTER TO PERSIA S. G. W. BENJAMIN contributes to the Chicago Inter-Ocean of May 16, an interesting account of the Persian Army. After reviewing the old system, he says: "The present Shah has resolutely persisted in the reorganization of the Persian army on a European basis, including that scourge of the continental armies, conscription.

"The population of Persia is not exactly known, but it is probably between nine and ten millions. The regular army in time of peace is about 50,000, in war, 250,000. In point of fact the actual force, instead of being 50,000, is nearer 30,000, the deficit being caused by bribery and permitted by hard winking.

"The troops are armed with breech-loaders and the uniform is a dark blue. About 5,000 are stationed in the extensive barracks at Teheran. Their wages being very low they are permitted at certain hours to add to their earnings by doing odd jobs of work when so minded. During the spring a large camp is formed in the suburbs; a Persian camp is far more picturesque than a European military encampment because the Persians excel in the construction of tents."

A JUBILEE STATISTIC.

FIFTY YEARS' GROWTH OF INDIA AND THE COLONIES.

THE LOCOMOTIVE TORPEDO.

NOTICING the article on Modern Aggressive Torpedoes, which was published by Lieut. W. S. Hughes, U. S. N., in "Scribner's Magazine," Broad Arrow says: "Considering that the Howell torpedo is only in the experimental stage, it seems somewhat premature to include it among those which have 'attained to the highest degree of efficiency,' while we should consider the Lay and Brennan as equal, if not superior, specimens of the controlled torpedo. The Auto-Mobile torpedo is stated to be propelled at a rate of 20 miles per hour for one mile by carbonic acid gas, and its rudder is worked from the shore by an electric wire coiled inside the torpedo, which unwinds itself as progress is made through the water. Under these conditions we are sceptical as to the speed given, and, furthermore, it is evident that the slightest check must cause the breakage of the wire. But the most perfect controlled locomotive torpedo has but a limited use. Its effective radius does not exceed 2,000 yards, because beyond that distance it can no longer be observed, and, therefore, controlled. Even within that range it is most difficult to know how far the torpedo is from its object. These difficulties must be greatly increased in working this weapon at night, when it has only a small light to indicate its position. By putting a screen in front of this light it will be obscured from the enemy when the torpedo is directly approaching, but we may assume that the steering will not be sufficiently constant to prevent deviations of course and occasional glimpses of the light escaping to the front. Should other lights be in the vicinity, the guidance of the torpedo will be almost impossible. On the whole, therefore, we are not of opinion that the controlled locomotive torpedo will supersede the gun, mine, or torpedo boat for coast defence. Some persons have advocated this weapon as part of the equipment of sea-going ships, but a moment's consideration will show that it is quite unsuited for this purpose. Naval officers have a great aversion—and justly—to anything which necessitates an external wire connected to their ship when in motion. Free movement would be impeded, and continuous anxiety entailed to keep the wire clear of the propellers. Principally, for this reason, the Harvey torpedo was abolished in our own Service, and the divergent torpedo in the French Navy."

THE FASTEST BOAT IN THE WORLD.

MESSRS. THORNEYCROFT, the torpedo-boat builders of Chiswick, have just completed a new torpedo boat for the Spanish Government, which for speed has beaten anything that has yet been built. The new boat is 147 feet 6 inches in length, has a beam of 14 feet 6 inches, and draws 4 feet 8 inches of water. She has twin-screw compound engines, which act independently of each other, while the steering gear consists of two curved rudders, which make her the handiest vessel of the class yet afloat, as she is able to turn about in three times her own length going at ordinary speed, which to-day, was 15.84 knots with the natural draught.

On a trip the other day with the tide in her favor and forced draught she attained the extraordinary speed of 29.01 knots, or at a rate of nearly 33⅓ miles an hour. Her times yesterday on the measured knot were, for two runs of a knot each with the tide, 2 minutes 10 seconds and 2 minutes 11¼ seconds; while against the tide for three runs the record was 2 minutes 25 seconds, 2 minutes 25 seconds and 2 minutes 25⅕ seconds—giving a mean speed of 26.18 knots, or over 30 miles an hour.

She is divided into a number of water-tight compartments, and in case of being hulled by shot is fitted with ejectors capable of discharging 480 tons of water per hour. She has two torpedo tubes in the bows, and has space to carry four Schwartzkopf torpedoes, and will mount four Nordenfeldt machine guns.

THE MITRAILLEUSE IN EGYPT.

THE Engineer says: In the report made by the commander of the Italian troops which suffered so much recently on the east coast of Africa, we see it written that at a most important juncture in the engagement the mitrailleuse accompanying the troops could not be worked. We have not seen it stated from what cause this unfortunate disability arose; but it certainly is not the first time by many that such weapons have failed at critical times. Against a horde of savage warriors such a weapon as the mitrailleuse may be said to double the fighting power of the party possessing it, and it is probable that had it in this case been available we should not have heard of the massacre, the news of which has caused such widespread regret. The more we refine on the weapons intended for active service in the field, the more there is reason to think we shall be liable to breakdowns of this description. With every weapon dependent not alone upon accurate workmanship in construction, but upon scientific knowledge in its handling, there must always be the risk of disarrangement under the conditions which attend service in the field. We hear on every side demands for improved field arms which involve increased complication in their mechanism. The advantage in these must be great while their efficiency remains perfect; but before their adoption it should be well considered how far that efficiency can be guaranteed under all conditions of service. If it fails in a single instance, it may do so again and again, and we may have to pay a high price for the adoption of arms unsuited to the men in whose hands we place them.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

THE son of a French customs pensioner continued to draw his father's pension for thirty years after his death on false certificates, the authorities failing to notice that the pensioner must have reached the patriarchal age of 109 years.

THE most expensive headdress in the British army is the bearskin, which lends such an imposing air to the members of the Foot Guards. Each bearskin helmet costs £4 9s., and lasts six years. The feather bonnet of the Highlanders costs £2 9s. 3d., and lasts eight years. The brass helmet worn by the Household Cavalry costs £1 0s. 2d., and lasts for eight years.

GENERAL BOULANGER not only has appropriated the Bersaglieri hat from Italy for his Alpine battalions, but he has ordered every regiment of the Chasseurs d'Afrique corps to receive on probation five-and-twenty helmets made of skyblue felt, and garnished with a small white metal spike and fittings, to harmonize with the color of the tunics and braid of the wearers' uniforms.
